Bibliographie des éditions musicales publiées par Estienne Roger et Michel Charles Le Cène (Amsterdam, 1696–1743) (Paris, 1969)
ed.: Ecrits imprimés concernant la musique, RISM, B/VI/1–2 (1971)
ed.: Monsieur Croche et autres écrits (Paris, 1971, 2/1987; Eng. trans., 1977/R) [Debussy's writings]
'Archival Research: Necessity and Opportunity', Perspectives in Musicology, ed. B.S. Brook, E.O.D. Downes and S. van Solkema (New York, 1972), 56–79
L'opéra classique français, 17e et 18e siècles (Geneva, 1972)
'L'affaire Fétis', RBM, xxviii–xxx (1974–6), 214–21
Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1975)
'Ebauche d'un répertoire des éditeurs de musique dans les provinces françaises', Beiträge zur Musikdokumentation: Franz Grasberger zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. G. Brosche (Tutzing, 1975), 233–58
Maurice Ravel (Paris, 1975)
Musique et musiciens français du 16e siècle (Geneva, 1976) [repr. of articles pubd 1950–69]
Catalogue de l'oeuvre de Claude Debussy (Geneva, 1977)
ed., with C. Sartori: Bibliografia della musica italiana vocale profana pubblicata dal 1500 al 1700 (Geneva, 1977) [rev. of VogelB]
'Madrigaux italiens et sources poétiques', RBM, xxxii–xxxiii (1978–9), 78–96 with A. Devriès: Dictionnaire des éditeurs de musique français, i: Des origines à environ 1820, ii: De 1820 à 1914 (Geneva, 1979–88)
ed.: Claude Debussy: Lettres, 1884–1918 (Paris, 1980; Eng. trans., 1987)
ed.: Igor Stravinsky, 'Le sacre du printemps': dossier de presse (Geneva, 1980)
Catalogue de la musique imprimée avant 1800: conservée dans les bibliothèques publiques de Paris (Paris, 1981)
ed.: Stravinsky: études et témoignages (Paris, 1982)
ed.: La Musique à Paris en 1830–1831 (Paris, 1983)
ed., with G. Cogeval: Debussy e il simbolismo, Villa Medici, Rome, April – June 1984 (Rome, 1984) [exhibition catalogue]
'Propos sur la voix à la Renaissance', Arts du spectacle et histoire des idées: recueil offert en hommage à Jean Jacquot (Tours, 1984), 205–12
ed.: Querelle des Gluckistes et des Piccinnistes (Geneva, 1984)
ed.: Dossier de presse de 'Pierrot Lunaire' d'Arnold Schönberg (Geneva, 1985)
'Musical Academicism in France in the Eighteenth Century: Evidence and Problems', Music in the Classic Period: Essays in Honor of Barry S. Brook, ed. A.W. Atlas (New York, 1985), 159–80 ed., with H. Macdonald: Hector Berlioz: Correspondance générale, v: 1855–1859 (Paris, 1989); vi: 1859–1863 (Paris, 1995)
'Ravel et Debussy', Cahiers Maurice Ravel, no.5 (1990–92), 27–33
'La recherche musicologique en France depuis 1958: II. Les publications', AcM, lxiii (1991), 224–37
Claude Debussy avant Pelléas ou les années symbolistes (Paris, 1993)
ed.: Claude Debussy: Correspondance, 1884–1918 (Paris, 1993)
'Raymond Bonheur: un ermite, ami de Debussy (1861–1939)', Cahiers Debussy, xvii–xviii (1993–4), 65–72
Claude Debussy: biographie critique (Paris, 1994)
ed.: La musique dans le Midi de la France (Paris, 1996–7)

Dictionnaire musical des villes de province (Paris, 1999)
ed.: Echanges musicaux franco-espagnols, XVIIe–XIXe s. (Paris, 1999)

EDITIONS

with others: Anthologie de la chanson parisienne au XVIe siècle (Monaco, 1953/R) with A.T. Merritt: Clément Janequin: Chansons polyphoniques (Monaco, 1965–71)
Claude Debussy: Oeuvres complètes (Paris, 1985–)

CHRISTIANE SPIETH-WEISSENBACHER

Leszczynska, Marie. See LECZINSKA, MARIE.

Leszetycki, Teodor. See LESCHETIZKY, THEODOR.

Le Taintenier, Jehan. See TINCTORIS, JOHANNES.

Letania (lat.). See LITANY.

Le Tansur, William. See TANS'UR, WILLIAM.

Letelier(-Llona), Alfonso (b Santiago, 4 Oct 1912; d Santiago, 28 Oct 1994). Chilean composer. He studied the piano with Hügel and composition with Allende at the Santiago National Conservatory (1930–35), simultaneously reading agriculture at the University of Chile. In 1938 and 1946 he travelled to Europe for the University of Chile to lecture on and promote contemporary Chilean music. He was a founder-director of the Escuela Moderna de Música in Santiago (1940), also conducting its madrigal ensemble (1940–48). His other appointments included those of professor at the National Conservatory (1946–53), president of the Chilean National Association of Composers (1950–56), dean of music and president of the executive board of the Instituto de Extensión Musical of the University of Chile (1953–62), president of the Goethe Institute of Santiago (1953–63), head of the music department of the Ministry of Education (1969–73) and dean of the arts faculty of the Metropolitan University of Santiago (1984–90). In 1952 he attended a performance of his Variations for Piano at the ISCM Festival in Salzburg, making further visits to Europe in 1958 and 1962.

His early compositions show the influence of French Impressionism and a subtle use of folk idioms (La vida del campo, 1937). Later he embraced a modal style derived from Gregorian chant and the music of the Spanish Renaissance (Vitrales de la Anunciación, 1950). His late style is characterized by increasing use of the methods of the Second Viennese School (the two Stephan George Canciones, 1971). He served on the jury of several international competitions and has received numerous awards, such as the National Prize for the Arts (1958). In 1969 he was elected a permanent member of the Chilean Academy. He published over 50 artices in the Revista musical chilena.

WORKS
(selective list)

Choral: Mass, op.1, SATB, org, orch, 1929; 8 canciones, op.9, 1934–9; 3 Motets, SATB, 1939; Vitrales de la Anunciación (cant., P. Claudel), SSA, chbr orch, 1950; La historia de Tobías y Sara, part 1 (op-orat, Claudel), op.26, 1955; O sacrum convivium, SATB, 1969; 3 madrigales campesinos (O. Castro), SATB, ens, 1970; Mass, SATB, org, chbr orch, 1972
Orch and vocal-orch: La vida del campo, op.14, pf, orch, 1937; Suite grotesca, 1946; Divertimento, op.25, 1956; Suite Aculéo, op.17, 1956; Gui Conc., 1961; Preludios vegetales, op.35, 1968; Conc., str, 1972; Sym. 'El hombre ante la ciencia', Mez, orch, 1983–5
Solo vocal: Ballad and Song, S, pf, 1935; Canciones de cuna, op.13, Mez, chbr orch, 1939; Sonetos de la muerte (G. Mistral), op.18, S, orch, 1948; Canciones antiguas (15th and 16th century Sp. poems), Mez, pf, 1951; Estancias amorosas (B. Valdes), op.34, Mez, str, 1966; 2 canciones (S. George), op.36, 1v, chbr orch, 1971
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1939; Variations, op.22, pf, 1948; Sonata, op.19, va, pf, 1949; Sonatina, vn, pf, 1953; Sax Qt, 1958; 4 Pieces, op.33, pf, 1964
Principal publishers: Instituto de Extensión Musical, Peer-Southern

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Compositores de América/Composers of the Americas, ed. Pan American Union, ii (Washington DC, 1955–72), 104
D. Santa Cruz: 'El compositor Alfonso Letelier', RMC, no.100 (1967), 8–23
N. Salas Viú: La creación musical en Chile, 1900–1950 (Santiago, 1952)
R. Escobar and R. Yrrázaval: Música compuesta en Chile (Santiago, 1969)
RMC, no.109 (1969) [Letelier issue]
S. Claro and J. Urrutia Blondel: Historia de la música en Chile (Santiago, 1973)
J. Orrego-Salas: 'Alfonso Letelier: el camino de una amistad', El mercurio, 6 Nov 1994

JUAN A. ORREGO-SALAS

Letelier (Valdés), Miguel (b Santiago, 30 Sept 1939). Chilean composer and organist. He studied music at the arts faculty of the University of Chile with the Belgian-Argentine teacher Julio Perceval. He completed his studies in composition at the di Tella Institute in Buenos Aires and in organ with Jean Jacques Grünewald in Paris. He was appointed professor of organ and composition at the arts faculty of the University of Chile and has taken part in a number of international organ festivals.

Letelier has tackled composition for various media, from solo instruments to full orchestra. He has also been successful as a writer of incidental music for the theatre. His most important orchestral work is Instantes (1966), in which he uses all the musical resources of the full orchestra and a wide variety of percussion instruments. His musical style is heterogeneous, and he uses a large variety of idioms ranging from archaic Hispanicism to jazz and ultra-modernism.

WORKS
(selective list)

Incid music: Les fourberies de Scapin (Molière), 1961; Don Juan tenorio (J. Zorrilla y Moral), 1976; El mercader de Venecia (W. Shakespeare), 1976; Las mocedades del Cid (Molina), 1977
Orch: Suite 'Scapin', 1962, arr. 2 pf, 1962; Instantes, 1966
Vocal: 3 coros (G. Mistral, anon), chorus, 1959; 3 canciones (P. Neruda), 1v, pf, 1961; Nocturno, 1v, cl, gui, vc, pf, 1966; Fantasía, female v, pic, tpt, s sax, b cl, vib, va, db, 1970; 3 canciones (A. de Noailles), 1v, cl, pf, 1981–2
Chbr: Qnt, fl, ob, cl, sax, bn, 1964; Divertimento, fl, ob, cl, 2 vn, va, vc, hpd, 1965; Raveliana, fl, gui, 1984; Rapsodía, vn, pf, cl, 1986
Solo inst: 6 preludios breves (Homenaje a Violeta Parra), gui, 1962; Preludio, variacion y fuga (In memoriam Julio Perceval), org, 1964; Sonata, hpd, 1964; Pequeño libro, pf, 1997

INÉS GRANDELA

Létourneau, Fernand (Wilfred Joseph) (b St Hyacinthe, PQ, Canada, 24 Sept 1944). Canadian organ builder. He began his career as a voicer at the firm of Casavant Frères in St Hyacinthe in 1965. He stayed with that company for 14 years, the last three of which were spent as the head voicer, working under the tonal direction of Lawrence Phelps and Gerhard Brunzema. In October 1978 Létourneau travelled to Europe to familiarize himself with the organs of France, Germany and the Netherlands. Upon returning to Ste Rosalie, near St Hyacinthe, in 1979, he set up his own company, Létourneau Pipe Organs Ltd/Orgues Létourneau Ltée. In January 1984 the firm moved to a suburb of St Hyacinthe. In 1997 the company was employing 27 full-time staff and had representatives in England, New Zealand and the USA.

By 1997 the firm had built more than 55 new instruments including those at Centenary-Queen Square United Church, Saint John, New Brunswick (1986); Cathedral, St Catherines, Ontario (1990); Gaetz Memorial United Church, Red Deer, Alberta (1988); Ste Catherine-de-Sienne, Trois-Rivières, Quebec (1988, two manuals, 25 stops; the firm considers this organ the 'flagship' of the Létourneau style); and several smaller instruments. Major new installations outside Canada include: St Alban's Anglican Church, Epping, New South Wales (1981); British Embassy Christ Church, Vienna (1988); St Paul's Collegiate School, Hamilton, New Zealand (1992); Samford University, Birmingham, Alabama (1994); St Matthew's, Albury, New South Wales (1994); St Francis of Assisi, Ann Arbor, Michigan (1994); First Christian Church, Colorado Springs, Colorado (1995); and Pembroke College, Oxford (1995).

By 1991 the firm had undertaken 43 rebuilds of organs by other manufacturers, including: Ste Praxède-de-Bromptonville, Quebec (Casavant Frères); Cathédrale de l'Assomption, Trois Rivières, Quebec (Casavant Frères); Wesley United Church, Thunder Bay, Ontario (Karn-Warren, 1909); St Andrew's Presbyterian Church, St John's, Newfoundland (Conacher, 1901, and Hill, Norman & Beard, 1927); and Christ Church, St Laurence, Sydney (W. Hill & Son, 1893).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Laurier: 'Fernand Létourneau, facteur d'orgues québecois, se lance sur le marché international', Le Devoir [Montreal] (12 Sept 1987)

K.J. Raudsepp: Organs of Montreal (Quebec, 1993)

J. Wainwright and D. Titterington: 'A Curious History Untangled', Choir and Organ, iii/3 (1995), 31–4

KARL J. RAUDSEPP

Letra (Sp.: 'letter'). (1) The words of a song or a libretto.

(2) From the 15th century to the 17th the term was used, along with 'mote', 'pie', 'cabeza', 'villancico' (in its restricted sense), 'estribo' and 'estribillo', to designate the refrain of a song or poem, especially a given or traditional refrain. As with 'villancico' it was sometimes used to refer to the song as a whole, both refrain and stanza. By the 17th century the diminutive 'letrilla' came to be more favoured by poets and sometimes musicians to designate a jocular or satirical refrain song.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Querol Gavaldá: Romances y letras a tres vozes, siglo XVII (Barcelona, 1956)

J. Etzion: Preface to El cancionero da La Sablonara (London, 1996)

JACK SAGE/SUSANA FRIEDMANN

Leuckart. German firm of music publishers. It was founded in 1782 in Breslau by Franz Ernst Christoph Leuckart (1748–1817) and Johann Daniel Korn (the younger) as a fine-art and music shop. As F.E.C. Leuckart, the firm was notably successful in the third generation, when Constantin Sander (1826–1905) took over its management (1849). He made agreements with talented young composers (Robert Franz, Bruch), worked with Liszt, Ferdinand Hiller, Bülow and Thuille, and encouraged the music historian A.W. Ambros to write his Geschichte der Musik. The firm published organ works, instructional literature and dramatic works (including Bruch's Die Loreley, 1862), and encouraged the work of Eduard Kremser (Altniederländisches Dankgebet) and Thomas Koschat, the Carinthian folksong collector. In 1870 the firm moved to Leipzig, where it was active in promoting individual compositions by Richard Strauss, including Ein Heldenleben op.40 (1899) and Eine Alpensinfonie op.64 (1915), along with works by Pfitzner and Reger. After the death of Constantin Sander, his son Martin (1859–1930) expanded the catalogue to include Catholic liturgical music, contemporary orchestral and chamber music, the collection Leuckarts Hausmusik and choral music (e.g. by Richard Trunk, Armin Knab and Hugo Kaun). For several decades the hospitable Sander home was a meeting-place for distinguished musicians visiting Leipzig for world and local premières. In 1930 Martin Sander's son Horst (1904–45) inherited the firm and increased its output to almost 10,000 items. It suffered war damage and moved from Leipzig in 1945, remaining in the family's possession and resuming its activities on the same lines in Munich in 1948.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

175 Jahre Musikverlag F.E.C. Leuckart: Verlagsgeschichte und Gesamtkatalog (Munich, 1957)

J. La Rue: 'Ten Rediscovered Sale-Catalogues: Leuckart's Supplements, Breslau 1787–1792', Musik und Verlag: Karl Vötterle zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. R. Baum and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1968), 424–32

HANS-MARTIN PLESSKE

Leutgeb [Leitgeb], Joseph [Ignaz] (b Vienna, 8 Oct 1732; d Vienna, 27 Feb 1811). Austrian horn player. Though little is known about his early years, Dittersdorf mentions that he was a virtuoso soloist in Vienna for Prince Hildburghausen in the early 1750s. From November 1761 to January 1763 he is reported to have played horn concertos at least 14 times at the Vienna Burgtheater, performing works of Leopold Hofmann, Michael Haydn and Dittersdorf. Joseph Haydn's Concerto in D in 1762, Hob.VII d:3, was possibly among these works and is now thought to have been written for him (Heartz). In February 1763 Leutgeb was hired at Esterházy with a high yearly salary only to be dismissed by the end of the month. Later in 1763 he was in Salzburg and is listed as a horn player in the Salzburg court calendar from 1764. He travelled widely as a soloist. He played concerts in Frankfurt in January 1770, and in April of the same year, played three times in Paris at the Concert Spirituel, including in his programme a concerto reportedly of his own composition (now lost). On the first occasion at the Concert Spirituel the Mercure de France praised his superior talent, on another his ability to 'sing an adagio as perfectly as the most mellow, interesting and accurate voice'. During other periods of leave from Salzburg he played in Vienna and Italy. In 1777 he moved from Salzburg to Vienna, where he set up or, more likely, inherited a cheesemonger's shop; he received financial help from Leopold Mozart.

Leutgeb's mastery of the hand-stopping technique is evident in the solo works W.A. Mozart wrote for him in the 1780s and 90s. The concertos K417, 495 and 412/386b (514) and probably the quintet K407/386c were composed for him as were horn parts in other works. The autographs of some of the horn parts contain jocular remarks at Leutgeb's expense. Leutgeb however remained a friend to the end of Mozart's life, and is mentioned in Mozart's last letter; he apparently retired from playing in 1792.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PierreH

N. Miller, ed.: K. von Dittersdorf: Lebensbeschreibung: seinem Sohne in die Feder diktiert (Munich, 1967), 60 only

H. Fitzpatrick: The Horn and Horn-Playing and the Austro-Bohemian Tradition from 1680 to 1830 (London, 1970)
K.M. Pisarowitz: 'Mozarts Schnorrer Leutgeb', MISM, xviii/3–4 (1970), 21–7
P.R. Bryan: 'The Horn in the Works of Mozart and Haydn', Haydn Yearbook 1975, 189–255
A. Tyson: 'Mozart's D-major Horn Concerto: Questions of Date and of Authenticity', Mozart: Studies of the Autograph Scores (Cambridge, 1987), 246–61
D. Heartz: 'Leutgeb and the 1762 Horn Concertos of Joseph and Johann Michael Haydn', MJb 1987–8, 59–64
K. Küster: 'Dokumente einer Freundschaft: das Hornkonzert KV495 und andere', Mozart: eine musikalische Biographie (Stuttgart, 1990), 248–54; Eng. trans. (Oxford, 1996), 227–33

REGINALD MORLEY-PEGGE/THOMAS HIEBERT

Leuto (It.). See LUTE.

Leuven (Fr. Louvain; Ger. Löwen). Belgian city, since 1995 capital of the new province of Flemish Brabant. Occupied by the Vikings in the 9th century, the town served as the residence of the counts of Leuven from 1003, and in the 12th century became the capital of the Duchy of Brabant. The famous trouvère Adenez li Rois learned his craft at the court of Duke Henry III (d 1261), a trouvère himself. Duke John I (d 1294), nine of whose Flemish songs have been preserved, moved his court from Leuven to Brussels. The centre of sacred music was the collegiate Pieterskerk. In 1054 there was a chapter of seven canons, probably founded by Count Lambert I. Two important later canons were the composers Richardus de Bellengues (also known as Cardot, d 1470) and Thomas Crecquillon (d ?1557), who also studied at the university. In 1498 Henricus de Houterlé founded a chapel at the church, where seven choirboys were trained in Gregorian chant and polyphony. Little else is known of its history until the 18th century, when its directors included Louis (Lodewijk) van Beethoven (the composer's grandfather) and, from 1750 to 1789, the violin virtuoso G.J.J. Kennis, whose violin compositions were published in Brussels, Leuven, London and Paris. Its organists included J.B. Verryt (1636–9), Dieudonné Raick (1726–41) and Matthias van den Gheyn (1741–85). The organ by Jean Crinon (1554–6) was destroyed by a bomb in 1944.

The carillon has long been highly regarded in Leuven. In 1525 the town council bought eight or nine bells from Peter Waghevens in Mechelen for the Pieterskerk. A new carillon was acquired in 1728 and exchanged for the instrument in the Premonstratensian abbey of Park in 1811. This was destroyed during World War I. The present carillon (49 bells) was acquired during the period 1931–5 and renovated in 1990. St Gertrudis has had its own carillon since the 16th century. The university library acquired an English carillon in 1928, which was enlarged from 48 to 63 bells in 1983.

As early as 1439–40, there is mention of a trumpet player and two pipers in Leuven who also acted as tower guards and later became official town musicians. From the second half of the 15th century the town musicians performed twice a day on the town hall steps, often augmented by musicians from neighbouring towns. In the 16th century, Leuven was a printing centre, above all through the work of Pierre Phalèse.

In the 19th century the musician Josephus Terby (1780–1860), the violin virtuoso Charles-Auguste de Bériot (1802–70) and the musicologist Xavier Van Elewyck (1825–88) were active in Leuven. Private music tuition developed from 1835 and in 1881 the music department of the Académie des Beaux-Arts received a special statute. Since 1968 professional music tuition has been provided by the Lemmens Institute, which was originally established in Mechelen. At the Catholic University, founded in 1425, music history has been taught since 1927. R.B. Lenaerts (1902–92) founded a fully fledged department of musicology in 1944.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Huybens: 'Bouwstenen voor een geschiedenis van de muziek te Leuven: 17e en 18e eeuw', Jaarboek van de Geschied- en Oudheidkundige Kring voor Leuven en omgeving, xxi (1981), 5–92
G. Huybens, ed.: Muziek te Leuven in de 16de eeuw (Leuven, 1982)
J.P. Felix and G.Huybens: Leuvense orgelgids (Leuven, 1985)
G. Huybens: 'Het muziekconservatorium te Leuven (1835–1985)', Het stedelijk kunstonderwijs te Leuven (Leuven, 1985), 95–138
G. Huybens and G.Robberechts: Het Leuvense muziekleven in de 19de eeuw (Leuven, 1986)
G. Huybens and E.Schreurs, eds.: 'Muzikale schatten uit de Leuvense universiteitsbibliotheek', Musica antiqua, xiii (1996), 9–44

EUGEEN SCHREURS

Levant, Oscar (b Pittsburgh, 27 Dec 1906; d Beverly Hills, CA, 14 Aug 1972). American pianist, composer and writer. After training with local teachers in Pittsburgh he moved to New York, where he studied with the pianist Sigismund Stojowski; later he briefly studied composition with Schoenberg. He was active as a pianist with jazz bands and as a composer of popular songs such as Lady, play your mandolin (1930, lyricist: I. Caesar) and Blame it on my youth (1934, lyricist: E. Heyman). His works for the Broadway stage brought his talents to the attention of Hollywood, and after moving to the West Coast he wrote the scores for several films, including Street Girl and Tanned Legs. Levant also appeared in many films both as actor and musician, including Rhythm on the River (1941), The Barkleys of Broadway (1948) and The Band Wagon (1953). He was the solo pianist in An American in Paris (1951), and had achieved prominence as a sympathetic interpreter of Gershwin's music following their meeting in 1929 and subsequent friendship.

Apart from his popular songs and film scores, Levant's compositions include a piano concerto, which he played with the NBC SO in 1942, Nocturne for orchestra (1937) and two string quartets. He was much in demand as a concert soloist and played with many of the leading American symphony orchestras. His writings include three volumes of autobiographical reminiscences (A Smattering of Ignorance, 1940; The Memoirs of an Amnesiac, 1965; The Unimportance of Being Oscar, 1968) which are caustic in content and conversational in tone. (S. Kashner and N. Schoenberger: A Talent for Genius: the Life and Times of Oscar Levant, New York, 1994)

GEORGE GELLES/R

Levarie, Siegmund (b Vienna, 24 July 1914). American musicologist and music educationist of Austrian birth. He took the diploma in conducting at the Vienna City Conservatory in 1935 and the PhD in musicology from the University of Vienna in 1938. Moving to America, he joined the faculty of the University of Chicago, where he taught from 1938 to 1952. There he organized a collegium musicum, one of the first in the USA, and directed the group in performances of early music. He was dean of the Chicago Musical College from 1952 to 1954, when he was appointed professor at Brooklyn College, CUNY; he served as chairman of the music department there from 1954 to 1962, and taught there, as well as the Graduate School, CUNY, until his retirement in 1984. In addition to his academic duties he was executive director of the Fromm Music Foundation from 1952 to 1956 and directed the Brooklyn Community SO from 1954 to 1958.

Levarie's interests include music theory and analysis, Machaut and Goethe. His writings cross disciplinary lines, drawing on the fields of education, philosophy and physics.

WRITINGS

Fugue and Form (Chicago, 1941)
'Music in the Education of the Whole Man', The Educational Forum, xiii (1948–9), 449–54 with H. Kohut: 'On the Enjoyment of Listening to Music', Psychoanalytic Quarterly, xix (1950), 64–87
Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro: a Critical Analysis (Chicago, 1952/R)
Fundamentals of Harmony (New York, 1954/R, 2/1962)
Guillaume de Machaut (New York, 1954/R)
'"Solitario bosco ombroso": eine musikalische Kindheitserinnerung Goethes', Goethe, xix (1957), 196–202
Musical Italy Revisited (New York, 1963/R)
'The Italian Province', ON, xxviii/23 (1963–4), 6 with E. Levy: Tone: a Study in Musical Acoustics (Kent, OH, 1968, 2/1980)
'La musique d'Ernst Lévy', SMz, cviii (1968), 178–87
'The Closing Numbers of Die Schöpfung', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 315–22
'Noise', Critical Inquiry, iv (1977), 21–31
ed.: Lucy Van-Jung Page, 1892–1972: Recollections of Pupils and Friends (Oxford, 1977) with E. Levy: A Dictionary of Musical Morphology (Henryville, PA, 1980, 2/1983 as Musical Morphology: a Discourse and a Dictionary)
'A Pitch Cell in Verdi's Un ballo in Maschera', JMR, iii (1981), 399–409
'A Pitch Cell in Beethoven's Seventh Symphony', Music in the Classic Period: Essays in Honor of Barry S. Brook, ed. A.W. Atlas (New York, 1985), 181–93
'Harmonic Analysis', College Music Symposium, xxvi (1986), 66–76
'Isaac L. Rice: What is Music?', A Celebration of American Music: Words and Music in Honor of H. Wiley Hitchcock, ed. R.A. Crawford, R.A. Lott and C.J. Ota (Ann Arbor, 1990), 113–31 with H. Kohut: 'On the Enjoyment of Listening to Music', Psychoanalytic Explorations in Music, ed. S. Feder, R.L. Karmel and G.H. Pollock (Madison, CT, 1990), 1–20
'Musical Polarity: Major and Minor', International Journal of Musicology, i (1992), 29–45
'Henry Adams, Avant-Gardist in Early Music', American Music, xv (1997), 429–45

EDITIONS

S. Rossi: Sinfonie a tre voci (1608) (Vienna, 1937)

PAULA MORGAN

Levashyov, Yevgeny Mikhaylovich (b Moscow, 19 Aug 1944). Russian musicologist. He graduated in 1970 from the Moscow Conservatory and began teaching there the same year; in 1974 he completed his postgraduate studies with Keldïsh at the Institute for the History of Arts in Moscow, where he was then immediately given a senior academic post. In 1994 he completed a second post-doctoral degree with a study on the editorial problems of reconstructing works by Russian composers. He is senior editor of Musorgsky's collected works and is professor and corresponding member of the Moscow Academy of the Arts.

Levashyov's main area of interest is the history and editing of Russian music from the 17th to the 20th centuries, concentrating on the relationship of the music to its sources. Combining innovative scholarship with practical experience, his reconstructions of compositions have provided the basis of many Russian and Western European opera productions, such as Vasily Pashkevich's The Miser and The St Petersburg Bazaar, Glinka's A Life for the Tsar, different versions of Borodin's opera Prince Igor and the original version of Musorgsky's Boris Godunov. He has also written on the musical traditions of the Russian Orthodox church and on Musorgsky's chorus An Angel Clamouring, which he discovered and edited.

WRITINGS

'Na zare russkogo muzïkal'nogo teatra (o krepostnom teatre grafa A.R. Vorontsova)' [The dawn of the Russian musical theatre (on Count Vorontsov's serf theatre)], SovM (1967), no.11, pp.76–80
'Sushchestvoval li kompozitor Matinskiy?' [Did the composer Matinsky exist?], SovM (1973), no.5, pp.81–8
'Drama naroda i drama sovesti (pervaya avtorskaya redaktsiya "Borisa Godunova"' [A drama of the people and a drama of conscience (the original version of Boris Godunov)], SovM (1983), no.5, pp.32–8
'O zagadkakh oper Borodina i "Slova o polku Igoreve"' [The enigmas of Borodin's operas and the Lay of the Host of Igor], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1985), no.13, pp.15–17; no.14, pp.15–17; no.15, pp.15–17
'V.A. Pashkevich', 'Russkiy muzïkal'nïy teatr posledney treti XVIII veka' [The Russian musical theatre during the last third of the 18th century], Istoriya russkoy muzïki, ed. Yu. Keldïsh, iii (Moscow, 1985), 46–83, 275–315
'Istoriya "Russkogo solov'ya"' [The history of the 'Russian Nightingale'], Muzïkal'naya zhizn' (1987), no.24, pp.15–17
'Zhizn' tvorcheskogo naslediya M.P. Musorgskogo i zadachi sovremennogo akademicheskogo izdaniya' [Musorgsky's creative legacy and the tasks facing a modern scholarly edition], Naslediye M.P. Musorgskiy: sbornik materialov k vïpusku, ed. Ye. Levasheva (Moscow, 1989), 24–62, 201–15
'A.P. Borodin', Istoriya russkoy muzïki, ed. Yu. Keldïsh, vii (Moscow, 1994), 286–360
Traditsionnïye zhanrï pravoslavnogo pevcheskogo iskusstva v tvorchestve russkikh kompozitorov ot Glinki do Rakhmaninova: 1825–1917 [The traditional genres of Orthodox church singing in the work of Russian composers from Glinka to Rachmaninoff: 1825–1917] (Moscow, 1994)
'Istoki ėpicheskogo v khudozhestvennom mïshlenii Borodina' [The sources for the epic element in Borodin's artistic thinking], Mir iskusstv: al'manakh, ed. B.I. Zingerman and others (Moscow, 1995), 197–215
ed., with others: M.P. Musorgsky: Boris Godunov (Moscow and Mainz, 1996) [incl. 'K publikatsii "Borisa Godunova" v pervoy avtorskoy redaktsii'] [On the publication of Boris Godunov in its original version], ii, 153–66 with A. Lebedeva-Yemelina: 'Russkaya muzïka vtoroy polovinï XVIII veka v kontektse ritualov i tseremonialov, prazdnestv i razvlecheniy' [Russian music in the second half of the 18th century in the context of the rituals, ceremonials, festivities and diversions], U istokov razvlekatel'noy kul'turï Rossii Novogo Vremeni XVIII–XIX veka (Moscow, 1996), 46–73 with A. Vinogradova: Frants Shubert i Aleksandr Alyab'yev: opït sravnitel'noy kharakteristiki kamerno-vokal'nogo tvorchestva: vek XIX – vek XX [Schubert and Alyab'yev: an attempt to provide a comparative description of their chamber and vocal works: the 19th century to the 20th] (forthcoming)

EDITIONS

V.A. Pashkevich: Skupoy [The Miser], Pamyatniki russkogo muzïkalnogo iskusstva, iv (Moscow, 1973); Kak pozhivyosh', tak proslavish', ili Sanktpeterburgskiy gostinïy dvor [How you live is how you become famous, or the St Petersburg bazaar], Pamyatniki russkogo muzïkal'nogo iskusstva, viii (Moscow, 1980) [with Yu. Keldïsh] with others: : M.P. Musorgsky: Boris Godunov (Moscow and Mainz, 1996) [1869 version] with Yu. Fortunatov: O.A. Kozlovsky: Orkestrovaya muzïka, Pamyatniki russkogo muzïkal'nogo iskusstva, xi (Moscow, 1997)

LYUDMILA KORABEL'NIKOVA

Levashyova, Ol'ga Yevgen'yevna (b Blagoveshchensk-na-Amure, Siberia, 17/30 March 1912; d Moscow, 21 Feb 2000). Russian musicologist. She graduated from the department of theory and composition at Moscow

Conservatory, and began teaching music history in 1946. She took the kandidat degree in 1948 and in 1951 she was appointed lecturer at the conservatory and a senior research fellow at the Institute for the History of the Arts in Moscow. In 1964 she was awarded the doctorate, having been supervised by Kuznetsov, and she became professor at the conservatory in 1966. She was the author of a series of substantial books on the history of Russian and western European music of the 18th and 19th centuries, and also of publications designed as educational material for the conservatory. She was a member of the editorial committee of the ten-volume Istoriya russkoy muzïki (1983–2000) to which she contributed articles on Russian opera, Russian song, chamber music and Russian composers.

WRITINGS

'Romans i pesnya' [The romance and the song], Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïki 1790–1825, ed. M.S. Druskin and Yu.V. Keldïsh (Leningrad, 1956)
Ėdvard Grig (Moscow, 1962, 2/1975)
'Frantsuzskoye muzïkovedeniye 18–19 vekov' [French musicology of the 18th and 19th centuries], Istoriya yevropeyskogo iskusstvoznaniya, ed. B.R. Vipper and T.N. Livanova (Moscow, 1963–9)
ed.: Ė. Grig: izbrannïye stat'i i pis'ma [Collected articles and letters] (Moscow, 1966) with Yu. Keldïsh and A. Kandinsky: Istoriya russkoy muzïki (Moscow, 1972, 4/1990)
'Kozłowski i klasyoyzm rosyjaki' [Kozłowski and the Russian classicism], Musica antiqua III: Bydgoszcz 1972, 825–46 [with Fr. summary]
Puchchini i yego sovremenniki [Puccini and his contemporaries] (Moscow, 1980)
ed., with Yu.V. Keldïsh and A.I. Kandinsky: Istoriya russkoy muzïki: v desyati tomakh [The history of Russian music: in ten volumes] (Moscow, 1983–) [incl. 'Vvedeniy' [Introduction], ii, pp.5–28; 'Inostrannïye opernïye truppï v Rossii: frantsuzskaya komicheskya opera' [Foreign opera troupes in Russia: the French comic opera], ii, pp.129–52; 'Razvitiye zhanra "rossiyskoy pesni"' [The development of the 'Russian song' genre], ii, pp.184–215; 'Russkaya kompozitorskaya shkola i yeyo ėsteticheskiye osnovï' [The Russian School of composition and its aesthetic basis], ii, pp.256–77; 'Nachalo russkoy operï' [The beginnings of Russian opera], iii, pp.5–45; 'Kamernaya instrumental'naya muzïka' [Instrumental chamber music], iii, pp.194–225; 'Vokal'naya kamernaya muzïka' [Chamber genres with voice], iv, pp.209–35; 'Narodnïye istoki bïtovogo romansa: pesennïye sborniki' [The folklore sources of the popular romance: song collections], v, pp.132–46]
Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka, 2 vols. (Moscow, 1987–8)
Ferents List: molodïye godï [Liszt: his youth] (Moscow, 1998)

EDITIONS

Russkaya vokal'naya lirika XVIII veka [18th-century Russian lyrical songs], Pamyatniki russkogo muzïkal'nogo iskusstva, i (Moscow, 1972)

YURY KELDÏSH/LYUDMILA KORABEL'NIKOVA

Levasseur, Jean-Henri (b Paris, 29 May 1764; d Paris, 1823). French cellist and teacher. He was referred to as le jeune to distinguish him from the cellist Pierre François Levasseur, who was no relation. His father taught singing at the Opéra, and was inspector general there for a short time. Levasseur studied with J.-B. Cupis, and, later, J.-L. Duport. His public début was at the Concert Spirituel on 8 December 1786, where he played a concerto by Duport. He became principal cello at the Opéra in 1789, and was later attached to the chapel of Napoleon and then Louis XVIII. He and J.-B.-A.J. Janson taught the première classe of cello at the Conservatoire when it was established in 1795, and Levasseur contributed to the Conservatoire's Méthode de violoncelle et de basse d'accompagnement (1805/R); his pupils Nicolas Baudiot and Louis Norblin continued his teaching traditions when they in turn were appointed at the Conservatoire. He published sonatas, duets and studies for the cello. His son, known simply as Levasseur fils, was also a cellist.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookSF; FétisB; PierreH
Correspondance des amateurs musiciens (1 Oct 1803, 21 April 1804)
T. Lassabathie: Histoire du Conservatoire impérial de musique et de déclamation (Paris, 1860)
E.G.J. Gregoir: Bibliothèque musicale populaire (Brussels, 1877)
E. Bellasis: Cherubini (Birmingham, 1912/R)
N. Wild: Dictionnaire des théâtres parisiens au XIXe siècle (Paris, 1989)
V. Walden: One Hundred Years of Violoncello: a History of Technique and Performance Practice, 1740–1840 (Cambridge, 1998)

VALERIE WALDEN

Levasseur, Nicholas (Prosper) (b Bresles, nr Beauvais, 9 March 1791; d Paris, 7 Dec 1871). French bass. He entered the Paris Conservatoire in 1807 and made his début at the Opéra as the Pacha in Grétry's La caravane du Caire (1813). However, the Opéra's repertory lacked deep bass roles, and for two seasons he sang in Italian opera at London, making his début at the King's Theatre in Mayr's Adelasia e Aleramo (1815). He returned to the Opéra as an understudy but in 1819 joined the Théâtre Italien, first appearing as Almaviva in Le nozze di Figaro. The following year he appeared at La Scala, Milan, in the première of Meyerbeer's Margherita d'Anjou. At the Théâtre Italien Levasseur sang in many Rossini operas new to Paris, notably in the title role of Mosè (1822), a role he repeated with considerable success when Rossini revised the work for the Opéra (1827) (though Rossini himself reportedly forgot to attend the first performance as he was playing dominoes in the Opéra café). In 1828 he rejoined the Opéra as one of its leading singers, and was one of the celebrated trio that included Nourrit and Cinti-Damoreau. Over the next 12 years he created virtually every important new bass role in the Opéra's repertory, including Bertram in Robert le diable (1831), whose 'ironie moqueuse' in the duo bouffe was particularly praised, Brogni in La Juive (1835), Marcel in Les Huguenots (1836) and Balthazar in La favorite (1840). His pure, expressive voice was, like that of Ponchard, inspired by Gluck, Mozart and the Italian school; he also had a talent for comic effects as well as for serious roles. He left the Opéra in 1845, but at Meyerbeer's request returned to sing in the première of Le prophète (16 April 1849), and finally retired in 1853. His ease with intimate scenes meant that he was also suited to salon performances, and he was one of the singers involved in Charles Lebouc's soirées of musique classique et historique organized for audiences of amateurs (see Fauquet). Levasseur taught at the Conservatoire from 1841 to 1869, and on his retirement he was made a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur. He became blind shortly before his death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Bénédit: 'Levasseur', Galerie des artistes dramatiques (Paris, n.d.)
J.-M. Fauquet: Les sociétés de musique de chambre à Paris de la Restauration à 1870 (Paris, 1986), esp.198

PHILIP ROBINSON/SARAH HIBBERD

Levasseur [Le Vasseur], Rosalie [Marie-Rose-(Claude-) Josephe] (b Valenciennes, 8 Oct 1749; d Neuwied am Rhein, 6 May 1826). French soprano. She made her début at the Paris Opéra in 1766 as Zäide in Campra's L'Europe galante and appeared there regularly until 1785. Known as Mlle Rosalie during her first ten years at the Opéra, she was well received in minor roles or as a substitute for Mme Larrivée until, in 1776, she was entrusted with Eurydice and Iphigenia in revivals of Gluck's operas. She was then preferred over her rival, Sophie Arnould, to create the title role in the French Alceste. The mistress from 1770 of the Austrian ambassador Mercy-Argenteau, by whom she had a son, she became Gluck's close friend and favourite interpreter, creating the title roles in Armide (1777) and Iphigénie en Tauride (1779). She was successful in the title role of Philidor's Ernelinde (1777 revival), but less so in Piccinni's works, relinquishing his Angélique (Roland) and Sangaride (Atys) to other singers. Her reputation lay not in vocal beauty but in intelligent use of the voice as an adjunct to accomplished acting.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (H. Boschot); FétisB

J.G. Prod'homme: 'Rosalie Levasseur, Ambassadress of Opera', MQ, ii (1916), 210–43

JULIAN RUSHTON

Levaya, Tamara Nikolayevna (b Barabinsk, Novosibirsk region, 23 Feb 1938). Russian musicologist. She studied musicology at the Gor'kiy (now Nizhniy Novgorod) Glinka State Conservatory, graduating in 1936. She became lecturer in the music history department at the conservatory in 1967, and in 1969 undertook postgraduate studies there with Zhitomirsky. After taking the Kandidat degree in 1976, she was appointed assistant professor (1980) and later professor (1988) of the music history department at the same institution. She gained the doctorate in 1993 with a dissertation that discussed Russian music at the beginning of the 20th century in the artistic context of the age. She has participated in a number of international symposiums and is also a member of a permanent seminar on the arts in the 20th century, which is based at the University of Zagreb. She is a member of the Russian Composers' Union and secretary of the musicology section of its regional organization in Upper Volga.

Levaya's main interest is Russian music of the 20th century, particularly Skryabin and Shostakovich. She has also studied the work of Hindemith and in 1974 published an important study of this composer, which was the first work to be written on him in Russia. She has in addition held a long-term interest in musical art at the beginning of the century, which she has studied as part of a global evolution embracing philosophy, literature, painting and sacred culture.

WRITINGS

'Devyataya simfoniya Shostakovicha' [Shostakovich's ninth symphony], Muzïka i sovremennost', v (1967), 3–37 with O. Leont'yeva: Paul' Khindemit: zhizn' i tvorchestvo (Moscow, 1974)

'Tayna velikogo iskusstva: o pozdnikh kamerno-vokal'nïkh tsiklakh D.D. Shostakovich' [The secret of great art: on the late chamber-vocal works of Shostakovich], Muzïka Rossii, ii, ed. Ye. Grosheva (Moscow, 1978), 291–328

'Vozrozhdeniye traditsii' [The rebirth of a tradition], Muzïka Rossii, vi, ed. Ye. Grosheva (Moscow, 1978), 156–87 [on the concerto grosso in contemporary Soviet music]

'O stile Khindemita' [On Hindemith's style], Paul' Khindemit: stat'i i materialï, ed. I. Prudnikova (Moscow, 1979), 262–99

'Sovetskaya muzïka: dialog desyatiletiy' [Soviet music: the dialogue of the decades], Sovetskaya muzïka 70-80-kh godov: stil' i stilevïye dialogi, ed. V.B. Val'kova (Moscow, 1986), 9–29

'Ot romantizma k simvolizmu: nekotorïye tendentsii russkoy muzïkal'noy kul'turï nachala XX veka' [From Romanticism to symbolism: certain tendencies in Russian musical culture at the start of the 20th century], Problemï muzïkal'nogo romantizma, ed. A.L. Porfir'yeva (Leningrad, 1987), 130–43

'Muzïkal'naya problematika v "Doktore Faustuse" Tomasa Manna' [Musical problems in Mann's Doktor Faustus], Sovremennoye zapadnoye iskusstvo: XX vek, ed. B.I. Zingerman (Moscow, 1988), 37–70

'Novaya sovetskaya muzïka v aspekte "pozdnego mïshleniya"' [New Soviet music in the aspect of "later thinking"], Sowjetische Musik im Licht der Perestroika, ed. H. Danuser, H. Gerlach and J. Kochel (Laaber, 1990), 101–8

Russkaya muzïka nachala XX veka v khudozhestvennom kontekste ėpokhi [Russian music at the beginning of the 20th century in the artistic context of the epoch] (Moscow, 1991)

'Skryabin v retrospektive otechestvennoy muzïki XX veka' [Skryabin from the perspective of Russian and Soviet music in the 20th century], Uchyonïye zapiski gosudarstvennogo memorial'nogo muzeya A.N. Skryabina, i, ed. O.M. Tompakova (Moscow, 1993), 7–15

'Kubofuturizm: muzïkal'nïye paralleli' [Cubofuturism: musical parallels], Russian Literature, ed. G.Y. Alleman, E.A. de Haart (Amsterdam, 1994), 45–55

'Miriskusnicheskaya kontseptsiya sinteza iskusstv i stilevïye printsipï "Novogo russkogo baleta"' [The concept of the synthesis of the arts and the stylistic principles of the "New Russian Ballet"], Russkaya muzïkal'naya kul'tura XIX - nachala XX veka, ed. T.Yu. Maslovskaya (Moscow, 1994), 3–24

'Skryabinskaya "formula ėkstaza" vo vremeni i prostranstve' [Skryabin's "formula of ecstasy" in time and space], A.N. Skryabin: chelovek, khudozhnik, mïslitel', ed. O.M. Tompakova (Moscow, 1994), 95–101

'Vremya i prostranstvo pozdney sovetskoy muzïki' [Time and space in later Soviet music], Poisk smïsla: Nizhniy Novgorod 1993, ed. K.Z. Akopian (Nizhniy Novgorod, 1994), 3–24, 209–16

'Igra ili propoved'? (zametki ob organnïkh kontsertakh Khindemita)' [Play or preaching? (notes on Hindemith's organ concertos)], Vïbor i sochetaniye: otkrïtaya forma: sbornik statey k 75-letiya Yu.G. Kona, ed. K.I. Yuzhak (St Petersburg, 1995), 117–20

'Kharms i Shostakovich: nesostoyavsheyesya sotrudnichestvo' [Kharms and Shostakovich: a collaboration that did not happen], Kharmsizdat predstavlyayet, ed. V. Sazhin (St Petersburg, 1995), 94–6

ed., with B.S. Getselev: Nizhnenovgorodskiy skryabinskiy al'manakh [Nizhniy Novgorod Skryabin miscellany] (Nizhniy Novgorod, 1995) [incl. 'Skryabin i novaya russkaya zhivopis': ot moderna k abstraktsionizmu' [Skryabin and the new Russian painting: from modernism to the abstract], 151–74]

'Shostakovich: poėtika inoskazaniy' [Shostakovich: the poetics of allegories], Iskusstvo XX veka: ukhodyashchaya ėpokha?, ed. V.B. Val'kova, B.S. Getseler (Nizhniy Novgorod, 1997), i, 200–11

'A.N. Skryabin', Istoriya russkoy muzïki, x (forthcoming)

SVETLANA SAVENKO

Levé (Fr.). See UPBEAT. See also ANALYSIS, §II, 2.

Level. See LAYER.

Leveridge, Richard (b London, 19 July 1670; d London, 22 March 1758). English bass and composer. For more than half a century Leveridge was a leading singer on the London stage and a popular composer of songs. He emerged as a soloist in April 1695, when the division of London's one theatre company left him as the leading bass in the company with which Henry Purcell worked until his death in November. Leveridge was the magician Ismeron in The Indian Queen, where he sang the impressive 'Ye twice ten hundred deities', and the first incidental song published as sung by him was Purcell's 'Take not a woman's anger ill'. After Purcell's death the company's composers were Daniel Purcell, Jeremiah Clarke (i) and Leveridge himself. In 1698 all three provided music for The Island Princess, in which Leveridge's performance of his own Enthusiastic Song was immensely popular. Regular revival performances, sung by him, were advertised until 1739. Two handsome books of his songs were published in 1697 and 1699, beginning his long connection with the firm of John Walsh (see illustration), and his popular theatre songs also appeared as single sheets. In 1699 he moved to the theatre in Dublin; one of Vanbrugh's letters states: 'Liveridge is in Ireland, he Owes so much money he dare not come over, so for want of him we han't had one Opera play'd this Winter'. He returned in 1702 to a revival of The Island Princess and a new production of Macbeth with music 'Vocal and Instrumental, all new Compos'd by Mr Leveridge'. He was to sing Hecate in this version for nearly 50 years, and the music held the stage for more than a century after his death. It was published in 1770, but by then was attributed to Matthew Locke. Burney wrote that 'its rude and wild excellence cannot be surpassed'.

Leveridge continued to sing both songs and dramatic operas but a new element was added with the introduction of operas in the Italian style. Between 1705 and 1708 he was the leading bass, generally with a comic role, in Arsinoe, Camilla, Rosamond, Thomyris and Love's Triumph. At first the operas were performed in English, but soon the Italian singers and language took over. After a lean period Leveridge sang in the English opera Calypso and Telemachus (1712) and then had a season with Handel's company. He was in the first performances of Il pastor fido and Teseo and played Argantes in a revival of Rinaldo. He never sang for Handel again, but in 1731 was Polypheme in the first public performance of Acis and Galatea, and several of Handel's Italian airs were published with English words by Leveridge.

Title-page of Richard Leveridge's 'A New Book of Songs' (London: Walsh, 1697)

In 1714 he moved to the new theatre at Lincoln's Inn Fields, which was managed by John Rich, with whom he was to work for the rest of his career. He returned to his English repertory and a new form, the musical afterpiece. These lightweight works were often comic, and for his benefit in 1716 Leveridge produced his own afterpiece, Pyramus and Thisbe. It is an amusing and good-natured parody of Italian opera, and Leveridge wrote the music, adapted the libretto from Shakespeare and sang Pyramus to the Thisbe of the tenor George Pack. His music is lost but the libretto was published and Lampe reset it in 1745. By 1720 Lincoln's Inn Fields was in financial difficulties and Leveridge retired from the stage to the coffee shop in Tavistock Street, Covent Garden, which he had opened possibly as early as 1714.

He returned to the stage in 1723 and for the next 28 years was the leading bass at Lincoln's Inn Fields and later at Covent Garden. His repertory expanded to include parts in Rich's phenomenally successful series of pantomime afterpieces. Seven of these works, from The Necromancer, introduced in 1723, to Orpheus and Eurydice (1740), were given between 60 and 90 performances a season. Leveridge generally sang impressive roles as gods and magicians and his voice, if no longer as flexible as when Purcell wrote for it, remained firm and powerful. He was rarely a performer in the ballad operas but his tunes, with their rhythmic vitality and memorable turns of phrase, were frequently used for ballad opera airs. He composed over 150 songs, from drinking songs and bawdy ballads to songs of romantic love and philosophy. His literary tastes were wide: he set Shakespeare, John Donne, Ben Jonson and Abraham Cowley as well as Thomas D'Urfey, William Congreve, George Farquhar, John Gay and the Rev. Samuel Wesley, and he often wrote his own words. He was a favourite with audiences, who loved songs like his The Roast Beef of Old England, and his very individual annual benefits were generously supported. He enjoyed remarkably good health and reduced his appearances only in his last few seasons. In 1751 he was forced to leave the stage because of the 'infirmities incident to his great age' and in his retirement his friends organized a subscription for 'honest Dick Leveridge, the Father of the English Stage'.

WORKS

facsimile of complete songs and music for 'Macbeth' in MLE, A6 (1997)

SONG COLLECTIONS

A New Book of Songs (London, 1697)
A Second Book of Songs (London, 1699)
A New Book of Songs (London, 1711)
A Collection of Songs (London, 1727)
A Collection of Songs (London, 1728)

STAGE MUSIC

first performed London, Drury Lane, unless otherwise stated

The Island Princess (dramatic op, P. Motteux, after J. Fletcher), Feb 1699, collab. D. Purcell and J. Clarke, 4 songs, GB-Lbl (facs. in MLE, C2, 1985), songs (London, 1699), songsheets

Love and a Bottle (comedy, G. Farquhar), ?Dec 1698, 3 songs pubd singly (London, n.d.)

Macbeth (tragedy with musical scenes, W. Davenant, after W. Shakespeare and T. Middleton), 21 Nov 1702, Cfm, ed. W. Boyce [attrib. Locke] (London, 1770)

Britain's Happiness (musical interlude, Motteux), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 7 March 1704, music lost, except 1 song (London, 1709)

The Mountebank, or The Humours of the Fair (Motteux), 18 Jan 1705 [musical interlude in Farewell Folly], 2 songs (London, ?1705)
The Beau Demolished (afterpiece), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 9 Feb 1715, 2 songs pubd singly and in The Merry Musician, i (London, 1716)
The Mountebank, or The Country Lass (comic masque), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 21 Dec 1715, 2 songs (London, ?1715)
Pyramus and Thisbe (comic masque, Leveridge, after Shakespeare), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 11 April 1716, music lost, lib (London, 1716/R)
Jupiter and Europa (pantomime), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 23 March 1723, collab. Cobston and J.E. Galliard, Songs (London, 1723)

Single songs in: The Roman Bride's Revenge (tragedy, C. Gildon), ?Nov 1696; The Relapse (comedy, J. Vanbrugh), Nov 1696; Aesop (comedy, Vanbrugh), ?Dec 1696; Cinthia and Endimion (dramatic op, T. D'Urfey), ?Jan 1697; Woman's Wit (comedy, C. Cibber), ?Jan 1697; A Plot and no Plot (comedy, J. Dennis), ?May 1697; Caligula (tragedy, J. Crowne), ?March 1698; The Famous History of the Rise and Fall of Massaniello (tragicomedy, D'Urfey), ?May 1699; The Constant Couple (comedy, Farquhar), Dublin, Smock Alley Theatre, 1700; The Lying Lover (comedy, R. Steele), Dec 1703; The Quacks (comedy, O. Swiney), March 1705; The Recruiting Officer (comedy, Farquhar), April 1706; The Leveller, theatre unknown, ?1710; Apollo and Daphne (pantomime, L. Theobald), London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, revival *c*1730

Songs sung at the theatre as extra entertainments; among the most frequently performed were:
The Tippling Philosophers (E. Ward), first perf. at Rich's benefit, London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 19 March 1720
The Cobbler's End, first perf. at Leveridge's benefit, London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 28 March 1728
The Roast Beef of Old England, first perf. at Leveridge's benefit, London, Covent Garden, 15 April 1735
The Anacreontic Song, ? first perf., London, Lincoln's Inn Fields, also perf. at Leveridge's benefit, London, Covent Garden, 12 April 1736
Leveridge's stage songs were pubd singly, in his own collections, and in periodicals and miscellaneous collections, notably: The Monthly Mask of Vocal Music (London, 1702–11); Wit and Mirth (London, from 1699); A Collection of the Choicest Songs & Dialogues (London, 1703); The Merry Musician (London, 1716–33); The Musical Miscellany (London, 1729–31); The British Musical Miscellany (London, 1733–7)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; GroveO ('Macbeth (i)'; O. Baldwin, T. Wilson); HawkinsH
'An Account of Richard Leveridge', European Magazine and London Review, xxiv (1793), 243, 363
R.E. Moore: 'The Music to Macbeth', MQ, xlvii (1961), 22–40
R. Fiske: 'The Macbeth Music', ML, xlv (1964), 114–25
O. Baldwin and T.Wilson: 'Richard Leveridge, 1670–1758', MT, cxi (1970), 592–4, 891–3, 988–90
J. Milhous and R.D.Hume: Vice Chamberlain Coke's Theatrical Papers 1706–1715(Carbondale, IL, 1982)
O. Baldwin and T.Wilson: 'The Music for Durfey's Cinthia and Endimion', Theatre Notebook, xli (1986–7), 70–74
O. Baldwin and T.Wilson: 'Purcell's Stage Singers', Performing the Music of Henry Purcell, ed. M. Burden (Oxford, 1996), 105–29

OLIVE BALDWIN, THELMA WILSON

Lévesque, Elisabeth de Hauteterre. See HAULTETERRE, ELISABETH DE.

Levey [O'Shaughnessy]. Irish family of musicians.

(1) Richard Michael Levey (b Dublin, 25 Oct 1811; d Dublin, 28 June 1899). Violinist and conductor. After an apprenticeship with James Barton he joined the Theatre Royal orchestra in Dublin. As leader (from 1834) he composed much music for plays and pantomimes. He went on tour in 1829 with Angelica Catalani, and in 1839 with Balfe's opera company; he took part in many opera seasons in Dublin and on 20 April 1876 celebrated the 50th anniversary of his association with the Theatre Royal. With Joseph Robinson and others he helped to establish the (Royal) Irish Academy of Music, at which he was professor of violin; he also assisted in chamber music performances. He compiled the Collection of the Dance Music of Ireland (1858) and, with J. O'Rorke, the Annals of the Theatre Royal, Dublin (1880).

(2) Richard M. Levey (b Dublin, 25 April 1837; d Landport, Portsmouth, 7 April 1911). Violinist, son of (1) Richard Michael Levey and twin brother of (3) William Charles Levey. He was a virtuoso who appeared at Musard's concerts in Paris. He later devised an 'act' in which he posed as 'Paganini Redivivus', having, it was said, a Svengali-like appearance which could be made to resemble Paganini's 'ghost'. On tour he enthralled audiences with his imitations of other musical instruments; he could perform the 'most extraordinary tricks without using the bow' (The Orchestra, 28 October 1865). He even presented a version of Rossini's William Tell overture played on one string with the wood of the bow – a unique instance of col legno interpretation.

(3) William Charles Levey (b Dublin, 25 April 1837; d London, 18 Aug 1894). Composer and conductor, son of (1) Richard Michael Levey. He studied with his father, and then in Paris. He was for some years musical director at the Drury Lane, Covent Garden and Adelphi theatres. His operettas Fanchette (1864, Covent Garden) and Punchinello (1864, Her Majesty's) were followed by a 'musical folly', The Girls of the Period (1869, Drury Lane). Levey also wrote music for pantomimes and for a production of Antony and Cleopatra; his other works include songs, drawing-room operettas, a Triumphal March composed for the Dublin International Exhibition of 1865 and a descriptive fantasia, The Man of War, for chorus, military band and orchestra (1874).

WILLIAM H. GRATTAN FLOOD, ALEXIS CHITTY/E.D. MACKERNESS

Levi, Giuseppe. See ALLEVI, GIUSEPPE.

Levi, Hermann (b Giessen, Upper Hesse, 7 Nov 1839; d Munich, 13 May 1900). German conductor. Descended from a line of distinguished rabbis, he attended the Mannheim Lyceum (1851–3) before withdrawing to study music with Vinzenz Lachner; from 1855 to 1858 he studied at the Leipzig Conservatory with Moritz Hauptmann (music theory) and Julius Rietz (composition and conducting). Following several months in Paris, he became music director at Saarbrücken in 1859; two years later he deputized as associate conductor of the Mannheim Opera, on Lachner's recommendation, before being appointed Kapellmeister of the Hoogduitse Opera at Rotterdam (1862–4). As Hofkapellmeister in Karlsruhe (1864–72), he became a friend of Clara Schumann and, through her, of Brahms. From 1872 he was Hofkapellmeister in Munich, and was made general music director of the city in 1894, retiring in 1896.

A distinguished and serious-minded artist of great personal qualities and musical gifts, Levi was encouraged by the initial reception of his own Schumannesque compositions but became persuaded by 1864 – having also been nudged in this direction by Brahms – to give up composing and dedicate himself to conducting. He was an esteemed interpreter of Brahms, with whom he formed an intimate friendship, influencing such works as the Schicksalslied and the Piano Quintet. Levi became increasingly preoccupied with opera, however, having begun to conduct Wagner's works in 1862, and for many years sought in vain to find a suitable operatic subject for Brahms, a composer whom, as late as 1871, he still hoped would 'demonstrate the right path for operatic composition'.

Recommended to Wagner by Pauline Viardot-García and Nietzsche, Levi impressed Wagner in 1870 by refusing to conduct an unauthorized performance of Die Walküre at Munich. After meeting Levi in 1871, Wagner drew the conductor into his sphere of influence, going so far as to compliment Levi on not having changed his patently Jewish surname. Levi was increasingly won over as much by Wagner's music as by his artistic message, even defending the aesthetic underlying Das Judenthum in der Musik. In 1875 Levi participated in rehearsals for the first Bayreuth Festival, but was still busy arranging a performance of Brahms's First Symphony so as to advance the composer's dubious reputation in Munich. Though Levi made increasingly desperate attempts to forestall a personal breach between them, Brahms was prepared to renounce their friendship because of Levi's Wagnerism.

Wagner was never in any doubt about Levi's artistic pre-eminence, preferring his conducting to that of Hans Richter, but it did not please him that Parsifal, with its Christian symbolism, was to be conducted by a Jew, and he made clumsy attempts to convert Levi to Christianity. When in July 1881 Wagner showed Levi a letter which urged the composer to keep Parsifal pure and not allow it to be conducted by a Jew, Levi asked to be excused from his assignment, but relented when Wagner assured him that baptism was not a prerequisite. On 26 July 1882 Levi conducted the première of Parsifal to great acclaim, and his inspired renditions of this score until 1894 (except in 1888 when he was ill) place him, along with Richter, Mottl and Seidl, as one of the greatest of the first generation of Bayreuth conductors.

Levi led an illustrious professional life in Munich (1872–96), receiving numerous Prussian and Bavarian state honours. He gave the German premières of operas by Gounod, Delibes, Messager, Chabrier and Berlioz (Benvenuto Cellini and Les Troyens), and made successful translations of three of Mozart's Italian operas, versions routinely used by German opera houses into the 1930s. Levi took his role as Wagnerian aesthetic heir seriously in his patronage of Bruckner, whose success with the Munich public he assured in 1884 when he presented the Adagio from the Seventh Symphony following a performance of Die Walküre. It was Bruckner, not Brahms, whom Levi toasted as symphonist in the 1880s as the successor to Beethoven, and Bruckner, for his part, revered Levi, though 15 years his junior, as his 'artistic father'. In a letter of 1887 Levi criticized the first version of Bruckner's Eighth Symphony, citing the 'dubious development' of the themes and the 'impossible orchestration', thereby shattering Bruckner's self-confidence and consigning him to several years of soul-searching revisions. Levi was also a champion of the young Richard Strauss, who dedicated his Overture in C minor (1883) to him. Levi, who had long suffered from poor health, retired in 1896. The 'spiritual' quality of Levi's interpretations was widely admired, and the economy of his gestures, as well as his masterly technique, exercised an influence on a number of conductors of the following generation, especially Weingartner.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (R Schaal); NDB (I. Fellinger)

C.F. Glasenapp: Richard Wagner's Leben und Wirken (Kassel, 1876–7, 3/1894–1911 as Das Leben Richard Wagners, 5/1910–23; Eng. trans. of 3rd edn rev., enlarged 1900–08/R by W.A. Ellis as Life of Richard Wagner [vols. iv–vi by Ellis alone]

H.S. Chamberlain: 'Richard Wagner's Briefe an Hermann Levi', Bayreuther Blätter, xxiv (1901), 13–42

E. von Possart: Erinnerungen an Hermann Levi (Munich, 1901)

L. Schmidt, ed.: Johannes Brahms im Briefwechsel mit H. Levi, F. Gernheim sowie den Familien Hecht u. Fellinger, vii (Berlin, 1910/R)

F. Gräflinger: Anton Bruckner (Munich, 1911)

R. Du Moulin Eckart: Cosima Wagner (Munich, 1929–31)

J. Kniese: Der Kampf zweier Welten um das Bayreuther Erbe (Leipzig, 1931)

E. Newman: The Life of Richard Wagner (London, 1933–47/R

P. Gay: 'Hermann Levi: a Study in Service and Self-Hatred', Freud, Jews, and other Germans: Masters and Victims in Modernist Culture (New York, 1978), 189–230

H. Zelinsky: 'Der Dirigent Hermann Levi: Anmerkungen zur verdrängten Geschichte des jüdischen Wagnerianers', Geschichte und Kultur der Juden in Bayern, ed. J. Kirmew and N. Treml (Munich, 1988), 411–30

L. Dreyfus: 'Hermann Levi's Shame and Parsifal's Guilt: a Critique of Essentialism in Biography and Criticism', COJ, vi (1994), 125–45

F. Haas: Zwischen Brahms und Wagner: der Dirigent Hermann Levi (Zürich, 1995)

LAURENCE DREYFUS

Levi, Jul [Levy, Jules] (b Saloniki, 19 June 1930). Bulgarian composer and operetta conductor. While still a student at the Sofia Higher School he worked for the children's drama section of Bulgarian radio. He was then composer to the army ensemble (1950–58) and conductor and composer for the State Satiric Theatre, Sofia (1958–63). In 1957 he graduated from the Bulgarian State Music Academy. From 1963 to 1991 he was conductor of the State Music Theatre (operetta theatre) in the same city. His music has popular appeal, particularly those works in the lighter genres.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Momicheto, koyeto obichakh [The Girl I Love] (musical), 1963; Panair v Sofiya [Fair in Sofia] (ballet), 1968; Svetit ye malak [The World is Small] (musical), 1970; Neda (op), 1977; 6 other theatre works, 3 pieces for puppet theatre

Orch: Vn Conc., 1953; Sym. no.1, 1958; Ouvertüre-Poem, 1962; Divertimento concertante no.1, tpt, big band, 1961; Sym. no.2, 1970; Divertimento concertante no.2, fl, orch, 1972; Sym. no.3, 1975; Sym. no.4, 1984

Film scores, more than 60 solo/choral songs, folksong arrs.

Principal publisher: Nauka i izkustvo (Sofia)

LADA BRASHOVANOVA/MARIA KOSTAKEVA

Levi ben Gershom [Gershon, Gerson]. See GERSONIDES.

Levidis, Dimitrios (b Athens, before ?1885; d Palaeon Phaleron, nr Athens, 29 May 1951). Greek composer, active in France. He studied at the Lottner Conservatory, Athens; at the Athens Conservatory (1898–1905) with Karl Boehmer, Lavrangas and others; at the Lausanne Conservatoire (1906–7) with Alexandre Dénéréaz and at the Munich Academy (1907–8) with Klose (fugue), Mottl (orchestration) and, reportedly, Strauss (composition), winning the Franz Liszt Prize for his Piano Sonata op.16. After a short period in Greece he settled in France (1910), served in the French army during World War I and took French nationality. His music was often performed at the Colonne, Straram, Pasdeloup and Touche concerts, and he was decorated by the French Academy for a paper on the nature of sound. He returned to Athens in about 1932 to teach at the Hellenic Conservatory and at the Music Lyceum. In 1934 he founded the Phaleron Conservatory, later subsumed into the Hellenic Conservatory, and he was president of the Union of Greek Composers (1946–7). He was in Paris again in 1947–8.

A composer of refined technique, Levidis combined a Straussian harmony with Ravelian Impressionism, also exploiting Greek modes, in an appealing style of greater homogeneity than that of many of his Greek contemporaries. However, his elegance was sometimes achieved at the expense of vigour. More expansive in love songs, he could yet be penetrating in dramatic and epic outbursts such as O yirismos stin xesklavomeni patrida ('The Return to the Liberated Homeland'). Most successful are his orchestral works, where subtle contrasts of texture often achieve impressive dramatic effects. He was a notable experimenter with novel combinations and new instruments: he was among the first to write for the ondes martenot (his Poème symphonique was given on the occasion of the first public appearance of the instrument) and he also provided music for the polychord, a chromatic harp invented by the Greek piano tuner Evangelos Tsamourtzis (1888–1965); the 'dixtuor (éolien) d'orchestre' (possibly identical with the 'Aeolian orchestra') for which he wrote consisted of strings, piano, celesta, two harps and percussion. Between 1935 and 1949, Levidis worked on his Techniki tis moussikis technis ('Treatise on the technique of the art of music'), which has remained unpublished.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE AND ORCHESTRAL

Stage: Amour et garde française (operetta, 1, D. Pinel and C. Bussière), ?1911, lost; Au diable (sketch, 1, H. Grantham Hayes), ?1917, lost; O voskos ki i neraida [The Shepherd and the Fairy] (ballet, 1, Levidis), op.39, 1923; To fylachto ton theon [The Talisman of the Gods] (ballet, 3, ?Levidis), op.41, 1925, excerpts, incl. Mikri fantasia, orch; 4 tableaux en un acte (?ballet), op.45; Symphonie mystique, vv, orch, ?dancers, 1928–?49, inc., lost

Orch: Little Suite, D, str, 1902–3/1904–5, pts arr. pf and str qt; Pour une poupée bien sage, 1904, arr. Aeolian orch, 1932 or before; Divertissement, op.25, eng hn, dixtuor éolien, 1911; Variations, a, op.27, chbr orch, ?1911, arr. 3 polychords, fl, eng hn, cl, bn cl, sax, perc, excerpts; Suite Napolitaine, ?orch, ?1920; Suite noire, ?orch, ?1920–21; Suite grise, ?orch, before ?1921, all 3 suites lost; Chant païen, op.37, ob, perc, str, hp, 1921, lost, arr. fl, polychord, lost; Poème symphonique, op.43, vn, orch, 1926, arr. as op.43b, ondes martenot, orch, perf. 1928; Stances (Stances symphoniques), orch/Aeolian orch, 1932, lost; Berceuse pour un gendarme, ?orch, ?before 1948, lost

VOCAL

Tristesse (J. Lemaire), op.5, S/T, pf/orch, 1899/1902; L'amour de l'Amour (P. d'Amor), op.13, S, pf, 1906, ?orchd; Eolienne, op.14 (d'Amor), S/T, female chorus ad lib, orch, 1906, arr. vv, pf (Paris, 1920); Nazmi (d'Amor), op.19, S, pf, 1909; A Hilda (Lemaire), op.20, S/T, pf/orch, 1910; Lorsque tu ne m'aimeras plus (L. Fortolis), op.29, S/T, pf/orch (Paris, 1911); 4 roubaÿyat perses (Khayyam, Hafiz, trans. Levidis), opp.30–32, 40, 1v, pf, 1912–14 (Paris, 1926), arr. 1v, eng hn, dixtuor eolien; Primavera (d'Amor), op.35, 1v, pf (Paris, 1920)

Se ymnoumen [We praise Thee] (Gk., liturgy), T, chorus, 1925, lost; Sirène, Marine (Levidis), op.42, S, orch/(eng hn, dixtuoz éolien)/pf (Paris, 1926); Hommage (Levidis), op.44, 1v, pf (Paris, 1927); De profundis (Levidis), op.46, T, orch, 1929, arr. 3 polychords; Offrande (Levidis), op.48, 1v, orch, ?lost, version for 1v, pf (Paris, 1933); To kyparissi [The Cypress] (Palamas), op.47, orch, 1934/1935, arr. 1v, pf (1960); Tes yeux (Levidis), op.50, 1v, pf/orch, 1932; Lelita (Levidis), op.51, 1v, pf/orch, 1932; Chant nostalgique (textless), op.53, mixed chorus, xyl, cel, perc, 2 hp; Le tombeau (?Levidis), 1v, eng hn, dixtuoz éolien; Ta pallikaria tis Pindou [The Heroes of Pindos] (V. Pezopoulou), chorus, orch, 1940, lost; Nekriki pombi [Funeral Procession] (?Gk. liturgy, ?D. Solomos), op.56, chorus, orch, ?1941, perf. 1946, lost

Ta hellenika ta pelaga [Greek Seas] (G. Ikonomidis), 1v/?vv, orch, early 1941; To proto dakry [The First Tear] (V. Pezopoulou), op.58, S/T, orch/(fl, vc, 2 polychords); O yirismos stin xesklavomeni patrida [The Return to the Liberated Homeland] (I. Polemis), op.61, Mez/Bar, orch, 1941; The Iliad (trans. Y. Lignadis), nar, T, orch, ?1942–3, lost; O levendis ki o haros [The Young Man and Death] (K. Velmyras), op.64, S, Mez, T, orch, 1944, lost except for sketch of vs and notes on orch; La tour d'honneur, nar, orch, 1947, lost; La vâche burlesque, Mez, pf, 1948, ?orchd, lost; Nanourisma [Lullaby] (Polemis), 1v, ?pf, 1948, lost; Agapi [Love] (P. Magnis), 1v, ?pf, 1948, lost; Je voudrais mourir (Levidis, Sister Agnes), op.68, Mez, pf, 1948; 3 Songs (A. Simiriotis), 1v, ?pf, 1950, lost; 2 Songs (G. Delis), 1v, ?pf, 1951, lost

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Lacrimae, pf/vn, pf, 1898; Study, a, pf, 1898; Menuet, pf, 1898; Impromptu no.1, b, op.6, pf, 1902/1903, arr. str orch, *c*1913; Pf Sonata, f, op.16, 1907, ?orchd; Fugue, e, str qt, 1908; Boîte à musique, hpd, 1908; Preludes, C, op.21, d, op.22, org, 1910, orchd; Flûte de Pan, fl, pf, 1914

Pièce chromatique (Piècette chromatique), C, polychord, 1936; Etude chromatique, a, polychord, 1936; Etude romantique (Pièce pour polycorde), e; Variations sous forme de choral, a, vn, polychord; Carillon, 3 polychords, 1v ad lib; Méthode spéciale destinée à l'enseignement du polycorde, op.57, 3 vols., ?1940

MSS in GR-An

Principal publishers: Darimont, Durand, Durdilly-Hayet, Hayet, Maillochon, Ricordi (Paris), Tsamourtzis, Union of Greek Composers

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.K. Bouboulidis: Neohellines moussourgoi: I. Dimitrios Levidis: symvoli eis tin historian tis neohellenikis moussikis (Athens, 1949)

S.K. Spanoudi: 'Levidis, Dimitrios', Helios, xii (Athens, *c*1950), 168 only

I. Boukouvala-Anagnostou: 'Hellenikes synthesseis ya piano', Helleniki dimiourgia, vii (1951), 796–7

D. Levidis: 'Ai tasseis tis neohellenikis moussikis dimiourgias' [Tendencies in modern Greek composition], Helleniki dimiourgia, vii (1951), 785–8

G. Sklavos: 'Dimitrios Levidis', Helleniki dimiourgia, viii (1951), 67–8

A.S. Theodoropoulou: 'Dimitrios Levidis', Nea estia, xlix (1951), 819 only

F. Anoyanakis: 'I moussiki stin neoteri Hellada', in K. Nef: Eisagogi eis tin istorian tis moussikis (Athens, 1958), 590–92 [Gk. edn of Einführung in die Musikgeschichte]

G. Leotsakos: 'O Dimitrios Levidis ke to aenigma tis "Mikris fantasias"' [Dimitrios Levidis and the riddle of the 'Little Fantasia'], foreword to D. Levidis: Little Fantasia (Athens, 1982) [in Gk. and Eng.]; repr. in Moussikologhia, no.1 (1986), 9–25

GEORGE LEOTSAKOS

Levin, Robert (David) (b Brooklyn, NY, 13 Oct 1947). American pianist and musicologist. He studied composition in New York with Stefan Wolpe, 1957–61, and the piano with Louis Martin, 1961–4. At Fontainebleau he was a pupil of Nadia Boulanger, 1960–64, studying the piano there under Alice Gaultier-Léon; he has also taken masterclasses with Clifford Curzon (piano) and Hans Swarowsky (conducting). He has pursued a dual career as pianist and teacher. His positions have included head of theory at the Curtis Institute (1968–73), director-in-residence and faculty member at the Conservatoire Américain, Fontainebleau (1979–83), professor at SUNY, Purchase (1972–86), professor of piano, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Freiburg (1986–93), and professor at Harvard University (from 1993). As a pianist, he has played in public since childhood; his formal New York recital début was at Alice Tully Hall in 1987 and in London at the Queen Elizabeth Hall in 1992. He has also played with the CBSO and the Berlin PO under Simon Rattle and the Boston SO under Bernard Haitink.

Although chiefly known as a Mozart pianist, on the fortepiano – on which he has recorded many of the concertos, with the Academy of Ancient Music under Christopher Hogwood – Levin has also championed contemporary music, notably the works of John Harbison (he is co-dedicatee of the Piano Trio), and has played music by Denisov and Shifrin. Levin's recordings also include works by Haydn, Beethoven (the complete piano concertos, with John Eliot Gardiner), Schubert, Schumann, Hindemith and Kurtág. His Mozart piano concerto recordings are notable not only for their spirited and stylish playing but also, like his public performances, for his persuasive and often brilliant improvised cadenzas. Levin has also written completions of several Mozart works, among them movements for horn and orchestra, the double concerto for violin and piano K315*f*, the Requiem and the wind sinfonia concertante K297*B* attributed to Mozart, of which he has written an ingenious if controversial study, Who Wrote the Mozart Four-Wind Concertante? (New York, 1988). His writings also include several articles on aspects of Mozartian performing practice.

STANLEY SADIE

Levina, Zara Aleksandrovna (b Simferopol′, 23 Jan/5 Feb 1906; d Moscow, 27 June 1976). Russian composer and pianist. She studied the piano with D.B. Dronseyko-Mironovich at the Odessa Conservatory, graduating in 1923, and from 1925 to 1930 attended the Moscow Conservatory, where her teachers were Glière, Myaskovsky (composition) and Blumenfeld (piano). Levina participated in Procol, the production collective of conservatory students, and, until 1931, as a devotee of the ideas of the Russian Association of Proletarian Musicians she composed songs and marches. She organized the Children's Music Committee of the Composers' Union of the USSR and was its chairman from 1943 to 1947, working with Kabalevsky on children's education.

Although Levina wrote some large-scale compositions, she was first and foremost a master of the romance and of children's songs. Her finest love songs together with the reflective monologues on the poems of O. Shiraz, S. Kaputikyan and E. Moshkovskaya were written in the 1950s and 60s. Earlier, in the atmosphere of the 1930s, she composed heroic and passionate monologues, adopting a spirit of patriotism. Her melodies are simple, but their individuality is achieved through fine detail, delicate harmony, supple modulation and varied texture.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, 1945; 3 Sym. Waltzes, 1945; Pf Conc. no.2, 1975

Choral: Burevestnik [Stormy Petrel] (after M. Gor′ky), Bar, mixed chorus, pf, 1927 [extract from Put′ Oktyabrya [October's Path], collab. Procol members]; Oda soldatu [Ode to a Soldier] (orat-triptych, A. Tvardovsky, L. Nekrasova), solo vv, mixed chorus, org, pf, orch, 1964; choral songs, 1/2 vv, pf

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata no.1, 1925; Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1925; Poem, va, pf, 1928; Poem, vc, pf, 1931; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1952; Pf Sonata no.2, 1953; Yunosheskiy al′bom [Youth's Album], pf, 1972

Solo vocal: 4 romansa (A.S. Pushkin), 1930; Vosstavshaya Vengriya [Hungary in Revolt], 4 monologi (A. Gidash), 1932; 5 romansov (M.Yu. Lermontov), 1940; 5 romansov (O. Shiraz), 1952; Pesni-romansï [Songs and romances] (O. Driz), 1959; Romansï i monologi (African poets), 1960; Akvareli [Aquarelles] (Ye. Moshkovskaya), 10 miniatyurï, 1964; 10 romansov (S. Yesenin), 1975; other popular songs; arrs. of Russ., Belarusian, Amer., Bulg., It., Nor. folksongs

Children's songs: Tsikl detskikh skazok [Children's Fairy Tales] (K. Chukovsky, N. Konchalovskaya), 1944; Kruglïy god [All Year Round] (S. Marshak), 1947; Masha (S. Kaputikyan), 1952; other songs (A. Barto, Marshak); songs for schools; songs and marches for young pioneers

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Nest′yeva: 'Poslushayte ètu muzïku!' [Listen to this music!], SovM (1962), no.12, pp.21–3

N. Mikhaylovskaya: Zara Levina (Moscow, 1969)

Z. Levina: 'Iz vospominaniy raznïkh let' [Memories of different years], SovM (1986), no.5, pp.87–90

A. Pakhmutova: 'Absolyutnoye sluzheniye muzïke' [An absolute devotion to music], SovM (1986), no.5, pp.84–6

OL′GA MANUL′KINA

Lévinas, Michaël (b Paris, 18 April 1949). French pianist and composer. He was the son of the philosopher Emmanuel Lévinas. Marguerite Long encouraged him to become a pianist and he entered the Paris Conservatoire as a pupil of Lazare Lévy at the age of five. He took first prizes in piano (Yvonne Loriod's class), chamber music, accompaniment, and composition (Messiaen's class). He has an international reputation as a concert pianist, in particular for his study of the works of Liszt and his complete recording of Beethoven's sonatas. Co-director of the Paris-based ensemble L'Itinéraire (a collective of composers and performers), he has since 1973 championed the music of his contemporaries (Scelsi, Crumb, Lachenmann). Having experienced the influence of Stockhausen, he turned to the aesthetics of 'son sale', altering pure sonorities from acoustic sources by various means: mechanical (Appels, 1974), magnetic (Concerto pour un piano espace, 1976), electronic (Ouverture pour une fête étrange, 1979) and computerized (Préfixes, 1991). At IRCAM in the early 1990s he worked on hybridizing the characteristic features of different instrumental sounds (crossing a trombone with a bass drum, or a soprano's laugh with the eddy of a cymbal, for example). The outcome of these researches manifests itself in his opera Go-gol (1996), after Gogol's story The Overcoat.

Lévinas's aesthetic is enriched by a sense of the fantastic (Réminiscences d'un jardin férique, 1987), supported by a liking for birds and the myth of the Ascension (Résonances polyphoniques, 1985).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: La conférence des oiseaux (spectacle musical, J. -C. Carrière after Attar), 1985; Go-gol (op, M. Lévinas after N.V. Gogol), 1996

Orch: L'orateur muet, 1970; Orchestre, 1973; Ouverture pour une fête étrange, 1979; Réminiscences d'un jardin férique, 1987; La clôche fêlée, 1988

Chbr: Clov et Hamm, trbn, tuba, perc, elecs, tape, 1973; Appels, 11 insts, 1974; Conc. pour un piano espace, pf, 8 insts, tape, 1976; Strettes tournantes-migrations, 9 insts, 1978; Conc. pour un piano espace no.2, pf, 5 insts, 2 tapes, elecs, 1980; Contrepoints irréels III: Rencontres, 4 fl, 1980 (arr. 6 fl, lute, ondes martenot, elec org, perc, elecs, 1980); Les rires du Gilles, 5 insts, tape, 1981; Arcades, va, pf, 1982; Arcades II, va, 12 insts, 1982; La voix des voix, 9 insts, 1984; Troisième arcade 'Le choeur des arches', pf, perf, str, tape, 1984; Voûtes, 6 perc, 1988; Canons rythmiques, vc, prep pf, 1991; Préfixes, 17 insts, 1991; Rebonds, fl, cl, vn, vc, 2 pf, 1992–3; Diaclase, brass qnt, 1993

Solo inst: Arsis et Thésis, b fl, 1971; Froissement d'ailes, fl, 1975; Le tambour, lute, tape, 1981; Résonances polyphoniques, db, elec, 1985; 3 études, pf, 1992

Vocal: Voix dans un vaisseau d'Airain 'Chant en escalier', 1 v, fl, hn, pf, tape, 1977; Les réciproques, 12 vv, 1986; Les Aragon, Mez, 10 insts, 1998

Principal publisher: Salabert

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'L'itinéraire', ReM, nos.421–4 (1991) [special no.]

D. Cohen Lévinas and P.A. Castanet, eds.: Les écrits de Michaël Lévinas (Paris, forthcoming)

PIERRE ALBERT CASTANET

Levine, James (b Cincinnati, 23 June 1943). American conductor and pianist. He began to learn the piano at four, and made his début with the Cincinnati SO at ten. This led to music lessons with Walter Levin and summer studies at the Marlboro Music Festival (from 1956, including piano lessons with Rudolf Serkin) and the Aspen Music School and Festival (from 1957, where he studied with Rosina Lhévinne). In 1961 he entered the Juilliard School of Music's graduate division to study conducting with Jean Morel and the piano with Lhévinne. He joined the American Conductors Project with the Baltimore SO in 1964 and studied with Alfred Wallenstein, Max Rudolf and Fausto Cleva. There he met Szell, who took him to the Cleveland Orchestra as an assistant conductor (1964–70); there he also created an orchestra from the students of the Cleveland Institute of Music. He helped Robert Shaw found the music institute at Meadow Brook (the summer home of the Detroit SO), taught and conducted at Aspen (1966–70), and directed the University Circle Orchestra.

Although his training with Morel and Szell emphasized, respectively, the French and German symphonic repertory, Levine conducted many operas in Cleveland and Aspen, and in 1970 made his débuts with the WNO (Aida) and the San Francisco Opera (Tosca). The following year he made his Metropolitan Opera début, also with Tosca, and conducted the Chicago SO in Mahler's Second Symphony at the Ravinia Festival. In 1973 he became principal conductor of the Metropolitan and director of the Ravinia Festival (1973–93) and the Cincinnati May Festival (1973–8). In 1975 he was appointed music director at the Metropolitan and in an unprecedented move was named artistic director in 1986. In 1975 he made his Salzburg Festival début with the LSO and returned to collaborate on several productions with Jean-Pierre Ponnelle. At Bayreuth he conducted Götz Friedrich's centennial production of Parsifal (1982–5, 1988), Wolfgang Wagner's Parsifal (1989–93) and the Kirchner/Rosalie Ring (1994–7). Although Levine first specialized in Mozart, Verdi and Mahler, he soon conducted most of Wagner, Puccini and Strauss at the Metropolitan as well as Les Troyens, Carmen and Pelléas et Mélisande. While the Metropolitan has remained conservative in its programming, he has conducted the house premières of Lulu, Erwartung, Mahagonny, Moses und Aron and Oedipus rex, and the world premières of Corigliano's The Ghost of Versailles (1991), Glass's The Voyage (1992) and John Harbison's The Great Gatsby (1999).

James Levine

Like his teacher Szell, Levine conducts with a precise beat and he has been faithful to his home institutions, deserving his reputation as an orchestra builder. Since his first season at the Metropolitan he has been praised for balance and clarity, although latterly he has been criticized, sometimes unfairly, for slow tempos and an undue emphasis on brilliant orchestral colour. He has recorded extensively with the Vienna PO (including the orchestra's first complete cycle of Mozart symphonies), Chicago SO, Berlin PO and his own Metropolitan Opera Orchestra, with whom, in addition to opera (notably a dramatic, award-winning Ring cycle), he has recorded major symphonic works, including impressive, powerful readings of Beethoven's 'Eroica' and Schubert's 'Unfinished' symphonies. Levine is an accomplished pianist and has recorded chamber works including cello sonatas (with Lynn Harrell), Schubert's 'Trout' Quintet and Schumann's Piano Quintet. He has also accompanied many of the great singers of the day and has made recordings with Christa Ludwig, Kathleen Battle and others. The large number of star singers groomed at the Metropolitan attests his ability to identify and train young vocal talent. With his presence on radio and television, his control over artists and repertory at the Metropolitan, and his enormous legacy on film and disc, Levine remains one of the world's most powerful and influential musical figures.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Hart: Conductors: a New Generation (New York, 1979), 221–66, 269–71

H. Matheopoulos: Maestro: Encounters with Conductors of Today (London, 1982), 278–99

P.J. Smith: A Year at the Met (New York, 1983)

J. Levine with R.C. Marsh: Dialogues and Discoveries (New York, 1997)

J. Bowen: 'James Levine', Twentieth-Century Conductors, ed. G. Greene (Westport, CT, forthcoming)

JOSÉ A. BOWEN

Le Vinier, Gilles (fl 1225–52). French trouvère, younger brother of GUILLAUME LE VINIER. He came from a bourgeois family of Arras and was a canon of the churches of Lille and Arras, which he represented in legal proceedings between 1225 and 1234. He established benefices at Arras between 1236 and 1246, the last following the death of his brother Guillaume. One of his songs (R.140) mentions a trip to the Holy Land, although this is not documented elsewhere. A Requiem Mass was prescribed for 'Dominus Aegidius', evidently the trouvère, at Arras

Ex.1 F-Pn fr.12615

Cathedral on 13 November 1252. Seven songs are securely attributed to Gilles le Vinier. Two chansons, Amors ki me le comande and Au partir de la froidure, have 'echo rhymes' of one- or two-syllable words that match the rhyme sounds of the preceding verses (ex.1).

The melodies of three of his four chansons and two jeux-partis have a conventional ABAB*x* structure. He also composed a lai/descort with ten stanzas, the last four of which consist of unpaired verses and music.

WORKS

MS sources: F-Pn fr.844, 845, 847, 12615, n.a. fr.1050, F-Pa 5198, F-AS 657, I-Rvat reg. 1490 (for details see Linker)

CHANSONS

Aler m'estuet la ou je trerai paine, R.140
Amors ki le me comande, R.257
Au partir de la froidure, R.2101a
Beaus m'est prins tans au partir de fevrier, R.1280

LAI/DESCORT

A ce m'acort, R.1928, ed. in Jeanroy

JEUX-PARTIS

Frere, ki fait mieus a prisier, R.1293
Maistre Simon, d'un essample nuvel, R.572

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Jeanroy, L.Brandin and P. Aubry: Lais et descorts français du XIIIe siècle: texte et musique (Paris, 1901), 16–18, 89–91
A. Metcke: Die Lieder des altfranzösischen Lyrikers Gille le Vinier (diss., U. of Halle, 1906) [incl. complete text edn]
A. Långfors, A.Jeanroy and L. Brandin, eds.: Recueil général des jeux-partis français (Paris, 1926), ii, 112–26 [incl. text edns]
H. Spanke: 'Sequenz und Lai', Studi medievali, new ser., xi (1938), 12–68, esp. 47
R. Berger: 'Archidiacres, officiaux, dignitaires du chapitre d'Arras (1093–1300): essai de chronologie', Bulletin de la Commission départementale des monuments historiques du Pas-de-Calais, viii (1970), 525
R.W. Linker: A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics (University, MS, 1979), 160–61

ELIZABETH AUBREY

Le Vinier, Guillaume (b Arras, *c*1190; d 1245). French trouvère. He was the son of the well-to-do bourgeois Philippe le Vinier and his wife Alent. Though married, Guillaume was a cleric. His younger brother GILLES LE VINIER, with whom he exchanged two jeux-partis (Frere, ki fait mieus and Sire frere, fetes m'un jugement), was also a trouvère. Guillaume was among the more prolific and imaginative of the trouvère poets within the Arras circle during the second quarter of the 13th century. Colart le Boutellier (R.891, 1610), Adam de Givenchi (R.112) and Jehan Erart (R.1712) each dedicated one or more poems to him, and the first two each engaged Guillaume in a jeu-parti, as did Andrieu Contredit d'Arras. It is likely that Moniot d'Arras, Thomas Herier and Thibaut IV de Champagne were also partners of his in three other jeux-partis. The fourth strophe of En tous tens was quoted in the Roman de la violette and thus antedates *c*1225. His stylistic debt to Gace Brulé's songs is expressed specifically in Voloirs de faire and indirectly by means of a citation from Gace's N'est pas a soi in Sire frere.

Guillaume le Vinier's poetic output is varied, including chansons d'amour, jeux-partis, a lai and descort, a chanson de mal mariée, a ballade, songs to the Virgin, and an imaginary dialogue with a nightingale. He had a marked preference for heterometric strophes, nine of his works having three different line lengths and one, En mi mai, having four. The great majority of his strophes have more than eight lines each. Li rossignolés and Quant ces moissons are unusual in that they employ pedes of five lines each. Possibly because of the distinctiveness of his formal constructions, only one of Guillaume's poems, Frere, qui fait mieus, provided the model for a later work. En tous tens, which is termed a ballade in the envoi, is the only strophic work with fewer than eight lines per strophe, being cast in the pattern aaabCB.

Most of the chansons follow bar form. Despite their length, there is almost no literal repetition in the caudas, and varied repetition is employed only sparingly. Moines, ne vous anuit pas, which displays the pattern ABAB CDCD′ EF (D′ being a 3rd lower than D), is the most noticeable exception to this general rule. The ballade features the repeat pattern, AABCBC, while Voloirs de faire chanson, not in bar form, is extraordinary in that lines 2, 3, 5 and 8 are different modifications of the opening phrase.

The treatment of the pedes of Thomas, je vous vueil demander is unusual in that the first pes ends on the final, while the second does not, thus reversing the normal ouvert–clos order. The melodies all move over a range of at least an octave, and examples with ranges of an 11th are not rare. There is considerable variety in the modal construction. A noticeable number of melodies have finals a 5th above the lowest tone centre of importance and a 4th below the highest. Melodies in authentic modes often begin a 7th above the final and gradually wend their way downwards. The role of the final as a centre of tonal gravity is quite variable. Chancon envoisie is given in part in mensural notation in the Chansonnier Cangé (F-Pn fr.846), following the pattern of the 2nd mode. Occasional hints of regular rhythmic organization may be observed in the disposition of single notes and ligatures in a few other chansons, but these patterns are not followed consistently. In general, modal interpretation of the melodies does not seem appropriate.

WORKS

Edition: Trouvère Lyrics with Melodies: Complete Comparative Edition, ed. H. Tischler, CMM, cvii (1997)

Amour grassi, si me lo de l'outrage, R.32 (ded. Thomas de Castel)
Amours, vostre sers et vostre hon, R.1869
Bien doit chanter la cui chancon set plaire, R.169 (ded. Gilles Le Vinier)
Chancon envoisie, R.1143; edn and facs. in MGG1
Dame des cieus, R.1353 (M)

[Schwan siglum: see SOURCES, MS]
De bien amer croist sens et courtoisie, R.1117
Encor n'est raisons, R.1911
En mi mai, quant s'est la saisons partie, R.1192
En tous tens se doit fins cuers esjoir, R.1405; ed. in Gennrich
Espris d'ire et d'amour, R.1946, ed. in Jeanroy, Brandin and Aubry

Flour ne glaise ne vois autaine, R.131
Glorieuse virge pucele, R.611
Ire d'amours et doutance, R.217
Je me chevauchai pensis, R.1587
La flor d'iver sous la branche, R.255
Le premier jour de mai, R.87
Li rossignolés avrillous, R.2042
Mout a mon cuer esjoi, R.1039
Quant ces moissons sont faillies, R.1350
Quant glace et nois et froidure s'esloigne, R.1787
Qui que voie en amour faindre, R.128 (ded. 'Chastelain': ? Huon, Chastellain d'Arras)
Remembrance d'amour me fait chanter, R.814 = 758
Se chans ne descors ne lais, R.193; ed. in Jeanroy, Brandin and Aubry
S'onques chanters m'eust aidie, R.1086
Tels fois chante li jouglere, R.903 (ded. Jehan Bretel)
Voloirs de faire chanson, R.1859

WORKS OF JOINT AUTHORSHIP

Amis Guillaume, ainc si sage ne vi, R.1085 (jeu-parti with Adam de Givenchi)
Frere, ki fait mieus a proisier, R.1293 [model for: Anon., 'A ce que je vuel comencier', R.1272] (jeu-parti with Gilles Le Vinier)
Guillaume le Viniers, amis, R.1520 (jeu-parti with Andrieu Contredit d'Arras)
Guillaume, trop est perdus, R.2129 (jeu-parti with Colart le Boutellier)
Moines, ne vous anuit pas, R.378 (jeu-parti with ?Moniot d'Arras)
Sire frere, fetes m'un jugement, R.691 (jeu-parti with Gilles Le Vinier)
Sire, ne me celés mie, R.1185 (jeu-parti with ?Thibaut IV)
Thomas, je vous vueil demander, R.842 (jeu-parti with Thomas ?Herier)

AUTHORSHIP UNCERTAIN

Vierge pucele roiaus, R.388 [modelled on Raimon Jordan, Lo clar tems vei brunezir, PC 404.4]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Jeanroy, L. Brandin and P. Aubry: Lais et descorts français du XIIIe siècle (Paris, 1901/R)
E. Ulrix: 'Les chansons inédites de Guillaume le Vinier d'Arras', Mélanges de philologie romane et d'histoire litteraire offerts à M. Maurice Wilmotte (Paris, 1910/R), 785–814
F. Gennrich, ed.: Romdeaux, Virelais und Balladen aus dem Ende des XII., dem XIII. und dem ersten Drittel des XIV. Jahrhunderts, ii (Göttingen, 1927)
P. Ménard, ed.: Les poésies de Guillaume le Vinier (Geneva, 1970, 2/1983)
M.-H. Fernandez: 'Le génie ondoyant et divers du trouvère Guillaume le Vinier', Marche Romane, xxx/3–4 (1980), 93–103

For further bibliography see TROUBADOURS, TROUVÈRES.

THEODORE KARP

Le Vinier, Jaques (fl 1240–60). French trouvère. Since one of his chansons, De loial amour, is addressed to Jehan Bretel, it may be assumed that he was active during the mid-13th century, and it is not unlikely that he was a native of the region around Arras. The primary source for his work is the Vatican chansonnier (I-Rvat Reg.lat.1490). Jaques wrote both chansons d'amour and songs to the Virgin. Unlike most poems of the latter genre, which derive their structure and melody from a pre-existing work, those by Jaques Le Vinier – with the exception of Vierge pucele, which is of contested authorship – apparently use original melodies. Jaques showed no preference for either isometric or heterometric strophes, and employed primarily decasyllabic and heptasyllabic verses. All the melodies are cast in bar form, and as a group show an unusually strong preference for plagal constructions. Most of the melodies are relatively simple; in several, there is a slight increase in rhythmic activity at the cadence.

WORKS

Edition: Trouvère Lyrics with Melodies: Complete Comparative Edition, ed. H. Tischler, CMM, cvii (1997)

Ains que mi chant aient definement, R.654
Bele dame bien aprise, R.1615
Chanter veul de la meillour, R.1999
De loial amour jolie, R.1166
Fine Amours, cui j'ai mon cuer done, R.427
Je sui cieus qui tous jours foloie, R.1721
Loiaus amours qui en moi maint, R.161

Vierge pucele roiaus, R.388 [modelled on: Raimon Jordan, 'Lo clar tems vei brunezir'] (authorship uncertain)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Järnström: Recueil de chansons pieuses du XIIIe siècle, i (Helsinki, 1910)
H. Petersen Dyggve: 'Chansons françaises du XIIIe siècle', Neuphilologische Mitteilungen, xxxi (1930), 1–62

For further bibliography see TROUBADOURS, TROUVÈRES.

THEODORE KARP

Levinson, Jerrold (b Brooklyn, NY, 11 July 1948). American aesthetician. After attending the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (1965–9), gaining the BS degree in Philosophy and Chemistry in 1969, he studied at the University of Michigan (1970–74), achieving the doctorate in philosophy in 1974. He was assistant professor of philosophy at SUNY, Albany (1974–5) and at the Farleigh Dickinson University (1975–6). In 1976 he became assistant professor at the University of Maryland, where he was later appointed associate professor (1982–91) and then professor of philosophy in 1991. He has in addition been a visiting professor at the University of London (1991), the John Hopkins University (1993) and the University of Rennes (1998). He has served on the editorial board of the Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism (from 1993) and in 1999 was elected vice-president of the American Society for Aesthetics. Levinson's interest in the aesthetics of music has led to an examination of musical ontology from a historical-contextual perspective, and performance, with an emphasis on performing means. He has propounded theories of evaluating music (Music in the Moment, 1998) and has considered the legitimacy of emotional response in musical appreciation. Within his study of performance he has also examined the distinctness of performing and critical interpretation.

WRITINGS

'Autographic and Allographic Art Revisited', Philosophical Studies (1980), 367–83
'What a Musical Work is', Journal of Philosophy, lxxvii (1980), 5–28 [see also 'What a Musical Work is, Again', Music, Art and Metaphysics (Ithaca, NY, 1990), 215–63]
'Truth in Music', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, xl (1981), 131–44
'Music and Negative Emotion', Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, lxiii (1982), 327–46
'Song and Music Drama', What is Music?, ed. P. Alperson (New York, 1986, 2/1994), 285–301
'Evaluating Musical Performance', Journal of Aesthetic Education, xxi (1987), 75–88
'Musical Literacy', Journal of Aesthetic Education, xxiv (1990), 17–30
Music, Art and Metaphysics (Ithaca, NY, 1990; Fr. trans., enlarged, 1998, as L'art, la musique, et l'histoire) [incl. 'The Concept of Music', 267–78; 'Hope in the Hebrides', 336–75]
'Performative vs. Critical Interpretation in Music', The Interpretation of Music, ed. M. Krausz (Oxford, 1993), 33–60
'Film Music and Narrative Agency', Post-Theory: Reconstructing Film Studies, ed. D. Bordwell and N. Carroll (Madison, WI, 1996), 254–88

The Pleasures of Aesthetics: Philosophical Essays (Ithaca, NY, 1996) [incl. 'Musical Expressiveness', 90–125]
'Evaluating Music', Musical Worlds: New Directions in the Philosophy of Music, ed. P. Alperson (University Park, PA, 1998), 93–108
Music in the Moment (Ithaca, NY, 1998)
'Varieties of Musical Pleasure: Thrills, Chills and other Delights', Tijdschrift voor Muziektheorie, iii (1998), 151–8

□

Levitin, Yury Abramovich (b Poltava (Ukraine), 28 Dec 1912; d Moscow, 26 July 1993). Russian composer and pianist. He graduated from the Leningrad Conservatory in the piano class of Savshinsky (1937), and in the composition class of Shostakovich (1942). He became a member of the Composers' Union in 1940. A prolific composer, Levitin was an adherent of academic and traditionalist trends in music, but despite this he devoted much of his time to the portayal of contemporary and topical themes – such as in the oratorio Khirosima ne dolzhna povtoryat'sya ('Hiroshima must not be Repeated') – and to embodying in music the events and images of World War II. In his chamber and instrumental music, there is a clear link with the style of his teacher Shostakovich, demonstrated by the dramatic opposition of aggressive motor rhythms, contemplative writing and dance rhythms, as well as by the overall finesse and economy of means. The Epitafiya for soprano, clarinet and string quartet (to a text by Akhmatova) is dedicated to the memory of Shostakovich. Levitin wrote more than 70 film scores, including Tikhiy Don ('Quiet Flows the Don'), Stalingrad and the epic Osvobozhdeniye ('Liberation').

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Monna-Marianna (after M. Gor'ky), 1937–9; Molodïr' (children's op, after K. Chukovsky), 1955; Personal'nïy pamyatnik [A Personal Monument] (Levitin, S. Mikhalkov), 1963–4; Zhuravushka (Levitin, D. Vasiliu, after M. Alekseyev), 1977; Do tret'ikh petukhov [Before the Third Cock Crow] (I. Berlyand, I. Petrov, after V. Shukshin), 1981; Kalina krasnaya [The Fair Guelder Rose] (Levitin, after Shukshin), 1982

Orats (for solo vv, chorus, orch): Svyashchennaya voyna [The Holy War], 1942; Rekviyem pamyati pavshikh geroyev [Requiem for the Memory of Fallen Heroes] (V. Lebedev-Kumach), 1946; Otchizna [The Homeland] (Lebedev-Kumach), 1947; Ogni nad Volgoy [Fires Over the Volga] (D. Sedïkh), 1951; Khiroshima ne dolzhna povtoryat'sya [Hiroshima must not be repeated] (M. Matusovsky), 1967; Pamyati poèta [In Memory of a Poet] (N. Zabolotsky), nar, Mez, B, orch, 1980; K pobede [To Victory] (M. Dudin), 1984

Syms.: no.1, 1948; Dni voynï [The Days of War] (L. Pervomaysky, A, Tvardovsky), choral sym., 1974; Olimpiyskaya simfoniya [Olympic Sym.], 1980; numerous other orch works, incl. concs. and 4 sinfoniettas

14 str qts: 1940, 1942, 1943, 1946, 1948, 1951, 1952, 1958, 1968, 1971, 1974, 1976, 1980, 1986

Other chbr and solo inst: Syuita na kirgizskiye temï [Suite on Kyrgyz Themes], str qt, 1945; Qnt, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1948; Pf Trio, 1949; Malen'kaya syuita [Little Suite], vib, mar, pf, 1968; 24 prelyudiy, vn, 1975; Nonet, 1978; numerous inst sonatas

Settings (for 1v, pf) of texts by A. Blok, R. Burns, S. Gorodetsky, M.Yu. Lermontov, S. Marshak, A.S. Pushkin and others

Choruses, film scores, variety music, incid music for theatre

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Levitzki, Mischa [Levitsky, Misha] (b Kremenchug, Ukraine, 25 May 1898; d Avon-by-the-Sea, NJ, 2 Jan 1941). American pianist and composer. Born to naturalized American parents during a return to their native Ukraine, Levitzki began violin studies at the age of three. Developing an interest in the piano at six, he worked with Aleksander Michałowski in Warsaw (1905–6). He made his concert début in Antwerp in 1906 before going to New York with his parents. Shortly thereafter his father brought him to the attention of Walter Damrosch, who obtained a scholarship for him at the Institute of Musical Art as a pupil of Stojowski (1907–11). In 1913 Levitzki entered the Berlin Hochschule für Musik, where he became the youngest student of Dohnányi and was awarded the Mendelssohn Prize in 1915. He made his American début on 17 October 1916 at Aeolian Hall, New York; later he toured frequently in the USA, Australia, New Zealand and Asia. Levitzki is best known for his virtuosic performances of the Romantic repertory. His own piano compositions figured prominently in his programmes, as did transcriptions by Liszt, Tausig (Bach) and Sgambati (Gluck). Critics compared his technical prowess and speed of execution to those of Rosenthal. Levitzki's recordings from 1927 to 1933 reveal an exceptional clarity and delicacy of articulation. His compositions include Valse de concert (op.1), Valse (op.2), Gavotte (op.3), Arabesque valsante (op.6), The Enchanted Nymph, and a cadenza for Beethoven's Piano Concerto no.3.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Brower: Piano Mastery, 2nd ser. (New York, 1917), 224–32
Obituary, Musical America, lxi/1 (1941), 32
G. Kehler: The Piano in Concert, i (Metuchen, NJ, 1982), 738–41

MINA F. MILLER

Levolto. See VOLTA (i).

Levy, Alexandre (b São Paulo, 10 Nov 1864; d São Paulo, 17 Jan 1892). Brazilian composer of French descent. Belonging to a family of musicians, he received early teaching in the piano and later in composition from European immigrants. He was largely responsible for the foundation of the Haydn Club in São Paulo in 1883, sponsoring and conducting concerts of the symphonic repertory. He went to Europe in 1887 but stayed only for a few months: after a period in Milan, he went to Paris where he studied harmony with Emile Durand at the Conservatoire. On his return he tried to organize a regular symphony orchestra in his native city, but did not find enough support.

Levy was the first important figure in Brazilian musical nationalism. But his most typically nationalist works are based less on folk music traditions than on popular music of the time: modinhas, tangos, maxixes and early urban sambas. Such works include the tone poem Comala, the Tango brasileiro for piano and the Suite brésilienne for orchestra, all written in 1890. The last movement of the suite, 'Samba', attempts to describe the frenzy of this dance by using its characteristic syncopations together with the basic rhythmic patterns of the habanera. The melodic material of the movement is based on two traditional urban tunes. Although Levy had no great influence on the later development of the nationalist trend in Brazil, he remains an important figure for his receptiveness to the most characteristic aspects of urban popular music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBP [with list of works]
'Alexandre Levy', Gazeta musical, ii/4 (1892), 58
G. Pimenta: Alexandre Levy (São Paulo, 1911)
L.H.C. de Azevedo: 150 anos de música no Brasil (1800–1950) (Rio de Janeiro, 1956)
G. Béhague: The Beginnings of Musical Nationalism in Brazil (Detroit, 1971)

V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Lévy, Emile. See WALDTEUFEL, EMILE.

Lévy, Ernst (b Basle, 18 Nov 1895; d Morges, 19 April 1981). Swiss composer, pianist and writer on music. He studied in Basle and Paris; among his teachers were Hans Huber, Pugno and Egon Petri. From 1917 to 1921 he directed the piano masterclass at the Basle Conservatory. Between the wars he lived in Paris, where in 1928 he founded the Choeur Philharmonique; with this organization he gave first performances in Paris of Brahms's German Requiem and Liszt's Christus. Between 1941 and 1966 he was active in the USA, giving piano recitals and teaching at the New England Conservatory, Bennington College, the University of Chicago, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Brooklyn College, CUNY. Thereafter he retired and spent the last 15 years of his life in his native Switzerland.

Lévy's style as a composer is highly individual and not identifiable with any school. He believed in the principle of tonality as a harmonic force naturally given by the structure of tone. To him composing meant uncovering and unfolding new specific tonal fields. A widely cultured man, he contributed to the revival of the Pythagorean tradition through lectures and writings. His piano recordings, particularly of the last Beethoven sonatas and the Liszt sonata, have become collectors' items. A detailed catalogue of his works containing also a bibliography, two essays and discography is published by the Archives Musicales Suisses (Zürich, 1989).

WORKS

16 syms.: D, 1914; f, 1916; no.2, 1920; no.3, 1922; no.4, 1924; no.5, 1925; no.7, 1925–6; no.6 'Sinfonia strofica', 1933–4; no.8, 1937; no.9 'Shemah Yisrael', 1938; no.10 'Elégie française', 1944; no.11, 1949; no.12, after G. Peele: Harvester's Song, 1951; no.13, 1955; no.14, 1962; no.15, 1967

Other orch: Suite no.1 (Suite symphonique), 1935; Vc Conc., 1947; Suite nos.2–4, 1951, 1957, 1959; Partita concertante, vn, orch, 1973; Tpt Conc., str, 1975; Sonata accompagnata, bn, orch, 1980

Vocal: Cant. no.3 'Lötschentaler', cantus firmus v, chorus, orch, 1950; Gaudeamus (Cant. no.4), chorus, wind orch, timp, 1964; 3 other cants., chorus, orch; 8 acc. choruses; 18 unacc. choruses; 15 acc. solo songs

Chbr (4–5 insts): Str Qt no.1, e, 1919; Str Qt no.2, g, 1921; Pf Qnt, 1956; Str Qt no.3, 1958; Inventio dupla, 4 wind, 1974; Str Qt no.4, 1978

Chbr (2–3 insts): Theme and Variations, cl, pf, 1952; Fantaisie dialoguée, org, pf, 1978; 15 trios; 4 str trios; 4 sonatinas, vn, pf; 5 duos; sonatas

Solo inst: 10 org pieces, 7 pf sonatas; pieces for cl, rec, vn, va, vc, pf, clvd, hpd, unspecified inst

MSS in CH-Zma

Principal publisher: Boosey & Hawkes

WRITINGS
(selective list)

with S. Levarie: Tone: a Study in Musical Acoustics (Kent, OH, 1968, 2/1980)

Des rapports entre la musique et la société suivi de réflexions (Neuchâtel, 1979)

with S. Levarie: Musical Morphology: a Discourse and a Dictionary (Kent, OH, 1983)

A Theory of Harmony (Albany, NY, 1985)

SIEGMUND LEVARIE

Levy, Jules. See LEVI, JUL.

Levy, Kenneth (Jay) (b New York, 26 Feb 1927). American musicologist. He studied music history at Queens College, New York, with Sachs and theory with Karol Rathaus and took the BA in 1947. At Princeton, where his professors included Strunk and Hertzmann, he took the MFA in 1949 and the PhD in 1955. He taught at Princeton from 1952 to 1954 and at Brandeis University from 1954 to 1966, when he returned to Princeton as a professor. He retired in 1995.

Levy's interests include Gregorian, Byzantine and Old Slavonic liturgical chant, medieval polyphony, and the 16th-century French chanson. In his chanson research he has concentrated on the composers and secular forms of the later 16th century, and has drawn on social and political background for a comprehensive view. More recently he has worked on liturgical chant, publishing important articles in this area. He has investigated Byzantine and Western chant, including the Old Roman, Ambrosian, Beneventan and Ravennate repertories, and by careful comparison he has been able to draw tentative conclusions regarding the relationships of certain Western chants to Byzantine models and between modal patterns and performing practices common to East and West. He has also approached the problem of transcription of Slavonic kondakarion notation by proposing 'counterpart transcriptions', which relate Slavonic melodic formulae to those occurring in transcribable Byzantine melodies.

WRITINGS

'New Material on the Early Motet in England: a Report on Princeton Ms. Garrett 119', JAMS, iv (1951), 220–39

'"Susanne un jour": the History of a 16th Century Chanson', AnnM, i (1953), 375–408

'Vaudeville, vers mesurés et airs de cour', Musique et poésie au XVIe siècle: Paris 1953, 185–201

The Chansons of Claude Le Jeune (diss., Princeton U., 1955)

'Costeley's Chromatic Chanson', AnnM, iii (1955), 213–63

'The Byzantine Sanctus and its Modal Tradition in East and West', AnnM, vi (1958–63), 7–67

'An Early Chant for Romanus' Contacium trium puerorum?', Classica et mediaevalia, xxii (1961), 172–5

'A Hymn for Thursday in Holy Week', JAMS, xvi (1963), 127–75

'Die slavische Kondakarien-Notation', Anfänge der slavischen Musik: Bratislava 1964, 77–92

'The Slavic Kontakia and their Byzantine Originals', The Department of Music, Queens College of the City University of New York: Twenty-fifth Anniversary Festschrift, ed. A. Mell (Flushing, NY, 1964), 79–87

'Three Byzantine Acclamations', Studies in Music History: Essays for Oliver Strunk, ed. H. Powers (Princeton, NJ, 1968/R), 43–57

'The Italian Neophytes' Chants', JAMS, xxiii (1970), 181–227

'Lux de luce: the Origin of an Italian Sequence', MQ, lvii (1971), 40–61

'The Trisagion in Byzantium and the West', IMSCR XI: Copenhagen 1972, 761–5

'A Dominican Organum Duplum', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 183–211

'A Gregorian Processional Antiphon', Schweizer Jb für Musikwissenschaft, ii (1982), 91–102

Music: a Listener's Introduction (New York, 1983)

'Toledo, Rome, and the Legacy of Gaul', EMH, iv (1984), 49–99

'Charlemagne's Archetype of Gregorian Chant', JAMS, xl (1987), 1–30

'Old-Hispanic Chant in its European Context', España en la música de occidente: Salamanca 1985, i, 3–14

'On the Origin of Neumes', EMH, vii (1987), 59–90

'Latin Chant Outside the Roman Tradition', NOHM, ii (2/1990), 69–110

'On Gregorian Orality', JAMS, xliii (1990), 185–227

'Abbot Helisachar's Antiphoner', JAMS, xlviii (1995), 171–86

'Gregorian Chant and Oral Transmission', Essays on Medieval Music: in Honor of David G. Hughes, ed. G.M. Boone (Cambridge, MA, 1995), 277–86

Gregorian Chant and the Carolingians (Princeton, NJ, 1998)

'A New Look at Old Roman Chant', EMH, xix (2000), 191–214

EDITIONS

with F. Lesure and others: Anthologie de la chanson parisienne au XVIe siècle (Monaco, 1953/R)

PAULA MORGAN

Lévy, Lazare [Lazare-Lévy] (b Brussels, 18 Jan 1882; d Paris, 20 Sept 1964). French pianist and teacher. He studied in his native city with an English woman, a Miss Ellis, and then with Diémer at the Paris Conservatoire, where he received a premier prix in 1898. He also studied harmony with Lavignac and counterpoint with Gédalge. He gave concerts throughout Europe and Asia, and was noted especially for his cultivated performances of Schumann and Mozart, whose works he recorded. He was also an early champion of Albéniz, whose Iberia (book I) he played in 1911. Lévy was a distinguished professor of piano at the Paris Conservatoire, first as a temporary teacher (1914–16 and 1921–3) and then as Cortot's successor (1923–41; reappointed 1944–53). His students included Monique Haas, Clara Haskil and Yvonne Loriod. He composed two string quartets and a number of piano works, and edited keyboard music by Bach, Chopin, Schubert and Schumann.

WRITINGS

with L. Diémer and V. Staub: Méthode supérieure de piano (Paris, 1907)

'E.R. Blanchet', Le monde musical (31 May 1936), 158–9

'La fièvre interprétative', Revue internationale de musique, nos.5–6 (1939), 395–8

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Methuen-Campbell: Catalogue of Recordings by Classical Pianists, i (Chipping Norton, 1984)

C. Timbrell: French Pianism (White Plains, NY, and London, 1992, 2/forthcoming)

CHARLES TIMBRELL

Levy, Marvin David (b Passaic, NJ, 2 Aug 1932). American composer. He studied composition with Philip James at New York University (BA 1954) and with Otto Luening at Columbia University (MA 1956). Drawn particularly to music theatre, he composed three successful one-act operas while working as a freelance music critic. On the strength of these works, he was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship, the Prix de Rome and a Metropolitan Opera commission for Mourning Becomes Electra (1967). The success of that work led to a second Metropolitan commission in 1978. The Balcony, however, was not performed as planned, owing to a change of administration at the company, and remained incomplete until it was recast as the musical, The Grand Balcony (1989–92). Levy was a founding member of the Fort Lauderdale Opera, Florida (1989), and served as its artistic director until it merged with the Greater Miami Opera to form the Florida Grand Opera in 1994.

Although he has composed for a variety of media, Levy remains known primarily as an opera composer. Mourning Becomes Electra and its predecessors are expressionistic, employing pitch structures that can best be understood as bitonal. Since 1989 he has developed a more relaxed, populist style, exemplified by The Grand Balcony and the children's opera The Zachary Star (1996). With these works he recalls the style of early compositions, such as his Christmas oratorio, For the Time Being (1959).

WORKS

Stage: Riders to the Sea (op, after J.M. Synge), 1954, withdrawn; The Tower (op, 1, T. Brewster), 1955, Santa Fe, 1957; Sotoba Komachi (op, 1, S.H. Brock, after Kwanami), 1957, New York, 1957; Escorial (op, 1, M.D. Levy and L. Abel, after M. de Ghelderode), 1958, New York, 1958; Mourning Becomes Electra (op, 3, H. Butler, after E. O'Neill: Homecoming; The Hunted; The Haunted), 1967, New York, 1967; The Grand Balcony (musical, 2, after J. Genet: The Balcony), 1978–92; The Zachary Star (family musical, 2/1, M.D. Levy), 1995–6; incid music

Orch: Caramoor Festival Ov., 1958; Sym., 1960; Kyros, 1961; Pf Conc., 1970; Trialogus, 1972; Pascua Florida, 1985; Arrows of Time, 1986

Vocal: 3 Songs (E.St Vincent Millay), Mez, ob, 1955; The Echoes (G.M. Hopkins), S, chbr ens, 1956; During Wind and Rain (T. Hardy), chorus, 1957; For the Time Being (Christmas orat, 2, W.H. Auden), S, S, A, T, Bar, B, chorus, orch, 1959; One Person (cant., E. Wylie), Mez, orch, 1962; Shir Shel Moshe [Song of Moses] (sacred service), T, chorus, org, 1964; Alice in Wonderland (L. Carroll), chorus, insts, 1965; Electra's Farewell (H. Butler, after E. O'Neill), suite, S, orch, 1967 [from Mourning Becomes Electra]; Masada (orat I. Landen, Bible), nar, T, chorus, orch, 1973, rev. 1987; In memoriam W.H. Auden, 1v, chbr orch, 1974; Since Nine O'Clock (C. Cavafy), S, pf, 1977, orch, 1982; Canto de los maranos (cant.), S, orch, 1979; 24 popular songs, 1995

Chbr: Rhapsody, vn, cl, hp, 1955; Str Qt, 1955; Hasidic Suite, hn, pf, 1956; Pf Pieces for Children, 1959

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.S.: '"Mourning" Becomes an Opera', ON, xxxi/23 (1966–7), 15–16

J.W. Freeman: 'Drawn from Within', ON, xxxi/23 (1966–7), 24–5

M. Cross and K. Kohrs: More Stories of the Great Operas (New York, 1980)

ANDREW STILLER

Lévy, Roland Alexis Manuel. See ROLAND-MANUEL.

Levy [née Itzig], Sara (b Berlin, 19 June 1761; d Berlin, 11 May 1854). German harpsichordist, music collector and patron. She was a daughter of the Jewish banker Daniel Itzig (1723–99) and great-aunt of Mendelssohn. On 2 July 1783 she married the banker Samuel Salomon Levy (1760–1806). With her siblings, of whom Fanny von Arnstein (1758–1818) and Zippora Wulff (later Cäcilie von Eskeles, 1760–1836) were particularly well known as musical amateurs, she received a thorough musical education. She is said to have been a pupil of W.F. Bach at a later date, and she was certainly in contact with C.P.E. Bach, from whom she commissioned a harpsichord concerto. A number of contemporary documents mention her activity as a harpsichordist in private musical circles, for instance in the house of her brother-in-law Joseph Fliess. Later she frequently performed with the Ripienschule of the Berlin Sing-Akademie founded by C.F. Zelter. She was particularly interested in the music of the Bach family as well as the works of other Berlin composers (J.G. and C.H. Graun, Janitsch and Quantz), and is therefore one of the figures central to the appreciation of Bach in Berlin in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. She gave the Sing-Akademie considerable parts of her extensive collection of music, including autograph manuscripts by W.F. and C.P.E. Bach; after her death, some of the remaining items apparently came into the possession of A.W. Bach, and is now dispersed among many European and North American libraries.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Wilhelmy: Der Berliner Salon im 19. Jahrhundert (1780–1914) (Berlin, 1989)

P. Wollny: 'Sara Levy and the Making of Musical Taste in Berlin', MQ, lxxvii (1993), 651–88

P. Wollny: '"Ein förmlicher Sebastian und Philipp Emanuel Bach-Kultus": Sara Levy, geb. Itzig und ihr literarisch-musikalischer Salon', Jüdische Aufklärung, ästhetische Bildung und musikalische Praxis im Berlin des späten 18. Jahrhunderts, ed. A. Gerhard (Tübingen, 1999), 211–49

PETER WOLLNY

Lewandowski, Leon Leopold (b Kalisz, 14 March 1831; d Warsaw, 22 Nov 1896). Polish violinist, composer and bandmaster. Born into a Jewish intellectual family, he started learning to play the violin at an early age and gave public performances as a child. After leaving secondary school in Kalisz, he studied the violin under K. Baranowski and Jan Hornziel in Warsaw. From 1850 he played in the orchestra of the Wielki Theatre in Warsaw. Then, with the cooperation of A. Kühn, he organized his own orchestra and gave concerts at Nowa Arkadia. He also gave performances at the Mineral Water Institute in the Saski Gardens, and from 1857 until his death he performed in the Variety Theatre, playing mainly dances, of which he composed many. He also organized popular symphony concerts at the Resursa Obywatelska (Citizens' Club) and played in chamber music concerts. For a time he was a member of the string quartet founded by K. Baranowski. Lewandowski left about 350 compositions, which were published from 1855 by numerous Polish and foreign houses. His pieces, most of them in dance genres (mazurkas, polkas, contredanses, polonaises, obereks, kujawiaks, quadrilles, galops, etc), were extremely popular. He also composed interludes to the ballets Wedding at Ojców (J. Stefani, J. Damse, K. Kurpiński), Pan Twardowski (A. Sonnenfeld) and Coppélia (L. Delibes). Other compositions include a Nocturne for orchestra, a concert mazurka for violin, cello, oboe, trumpet and orchestra, and choral songs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

J.W. Reiss: 'Polska muzyka taneczna w XIX wieku' [Polish dance music of the 19th century], Muzyka, iv/9–10 (1953), 26–44 [with Eng. summary]

JERZY MORAWSKI

Lewandowski, Louis (1821–94). German composer. He was also music director and choirmaster of the great synagogue on Oranjenburgerstrasse in Berlin. See JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 3(iv).

Lewenthal, Raymond (b San Antonio, TX, 29 Aug 1926). American pianist. He studied with Samaroff at the Juilliard School, then with Cortot and spent a year teaching in Rio de Janeiro. His career has been marked by special concern for neglected composers of the early 19th century, among them Hummel, Jan Ladislav Dussek, Henselt, Thalberg and, notably, Alkan; he has edited an Alkan collection and Henselt's F minor Piano Concerto. His recordings include études and parts of the symphony for piano by Alkan, the solo version of the Hexameron by Liszt and others, and concertos by Henselt and Rubinstein. He is an articulate spokesman on behalf of his chosen repertory. At his recitals, he achieves atmosphere by means of low lights, high temperatures and quasi-period costume. His performances tend to be marked more by generalized flair than by specific pianistic skills of the first order.

MICHAEL STEINBERG/R

Lewin, David (b New York, 2 July 1933). American theorist. He studied mathematics at Harvard, then composition with Sessions and theory with Babbitt and Cone at Princeton. He taught at the University of California, Berkeley (1961–7), SUNY, Stony Brook (1967–79), Yale University (1979–85) and was appointed Naumburg Professor of Music at Harvard University in 1985. He served as president of the Society for Music Theory (1985), and received an honorary doctorate from the University of Chicago in 1995. While at Bell Laboratories in 1961, he composed the first computer-generated piece by a professional musician.

The most original and far-ranging theorist of his generation, Lewin's writings combine mathematical rigour with poetic finesse. In his most influential formal work, he employs 'group theory' to explain two fundamental musical concepts, interval and transformation. Applied to atonal and serial repertories, transformational theory stresses the dynamic nature of events and gestures as they engage time and articulate form. Other applications include Wagnerian harmony (adapting Riemann's harmonic theory to a group-theoretic framework) and rhythm and metre (see also ANALYSIS). Lewin's more interpretative writings focus on text/music interactions in song and opera, from Mozart to Schoenberg. Two of his most influential articles, 'Behind the Beyond' (1968–9) and 'Music Theory, Phenomenology, and Modes of Perception' (1986) address the nature and goals of music theory at two distinct moments in its recent development.

WRITINGS

'The Intervallic Content of a Collection of Notes, Intervallic Relations between a Collection of Notes and its Complement: an Application to Schoenberg's Hexachordal Pieces', JMT, iv (1960), 98–101

'Moses und Aron: some General Remarks, and Analytic Notes for Act I, Scene I', PNM, vi/1 (1967–8), 18–32; repr. in The Garland Library of the History of Western Music, ed. E. Rosand, xii (New York, 1985), 327–43

'Inversional Balance as an Organizing Force in Schoenberg's Music and Thought', PNM, vi/2 (1967–8), 1–21

'Some Applications of Communication Theory to the Study of Twelve-Tone Music', JMT, xii (1968), 50–84

'Behind the Beyond . . . a Response to Edward T. Cone', PNM, vii (1968–9), 59–69

'Forte's Interval Vector, my Interval Function, and Regener's Common-Note Function', JMT, xxi (1977), 194–237

'Some Investigations into Foreground Rhythmic and Metric Patterning', Music Theory: Special Topics, ed. R. Browne (New York, 1981), 101–37

'Vocal Meter in Schoenberg's Atonal Music, with a Note on a Serial Hauptstimme', In Theory Only, vi/4 (1982), 12–36

'A Formal Theory of Generalized Tonal Functions', JMT, xxvi (1982), 23–60

'Image and Background in a Schubert Song', 19CM, vi (1982–3), 47–59; rev. as Auf dem Flusse . . . Schubert: Critical and Analytical Studies, ed. W. Frisch (Lincoln, NE, 1986), 126–52

'Transformational Techniques in Atonal and Other Music Theories', PNM, xxi (1982–3), 312–71

'Brahms, his Past, and Modes of Music Theory', Brahms Studies: Washington DC 1983, 13–27

'An Interesting Global Rule for Species Counterpoint', In Theory Only, vi/8 (1983), 19–44

'Amfortas's Prayer to Titurel and the role of D in Parsifal: the Tonal Spaces of the Drama and the Enharmonic C♭/B', 19CM, vii (1983–4), 336–49

'Music Theory, Phenomenology, and Modes of Perception', Music Perception, iii (1986), 327–92

Generalized Musical Intervals and Transformations(New Haven, CT, 1987)

'Some Instances of Parallel Voice-Leading in Debussy', 19CM, xi (1987–8), 59–72

'Klumpenhouwer Networks and Some Isographies that Involve Them', Music Theory Spectrum, xii (1990), 83–120

'Musical Analysis as Stage Direction', Music and Text: Critical Inquiries, ed. S.P. Scher (Cambridge, 1992), 163–76

'Women's Voices and the Fundamental Bass', JM, x (1992), 464–82

'Some Notes on Analyzing Wagner: The Ring and Parsifal', 19CM, xvi (1992–3), 49–58

'A Metrical Problem in Webern's Op.27', MAn, xii (1993), 343–54

Musical Form and Transformation: Four Analytic Essays (New Haven, CT, 1993)

'A Tutorial on Klumpenhouwer Networks, using the Chorale in Schoenberg's Opus 11 No.2', JMT), xxxviii (1994), 79–101

'Figaro's Mistakes', CMc, no.57 (1995), 45–60
'Generalized Interval Systems for Babbitt's Lists, and for Schoenberg's String Trio', Music Theory Spectrum, xvii (1995), 81–118
'Cohn Functions', JMT, xl (1996), 181–216
'Some Notes on Pierrot Lunaire', Music Theory in Concept and Practice, ed. J.M. Baker, D.W. Beach and J.W. Bernard (Rochester, NY, 1997), 433–57
'The D major Fugue Subject from WTCII: Spatial Saturation?', Music Theory Online, iv/4 (1998) <smt.ucsb.edu/mto/mtohome.html>

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D.T. Vuza: 'Some Mathematical Aspects of David Lewin's Book Generalized Musical Intervals and Transformations', PNM, xxvi (1988), 258–87
S. Smoliar: 'Lewin's Model of Musical Perception Reflected by Artificial Intelligence', Computers in Music Research, ii (1990), 1–38
M. Cherlin: 'On Adapting Theoretical Models from the Work of David Lewin', Indiana Theory Review, xiv/2 (1993), 19–43
R. Cohn: 'Introduction to Neo-Riemannian Theory: a Survey and a Historical Perspective', JMT, xlii (1998), 167–80

RICHARD COHN

Lewin-Richter, Andrés (b Miranda de Ebro, 22 March 1937). Spanish composer. He studied music with Vladimir Ussachevski, Mario Davidovski and Edgard Varèse at Columbia University, New York (1962–5), and engineering at the Barcelona Polytechnic and Columbia University. He established the Barcelona Electronic Music Studio (1968) and was a founding member of the Phonos Electronic Music Studio in Barcelona and its vice-president since its establishment (1974). From 1968–73 he directed the music ensemble Conjunt Catalana de Musica Contemporanea. He has toured several countries, performing, lecturing, teaching and helping to set up electronic music studios.

Lewin-Richter has composed works in electronic studios at Columbia University, Barcelona, Madrid and Basle. His music always centres on electronic methods, whether using tape alone, combining it with instruments or using collage techniques in instrumental works. The voice also plays a prominent role in many of his works, as a result of his collaboration with the Catalan soprano Anna Ricci. He has written a large amount of music for dance, theatre and the cinema. He has learnt to manipulate magnetic tape using techniques characteristic of American tape music. His skilful use of gradual phase lag has led to some of his major achievements, bringing great beauty and expressiveness to his music.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Stage: Acción cero (ballet, F. Amat), 1973; Per tante cose (La nostra imatge) (A. Ricci, R. Román), 1974; Verd, estiu, altupne, hivern (ballet, C. Gelabert), 1978; Knosos (ballet, C. Gelabert), 1982; Cogida (ballet, C, Gelabert), 1984; Desfigurat (ballet, C. Gelabert), 1986; 99 Golpes (ballet, C. Gelabert), 1989
Incid music: The Gondola Eye (film score, I. Hugo), 1964; Guernica (Arrabal), 1979; Quorum (film score, A. Ricard), 1983; Batlantic (film score, J. Álvarez), 1985; La tempestad (La Cubana), 1986

VOCAL
all 1 voice, tape unless otherwise stated

Om, 1976; Secuencia III para Anna, 1976; El viento I (Homenaje a Lorca) (F. García Lorca), 1v, gui, tape ad lib, 1979; Wagler Walricci, 1981; 6 Songs (e.e. cummings), S, db, tape, 1983; In memoriam Manuel Valls, 1984; Isaac el cec (Sephardi poems), 1v, fl, gui, tape, 1984; Semblança (F. Formosa), 1v, fl, gui, tape, 1988

INSTRUMENTAL AND ELECTRONIC

Chbr: Collage (Homenaje a R. Gerhard), fl, cl, pf, perc, vn, vc, 1977; Reacciones III, 5 cl, tape, 1980; Tinell, 5 perc, tape, 1983; Juegos, 2 gui, tape, 1985; Solars vortices, fl, cl, vn, vc, perc, tape, 1985; Diálogos, 2 perc, tape, 1987; Dr Octopus, 5 perc, 1987; Frullato, 4 rec, tape, 1990; Radio 2, str qt, tape, 1996
Solo inst (all with tape): Secuencia I–X: various solo insts, tape, 1972–91; Reacciones I, b cl, 1979; Reacciones II, cl, 1979; Homenaje a Mompou, pf, 1983
Elecs: Estudio I, 1964; Estudio II, 1965; Fontecilla Mix, 1978; El viento II (Homenaje a Lorca), 1979; Baschetiada, 1980; Sancta Maria, 1984; Sones, 1982; Homenaje a Zinovieff, 1988; Strings, 1989; Ludus basiliensis, tape, 1991

Principal publisher: Clivis (Barcelona)

Principal recording companies: Hemisferio, Pegasus, Vox

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Marco: Historia de la música española vi: Siglo XX (Madrid, 1983; Eng trans., 1993, as Spanish Music in the Twentieth Century)
68 Compositors catalans (Barcelona, 1989)

ALBERT LLANAS RICH

Lewis, Sir Anthony (Carey) (b Bermuda, 2 March 1915; d Haslemere, 5 June 1983). English musicologist, conductor, music administrator and composer. He went to Peterhouse, Cambridge, in 1932. Dent guided his studies at Cambridge and a grant from his college enabled him to study with Nadia Boulanger in 1934. In 1935 he took the BA and the MusB and joined the BBC music department, where he organized the 'Foundations of Music' series and later became responsible for all broadcast chamber music and recitals. In 1938 he devised a memorable series 'Handel in Rome'. After the war he returned to the BBC to plan the Third Programme, which gave its first broadcast in 1946. Lewis took charge of the organization and general direction of all Third Programme music.

In 1947 he was elected Peyton and Barber Professor of Music at Birmingham University, where he continued his pioneering activities. During his 21-year professorship he conducted many revivals of orchestral, choral and stage works, particularly Handel operas; these performances are remembered for the high standards they established. During this time Lewis was also active in the recording studio and made the first English recordings of such works as Monteverdi's Vespro della beata vergine, Lully's Miserere, Purcell's The Fairy Queen and King Arthur and Handel's Semele and Sosarme (which he had conducted and broadcast in 1948).

In 1950 Lewis became honorary secretary of the Purcell Society, a position he held until he became chairman in 1976. About 1950 he proposed the initiation of a national edition of British music to the Royal Musical Association; this idea resulted in the inception of Musica Britannica in 1951. Lewis was its general editor from the beginning; with Thurston Dart, its first secretary, he supervised the production of over 30 volumes in the first 20 years of the series. From 1963 to 1969 he was president of the RMA, and between 1968 and 1982 he was principal of the Royal Academy of Music. As well as his tireless efforts on behalf of musicology (his first editions, for L'Oiseau-Lyre, were published in 1936), and of the stylish performance of the music itself, Lewis also composed; his works include a Choral Overture (1938), an Elegy and Capriccio for trumpet and orchestra (1947), a Trumpet Concerto (1950), A Tribute of Praise (1953) and a Horn Concerto (written for Dennis Brain and published in 1959). He also worked on music committees of the Arts Council. He was knighted in 1972.

WRITINGS

'Matthew Locke: a Dynamic Figure in English Music', PRMA, lxxiv, (1947–8), 57–71

'A Newly-Discovered Song by Purcell' [The Meditation ZD71], The Score, no.4 (1951), 2–10 [incl. edn]
'Handel and the Aria', PRMA, lxxxv (1958–9), 95–107
'Purcell's Music for The Tempest', MT, c (1959), 320–22
'Purcell and Blow's "Venus and Adonis"', ML, xliv (1963), 266–9
'Notes and Reflections on a New Edition of Purcell's "The Fairy Queen"', MR, xxv (1964), 104–8
The Language of Purcell: National Idiom or Local Dialect? (Hull, 1968) [Ferens Fine Art Lecture, U. of Hull, 20 Jan 1967]
'Some Notes on Editing Handel's Semele', Essays on Opera and English Music in Honour of Sir Jack Westrup (Oxford, 1975), 79–83
ed., with N. Fortune: Opera and Church Music 1630–1750, NOHM, v (1975) [incl. 'English Church Music', 493–556]
'Student Performers and Musicologists: Partners or Strangers?', Challenges in Music Education: Perth, W. Australia, 1974 (Perth, 1976, 195–9
'Choral Music', NOHM, viii (1982), 593–607

EDITIONS

J. Blow: Venus and Adonis (Paris, 1939); Coronation Anthems and Anthems with Strings, MB, vii (1953, rev. 2/1969) [with W. Shaw]
G.F. Handel: Apollo and Daphne (London, 1956); Athalia (London, 1967); Semele (London, 1971) [with C. Mackerras]
H. Purcell: Miscellaneous Odes and Cantatas, Works, xxvii (London, 1957) [with T. Dart, D. Arundell and A. Goldsbrough]; Sacred Music, Part IV, Part V, Part VI, Part VII, ibid, xxviii (London, 1959, rev. 2/1967), xxix (1960, rev. 2/1967), xxx (1965), xxxii (1962, rev. 2/1967) [with N. Fortune]; The Fairy Queen, ibid, xii (London, rev. 2/1968) [with N. Fortune]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Dart: 'A Background for Musica Britannica', Music 1952, ed. A. Robertson (Harmondsworth, 1952), 18–28 esp. 24
N. Fortune: Obituary, MT, cxxiv (1983), 503 only

DAVID SCOTT/R

Lewis, Edward (fl London, *c*1687–*c*1742). English viol and violin maker. His background and training remain obscure, although it is possible that he worked for the Jaye family in London. His early career was devoted to the viol, and the earliest surviving example, now in the Musée de la Musique in Paris, is a bass viol labelled 'Edward Lewis in St. Paul Allay in London 1687'. Another bass viol fragment, heavily ornamented with geometrical inlays, is labelled from 'The Harp, St. Pauls Ally 1703'. Both a Tenor (large viola) and Bass violin (cello) are listed in the sale of Thomas Britton's collection in 1714, but instruments of the violin family attributed to Lewis vary considerably in style and workmanship. A large cello of the period 1690 shows very effective work and a strongly Brescian form in the style of Rayman, but a violin labelled 1704 is far more sophisticated, and shows some degree of Cremonese influence. Another violin branded 'E. Lewis 1742' on the table is quite different in workmanship, and the date would imply an improbably long working career. The implications are that like other contemporary London instrument makers, he either employed several workmen, or simply relabelled instruments which he sold in his shop, and that the business may have been continued under his name by others.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LütgendorffGL
'Edward Lewis', The Strad, lxvii (1966–7), 46–7

JOHN DILWORTH

Lewis, George [Zeno(n), George Joseph François Louis] (b New Orleans, 13 July 1900; d New Orleans, 31 Dec 1968). American jazz clarinettist. He began learning music on the fife, then at about the age of 18 taught himself clarinet. He first played with the Black Eagle Band in Mandeville, Louisiana, where he encountered Isidore Fritz, a player he later acknowledged as having had a major influence on his style. During the early 1920s Lewis worked in New Orleans with Buddy Petit, then formed his own band, which included Henry 'Red' Allen. Later he performed with the Eureka Brass Band and the Olympia Orchestra. From 1942 to 1945 he recorded extensively, usually with Bunk Johnson, but also with the trumpeter Kid 'Shots' Madison and as the leader of his own small groups; during this period his playing exhibited a soaring intensity of tone combined with graceful lyric invention. His composition Burgundy Street Blues (1944, AM) remains unique in the New Orleans genre, being a solo accompanied by rhythm section only. Despite problems with his embouchure owing to major dental surgery, Lewis achieved national recognition when he played in New York with Johnson and Baby Dodds (1945–6). After returning to New Orleans, he formed the George Lewis Ragtime Band from the nucleus of Johnson's group. By 1950 Lewis had become established as the seminal figure of the New Orleans black jazz revival. His playing during the following decade almost regained its former timbral purity; a very rapid filigree and seamless registral crossing became hallmarks of his technically fluent and highly individual style. He appeared at the Newport Jazz Festival (1957), made highly successful trips to Europe (1957, 1959) and toured Japan three times (early 1960s). From 1961 until a few weeks before his death he performed regularly at Preservation Hall in New Orleans, leading the Preservation Hall Jazz Band.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveJ (A. Ashforth)
J.A. Stuart [D. Tait]: Call him George (London, 1961)
T. Bethell: George Lewis: a Jazzman from New Orleans (Berkeley, 1977) [incl. discography]
E. Kraut: George Lewis: Streifzug durch ein Musiker-Leben (Menden, 1980) [incl. discography]
L. Fält and H.B.Håkånsson: Hymn to George: George Lewis on Record and Tape (n.p. [?Malmö and Stockholm], 1985)
Oral history material in LNT

ALDEN ASHFORTH

Lewis, George Emanuel (b Chicago, 14 July 1952). American composer and trombonist. A trombone student of Dean Hey, he attended Yale University (BA 1974), where he joined the Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians (AACM), a Chicago-based collective devoted to experimental music. He studied composition with Muhal Richard Abrams, a founder of the AACM, and worked closely with many other AACM members. From 1980 to 1982 he was music director of The Kitchen, an avant-garde cultural centre in New York. He joined the music department at the University of California, San Diego, in 1991 and served as the Milhaud Professor of Music at Mills College in 1995. He has collaborated with the Count Basie and Gil Evans jazz orchestras, and with Misha Mengelberg, John Zorn, Richard Teitelbaum, Frederic Rzewski, Yuji Takahashi and others.

Lewis's early works include Music for Soprano Saxophone and Trombone (1975) and the Solo Trombone Record (Sackville 2012, 1977). His Shadowgraph pieces (1975–7) extend the performance possibilities of the standard jazz big band, employing unusual instrumentation, improvisation and graphic notation. After combining live and recorded sound in the late 1970s, he developed interactive computer pieces programmed to respond to live improvising soloists (Rainbow Family, 1982–5; Voyager, 1993). In collaboration with David Behrman he produced Mbirascope (1985), which connects a thumb piano to digital audio and video links, and encourages audience participation. Multimedia works of the 1990s explore black American history and popular culture (Changing with the Times, 1993; Virtual Discourse, 1993; North Star Boogaloo, 1996).

WORKS
(selective list)

El-ac: Tone Burst, trbn, tape, 1976; Chicago Slow Dance, any inst(s), tape, 1977; Chbr Music for Humans and Non-Humans, any inst(s), interactive cptr, 1979–84; A Friend, inst, tape, 1980; Homage to Charles Parker, a sax, perc, elec kbd, synth, elecs, 1980; Rainbow Family, any inst(s), interactive cptr, 1982–5; Audio Tick, 3 insts, interactive cptr, 1983; Rio Negro, cptr, 1992; Virtual Discourse, 4 perc, cptr, 1993; Voyager, inst(s), interactive cptr, 1993; North Star Boogaloo, perc, cptr, 1996

Other works: Music, s sax, trbn, 1975; Shadowgraph no.1, 5 sax, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, perc, pf, db, 1975; [Untitled], dream sequence, trbn, 1975; Blues, 2 wind, 2 kbd, 1976; Shadowgraph no.2, 1v, 5 sax, bn, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, perc, pf, db, 1976; Monads, any inst(s), 1977; Shadowgraph no.5, any inst(s), 1977; Triple Slow Mix, 2 insts, tuba, 1977; Imaginary Suite, any inst(s), 1978; Shadowgraph no.3, 5 sax, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, perc, pf, db, 1978; Second Woodstock Frag., pf, 1980; Carthera, trbn, pf, 1981; Tick, 3 insts, 1983; Endless Shout, pf, 1994; Collage, chbr orch, port, 1995; Ring Shout Ramble, sax qt, 1998; other solo and ens works

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal recording companies: hat ART, Hat Hut, Black Saint, Sackville

WRITINGS

'Max in a Musical Context', Computer Music Journal, xvii/2 (1993), 10–11

'Singing the Alternative Interactivity Blues', Front, vii/2 (1995)

'Improvised Music after 1950: Afrological and Eurological Perspectives', Black Music Research Journal, xvi (1996), 91–122

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Roads: 'Improvisation with George Lewis', Composers and the Computer, (New York, 1985), 75–87

STEVEN KEY

Lewis, Henry Jay (b Los Angeles, 16 Oct 1932; d New York, 26 Jan 1996). American conductor. Following early studies in the piano, clarinet and double bass, he was appointed double bass player in the Los Angeles PO in 1951. He was drafted into the US Seventh Army in 1955, becoming double bass player and conductor in its Stuttgart-based symphony orchestra. In 1957 he returned to the Los Angeles PO. He was married to Marilyn Horne from 1960 to 1976. Lewis made his conducting début with the Los Angeles PO in 1961 substituting for Markevich. In the same period he founded the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra, taking it on a European tour in 1963. From 1964 to 1965 he was assistant conductor of the Los Angeles PO, and was appointed music director of the Los Angeles Opera in 1965. In 1968 he became music director of the New Jersey SO, and over the next eight years significantly raised its status as a major regional institution. He conducted at La Scala in 1965, and in 1972 became the first black conductor to appear at the Metropolitan Opera. But later success eluded him. Although a frequent guest conductor (in Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, New York, San Francisco and in Europe), he never obtained a major permanent post. His last regular work was as music director for the Hilversum RSO (1989–93) and as director of the Opera-Music Theatre Institute in New Jersey. (SouthernB)

CHARLES BARBER

Lewis, Houston & Hyde. English music publishers, successors to JOHN BLAND.

Lewis, Jerry Lee (b Ferriday, LA, 29 Sept 1935). American pop singer, pianist and songwriter. With Elvis Presley, Carl Perkins and Johnny Cash, he was one of the 'million dollar quartet' of young rockabilly singers on Sam Phillips' Sun Records label in Memphis, Tennessee in the mid-1950s. Lewis combined a ferocious pianistic technique which drew on boogie-woogie, Western swing, and rhythm and blues piano-playing with a nervous, frenzied singing style. His first hit record was the song most associated with him, Whole Lotta Shakin' Goin' On (1956) which introduced the abrupt shifts of tempo and whooping vocal techniques characteristic of much of his rock and roll material. This was followed by best-selling recordings of two Otis Blackwell compositions, Great Balls Of Fire and Breathless. During the 1960s Lewis regularly performed his early hits in concert but on record he turned increasingly towards the honky-tonk vein of country music. His lachrymose approach to ballads was in evidence on versions of the alcoholic's lament What made milwaukee famous (has made a loser out of me) and Mickey Newbury's self-pitying She even woke me up to say goodbye. In later years, Lewis's turbulent personality and private life helped to sustain his status as a legend of rock and roll as did a 1989 biographical film, Great Balls Of Fire, in which Dennis Quaid played Lewis. See also C. Escott and M. Hawkins: Good Rockin' Tonight: Sun Records and the Birth of Rock 'n' Roll (New York, 1991).

DAVE LAING

Lewis, John (Aaron) (b LaGrange, IL, 3 May 1920). American jazz pianist and composer. He grew up in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where he began to learn the piano at the age of seven. His musical studies continued at the University of New Mexico. In 1946, with fellow black musician Kenny Clarke, he joined Dizzy Gillespie's bop-style big band in New York. Further studies at the Manhattan School of Music, which led to a master's degree in 1953, were interrupted in 1948 when the band made a concert tour of Europe. After returning to the USA, Lewis worked for Lester Young, Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Gillespie, Illinois Jacquet and Ella Fitzgerald. He made some notable recordings with Parker, among them Parker's Mood (1948, on the album The Genius of Charlie Parker, Savoy) and Blues for Alice (1951, on Charlie Parker, Clef).

In 1951–2 Lewis served as the pianist with the Milt Jackson Quartet; by the end of 1952 this group was renamed the MODERN JAZZ QUARTET, with Lewis as its musical director. For the next two decades his musical activity centred on the MJQ, for which he wrote many pieces. From 1958 to 1982 he was also music director of the annual Monterey Jazz Festival, and during the late 1950s he was head of faculty for the summer clinics at the Lenox School of Jazz. He also formed the cooperative big band Orchestra USA, which performed and recorded third-stream compositions (1962–5). After the MJQ disbanded temporarily in 1974, Lewis held teaching positions at the City College of New York and at Harvard University. By the early 1980s he was performing with the reunited MJQ and with a sextet, the John Lewis Group, and in 1985, with Gary Giddins and Roberta Swann, he founded the American Jazz Orchestra, which performed until the end of 1992.

Lewis is among the most conservative of bop pianists. His improvised melodies, played with a delicate touch,

Ex.1 From Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea, on The Modern Jazz Quartet (1957, Atl.); transcr. T. Owens are usually simple and quiet; the accompaniments are correspondingly light, with Lewis's left hand often just grazing the keys to produce a barely audible sound. His method of accompanying soloists is similarly understated: he often plays simple countermelodies in octaves which combine with the solo and bass parts to form a polyphonic texture. Occasionally Lewis plays in a manner resembling the stride styles of James P. Johnson and Fats Waller, all the while retaining his light touch.

Many of Lewis's solos have a degree of motivic unity which is rare in jazz. For example, his 64-bar solo in Between the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea (1957, on the album The Modern Jazz Quartet, Atl.) derives almost entirely from its first two bars, which in turn derive from the first four notes of the theme (ex.1). As the solo progresses Lewis subjects its opening motif to inversion (bar 9), chromatic alteration (bars 47 and 57) and a variety of other alterations in pitch and shape (bars 25–6, 41), which nevertheless retain their links with the basic figure.

Lewis is similarly conservative as a composer, for his music draws heavily on harmonic and melodic practices found in 18th-century European compositions. Since the 1950s he has written a number of third-stream works combining European compositional techniques and jazz improvisation. Most of these were composed for the MJQ, or for the quartet with instrumental ensembles of various sizes, and are published by MJQ Music. Among his best pieces for the MJQ are Django, the ballet suite The Comedy (1962, Atl.), and especially the four pieces Versailles, Three Windows, Vendome and Concorde, all of which combine fugal imitation and non-imitative polyphonic jazz in highly effective ways.

WORKS
(selective list)

Django (from Modern Jazz Quartet; 1954–5, Prst.); Versailles (from Fontessa; 1956, Atl.); Three Windows (from One Never Knows; 1957, Atl.); Sketch for Double String Quartet, Exposure (from Third Stream Music; 1957, 1959–60, Atl.); England's Carol (from The Modern Jazz Quartet and Orchestra; 1960, Atl.); Vendome (from European Concert; 1960, Atl.); Concorde (from A Quartet is a Quartet is a Quartet; 1963, Atl.); Three Little Feelings (from Orchestra U.S.A.; 1963, Colpix); Mirjana of my Heart and Soul (from P.O.V.; 1975, Col.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Hentoff: John Lewis (New York, 1960)
M. James: Ten Modern Jazzmen (London, 1960), 65–80
G. Schuller: 'John Lewis on the Modern Jazz Beachhead', High Fidelity, x/10 (1960), 54–5, 134–5
F. Thorne: 'An Afternoon with John Lewis', JR, iii/3 (1960), 6–9
R.J. Gleason: Celebrating the Duke, and Louis, Bessie, Billie, Bird, Carmen, Miles, Dizzy, and other Heroes (Boston, 1975)
L. Feather: The Pleasures of Jazz: Leading Performers on their Lives, their Music, their Contemporaries (New York, 1976)
T. Owens: 'The Fugal Pieces of the Modern Jazz Quartet', Journal of Jazz Studies, iv/1 (1976), 25–46
C.J. Stuessy: The Confluence of Jazz and Classical Music from 1950 to 1970 (diss., Eastman School, 1978), 348, 402
L. Lyons: The Great Jazz Pianists: Speaking of their Lives and Music (New York, 1983), 75–82
F. Davis: 'Back in Time (John Lewis)', In the Moment: Jazz in the 1980s (New York, 1986), 227–37
W. Knauer: Zwischen Bebop und Free Jazz: Komposition und Improvisation des Modern Jazz Quartet (Mainz, 1990)
T. Lalo: John Lewis (Montelimar, 1991) [incl. discography by J. Lubin and Lalo]
M. Bourne: 'Bop Baroque the Blues', Down Beat, lix/1 (1992), 24–7 [incl. discography]

THOMAS OWENS

Lewis, Meade (Anderson) 'Lux' (b Chicago, 4 Sept 1905; d Minneapolis, 7 June 1964). American pianist. He was raised in Louisville and Chicago, where in his teenage years he became a friend of fellow black jazz pianist Albert Ammons; together they learned to play boogie woogie. In 1927 he recorded his celebrated masterpiece Honky Tonk Train Blues (Para.), but by the time of its issue he was working with Ammons at the Silver Taxi Cab Company. During the early 1930s he played at brothels in Michigan. He then returned to Chicago and led a trio. In this setting (not at a car wash or the taxi company, as is commonly believed) he was rediscovered late in 1935 by John Hammond, who recorded a new unaccompanied version of Honky Tonk Train Blues (Para.). Lewis continued recording and later rose to prominence as a member of a boogie-woogie trio with Ammons and Pete Johnson for the first 'From Spirituals to Swing' concert at Carnegie Hall on 23 December 1938. The trio accompanied Joe Turner in New York and Chicago, after which Lewis resumed working as an unaccompanied soloist without notable success. His technical ability, energetic cross-rhythms and remarkable invention made him one of the most important figures of the boogie woogie craze of the late 1930s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Russell: 'Boogie Woogie', Jazzmen, ed. F. Ramsey and C.E. Smith (New York, 1939/R), 183–205
M. Harrison: 'Boogie Woogie', Jazz: New Perspectives on the History of Jazz, ed. N. Hentoff and A.J. McCarthy (New York, 1959/R), 105–37
'Meade Lux Lewis: a Blues Man's Story', Down Beat, xxvi/4 (1959), 16–17 [interview]
W. Russell: 'Three Boogie Woogie Pianists', The Art of Jazz, ed. M. Williams (New York, 1959/R), 95–109, esp. 104–9
D. Hill and D. Mangurian: 'Meade Lux Lewis', Cadence, xiii/10 (1987), 16–28 [interview]

MARTIN WILLIAMS/BARRY KERNFELD

Lewis, Richard [Thomas, Thomas] (b Manchester, 10 May 1914; d Eastbourne, 13 Nov 1990). English tenor. He studied in Manchester with Norman Allin and made his début in 1941 with the Carl Rosa Company, singing Almaviva and Pinkerton. After World War II he resumed his studies in London. In 1947 he sang the Male Chorus (Rape of Lucretia) at Glyndebourne and at Covent Garden, adding Peter Grimes with the resident company the same season and later singing Tamino and Alfredo. For Glyndebourne (1948–74) he sang Don Ottavio, Ferrando, Admetus (Alceste), Idomeneus, Tom Rakewell (British première of The Rake's Progress, at Edinburgh, 1953), Bacchus, Florestan and Monteverdi's Nero and Eumaeus. For Covent Garden Lewis created Troilus in Walton's Troilus and Cressida (1954), Mark in The Midsummer Marriage (1955) and Achilles in King Priam (1962, Coventry) and sang Don José, Hoffmann, Hermann, Captain Vere, and Aaron in the first British staging of Moses und Aron (1965), which he also sang at Boston in its American stage première (1966). He made his San Francisco début in 1955 as Don José, then sang Troilus, Jeník, Grigory, Massenet's Des Grieux, the Captain (Wozzeck), Alwa (Lulu), Jason, Pinkerton, Eisenstein and Herod. His mellifluous, flexible voice was used with great intelligence, as can be heard on his two recordings of Idomeneo and in recorded extracts from Così fan tutte and Troilus and Cressida. Lewis also had a notable career on the concert platform. He took part in the première of Stravinsky's Canticum sacrum (1956, Venice), and was a leading exponent of the tenor parts in all the main oratorios. He was particularly renowned for his Gerontius, which he twice recorded.

Richard Lewis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.D. Rosenthal: 'Richard Lewis', Opera, vi (1955), 144–8

A. Blyth: 'Richard Lewis 1914–1990', Opera, xlii (1991), 33–6

N. Ross-Russell: There will I Sing: the Making of a Tenor (London, 1996)

ALAN BLYTH

Lewis, Robert Hall (b Portland, OR, 22 April 1926; d Baltimore, MD, 22 March 1996). American composer. He studied with Rogers and Hanson at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, New York (BM 1949, MM 1951, PhD 1964), with Nadia Boulanger and Bigot in Paris (1952–3), and with Apostel, Krenek and Schiske in Vienna (1955–7). In 1954 he attended Monteux's conducting school. Lewis taught at Goucher College and the Peabody Conservatory from 1958 and, from 1969 to 1980, at Johns Hopkins University, where he became professor in 1972 (all in Baltimore, Maryland). He performed professionally on the trumpet and appeared as a conductor in the USA and abroad. Among his awards are a Kosciuszko Foundation Chopin Award (1951), two Fulbright Scholarships (1955–7), two Guggenheim Fellowships (1966, 1980), an NEA grant (1976) and an award from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters (1976).

Lewis composed mostly chamber and orchestral music. His earlier compositions were concerned with linear developmental processes using serial methods, but the ordered growth and evolution apparent in his music of the 1960s and 70s reflect a change in style. Beyond his basic predilection for inventive textures, unusual timbres, complex rhythms, fluent polyphony and rich harmony in a freely atonal context, Lewis sought new modes of expression in works since the early 1970s. These include spatial effects (Moto, Due madrigali), quotations (Atto, Kantaten), taped sounds (whale songs in Nuances II), passages in different tempos played simultaneously (Osservazioni II, Moto) and limited use of aleatory techniques. All of these elements are controlled by a strong intellect and by technical skills of the highest order. Many of his works have been recorded.

WORKS

ORCHESTRAL

Poem, str, 1949; Concert Ov., 1951; Sinfonia; Expression for Orch, 1955; Prelude and Finale, 1959; Designs, 1963; Sym. no.1, 1964; Music for 12 Players, 1965; 3 Pieces, 1965, rev. 1966; Conc. for Chbr Orch, 1967, rev. 1972; Sym. no.2, 1971; Intermezzi, 1972; Nuances II, 1975; Osservazioni II, wind, kbd, hp, perc, 1978; Moto, 1980; Atto, str, 1981; Sym. no.3, 1982–5; Conc., str, 4 tpt, hp, pf, 1984; Destini, str, wind, 1985; Movements on Scenes of Hieronymous Bosch, 1989; Sym. no.4, 1990

CHAMBER

Str Qt no.1, 1956; 5 Movts, pf, 1960; Str Qt no.2, 1962; Toccata, vn, perc, 1963; Music for Brass Qnt, 1966; Trio, cl, vn, pf, 1966; Monophonies I–IX, solo wind, 1966–77; Tangents, double brass qt, 1968; Sonata, vn, 1968; Divertimento, 6 insts, 1969; Inflections I, db, 1969; Inflections II, pf trio, 1970; Serenades I, pf, 1970; Fantasiemusik I, vc, pf, 1973; Combinazioni I, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1974; Osservazioni I, fls, pf, perc, 1975; Serenades II, fl + pic, vc, pf, 1976; Combinazioni III (J. Rubin), nar, ob + eng hn, perc, 1977; Combinazioni IV, vc, pf, 1977; Duetto da camera, vn, pf, 1977; Facets, vc, pf, 1978; Fantasiemusik II, cl, pf, 1978; A due I, fl + pic + a fl, hp, 1981; A due II, ob + eng hn, perc, 1981; Combinazioni V, 4 va, 1982; Serenades III, brass qnt, 1982; Wind Qnt, 1983; Archi, pf, 1984; Fantasiemusik III, sax, pf, perc, 1984; A due III, bn, hp, 1985

VOCAL

Acquainted with the Night (R. Frost), S, chbr orch, 1951; 5 Songs (R. Felmayer), S, cl, hn, vc, pf, 1957; 2 madrigali (G. Ungaretti), chorus, 1972; 3 Prayers of Jane Austen, small chorus, pf, perc, 1977; Kantaten (anon.), chorus, pf, 1980; Monophony X (anon.), S, 1983

Principal publishers: Doblinger, Presser, Seesaw

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Gonzalez: The Symphonies of Robert Hall Lewis (diss., Peabody Conservatory, 1979)

SAM DI BONAVENTURA/R

Lewis, Thomas Christopher (b Lambeth, 1833; d Clapham, 7 Jan 1915). English organ builder, bellfounder and piano maker. He practised as an architect before setting up as an organ builder in about 1860 with a workshop in Clapham. Recent research (Gray, 1996) has clarified the firm's metamorphoses. The factory moved to Shepherd's Lane (later Ferndale Road), Brixton, in 1866. In 1883 Lewis and Company was formed and by 1898 John Michell Courage, the brewer (who seems to have served an apprenticeship with Lewis), was the major shareholder. Lewis himself withdrew in 1901, worked briefly for Norman & Beard, and then established himself in business again as 'Thomas C. Lewis' in about 1907. He retired about 1913. Lewis and Company was ultimately acquired by the Willis family (1919) and the title disappeared in 1925.

Bellfounding was conducted from the Brixton factory between 1878 and 1888 when the business was sold to Alfred Lawson of the Whitechapel Bell Foundry. Little is known of Lewis's piano-making activities, though he took out patents for pianos in 1866, 1898 and 1899.

Lewis is increasingly recognized as a distinctive and significant figure in late 19th-century English organ building. He was implacably opposed to Henry Willis and the orchestral organ, insisting on the importance of diapason choruses voiced on relatively low pressures, generously scaled, and capped with bright 2′s (smaller organs) or big Quint mixtures (larger instruments). Schulze was his inspiration, and as well as the German builder's approach to choruswork, Lewis took up his Lieblich Gedacts, Hohlflötes, Geigen Principals and Rohrflötes. He had less time for Schulze's reeds and developed his own style with the musical purpose of adding colour and vitality to the flue choruses. From France, he adopted Harmonic Flutes, Celestes, Gambas and orchestral reeds. These different elements came together to form a coherent whole in Lewis's magnum opus, the organ for Southwark Cathedral (1897).

In addition to his large organs, Lewis built small church and chamber organs to standard designs; these included his version of the 'Scudamore' organ, and a range of 'Lieblich' organs first advertised in the 1860s. All were built using good materials – spotted metal pipework was a hallmark of the Lewis style. Consoles were elegant, the larger ones with low jambs (sometimes terraced) and a horizontal layout of drawstops. Lewis experimented with both pneumatic and electric actions, enabling him to provide a generous range of console accessories, including, for example, the 'key touches' (combinations) in the concert organ for the Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum, Glasgow (1901).

Lewis's major commissions included: St Mary's Roman Catholic Cathedral, Newcastle upon Tyne (1869); St Peter's, Eaton Square, London (1874); St Andrew's Hall, Glasgow (1877); Ripon Cathedral (1878); the People's Palace, Mile End Road, London (1884). The Kelvingrove organ survives, together with other substantial instruments at St Mary's, Studley Royal (1875), St George's, Cullercoats, near Newcastle upon Tyne (1885) and St Michael's, Inveresk, near Edinburgh (1892). The Southwark Cathedral organ has been rebuilt, as has Melbourne Cathedral (1890), but both still speak with the authentic Lewis voice.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BicknellH

T.C. Lewis: A Protest against the Modern Development of Unmusical Tone (London, 1897)

G. Benham: 'Interesting London Organs XXXII: Southwark Cathedral', The Organ, xii (1932–3), 90–98

J. Maidment: 'Some Reflections on the Work of T.C. Lewis and his Organ in St Paul's Cathedral, Melbourne', The Organ, lxvi (1987), 133–9

N.J. Thistlethwaite: The Making of the Victorian Organ (Cambridge, 1990)

C. Gray: The Life, Companies and Work of Thomas Christopher Lewis (1833–1915) (thesis, U. of Reading, 1996)

NICHOLAS THISTLETHWAITE

Lewkovitch, Bernhard (b Copenhagen, 28 May 1927). Danish composer. He was a choirboy at the Roman Catholic St Ansgars Kirche; after his schooling he was admitted to the Royal Danish Conservatory to study the organ, theory and music history. In 1948 he graduated in theory, in 1949 he received a degree as an organist, and in 1950 he took lessons in composition and orchestration with Schierbeck and Jersild. Later he studied for a short while in France. From 1947 to 1963 he was organist at St Ansgars Kirche, and also precentor from 1953. From 1973 he remained connected with the Catholic church in Denmark by working as an organist. He founded and directed the mixed chorus Schola Cantorum and the all-male Schola Gregoriana; these groups, besides singing Lewkovitch's own compositions, did a great deal to make the sacred music of the Middle Ages and Renaissance better known in Denmark, notably through numerous broadcasts. As a composer, Lewkovitch is strongly attached to the liturgy of the Catholic Church and its music. Even such early works as Mariavise op.1 (1947) display the influence of Gregorian chant, together with a free exploitation of the church modes. In the early 1950s this manner was developed in sacred music (including the Three Psalms op.9 and the Mass op.10) and also in secular pieces to texts by contemporary Danish writers.

In about 1955 there was a change of style brought about by Lewkovitch's interest in the works of Stravinsky (particularly the Mass) that he was then writing about in the Dansk musiktidsskrift. With the Three Madrigals (1954–5) he abandoned modality to experiment with bi- and polytonality, and eventually to employ 12-note serial methods in the Cantata sacra (1959) and the Improperia per voci (1961), a work that combines dodecaphonic sections with spoken and improvised passages. This adventurous phase brought Lewkovitch considerable renown in Denmark and abroad; his music was performed at the ISCM festivals in Cologne (1960) and Amsterdam (1963). The period culminated in Il cantico delle creature (1962–3), in which there is no conventional notation and no specification of pitch. The piece progresses from barely audible whispering to a rhythmically strict but melodically free declamation, in which words are loosened into syllables, and the syllables recombined. After writing this work Lewkovitch resigned his official connections with the Church, and during the next four years he completed only a few works. When he returned to sustained composition, it was again to write liturgical works in a style akin that of his works from the mid-1950s.

WORKS

(selective list)

SACRED VOCAL

Mariavise (J. Jørgensen), op.1, chorus, 1947; 3 Psalms, op.9, chorus, 1952; Mass, op.10, chorus, 1952; 3 Motets, op.11, chorus, 1952; Mass, op.15, chorus, wind, hp, 1954; Missa brevis, male chorus, 1955; 10 Latin Motets, male chorus, 1957; 3 orationes, T, ob, bn, 1957–8; Cantata sacra, T, fl, eng hn, cl, bn, trbn, vc, 1959; Improperia per voci, chorus, 1961; Il cantico delle creature, 8 male vv, 1962–3; Veni Creator Spiritus, chorus, 6 trbn, 1967; Laudi a nostra signora, chorus, 1969; Stabat mater, chorus, 1970; Sub vesperum, chorus, 1970, rev. 1997; 32 motets, chorus, 1976; Mass, chorus, 2 hn, 1978; Vesper, T, mixed chorus, org, 1979; Salve Regina, boys' choir, org, 1981; Pater noster, chorus, 2 obbligato wind, 1983; Via Stenonis, T, mixed chorus, bn, 1987; Laude all povera, 10 vv, 1988–9; Anthems to the Blessed Virgin, chorus, 1992, rev. 1994; De lamentatione Jeremiae, chorus, 1994; Alle mine kilder, 48 motets, chorus, 1996

SECULAR VOCAL

Sommeren (O. Sarvig), op.6, chorus, 1951; Grønne sange (Sarvig), op.7, male chorus, 1951; 6 Songs (Jørgensen), op.8, Bar, pf, 1952; 5 danske madrigaler (F. Jaeger), op.12, chorus, 1952; 3 Madrigals (Tasso), op.13, chorus, 1954–5; 3 canzonetter (G. Chiabrera, J. Vittorelli), Bar, pf, 1956; 8 børnesange [8 Children's Songs] (H. Rasmussen), 3vv, 1957; 3 Songs (Rasmussen), 3vv, 1958; 3 Songs (Sarvig), male chorus, 1965; Sangvaerk after Danish folksongs, 3vv/1v, pf, 1968; 8 børnesange (Lewkovitch), 1v, pf, 1970; Nocturne, chorus, 1993; Apollo's Art: 4 engelske madrigaler, chorus, 1994; 3 engelske madrigaler, male choir, 1996; 5 engelske madrigaler, T, cl, hn, bn, 1997

INSTRUMENTAL

Sonatine, pf, 1947; 4 pf sonatas, opp.2–5, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1950; Dansesuite no.1, op.16, pf/orch, 1955; Dansesuite no.2, op.17, pf, 1960; 65 Organ Chorales, 1972; 6 Partitas, org, 1973

Principal publisher: Hansen

WRITINGS

'Stravinskijs klagesange', DMt, xxxiv (1959), 37–40
'Interviews med Stravinsky', DMt, xxxiv (1959), 145–9
'Igor Stravinskij igen', DMt, xxxv (1960), 242–3
'Hvorfor og til hvad', DMt, xxxvii (1962), 69–72 [on Improperia]
'Ord og toner uden noder', Nutida musik, xii/1 (1968–9), 53–5
Numerous other articles and reviews in Berliner tidsskrift (1955–) and DMt (1952–62)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Wallner: Vår tids musik i Norden från 20-tal till 60-tal (Stockholm, 1968)
H. Lenz: 'Det er ingen kvalitet i sig selve at vaere komponist' [There is nothing special about being a composer], DMt, lxi (1986–7), 237–9

JENS BRINCKER

Ley, Henry George (b Chagford, 30 Dec 1887; d nr Ottery St Mary, 24 Aug 1962). English organist. As a choirboy at St George's, Windsor, and at the RCM, he studied the organ with Walter Parratt. He won an organ scholarship to Keble College, Oxford, and while still an undergraduate was appointed organist of Christ Church (1909). He was made choragus of the University and joined the staff of the RCM. In 1926 he became precentor at Eton College, where his remarkable playing and genial personality left a lasting impression on generations of schoolboys, and where he persuaded such artists as Jelly d'Arányi, Marcel Dupré and Harold Samuel to perform. He retired in 1945 but continued to examine for the RCO and to give recitals.

STANLEY WEBB

Ley, Salvador (b Guatemala City, 2 Jan 1907; d Guatemala City, 21 March 1985). Guatemalan composer and pianist. After piano and theory studies with Herculano Alvardo and Louis Roche in Guatemala (1917–22) he moved to Berlin. There he attended the Hochschule für Musik, took private piano lessons from George Bertram (1922–30), and studied theory and composition with Wilhelm Klatte (1923–5) and Hugo Leichtentritt (1928–9). He also studied the piano with Egon Petri at Zakopane in 1931, though his performing career had already begun in 1926. In 1934 he returned to Guatemala and was appointed director of the National Conservatory, a post he held until 1937, and again from 1944 until his emigration to the USA in 1953. Active in the New York area as a coach and accompanist, from 1963 he taught at the Westchester Conservatory of Music in White Plains, New York. In 1970 he moved to St Petersburg, Florida, where he was active as a teacher, coach and organist. He did much to promote Latin-American music in the area, including organizing several Festivals of Latin-American Culture at local colleges.

In 1978 Ley returned to Guatemala to receive a pension from the government awarded in recognition of his services to the musical culture of the country. He remained active as soloist with the National SO and as a teacher at the National Conservatory. He returned to the USA for concert tours in Florida and New York in 1979 and 1980. Ley's music was influenced by the cultural climate he found in Berlin in his youth, and by his friendships and life-long professional associations with Busoni, Schnabel, Walter, Furtwängler, Klemperer and Edwin Fischer. He also made a conscious effort to employ the dance forms, rhythms and melodic gestures of Latin-American – especially Guatemalan – music in his works.

WORKS

Op: Lera (2, G. Campbell), 1960, unperf., except in concert extracts
Orch: Serenade, str, 1949; Obertura jocosa, 1950; Concertante, va, str, 1962
Songs (1v, pf): 5 Songs (E. González Martínez), 1940; 6 Songs (R.M. Rilke), 1942; Der Krieg (M. Claudius), 1950; Chbr Music nos.1 and 5 (J. Joyce), 1958; 6 Songs (Campbell), 1958; Hymn to Being (Campbell), 1962; Yo pienso en tí (J. Batres Montúfar), 1963; Tarde del trópico (R. Dario), 1969; We face each other (Campbell), 1969; The Serpent (T. Roethke), 1970
Chbr and kbd: Danza fantástica, pf, 1950; Piece, va, pf, 1956; Danza exotica, pf, 1959; Semblanza in Memoriam Maryla Jonas, pf, 1959; Suite, fl, pf, 1962; 4 Pf Pieces, 1966

Principal publishers: Elkan-Vogel, Peer

CHARLES MICHAEL CARROLL

Leybach, Ignace Xavier Joseph (b Gambsheim, Alsace, 17 July 1817; d Toulouse, 23 May 1891). French composer, organist and pianist. He studied first in Strasbourg and later in Paris with Pixis, Kalkbrenner and Chopin. In 1844 he became organist at Toulouse Cathedral. He was a noted pianist and teacher as well as a remarkably prolific composer of superficial works designed for popular consumption, publishing well over 200 operatic fantasias and salon pieces for piano, of which several, notably nocturnes, were often included in anthologies. Among his other works are L'organiste pratique (*c*1880–90), Le nouvel organiste (1881–3), methods for piano (1888) and harmonium (1864) and several volumes of songs and motets with organ.

SUSAN THIEMANN SOMMER

Leyden, John (b Denholm, Roxburghshire, 8 Sept 1775; d Batavia [now Jakarta], Indonesia, 28 Aug 1811). Scottish antiquarian and folksong collector. He was a powerful force in Edinburgh's intellectual life from the mid-1790s until his departure for India in 1802. His two outstanding contributions to Scottish folksong scholarship were in helping Walter Scott to collect material for the Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border (1802) and editing the 16th-century political tract The Complaynt of Scotland, adding to it a Preliminary Dissertation which, though prone to irrelevance, is a mine of indispensable material about Scottish folk music and Border customs. Leyden also edited the Scots Magazine for a short period, did pioneering philological work on the Scots dialect and on oriental languages, wrote poetry prolifically and was a qualified surgeon.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Morton: Poetical Remains of the late Dr John Leyden, with Memoirs of his Life (London, 1819)
M.R. Dobie: 'The Development of Scott's "Minstrelsy"', Edinburgh Bibliographical Society Transactions, ii/1 (1940), 67–87

C.G. Zug: 'Sir Walter Scott, Robert Jamieson and the New "Minstrelsy"', ML, lvii (1976), 398–403

DAVID JOHNSON

Leydi, Roberto (b Ivrea, 21 Feb 1928). Italian ethnomusicologist. He studied in Milan, where he was music critic for the newspaper Avanti!, 1947–52. He conducted fieldwork in northern Italy (1965–8), collecting traditional songs, and his research led him to create radio broadcasts and theatrical performances featuring this repertory. He was appointed professor of ethnomusicology at the University of Bologna in 1972 and served as a board member of the Centro Nazionale di Studi di Musica Popolare; he is also president of the Società Italiana di Etnomusicologia. His later work focusses on liturgical music and traditional instruments.

WRITINGS

Eroi e fuorilegge nella ballata popolare americana (Milan, 1958)
Musica popolare e musica primitiva (Turin, 1960)
La musica dei primitivi (Milan, 1961)
'Precisazioni su "Mahagonny" e altre questioni a proposito di Kurt Weill', RaM, xxxii (1962), 195–209
Canti sociali italiani, i (Milan, 1963)
ed., with S. Mantovani: Dizionario della musica popolare europea (Milan, 1970)
ed.: Il Folk music revival (Palermo, 1972) with S. Mantovani and C. Pederiva: I canti popolari italiani (Milan, 1973)
ed.: Canti popolari italiani (Milan, 1977, 3/1984)
Musica popolare a Creta (Milan, 1983)
'Una nuova attenzione per la musica liturgica di tradizione orale', Musica e liturgia nella cultura mediterranea: Venice 1985, 19–34
ed., with F. Guizzi: Strumenti musicali e tradizioni popolari in Italia (Rome, 1985) with F. Guizzi: Le zampogne d'Italia (Milan, 1985)
'Typological Outlines of the Italian Bagpipes', Studia instrumentorum musicae popularis IX: Orta San Giulio 1986, 108–20
'Diffusione e volgarizzazione', SOI, vi (1988), 301–92
Canti e musiche popolari italiane (Milan, 1990)
L'altra musica (Milan, 1991)
with others: 'Gesangsformen und vokale Gattungen', Volks und Popularmusik in Europa, ed. D. Stockmann (Laaber, 1992), 145–279
'Discografia della musica popolare italiana, i: Italia settentrionale', Fonti musicali in Italia, vii (1993), 141–240
'Italy', Ethnomusicology: Historical and Regional Studies, ed. H. Myers (London, 1993), 125–9
Canté bergera: la ballata piemontese dal repertorio di Teresa Viarengo (Vigevano, 1995)
'Discografia della musica popolare italiana, ii: Italia centrale', Fonti musicali italiane, i (1996), 163–99
ed.: Guida alla musica popolare in Italia (Lucca, 1996)
ed., with F. Guizzi: Gli strumenti musicali e l'etnografia italiana (1881–1911) (Lucca, 1996)

TERESA M. GIALDRONI

Leyding [Leiding], Georg Dietrich (b Bücken, nr Nienburg, 23 Feb 1664; d Brunswick, 10 May 1710). German composer and organist. He was the son of a retired riding master of the French lifeguards. He showed a marked propensity for music at an early age. In 1679 he went to Brunswick to study with the organist Jacob Bölsche and in 1684 visited Hamburg and Lübeck to obtain further instruction from Reincken and Buxtehude. Soon, however, he had to return to Brunswick, where he deputized for the ailing Bölsche. After Bölsche's death in the same year he succeeded him in the posts of organist of St Ulrich and St Blasius, and he later became organist of the Magnikirche as well. At the end of the 1680s he took composition lessons with Johann Theile, Hofkapellmeister at nearby Wolfenbüttel. According to Walther he was 'primarily a composer for the organ (to which … his many extant keyboard pieces bear testimony)'. Only five of his works survive, however (ed. K. Beckmann, Sämtliche Orgelwerke, Wiesbaden, 1984). Among them are three preludes, in B♭, C and E♭, which are noteworthy for the virtuosity of their pedal parts. The other two are a set of chorale variations, Von Gott will ich nicht lassen, and a setting, likewise for organ, of the chorale Wie schön leucht' uns der Morgenstern (possibly a fragment of a chorale fantasia).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FrotscherG; GerberNL; WaltherML
A.G. Ritter: Zur Geschichte des Orgelspiels, vornehmlich des deutschen, im 14. bis zum Anfange des 18. Jahrhunderts, i (Leipzig, 1884/R), 183
M. Seiffert: 'Das Plauener Orgelbuch von 1708', AMw, ii (1920), 371–93
J. Wolgast: Georg Böhm: ein Meister der Übergangszeit vom 17. zum 18. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Berlin, 1924), 121, appx 11–15
E. Bruggaier: Studien zur Geschichte des Orgelpedalspiels in Deutschland bis zur Zeit Johann Sebastian Bachs (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1959), 98

HORST WALTER

L.H. Abbreviation for left hand (also Ger. linke Hand).

Lhéritier [Lerethier], Isaac (fl *c*1540). French composer. The Lyons publisher Moderne printed three of his chansons: De loing travail and O vous omnes par trop aventureulx (RISM 1541[8] and 1543[14] respectively; both ed. in SCC, xxviii, 1993) and, in a lute intabulation by Francescho Bianchini, Quant tu vouldras (1547).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.L. Perkins: The Motets of Jean Lhéritier (diss., Yale U., 1965), 53–5
S.F. Pogue: Jacques Moderne, Lyons Music Printer of the Sixteenth Century (Geneva, 1969)

LEEMAN L. PERKINS

Lhéritier [Lheretier, Lhiretier, Lirithier], Jean [Johannes] (b *c*1480; d after 1551). French composer. According to notarial documents drawn up in Avignon in the 1540s, 'Johannes Lhéritier' was a 'clericus morinensis diocesis', a native of the former diocese of Thérouanne (in the present-day Pas-de-Calais). A contemporary, Giovanthomaso Cimello, called him a disciple of Josquin Des Prez. If Lhéritier did have direct contact with Josquin, it must have been in France, perhaps during Josquin's brief association with musicians of the royal French court in the early 1500s.

The archives of the Estense court show that a 'Metregian leretier' arrived in Ferrara towards the end of 1506 and remained there until 5 June 1508 when Duke Alfonso I gave him leave to return to France. This was probably his first trip to Italy; in the years following the only known archival evidence of his activity comes from Italian centres.

'Johannes Heritier' figures in a payment roll drawn up at the papal court of Leo X and dated 1 May 1514 (but with additions made until as late as 17 September 1516); however, he is not identified as either cantor or musicus as are half a dozen of the many other names included. From 28 July 1521 until 8 August 1522 he served as capellanus and maestro di cappella at the French national church in Rome, S Luigi dei Francesi, where he signed his name in the account books as 'Jo. Lhiretier'. His presence in the city during this period would help to account for the inclusion of motets attributed to Lhéritier in manuscripts of Roman provenance, not only those compiled while he may have been in the region (such as the Medici Codex of 1518, I-Fl B.L.666, with one, and Rvat C.S.26, copied during the papacy of Leo X, with three) but also those copied considerably later (such as the Palazzo Massimo collection of 1532–4, Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4, with five, and the Cappella Giulia manuscript of 1536, Rvat C.G.XII.4, with seven).

Lhéritier may have left Rome already in either 1522 or 1523, but he cannot be traced again until 20 May 1525, when he was working as a singer in the chapel of Federico Gonzaga, Marquis of Mantua. An exchange of letters involving Federico, his ambassador to Rome, Francesco Gonzaga, and his mother, Isabella d'Este, implies that by then the composer had already been at the Gonzaga court for some time. A fairly lengthy connection of some sort first with Ferrarese and then with Mantuan musical circles is also suggested by the inclusion of five of Lhéritier's motets in the print published in Ferrara by Johannes de Buglhat and his associates (RISM 1538[5]). According to the same correspondence, however, Lhéritier left Gonzaga service before 3 July 1525 for that of the Bishop of Verona, Gian Matteo Giberti.

The Gonzaga correspondence also refers to a benefice that had evidently been given to Lhéritier by the Cardinal of Auch, François de Clermont. This is the earliest reference to what must have been a prolonged association between patron and composer; a series of notarial documents, the first dated 28 April 1540, refers to five separate benefices awarded to Lhéritier by the cardinal, who was the papal legate at Avignon, and a procuratorium drafted there three days after Clermont's death on 2 March 1541 describes the composer as 'sue capelle magister'. The latest of these documents indicates that Lhéritier was still alive in 1552, but gives no clue concerning where and how he was then employed. Scotto's publication of the Moteti de la fama under Lhéritier's name in 1555 may point to a period of residence in Venetian territories. This hypothesis is also supported by Pietro Gaetano's treatise Oratio de origine et dignitate musices (written between 1566 and 1574). Gaetano, a singer at S Marco, affirmed that Lhéritier had been his praeceptor but provided no information about the date and place of his studies.

Compositions attributed to Lhéritier survive in at least 66 manuscripts and 45 printed collections of the 16th century. The majority originated in Italy, but France, the Netherlands, Spain, Germany, Austria, and even Poland and Bohemia are also represented. His Missa 'On a mal dit de mon amy' is of the type that began to be cultivated by Mouton and Févin around 1500 and is aptly designated ad imitationem. The four points of imitation that constitute the substance of Févin's three-voice chanson serve as the starting-point for the new composition at the main structural divisions of the four major sections of the mass (the Agnus Dei was not composed separately, and is to be sung super Kyrie). His Magnificat settings are more traditional in that the liturgical reciting note occurs in each of them, heard at times in extended values and occasionally carried by the tenor, but more often migrating from voice to voice or permeating imitatively the entire texture.

At the focal point of Lhéritier's compositional activity, clearly, was the motet. For texts he favoured antiphons, psalms, responsories and devotional verse, but he drew on other Latin sources as well, including an erotic secular poem, Johannes Pontanus's Cum rides mihi. Slightly more than half of his motets are in a single section; the remainder are divided into two partes. In many, some sort of structural repetition is used to articulate the formal design. This is done most consistently in the responsory settings where the return to the music of the respond in the liturgy is retained in the polyphony. Similar effects are achieved elsewhere by the refrain-like repetition of distinctive material, a dual statement of the concluding section or some analogous procedure. Only in his settings of the Marian antiphons for Compline did Lhéritier consistently employ the liturgical plainsong traditionally associated with a given text. In these works he generally derived the melodic material from the chant, which therefore pervades the musical fabric in imitation; occasionally, however, in motets for five or six voices, the cantus firmus is presented in extended note values, or canonic imitation is used to generate one part from another. He seems to have adopted these traditional techniques primarily to enhance the potential sonorous impact of a work and, particularly where a second text is involved, to deepen the meaning through associative juxtaposition. The only chanson with a reliable attribution to him, Jan, petit Jan, is in the light, declamatory style that was becoming current in France in the 1520s.

The compositional procedure basic to all of Lhéritier's works is syntactic imitation, alternating with homophonic writing where needed for textual or formal reasons, or simply for variety. The entries of the separate voices tend to be more closely and evenly spaced in the later works, resulting in a generally fuller texture. His melodies, like those of Mouton, rise and fall in smooth, nicely balanced arches in which conjunct motion predominates; leaps are usually followed by a turn of direction so that intervening pitches are filled. Phrases generally open with a syllabic declamation of the text at the beginning of a phrase, but may be continued melismatically. That modal consistency was an important consideration is evident from Lhéritier's use of final and confinal as orientation points within the melodic line and from his selection of internal cadential pitches that conform to the usage described by the theorists (exemplified in much liturgical chant). With his carefully regulated counterpoint and suave melodic writing, Lhéritier was clearly one of the important northern masters who, like Mouton, anticipated essential characteristics of the style associated with Palestrina. His historical significance derives in large measure from the role he played not only in the shaping of those stylistic norms, but also in their dissemination throughout the rest of Europe, especially on the Italian peninsula.

WORKS

only sources not in modern edition listed

Edition: Johannis Lhéritier opera omnia, ed. L.L. Perkins, CMM, xlviii/1–2 (1969) [P]

SACRED

Moteti de la fama, libro primo, 4vv (Venice, 1555)

Missa 'On a mal dit de mon amy', 4vv (on Févin's chanson), P 1, DK-Kk Ny.Kgl.Saml.1848–2° (anon.), I-CMac P (olim E) (anon.)

Alma Redemptoris mater, 4vv, P 218; Alma Redemptoris mater, 5vv, P 84, H-Bu 23 (anon.), E-SI A21 (anon.); Angelus Domini descendit, 4vv, P 225; Ascendens Christus in altum, 4vv, P 139, I-CMac D (olim F) (anon.); Ave domina mea, 4vv, P 66; Ave Maria, gratia plena, 4vv, P 240; Ave mater matris Dei, 4vv, P 95, MOe L.11.8 (anon.); Ave regina celorum, 4vv, P 79, Rvat VM 571 (anon.); Ave verum corpus natum, 5vv, P 321; Ave virgo gloriosa, 3vv, P 330; Ave virgo gloriosa, 4vv, P 285, Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4 (Lhéritier)

Beata Dei genetrix, 4vv, P 91, CMac D (olim F), inc. (anon.), D-LEu Thomaskirche 51 (anon.), Rp 1018 (anon.; also attrib. Willaert and Conseil); Beata es, virgo Maria, 4vv, P 235, Dl Grimma 51 (Crecquillon; also attrib. Verdelot); Benedicat te Dominus, 4vv, P 276, HRD 9821 (Lhéritier); Deus, in nomine tuo, 5vv, P 149 (also attrib. Willaert); Dum complerentur dies penthecostes, 4vv, P 52, I-CMac P (olim E) (anon.); Hodie Salvator mundi, 4vv, P 60, CMac D (olim F) (anon.; also attrib. Mouton); In te, Domine, speravi, 4vv, P 130; In te, Domine, speravi, 4vv, P 209, Bc Q40 (anon.), P-Cug 32 (anon.) (also attrib. Verdelot); Locutus est Dominus, 9vv, P 336

Miserere mei, Domine, 6vv, P 171; Magnificat quarti toni a voce pari, 4vv, P 20; Magnificat quarti toni, 4vv, P 25, E-Bc 681 (anon.), Tc B18 (II) (lost but cited in original table of contents), Toledo, Catedral, Obra y Fabrica 23 (anon.); Magnificat octavi toni, 4vv, P 37, I-CMac N (anon.); Nigra sum sed formosa, 4vv, P 297; Nigra sum sed formosa, 5vv, P161, CMac D (olim F) (anon.), F-Pn 32 (anon.), I-PCd 5 (anon.), Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4 (Lhéritier); Nigra sum sed formosa, 6vv, P 254, PCd 4 (anon.); Nisi Dominus edificaverit, 4vv, P 198, D-Kl 24/1–4 (anon.), F-CA 125–8 (olim 124) (Claudin; also attrib. Le Heurteur); O clemens, o pia, 4vv, P 99, I-CMac D (olim F) (anon.); O beatum pontificem, 4vv, TVd 4, lost; O quam magnificum, 4vv, TVd 4, lost; Petrus apostolus, 5vv, P 333, Ls 775 (anon.); Qui confidunt in Domino, 4vv, P 108, CMac N (anon.); Redde mihi letitiam, 6vv, P 183; Regnum mundi, 5vv, P 166, D-Mu 326 (anon.), I-PCd 5 (anon.); Repleatur os meum, 5vv, P 324

Salvator mundi, salva nos, 4vv, P 72, CMac D (olim F) (anon.; also attrib. Mouton); Salve mater Salvatoris, 4vv, P 300; Salve regina, 6vv, P 262; Sancta Maria, succurre miseris, 4vv, P 69, CMac D (olim F) (anon.); Senex puerum portabat, 4vv, P 308, D-LEu Thomaskirche 51 (anon.); Si bona suscepimus, 4vv, P 314, I-Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4; Sub tuum presidium, 4vv, P 119, Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4; Sub tuum presidium, 6vv, P 190, PCd 5 (anon.); Surrexit pastor bonus, 6vv, P 291; Te matrem Dei laudamus, 4vv, P 46; Usquequo, Domine, oblivisceris me, 4vv, P 123 (also attrib. Mouton); Virgo Christi egregia, 4vv, P 244

SECULAR

Cum rides mihi basium negasti, 4vv, P 248

Jan, petit Jan, P 347, S-Uu 76c (anon.)

DOUBTFUL WORKS

Domine exaudi me, 5vv, attrib. Lhéritier in I-Rmassimo VI.C.6.23–4; attrib. Jacquet in 1539[5], Primo libro di motetti di Jachet, 5vv (Venice, 1540), 1542[6]

Visita quesumus, Domine, 4vv, attrib. 'Iritier' in E-Tc 17; attrib. Jacquet in GB-Lcm 2037, I-Bc Q20; attrib. Jacquet and Willaert in 1538[5]

En l'ombre d'ung buissonet, 4vv, attrib. Lhéritier in 1535[8]; attrib. Lasson in *c*1528[9]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Aaron: Thoscanello de la musica (Venice, 1523/R; rev. with suppl. as Toscanello in musica, 2/1529/R, 3/1539/R, 4/1562; Eng. trans. collating all edns, 1970), ff.Hiv, Ii

S. Vanneo: Recanetum de musica aurea (Rome, 1533/*R*1969 in DM, 1st ser., Druckschriften-Faksimiles, xxviii and in BMB, section 2, xvi), f.93*r*

A.P. Coclico: 'De musicorum generibus', Compendium musices (Nuremberg, 1552/*R*1954 in DM, 1st ser., Druckschriften-Faksimiles, ix)

A. Ferrajoli: 'Il Ruolo della corte di Leone X (1514–1516)', Archivio della Società romana di storia patria, xxxiv (1911), 16ff; repr. in Il Ruolo della corte di Leone X (1514–1516), ed. V. De Caprio (Rome, 1984), 363–91

H.-W. Frey: 'Michelagniolo und die Komponisten seiner Madrigale: Bartolomeo Trombоncino, Jean Conseil, Constanzo Festa, Jakob Arcadelt', AcM, xxiv (1952), 147–97

F. Lesure: 'Notes pour une biographie de Jean Lhéritier', RdM, xlii (1958), 219–20

L.L. Perkins: The Motets of Jean Lhéritier (diss., Yale U., 1965)

H.-W. Frey: 'Die Kapellmeister an der französischen Nationalkirche San Luigi dei Francesi in Rom im 16. Jahrhundert', AMw, xxii (1965), 272–93, xxiii (1966), 32–60

M. Picker: 'The Motet Anthologies of Petrucci and Antico published between 1514 and 1521: a Comparative Study', Formen und Probleme der Überlieferung mehrstimmiger Musik im Zeitalter Josquins Desprez: Wolfenbüttel 1976, 181–9

R.J. Snow: 'Toledo Cathedral MS Reservado 23: a Lost Manuscript Rediscovered', JM, ii (1983), 246–77

W.F. Prizer: 'A Mantuan Collection of Music for Holy Week, 1537', Renaissance Studies in Honor of Craig Hugh Smyth, ed. A. Morrogh and others (Florence, 1985), i, 613–25

S.H. Boorman: 'False Relations and the Cadence', Altro Polo: Essays on Italian Music in the Cinquecento, ed. R. Charteris (Sydney, 1990), 221–64

LEEMAN L. PERKINS

Lhévinne, Josef (b Orel, nr Moscow, 1/13 Dec 1874; d New York, 2 Dec 1944). Russian pianist. He studied the piano with Vasily Safonov at the Moscow Conservatory (1885–91), graduating with the gold medal. He then began giving concerts abroad, but was recalled to Russia for military service. In 1898 he married Rosina Bessie, also a pianist. After teaching in Tbilisi (1900–02) and at the Moscow Conservatory (1902–06), Lhévinne returned to his concert career, while living principally in Berlin. He made his American début in New York on 27 January 1906 with Safonov and the Russian SO, and made six concert tours of the USA before the outbreak of World War I, when the Lhévinnes were interned in Berlin because they were Russian. This experience played a large part in their decision to move to New York after the war. In 1924 Lhévinne and his wife joined the staff of the new Juilliard Graduate School (later the Juilliard School). His pupils included Adele Marcus, Sascha Gorodnitzki, Brooks Smith and Homer Samuels.

Lhévinne's few phonograph recordings, not enough to fill a single CD, clearly reflect the prodigious technique that was one of the most famous of his day. This technique was allied to a sure control of tone and phrasing, and a magisterial projection of line. His Chopin recordings, especially the Etude in thirds (op.25 no.6), highlight a sovereign technique put to the service of a grand interpretative vision. He also performed more exhibitionistic works, including Adolf Schulz-Evler's Arabeskan über Themen des Walzers 'An der schönen blauen Donau' von Johann Strauss, with compelling poise and musicianship. He was shy and almost without competitive impulse, and in his later years would have made fewer appearances than he did but for his wife's virtual management of his career. He wrote Basic Principles in Pianoforte Playing (1924/*R*1972).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.K. Wallace: A Century of Music-Making: the Lives of Josef and Rosina Lhévinne (Bloomington, IN, 1976)

JERROLD NORTHROP MOORE/R

Josef Lhévinne

Lhévinne [née Bessie], Rosina (b Kiev, 29 March 1880; d Glendale, CA, 9 Nov 1976). American pianist and teacher of Ukrainian birth. She began piano studies at the age of seven and in 1889 entered the Moscow Conservatory as a pupil of Remesov, later studying with Vasily Safonov; among her fellow students were Rachmaninoff and Skryabin. There she also met Josef Lhévinne, whom she married in 1898 a week after graduating from the conservatory with a gold medal, the youngest woman ever to win that award. In 1906 the Lhévinnes moved to the USA, and then in 1908 to Berlin, where they were interned during World War I, an experience that helped to decide them to settle permanently in New York. During these years Rosina gave a few solo recitals and some two-piano concerts with her husband but devoted most of her time to supervising Josef's career and to teaching. She joined the faculty of the Juilliard Graduate School in 1924 and remained there until shortly before her death; she came to be regarded as one of the great teachers of her time, and among her many famous pupils were Van Cliburn, John Browning, Arthur Gold, James Levine and Misha Dichter. As a teacher Rosina Lhévinne emphasized the beauty of tone, long line and spontaneity of expression that characterized the late 19th-century school of Russian pianism. She returned to solo playing after Josef's death, performing the Chopin E minor Piano Concerto with the New York PO when she was 81.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Lhévinne and E.Winer: Music is my Life (Los Angeles, 1968)
R.K. Wallace: 'The Lhévinnes' Teaching Legacy', Piano Quarterly, no.85 (1974), 7–11
R.K. Wallace: A Century of Music-Making: the Lives of Josef and Rosina Lhevinne (Bloomington, IN, 1976)

ELLEN HIGHSTEIN

L'homme armé. A melody used as the tenor of over 40 mass cycles between about 1450 and the end of the 17th century. Those of Du Fay, Ockeghem, Regis, Faugues and perhaps Busnoys seem to date from the 1450s. Those by Caron and Tinctoris as well as the cycle of six anonymous masses in a manuscript now in Naples (I-Nn VI E 40) are probably from before about 1475. Those of Baziron (described as new in 1484), Obrecht, Josquin (2 settings), Brumel, Compère, Vaqueras, Gaffurius (lost) and De Orto are from the last quarter of the 15th century. Cycles from the early 16th century include those of Pipelare, Forestier, Venedier, La Rue (two settings), Carver and Senfl. Settings by Spanish composers of the 16th century include those of Peñalosa, Ortiz (lost), Morales (one for five voices printed in 1540 and one for four voices printed in 1544) and Guerrero (surviving in two versions). The two masses by Palestrina (for five voices printed in 1570 and for four voices printed in 1582) conclude the main series, though there was a later mass by Carissimi (12 voices), expanded with four more voices in later adaptations by Beretta and Stamegna. Particularly among the 30-odd masses before about 1510, there is clear evidence of composers having built upon, or emulated, other masses on the same tenor.

Although not among the greatest of these works, the cycle of six anonymous masses in Naples (ed. by L. Feininger, Monumenta Polyphoniae Liturgicae Sancta Ecclesiae Romanae, ser.1/iii (1957), and ed. in CMM, lxxxv, 1981) merits attention as one of the most remarkable musical edifices of the 15th century. The first five masses take successive small sections of the melody, each treating it in various ways: the first uses only the first four notes; the second, and most intricate, of the series treats the next nine notes in retrograde, inversion and retrograde inversion. Those five masses are in four voices, while the last is in five voices and employs the entire melody in two of the voices in pure canon at the 5th throughout. The melody is always based on G, but the central tonalities of the six cycles are: C, G (with flat), F, G (without flat), G (with flat), C – as though following a coherent and planned tonal scheme. Each Kyrie has an elaborate trope, with heavy Classical references. Dispute continues as to whether they are all by one composer or by several working to a pre-arranged scheme, as might be deduced from differing stylistic features; but either way there is nothing remotely comparable from these years in either scope or formal ambition.

The melody and its text survive only in the Naples manuscript (ex.1), though much of the material is endorsed by its use in a combinative chanson (perhaps of around 1463) perhaps by Robert Morton. Since no two masses contain precisely the same form of the melody, it is reasonable to assume that it had an unwritten origin and was monophonic. But its tripartite division makes it singularly well suited for use as the cantus firmus in a mass cycle. Other useful features include: the move into a higher register for the middle section coupled with the high A giving a sense of a different tonal centre; the leaps of a 4th and a 5th combined with falling lines at the ends of sections; and the motivic economy of the melody. While many of the early settings (including those of Du Fay, Busnoys and Caron) have the melody on G with a flat signature, Ockeghem and others (including De Orto, Forestier and Palestrina's five-voice setting) have it in G without a flat. But all other tonalities were used: Regis, Faugues, Pipelare and Palestrina's four-voice setting have it on D; Obrecht, followed by Compère, have it on E, while Senfl similarly used the Phrygian mode but beginning on A. Josquin chose F for his mass sexti toni (followed in this only by Morales and Guerrero) and had it on all pitches of the hexachord, starting on C and progressing up to A, for his mass super voces musicales. C is otherwise found only in an anonymous eight-voice Credo in Copenhagen (DK-Kk 1872) and in the much later cycle of Carissimi (where it is always in the bass). Elements of homage or emulation have been suggested, as in the transposition of the melody for particular movements (in the Credo of the masses by Ockeghem, Busnoys and Obrecht, for example), the use of retrograde and inversion, and so on. There was also apparent emulation in the use of elaborate canonic schemes, most particularly in the masses of La Rue and Forestier.

Ex.1

Various theories have been advanced to explain the melody's astonishing career. The appearance of musical sections in units of 31 has prompted the suggestion that many of the early masses were associated with the Burgundian ducal court's Order of the Golden Fleece, which had 31 knights (Taruskin). Two manuscripts of the Cappella Sistina (I-Rvat CS15 and CS35) containing groups of cycles have been connected with calls for a new crusade (Roth). The existence of a much earlier liturgy of the armed man commemorating the soldier Longinus who pierced Christ's side with a lance may also be relevant (Warmington). Moreover the song itself may have been for the mustering of soldiers, conceivably the French initiative of the late 1440s (Lockwood), or perhaps a reaction against this initiative (Chew); and it has been suggested that Ockeghem's mass could have been for the celebration of the end of the Hundred Years War, marked at Tours with a great ceremony on 10 March 1454 (Magro). No single theory is likely to explain all the known masses, though many are probably the result simply of musical tradition (like the In Nomine settings in England). It is hard to think of any other melody in the history of music that has yielded so much music of the highest quality.

Difficulties of dating 15th-century music have led to disputes about which setting was the earliest. Du Fay, as the oldest composer, may seem the obvious choice, though dates proposed for his cycle range from the early 1450s to the late 1460s. Ockeghem's cycle is normally dated to the early 1450s, and its priority is asserted much later by Cerone (El melopeo, 1613, ii, 756). Busnoys' is the most widely distributed of the early masses and seems to be described as the earliest by Pietro Aaron (see Taruskin).

Similarly there has been some discussion of a possible original polyphonic song. Cimello stated in about 1540 that Ockeghem wrote the original song (see Perkins), and Aaron seems to have ascribed it to Busnoys. Neither of these is likely to be the combinative chanson Il sera pour vous conbatu/L'homme armé by Robert Morton, since its top-voice text almost certainly refers to events of 1463, well after the earliest masses. Perhaps there were earlier polyphonic song settings, since there were certainly later ones: the anonymous quodlibet with O rosa bella cited by Tinctoris and found incomplete in the manuscript E-E IV.a.24 (*c*1460); a quodlibet with D'ung aultre amer by Basiron; a quodlibet with Il est de bonne heure né by Japart; four-voice settings ascribed to Josquin and 'Falsum'. Plainly the work therefore had a substantial career apart from the mass cycles. Its earlier success influenced several 20th-century composers to re-use it, among them J.N. David in his Fantasia super 'L'homme armé' for organ 1929, Helmut Eder, in L'homme armé: Konzert in drei Teïlen, op.50 (1969), Peter Maxwell Davies, who used the second mass of the 15th-Century Naples manuscript in his L'homme armé (1968) and his Missa super L'homme armé (1971), Louis Andriessen in De materie (1989) and Frederic Rzewski in his Piano Sonata (1991).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (A. Laubenthal)

O. Gombosi: Jacob Obrecht: eine Stilkritische Studie (Leipzig, 1925)

D. Plamenac: 'La chanson de L'homme armé et MS VI. E. 40 de la Bibliothèque Nationale de Naples', Fédération archéologique et historique de Belgique: Annales, xxv (1925), 229–30

O. Gombosi: 'Bemerkungen zur "L'homme armé"-Frage', ZMw, x (1927–8), 609–12; see also ZMw, xii (1929–30), 378 only

L. Lockwood: 'Aspects of the "L'homme armé" Tradition', PRMA, c (1973–4), 97–122

J. Cohen: The Six Anonymous L'homme armé Masses in Naples, Biblioteca Nazionale, MS VI E 40, MSD, xxi (1968)

G. Chew: 'The Early Cyclic Mass as an Expression of Royal and Papal Supremacy', ML, liii (1972), 254–69

M. Caraci: 'Fortuna del Tenor "L'homme armé" nel primo Rinascimento', NRMI, ix (1975), 171–204

J. Cohen: 'Munus ab ignoto', SMH, xxii (1980), 187–204

W. Haass: Studien zu den 'L'homme armé'-Messen des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1984)

L.L. Perkins: 'The L'homme armé Masses of Busnoys and Okeghem: a Comparison', JM, iii (1984), 363–96

W.F. Prizer: 'Music and Ceremonial in the Low Countries: Philip the Fair and the Order of the Golden Fleece', EMH, v (1985), 113–53

R. Taruskin: 'Antoine Busnoys and the L'homme armé Tradition', JAMS, xxxix (1986), 255–93; see also JAMS, xl (1987), 139–53

A. Roth: 'L'homme armé, le doubté turcq, l'ordre de la toison d'or: zur "Begleitmusik" der letzten grossen Kreuzzugsbewegung nach dem Fall von Konstantinopel', Feste und Feiern im Mittelalter: Paderborn 1989, 469–79

J. Haar: 'Some Lessons in Theory from a Sixteenth-Century Composer', Altro Polo: Essays on Italian Music in the Cinquecento, ed. R. Charteris (Sydney, 1990), 51–81

A. Roth: Studien zum frühen Repertoire der päpstlichen Kapelle unter dem Pontifikat Sixtus' IV. (1471–1484) (Vatican City, 1991)

L. Lütteken: 'Ritual und Krise: die neapolitanischen "L'homme armé" - Zyklen und die Semantik der Cantus firmus-Messe', Musik als Text: Freiburg 1993, 207–18

O. Rees: 'Guerrero's*L'homme armé* Masses and their Models', EMH, xii (1993) , 19–54

M. Caraci Vela: 'Un capitolo di arte allusiva nella prima tradizione di Messe L'homme armé', Studi musicali, xxii (1993), 3–21

B. Haggh: 'The Archives of the Order of the Golden Fleece and Music', JRMA, cxx (1995), 1–43

J. Haar: 'Palestrina as Historicist: the Two L'homme armé Masses', JRMA, cxxi (1996), 191–205

F. Fitch: Johannes Ockeghem: Masses and Models (Paris, 1997), 62–4

A. Magro: Jean de Ockeghem et Saint-Martin de Tours (1454–1497): une étude documentaire (diss., U. of Tours, 1998)

F. Warmington: 'The Ceremony of the Armed Man: the Sword, the Altar, and the L'homme armé Mass', Antoine Busnoys: Method, Meaning, and Context in Late Medieval Music, ed. P. Higgins (Oxford, 1999), 175–214

DAVID FALLOWS

L'Hoste da Reggio. See HOSTE DA REGGIO.

Lhotka, Fran (b Mladá Vožice, 25 Dec 1883; d Zagreb, 26 Jan 1962). Croatian composer and conductor of Czech origin. He studied the horn and composition in Prague under Stecker, Klička and Dvořák. His teaching career began in Yekaterinoslav (now Dnepropetrovsk) and in 1909 he joined the Zagreb Opera orchestra. From 1920 to 1961 he was a professor at the Zagreb Academy of Music, and dean during the years 1923–40 and 1948–52. In his music Lhotka often used Croatian folk materials. He wrote in a late Romantic style, strong in contrasts and brilliant in instrumentation. A vivid rhythmic sense distinguished his work for the ballet, as well as a gift for the musical reflection of a wide range of emotions and dramatic effects. His most popular work, Đavo u selu ('The Devil in the Village', 1935), encompasses scenes of rowdy carousing and banal everyday life, hellish and grotesque moments and a wedding finale. Lhotka's conducting activities included directing the Zagreb chorus Lisinski (1912–20) and the orchestral society of the Croatian Music Institute. He also wrote textbooks.

WORKS

(selective list)

Ballets: Đavo u selu [The Devil in the Village], Zürich, 18 Feb 1935; Balada o jednoj srednjovjekovnoj ljubavi [Ballad on a Medieval Love Story], Zürich, 6 Feb 1937; Luk [The Arc], Munich, 13 Nov 1939

Other works: Str Qt, G, 1911; Vn Conc., 1913; Conc., str qt, 1924; 2 hrvatske rapsodije, vn, chbr orch, 1928; choruses, songs

Principal publishers: Schott (Mainz), Društvo hrvatskih skladatelja

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Kovačević: Hrvatski kompozitori i njihova djela [Croatian composers and their works] (Zagreb,1960)

P. Mlakar: 'Značajan i plodonosan susret' [A significant and productive encounter], Zvuk, no.54 (1962), 401–10

K. Kovačević: Muzičko stvaralaštvo u Hrvatskoj 1945–1965 [Musical creation in Croatia 1945–1965] (Zagreb, 1966)

KREŠIMIR KOVAČEVIĆ

Lhotka-Kalinski, Ivo (b Zagreb, 30 July 1913; d Zagreb, 29 Jan 1987). Croatian composer and singer, son of FRAN LHOTKA. He studied composition with his father and solo singing at the Zagreb Academy of Music until 1937, when he went to Rome for two years of composition study with Pizzetti. After holding various teaching posts (1939–51) he became a professor of singing at the Zagreb Academy.

Lhotka-Kalinski's early works, of which the most important are Jutro ('Day') and the Symphony in E♭, were mainly romantic and programmatic. An intense study of folksong resulted in his making numerous arrangements for vocal and instrumental groups, and also influenced the melodic patterns of his original music. He gradually abandoned this folk style for a less nationalistic neoclassical idiom which incorporated elements of 12-note and atonal techniques. An excellent singer with a well-developed dramatic sense, he was a natural operatic composer. He gained an enviable reputation with the four brilliant one-act radio and television operas to texts by Branislav Nušić written between 1954 and 1958. This style was greatly expanded in the atonal opera Svjetleći grad ('The Shining City'), a bitter indictment of what is worthless in society, mirrored musically by a coarsely dissonant harmonic idiom. Among his other works are ballets and film scores.

WORKS

(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Pomet, meštar od ženidbe [Pomet, the Marriage Maker] (comic op, 3, M. Fotez, after M. Držić: Dundo Maroje), 1942–4, Zagreb, 31 Oct 1944

Matija Gubec (historical musical drama, 3, Lhotka-Kalinski, Fotez, T. Prpić), 1947, Zagreb, 8 May 1948

Skup [The Miser] (melodrama, M. Kombol, after Držić), 1950, Zagreb, 13 Sept 1950

Pepeljuga [Cinderella] (melodrama, J. Kušan), 1953, Zagreb, 14 Feb 1953

Velika coprarija [The Great Sorcery] (children's op, 3, B. Chudoba), 1952, Zagreb, 1953

Analfabeta [The Illiterate] (radio op, musical burlesque, 1, Lhotka-Kalinski, after B. Nušić), 1954, Belgrade, 19 Oct 1954, vs (Zagreb, 1957)

Putovanje [The Journey] (TV op, musical satire, 1, Lhotka-Kalinski, after Nušić), 1956, Zagreb TV, 10 June 1957, vs (Kassel, 1958)

Dugme [The Button] (TV op, musical grotesque, 1, Lhotka-Kalinski, after Nušić), 1957, Zagreb TV, 21 April 1958, vs (Zagreb, 1961)

Vlast [Political Power] (TV op, 1, Lhotka-Kalinski, after Nušić), 1958, Belgrade TV, 18 Oct 1958; stage, Belgrade, 15 Oct 1959, vs (Kassel, 1961)

Svjetleći grad [The Shining City] ('a musical farce of the prisoners of the absurd', P. Šegedin), 1967, Zagreb, 26 Dec 1967, vs (Zagreb, n.d.)

Tko će svima da ugodi? [Who could Please Everybody?] (musical tale, B. Slanina), 1968, unperf.

VOCAL

Cants.: Verba fili David, 1940; Hrvatska kronika [Croatian Chronicle], 1952; Kerempuhova pesem [Kerempuh's Song] (Krleža), 1959

Other works: Srebrna cesta [The Srebreno Road], 1v, orch, 1937; Ples smrti [Dance of Death], Bar, orch, 1940; 2 popevke Gorana Kovačića, 1v, pf, 1947; 3 pjesme Mate Balote, 1v, chbr orch, 1949; Bugarštice, 1v, pf, 1951; 3 pjesme Dobriše Cesarića, 1v, pf, 1953; Ojađena svirala [Unhappy Flute], 1v, cl, 1957; Žalobna muzika [Mournful Music], 1v, orch, 1961; 4 epitafa, 1v, ens, 1961; Pjesme moga vremena, 1v, orch, 1963; 3 Krležine, 1v, orch, 1964; Meditacije XX, Bar, chbr orch, 1965; other solo and choral songs, folksong arrs.

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sym., E♭, 1937; Plesna suita [Dance Suite], 1937; Rimske impresije [Roman Impressions], 1938; Zemlja [The Land], sym. variations, 1939; Jutro [Day], sym. poem, 1941–2; Vedri prizori [Gay Scenes], 1947; Baletni prizori u starom stilu [Ballet Scenes in the Old Style], 1950; Komendrijaši [The Comedians], chbr orch, 1952; Simfonijeta, G, 1953; 7 Bagatelles, ob, bn, str, 1954; Omladinska simfonijeta, chbr orch, 1956; Mala balkanska suita [Little Balkan Suite], 1961; Misli [Thoughts], cl, str, 1963; 6 eseja [Essays], 1964

Inst: Dijalozi, fl, cl, 1966; 5 Monologues, vc, 1969; Little Suite, va, pf, 1969

Pf: Stari dalmatinskih plesovi [Old Dalmatian Dances], 1942; Međimurje malo, suite, 1946; 2 plesa na istarske motive [Dances on Istrian Motifs], 1946; Male priče [Little Stories], 1949; 2 sonatinas, 1950; Iverije, 1957; Mala balkanska suita, 1961; Mikroforme, 1964

Principal publishers: Ars Croatica, Društvo hrvatske kompozitora

WRITINGS

Tehnika pjevanja [The techniques of singing] (Zagreb, 1940)

Umetnost pjevanja [The art of singing] (Zagreb, 1953)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Kirigin: ' I. Lhotka-Kalinski Matija Gubec', Muzičke novine (1948), 7

D. Gostučki: 'Ivo Lhotka-Kalinski Analfabeta', Zvuk, no.1 (1955), 21–8

K. Kovačević: Hrvatski kompozitori i njihova djela [Croatian composers and their works] (Zagreb, 1960), 261–74

I. Supičić: 'Estetski pogledi u novijoj hrvatskoj muzici: pregled temeljnih gledanja četrnaestorice kompozitora' [Aesthetic approaches in contemporary Croatian music: a survey of the basic concepts of 14 composers],Arti musices, i (1969), 23–61

T. Reich: Susreti sa suvremenim kompozitorima Jugoslavije [Meetings with contemporary Yugoslav composers] (Zagreb, 1972), 141–7

J. Andreis: Music in Croatia (Zagreb, 1974, 2/1982)

A. Koci and others: Jugoslovanska glasbena dela [Yugoslav musical works] (Ljubljana, 1980), 248–53

NIALL O'LOUGHLIN

Lhoyer [L'Hoyer], Antoine de (b Clermont-Ferrand, 6 Sept 1768; d Paris, 15 March 1852). French guitarist and composer. At the age of 20 he embarked upon a military career, but the French Revolution prompted his emigration in 1791. About 1800 he settled as a guitar teacher in Hamburg, but in 1802 left for St Petersburg where he remained for ten years as a guitarist at the tsar's court. He returned to France in 1812, and rejoined the army after the Restoration of Louis XVIII in 1814. As a military officer he held various posts in the French provinces in the following years, and may have emigrated to Algeria after 1836.

Lhoyer's works, which reach op.45, include surprisingly few pieces for solo guitar: Romances for voice and guitar, and music for two or more guitars, and for guitar with other instruments, dominate. Noteworthy, too, is a concerto for guitar and strings, op.16 (Hamburg, 1802). Before his return to France in 1812, Lhoyer employed only the five-string guitar. His remaining works, published in Paris between 1813 and 1826, are for six-string guitar. About half of them are guitar duets; they are generally substantial, large-scale compositions, making Lhoyer one of the most prolific 19th-century composers for the two-guitar genre. His musical style is Classical rather than Romantic, but with a freshness and originality which surpasses that of most contemporary composers for guitar.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
A. Tardieu: Grand dictionnaire biographique des personnages historiques ou dignes de mémoire nés dans le département du Puy-de-Dôme (Moulins, 1878)
M. Ophee: 'Antoine de l'Hoyer (1768–1836?): a Detective Story and Check List of his Works', Soundboard, xvii/3 (1990), 33–7
E. Stenstadvold: 'Antoine de Lhoyer (1768–1852): riscoperta di un chitarrista-compositore trascurato', Il Fronimo, no.100 (1997), 15–41

ERIK STENSTADVOLD

L'Huyllier [L'Huillier, Luillier] (fl 1539–50). French composer. His 14 surviving chansons were published in Paris at a time when this form was at the height of its popularity. Like most of his contemporaries, he preferred to set texts with four-line stanzas, usually serious love songs. He was able to balance skilful imitation with homophonic writing, and used brief phrases in triple metre to contrast with the prevailing duple metre. The tenor parts are particularly ornate, but all four voices have considerable melodic interest.

WORKS
all for 4 voices

Au monde estoint douleur, 1546[14]; Avecqes vous mon amour finira, 1540[14]; Hélas, amy, 1547[8]; Je me veulx tant à son vouloir, 1550[11]; Le cueur loyal, 1543[8]; O doulx raport, 1541[6]; O ma Vénus, 1547[8]; Pareille au feu, 1546[14]; Si je te voy, 1550[9]; Si l'amytié voire, 1543[11-12]; Si me voyez face triste, 1550[11]; Toy seul sans plus peulx, 1539[17]; Ung si grand bien, 1544[7]; Vous me laissez pour ung aultre, 1545[8]

CAROLINE M. CUNNINGHAM

Liadov, Anatoly Konstantinovich. See LYADOV, ANATOLY KONSTANTINOVICH.

Liaison (i) (Fr.). See under LIGATURE (i).

Liaison (ii). See ORNAMENTS, §7.

Liang Tsai-ping (b Gaoyang county, Hebei, 23 Feb 1910; d Taipei, 28 June 2000). Chinese scholar and performer of zheng and qin plucked zithers. At 14 Liang moved to Beijing for schooling where he also studied qin, zheng and pipa with Shi Yinmei. At 20 he studied with qin master Zhang Youhe. He graduated from the Jiaotong University in Beijing, majoring in applied science. While in south-west China in the 1940s, he organized several qin societies with connoisseurs such as YANG YINLIU and Robert van Gulik. In 1945 he attended Yale University under a government scholarship and introduced the art of the zheng to the American public in many performances. After moving to Taiwan in 1949 he worked in the Ministry of Commerce, but continued to teach, perform, and host many musical activities. The active zheng tradition in Taiwan is chiefly due to his tireless efforts. In April 1953 Liang and several friends formed the Chinese Classical Music Association in Taipei. He served as its president for 25 years. Throughout the years, Liang has given over 300 performances in five continents and has made over 30 recordings. On 2 April 1988 he gave his final public performance in Taipei and retired; on 14 April he was honoured by the Council for Cultural Planning and Development, Executive Yuan with a special contribution award. Liang composed many new pieces for the zheng and published several zheng tutors, as well as several scholarly works.

Liang Tsaiping playing zheng. In background zheng and qin zithers from his collection

See also CHINA, §IV, 4(ii)(b).

WRITINGS

On Chinese Music (Taipei, 1962)
Music of Cheng: Chinese 16-Stringed Zither(Taipei, 1962/R)
Chinese Musical Instruments and Pictures(Taipei, 1970)
Zhenglu licheng [Musical journey of the zheng] (Taipei, 1984/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

RiemannL12
China's Instrumental Heritage: Professor Liang Tsai-Ping, rec. *c*1960, Lyrichord LYRCD 792 (1993)
The Chinese Cheng – Ancient and Modern, rec. *c*1965, Lyrichord LLCT 7302 (1997)
Yan Tingjie: Zhongguo xiandai yinyuejia zhuanlue [Brief biographies of contemporary Chinese musicians] (Taipei, 1992)

HAN KUO-HUANG

Liban, Jerzy [Libanus, Georgius] (b Legnica, 1464; d after 1546). German humanist, theorist and composer, active in Poland. He belonged to a German family in Silesia and his true name was probably Weihrauch. In 1494 he began his studies at Kraków University, and later went to Cologne for a time before returning to Kraków in 1501. From 1506 he was probably associated with the Gymnasium of the church of St Maria, Kraków, first as a cantor and from 1514 as rector. In 1511, 1513 and 1520 Liban lectured at Kraków University. About 1530 he travelled to the abbey of St Florian, near Linz. Among his many writings are two music treatises: De accentuum ecclesiasticorum exquisita ratione and De musicae laudibus oratio (both Kraków, *c*1539). There are also passages on music in his De philosophiae laudibus oratio (Kraków, 1537). All three treatises are reprinted in MMP, ser.D, vi–viii (1975–6) and edited and translated in MMP, ser.C, i (1984). De accentuum is a lengthy treatise on the use of accentuation in reciting liturgical texts: it shows his humanist inclinations, including among the authorities cited Pico della Mirandola and Erasmus. The other treatise, De musicae, although incorporating the views of Gaffurius, was devoted primarily to ancient music; Liban appended a glossary of Greek musical terms in order to demonstrate that Latin music theory was derived from Greek. He also attempted to relate Greek theories on the ethical aspects of music to the church modes, insisting that attention should be paid to the verbal character of the text when choosing a mode.

The treatises contain some music by Liban. A four-voice hymn Ortus de Polonia Stanislaus (ed. Z. Szweykowski, Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie, Kraków, 1964) written in 1501 and published in De accentuum uses note-against-note technique. Eight Magnificat settings and one psalm, In exitu Israel, all for four voices, were printed as music examples in De musicae. They are all based on chant melodies and use imitative counterpoint. Liban also composed settings of odes, including a no longer extant collection of 26 four-voice settings of poetry by Horace and Boethius, known only from references in De accentuum, and a Sapphic ode (Kraków, 1535; lost) composed in honour of Bishop Piotr Tomicki and sung at his funeral in the church of St Stanisław in Kraków.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB
J. Reiss: 'Georgius Libanus Lignicensis als Musiker', ZMw, v (1922–3), 17–22
J. Reiss: Przyczynki do dziejów muzyki w Polsce [Contributions to the history of music in Poland] (Kraków, 1923)
J. Reiss: Książki o muzyce od XV do XVII wieku w Bibljotece Jagiellońskiej [Books on music from the 15th to 17th centuries in the Jagellonian Library] (Kraków, 1924–38)
H. Barycz: Historia Uniwersytetu Jagiellońskiego w epoce humanizmu (Kraków, 1935)
H. Barycz: Ślązacy na Uniwersytecie Jagiellońskim od XV do XVIII wieku [Silesians at the Jagellonian University from the 15th century to the 18th] (Katowice, 1935; Ger. trans., n.d.)
Z. Jachimecki: Muzyka polska w rozwoju historycznym [Polish music in its historical development], i/1 (Kraków, 1948)
Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Z dziejów polskiej kultury muzycznej [From the history of Polish musical culture], i (Kraków, 1958)
H. Kowalewicz and J.Morawski, eds.: 'Hymny polskie', Musica medii aevi [Kraków], viii (1991), 10–141

ELŻBIETA WITKOWSKA-ZAREMBA

Libani, Giuseppe (b Rome, 1845; d Rome, 3 May 1880). Italian composer. He was a wealthy member of the Roman aristocracy, but decided on music as a career. His first opera, Gulnara (Florence, Teatro Pagliano, 1870), did not leave a lasting impression. His next work, Il Conte Verde (Rome, Teatro Apollo, 1873), to a libretto by Carlo d'Ormeville, had the tenor Julián Gayarre in its cast; it was given in about 20 Italian theatres, and remained in the repertory until at least 1885. Libani, who had been unable to attend the première of Il Conte Verde because of his father's illness, was again absent at the première of his final opera, Sardanapolo (Apollo, 1880), as he was by then on his deathbed. This work was praised for its direct and melodious style, and together with Libani's second opera was considered an indication of a talent which because of the composer's early death was not realized.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Cametti: Il teatro di Tordinono poi Apollo (Tivoli, 1938), ii, 545–6
T.G. Kaufman: Verdi and his Major Contemporaries: a Selected Chronology of Performances with Casts (New York, 1990), 573–4

THOMAS KAUFMAN

Liberace [Liberace, Wladziu Valentino; Liberace, Walter] (b West Allis, WI, 16 May 1919; d Palm Springs, CA, 4 Feb 1987). American pianist and entertainer. He studied with Florence Bettray Kelly in Milwaukee and, by the age of 14, was playing with a trio in an ice-cream parlour. He made his début at the age of 17 at the Society of Musical Arts, Milwaukee, and appeared as soloist with the Chicago SO on 15 January 1940 playing Liszt's Piano Concerto no.2. He went to New York in 1940 and performed in night clubs, at first adopting the pseudonym Walter Busterkeys, but later using only the name Liberace. He toured with United Service Organization shows and in 1952 made the first of a series of television programmes which, by the time the series ended in 1956, were being shown weekly throughout the USA and Canada. By the mid-1950s Liberace's recordings had become bestsellers, and his concerts in Carnegie Hall and Madison Square Garden were given before capacity audiences. He created a glamorous stage persona and wore gorgeous outfits that glittered in the cunningly planned stage light (always including candles in one or more candelabra on the piano; see illustration); his championship of the virtues of family, religion and patriotism, although genuine, added to the sentimentality of much of his material. His programmes included arrangements of classical and popular works designed to show off his keyboard technique, with extensive use of elaborate chromatic harmonies and decorative arpeggios. His own compositions include Rhapsody by Candlelight and Boogie-Woogie Variations. Liberace's last public performance took place at Radio City Music Hall on 3 November 1986. He appeared in the films Sincerely Yours (1955), The Loved One (1965) and When the Boys Meet the Girls (1965).

Liberace and his famous glass piano

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CBY 1954
'Liberace', International Musician, i/10 (1952), 24
Liberace: Liberace: an Autobiography (New York, 1973)
Liberace: The Things I Love, ed. T. Palmer (New York, 1976)
B. Thomas: Liberace (New York, 1987)
D.A. Pyron: Liberace: an American Boy (Chicago, 2000)

MARTHA WOODWARD/R

Liberali [Liberalli], Giuseppe. See LIVERALIS, IOSSIF.

Liberati, Antimo (b Foligno, 3 April 1617; d Rome, 24 Feb 1692). Italian theorist and composer. He studied law and fine arts and became a notary in his native town. From 1637 to 1643 he was at the Viennese court in the service of the Emperor Ferdinand III and Archduke Leopold. On 6 February 1644 he took minor orders at Foligno. About 1650 he moved to Rome, where he became a pupil of Gregorio Allegri and, after the latter's death in 1652, of Orazio Benevoli. On 20 November 1661 he was engaged as an alto in the papal choir, to which he belonged until his death; in 1674 and 1675 he was chosen as maestro di cappella. Besides these duties he was organist and maestro di cappella of the German church in Rome, S Maria dell'Anima, and of SS Trinità dei Pellegrini and SS Stimmate di S Francesco.

Little of Liberati's music survives (mostly single arias in contemporary manuscripts), but it was frequently mentioned in earlier literature and a catalogue of Foligno Cathedral lists the contents of two boxes of music left to the cathedral in his will. The boxes contained 18 volumes of Latin ecclesiastical music, 21 oratorios to Italian texts, a Prologo alla tragedia di S Feliciano e Messalina, a Dialogo per li sererissimi Ferdinando et Adelaide di Baviera, various spiritual cantatas and a dramma in musica, S Eustachio (see Metelli). Liberati is important for his theoretical writings, in which he unequivocally declared himself a champion and adherent of the Roman tradition. His Epitome della musica, which he presented to Pope Alexander VII in 1666, and his Lettera of 1684 clearly show that in his view the only ideal church music was that of Palestrina; therefore any reform must take place within the Palestrina tradition. Liberati's attitudes to musicians of his day are particularly interesting for the light they throw on musical life at that period, the best-known example being his defence against G.P. Colonna of the so-called parallel 5ths in Corelli's Violin Sonata op.2 no.3. In his Lettera he expressed exhaustive opinions on 17th-century composers of the Roman school, such as Allegri, Benevoli, Cifra and Nanino. Characteristically, however, he never mentioned such celebrated Roman opera and oratorio composers as Landi, Marazzoli, the Mazzocchi brothers and Luigi Rossi, for he disapproved of the stile nuovo and the seconda pratica. He also opposed the new interpretation of music in the Cappella Sistina. Traditionalism and musical purism are indeed as much the hallmarks of his personality as his uncompromising commitment to the Roman tradition in church music. He was thus one of those who initiated the Palestrina revival in the second half of the 17th century.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

all lost, mentioned in Foligno Cathedral catalogue

S Eustachio (dramma in musica)
Prol to S Feliciano e Messalina (tragedia)
Dialogo for Ferdinando and Adelaide of Bavaria

21 orats

SACRED

Laudate Dominum, 4vv, bc, 1683
Aita, ò numi, aita (orat), 5vv, vns; lost, mentioned in O. Mischiati, CHM, iii (1962–3), 131–70
18 vols. of Latin ecclesiastical music; spiritual cants.: lost, mentioned in Foligno Cathedral catalogue

SECULAR

Amanti non va così, I-Nc, Rvat; Amore che cosa sarà, Nc; Amor è un laberinto, Rdp; Con atroce martire, Rc; Con rauco mormorio, Gl; D'un' erma spiaggia, Nc, F-Pthibault; Era la notte, I-Rn; Gioite o miei pensieri, Nc; Impari ogn' amante l'amore da me, F-Pthibault; La mia vita è una canzone, I-Rn; No non mi tenete, Nc; Non ve lo posso dire, Rc, F-Pthibault; Ove tra sponde d'oro, I-Nc; Quanto godo e quanto rido, Nc; Sentite l'amore, Rc; Sò ben io quel che dice, Rn

WRITINGS

Lettera scritta … in risposta ad una del Sig. Ovidio Persapegi, 15 Ottobre 1684 (Rome, 1685)
Epitome della musica (MS, ?1666, I-Bc, Rvat)
Ragguaglio dello stato del coro de' cantori nella cappella pontificia (MS, Rvat)
Due lettere a Giovanni Paolo Colonna in difesa d'un passo dell'opera Seconda Sonata terza d'Arcangelo Corelli (MS, Bc)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; HawkinsH; SchmidlD
A. Adami: Osservazioni per ben regolare il coro de i cantori della Cappella Pontificia (Rome, 1711), 206
K.G. Fellerer: Palestrina (Regensburg, 1930, 2/1960), 16, 26
P. Kast: 'Antimo Liberati: eine biographische Skizze', KJb, xliii (1959), 49–72
G. Metelli: 'Un inventario inedito delle musiche di Antimo Liberati', Esercizi: arte musica spettacolo, viii (1985), 54–7
A. Morelli: 'Antimo Liberati, Matteo Simonelli e la tradizione palestriniana a Roma nella seconda metà del Seicento', Studi palestriniani II: Palestrina 1986, 295–307
F. Rambotti and G. Ciliberti: 'Le produzioni e gli scritti teorici di Antimo Liberati', Annali della Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia dell'Università degli Studi di Perugia, xxxv/11 (1987–8), 85–131

SILKE LEOPOLD

Liberec (Ger. Reichenberg). City in Czech Republic. A north Bohemian city it has both Czech and German traditions. The roll of its natives includes Christoph Demantius (1567–1643), Joseph Proksch (1794–1864), who founded a music school in the city and was later, in Prague, Smetana's piano teacher, and the composer-conductor Karel Vacek (1902–82).

There are records of a performance of Die Zauberflöte in 1796; opera then gained a regular home in the Zunfttheater, which opened in 1820. This theatre burnt down in 1879 and was replaced four years later by the Stadttheater, raised by public subscription and designed in the German neo-Renaissance style by Fellner and Helmer; there were reconstructions in 1966 and again in 1974–6 (651 seats). Until 1918 the German Stadttheater Reichenberg presented plays, operas and operettas. Friedrich Sommer, who directed the Stadttheater for much of the time between 1922 and 1934, invited leading conductors such as Karl Rankl and Heinrich Jalowetz, and created an ambitious repertory that included works by Wagner, Verdi, Strauss, Musorgksy, Smetana, Dvořák and Janáček. His immediate successors Oskar Basch (1934–6) and Paul Barnay (1936–8) had to struggle against fascist tendencies. Meanwhile, between 1924 and 1938, Czech opera was regularly brought to the city by the Olomouc company.

A permanent Czech theatre, the Severočeské Národní Divadlo (North Czech National Theatre), was established after World War II, and after several changes of name became the F.X. Šalda Theatre in 1957. It was controlled by the regional national committee in Ústí nad Labem from 1963 to 1990, when it came under the jurisdiction of the Liberec municipality. Its opera compnay was progressively consolidated under Jaromír Žid (1946–54), Jindřich Bubeníček (1955–60) and Rudolf Vašata (1960–71), with an emphasis on Czech and Italian works. There was a 20th-century festival in 1962, with operas by Martinů, Krejčí, Pauer, Prokofiev, Britten and Lieberman, and a Verdi cycle in 1963. The theatre orchestra gives concerts, as did, between 1958 and the end of the 1970s, the symphony orchestra of the music school, which worked with the radio station in the city.

There is a great choral tradition. The activities of church choirs were interrupted between 1945 and 1989, but then revived, especially at St Antonín. Ještěd, a mixed choir founded in 1907 by Czech workers, has sung nationally and internationally, as has the children's choir Severáček ('the little northerner'), founded in 1958.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Stadttheater Reichenberg, nos.1–18 (1828–9)
Severočeské Národní divadlo v Liberci 1945–1948 [The North Czech National Theatre in Liberec] (Liberec, 1948)
Divadlo F.X. Šaldy v Liberci 1945–1960[The F.X. Šalda Theatre in Liberec] (Liberec, 1960)
20 let Divadla F.X. Šaldy v Liberci 1945–1965[20 years of the F.X. Šalda Theatre in Liberec] (Liberec, 1965)
30 svobodných let, 30 let českého divadla v Liberci [30 years of freedom, 30 years of the Czech Theatre in Liberec] (Liberec, 1976)
J. Janáček: 'Divadlo v čase nepohody (Německé divadlo v Liberci v letech 1934–1938)' [Theatre in hard times (The German Theatre in Liberec 1934–8)], Divadelní revue, iii (1993), 3–16
L. Tůma and R.Hrdinová: 50 let české opery v Liberci [50 years of the Czech Opera in Liberec] (Liberec, 1995)

EVA HERRMANNOVÁ

Liberia, Republic of. Country in West Africa. Located on the coast of the Atlantic, bordering Sierra Leone, Guinea and Côte d'Ivoire, it has an area of 99,067 km² and a population of 3·26 million (2000 estimate). The population consists of the indigenous peoples and the descendants of English-speaking repatriated Africans who settled on the coast during the 19th century. The country owes its national political structure to the latter groups.

1. ETHNIC GROUPS AND LANGUAGES. Indigenous peoples include the Belle (Kuwaa), Gbande (Bandi), Gio (Dan), Kpelle (Guerzé), Loma (Toma), Mandingo (Malinke or Manya), Mano, Mende and Vai of the Mande language subfamily; the Bassa, Dei (Dewoin), Grebo, Jabo, Krahn and Kru of the Kwa language subfamily; and the Gola and Kissi (Kisi) of the west Atlantic language subfamily. These subfamilies are part of the Niger–Congo language family. Certain peoples, including the Gio, Kissi, Kpelle, Loma, Mandingo and Vai, are also in adjoining countries, so the music of Liberia shares some features with that of neighbouring territories and should be considered in relation to the music of GUINEA, CÔTE D'IVOIRE and SIERRA LEONE.

While Liberian music is created by peoples of diverse language backgrounds, it is often performed by and for individuals who are multi-lingual and have interacted extensively with those in other groups. This interaction goes back at least to the 15th century, when the Mande migrations from the grasslands of Mali towards the coast began, continuing on a smaller scale into the 19th century. Throughout these migration periods and into the 20th century, shifting political alliances facilitated contact. There has also been interaction through trade between peoples within Liberia and those living beyond its borders, as well as intergroup interaction promoted by the Poro secret societies which act as pan-group institutions of authority.

The music of Liberia can tentatively be categorized as that performed by indigenous peoples, that performed by descendants of repatriated Africans, and urban popular music performed by both. Yet such distinctions are difficult to maintain as interaction provides a mixture of elements between all types of music. Herzog has noted that a large number of the Jabo signalling texts are in the languages of the more powerful neighbouring peoples, the Grebo and Kru. Radio programmes and recordings also promote this interchange, and the national dance troupe incorporates elements of various types of Liberian music.

2. MUSIC AND SOCIETY. Most Liberian peoples seem to incorporate 'music' within a broader term that describes an event involving music sound, dancing and celebration. The Kpelle term for this type of event is pêlee. When narration and drama are also included, it is called meni-pêlee (chantefable). Related terms are mãla for dance and wule for song. Music sound for the Gio, Gola and Kpelle is the voice or speech of instruments and singers. The voice is termed míé by the Gola and wóo by the Kpelle and Gio. Wóo for the Kpelle may mean the voice of a group of performers, of an individual singer or instrument, or of an individual part of an instrument, such as a string.

There are professional musicians who are socially accepted and publicly recognized for their special skill among the various Liberian peoples, though most of them work part of their time as subsistence rice farmers or wage labourers. Singers are called ayun gbembe among the Gola and ngulei-sîyge-nuu ('the song-raising person') among the Kpelle. Gola professional singers are thought to be endowed by their neme, or guardian spirit, and given the ability to invent new songs. Indeed, it is widely believed among the Gola that singers are unfaithful to their spouses and lovers because their true lovers are their spiritual guardians. Throughout Liberia, singers are in demand to perform at festivals, funerals and receptions. Virtuoso performance is intensely appreciated, and ensembles spend much time touring. Solo singers are often women, but male professional storytellers and instrumentalists playing the pluriarc, lamellophone and triangular frame zither are also singers.

Kpelle performing ensembles show parallels to the Kpelle political organization. For instance, the drum-dominated ensembles are usually headed by the pêlee-kalong ('chief of the play'), who is the group's liaison with the town chief and the manager who negotiates playing engagements. The posîa, as master of ceremonies, calls for pauses in the music, interprets speeches of praise to the players and keeps the crowd from pressing too close to the players. The musical leader of the group, the master drummer (fêli-ygále-nuu), plays the single-headed goblet drum (see illustration); he plays the most varied and complex part and knows all other parts and how they fit together. Also in the ensemble are the gbùng-gbùng drummer, who gives the ensemble a steady background beat, vocal soloists, dancers and the audience, which may also act as a chorus. A performance incorporates not only music sound, but also intermittent pauses during which the performance is explained or commented on, and token gifts are presented to performers with elaborate speeches.

The phases of a Kpelle performance are coordinated by many cues. The master drummer plays specific rhythmic patterns that cue dancers to execute particular choreographic movements and gives other players cues for tempo, coordination or dynamics. The vocal soloist may also signal to the ensemble that she wants a pause in the music, by inserting certain verbal phrases in her melodic line. Herzog has reported that among the Jabo a musical phrase is played to mock a dancer who stumbles or falls,

Fêli (goblet drum) and gbùng-gbùng (double-head cylindrical drum) of the Kpelle people in a pêlee and another phrase to indicate the end of a musical segment.

Music is performed on various occasions. Those connected with the life-cycle include the initiation of young people into the Poro and Sande secret societies. The extent and elaboration of music for a death depends on the age and status of the deceased. But birth and marriage are relatively minor musical occasions among most Liberian peoples. Music-making may also relate to the annual cycle. It is especially prominent after the rice harvest and on such holidays as Liberian Independence Day, 26 July. Music is performed for cooperatives working on clearing the bush, planting and harvesting. The full moon often coincides with musical entertainment. Social occasions such as games may incorporate music. In the games played by Jabo men, gossip, anecdotes and nicknames are communicated by xylophone playing, with the meaning veiled so that only a few understand the signalling.

Masked dancers appear at various musical occasions. The Kpelle have a masked dancer who is the public manifestation of the Poro and is known as gbetû. The Mano and Gio have a masked dancer on stilts whose face is covered with a black net and who dances for entertainment or in honour of distinguished guests. The Mano also have a masked clown dancer (domia) who carries a rope and pretends to beat those who cannot sing; he tries to show them how to sing, but is himself incompetent.

3. Musical instruments. The Kpelle and Gio divide instruments into two categories: blown (Kpelle fée) and struck (Kpelle ygále). Instrument names within Kpelle ensembles sometimes reflect their social organization. For instance, in an ensemble of three hand-held slit idiophones, the largest and therefore lowest pitched is kóno-lee ('mother kóno'), the medium-sized kóno-sama ('middle kóno') and the smallest kóno-long ('child kóno').

The Liberian peoples also have names for the various pitch registers of the instruments. The Jabo use the terms ke (a small bird with a high-pitched voice) and dolo (a larger bird) to distinguish higher from lower pitches. By compounding these terms with the words for 'large' and 'small', the Jabo designate four pitch registers for a variety of instruments. The Kpelle, with some variation in terminology, designate strings or other individual parts of instruments by the sound they produce. On one pluriarc the strings, in ascending pitch order, are named as follows: ǹee, 'the mother'; ǹee ǹóng, 'the mother's child'; ǹee ǹóng ǹgo ǹóng, 'the mother's child's child'; nêyge, 'the younger sibling' (of the third string); ǹóng, 'the child' (of the fourth string); ǹóng, 'the child' (of the fifth string); gbe-ngâ, 'end'. Many Liberian instruments have, in addition to the timbre of the basic instrument, a metallic rattle consisting of loose metal pieces often attached to drums, lamellophones, struck idiophones and chordophones.

Membranophones include goblet and conical single-headed drums, hourglass and cylindrical double-headed drums and footed drums. Master drummers beat the goblet drum (Kpelle fêli) or the conical drum (Vai samgba) with the hands, both drums having laced skins and attached metal rattles. The Hourglass drum (Kpelle danîng; Mano tama; Gio dama) is also widespread in Liberia. The player uses a hooked stick and can produce a wide range of glides. A cylindrical, stick-beaten drum (Vai gbemgbem; Kpelle gbùng-gbùng) usually provides the ensemble with a steady rhythmic background. Large footed drums, 2 to 4·5 metres long, have been reported among the Gio, Jabo and Mano. When the drums are exceptionally large, platforms may be built in order to play them. Among the Jabo, the large footed drum has the honorary title of 'God's wife' and is the official signalling instrument of the village.

Idiophones are struck, plucked and shaken. Struck idiophones include slit-drums, xylophones, pieces of iron and the glass bottles that have occasionally replaced the iron percussion idiophones. Slit-drums are of two types. The first is a relatively large wooden drum played horizontally (Kpelle kéleng). Among the Jabo such drums have single slits, the lips of varying thicknesses producing different pitches; among the Mano and Gio they have one or two longitudinal slits. Where there are two slits, the tone produced in the area between them is known as the 'son's piping voice'; the lower tone of the outer lip is the 'mother's resonant response'. A drum with a single slit has a 'man's voice only'. The Jabo use these instruments for dance performances, to send messages and to organize meetings of local policing groups. Praise titles may be incorporated into these performances. The second type of slit-drum is a smaller bamboo or wooden idiophone (Kpelle kóno) held vertically and played in ensembles when the bush is being cleared for rice farms. Among the Kpelle, tortoise-shells are also played as slit idiophones in the Sande women's secret society.

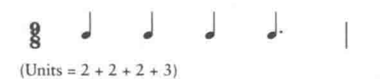
Xylophones (Gio blande; Kpelle bala; Mano balau) are found throughout Liberia and often consist of free logs resting on banana stalks. They are played by boys on rice farms to drive away birds, and are used for signalling. Lamellophones appear in several varieties. One has seven to nine lamellae with a hemispherical gourd or enamel bowl resonator (Kpelle gbelee). It is played as a solo instrument, the player also singing. A larger two- or three-tongued instrument with a box resonator is known as a kónggoma or kongoma (see SIERRA LEONE, §1 and fig.3) among the Vai and Kpelle, as a bonduma among the Gola. It usually accompanies a vocal ensemble that may also include other instruments. Shaken idiophones, which include basket rattles and gourd rattles with external networks of beads, are played chiefly by women. Dancers often wear leg rattles of seed-pods or bells.

Chordophones include the triangular frame zither, the pluriarc and the musical bow. The triangular frame zither (Kpelle konîng) consists of eight or nine strings spanning the triangular wooden frame. The strings are tuned by moving them up or down the frame to change their tension. An attached half-gourd resting on the player's chest acts as a resonator. Melodic motifs played by this instrument may illustrate an implied text depicting, for instance, a leopard stalking prey or women sowing rice seed. The pluriarc (Kpelle gbegbetele) has piassava bows attached to a round gourd resonator. Metal or rattan strings are stretched across each bow, which has metal rattles attached to its underside. The musical bow (Kpelle gbong-kpala) is played by striking the string with a stick held in one hand, while the other hand stops the lower end of the string at various points. The mouth encircles the string at the upper end, without touching it, to amplify the sound.

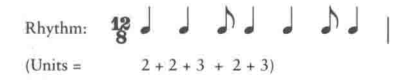
Side-blown horns (Kpelle túru) made of wood, ivory or horn are the most common aerophones. They are played in ensembles of four to six horns using hocket technique and voice disguise. Horns are also used in signalling. Globular pottery flutes are used in the secret society for creating the Poro spirit's voice.



4. MAIN MUSICAL STYLES. Melody is generally syllabic and percussive. Ostinato is common, appearing as short, repeated melodic patterns either to accompany a more extended melody or in combination to form a complex ostinato, the patterns of which may be simultaneous, alternating or overlapping. In the latter case, for instance in bush-cleaning songs, hocketing sometimes also occurs. A striking example of hocket occurs in the music of side-blown horn ensembles: in a typical group of four to six horns, each instrument plays only one or two notes of the melody. Melody sometimes approaches a type of recitative that reflects the rhythm, pitches and nuances of speech. The storyteller of a chantefable uses recitative during the musical sections of the story. Vocal glissandos and other melodic devices suggest subtleties of speech. Phonemic pitches in these tone languages do not completely govern melodic pitches, or even melodic direction, although speech tone is clearly reflected in the music, especially at semantically crucial points.

The range of pitches used in Liberian music varies and may include five, six, seven or more notes. Performance is frequently focussed within a pentachord, the voice or instrument shifting from one pentachord to another. The Kpelle have songs that use a pentatonic scale within an octave. This includes a minor 3rd, which is often closer to a major 2nd, implying a tendency towards isotonicism. However, there also appear to be 3rds and 2nds of various sizes, including neutral ones.

Both instrumental and vocal polyphony are important in Liberian music. Of the various harmonic intervals used, 3rds, 4ths, 5ths and 6ths are prominent. Parallel 4ths may form opening or closing patterns on the lamellophone or triangular frame zither. Contrapuntal motion is prominent in songs with an overlapping complex ostinato. Herzog described canonic xylophone songs, performed by two men, with the form built on repetition, imitation and transposition.



Much of the music is based on rhythms of unequal beats, as in ex.1, and thus belongs to a broad stylistic area extending through parts of Africa, the Middle East, Mediterranean Europe and India. An idiophonic accompaniment to a pluriarc entertainment song has a 12/8 pattern shown in ex.2, also composed of unequal beats.

Ex.1 Metre of Kpelle chantefable; rec. and transcr. R. Stone

Ex.2 Idiophonic accompaniment to pluriarc song; rec. and transcr. R. Stone

This rhythmic pattern appears in a fêli (goblet drum) signal pattern of the Kpelle, where the mnemonic syllables name a bird by imitating its voice.

Performances are typically by ensembles rich in contrasting timbres: voices, drums, rattles and metal idiophones. Entries are usually staggered, giving an accumulation of textures. The metal rattles attached to many instruments add variety to the timbre. Horn players and singers delight in voice disguise to produce animal and bird imitations. Master drummers playing membranophones imitate the sound of a slit-drum or other drums to demonstrate their skill. They even imitate the sound of side-blown horns with their voices, placing their mouths close to the drumhead for resonance.

Men sing primarily in the upper vocal register, women in the lower. Both mostly use mouth resonance. There is some tightness in vocal production, which is pronounced in the men's voices when they sing bush-clearing songs. Tempo in all music is quite fast. Responsorial singing is widespread. The Kpelle call the soloist ngulei-sîyge-nuu ('song raiser') and the chorus the faama-nuai ('answering people'). Litany and strophic forms are both prominent, a variation being the narrative chantefable with recurring musical chorus and narrated story verses.

In every aspect of Liberian musical style, there appears to be logic and consistency amid variety and richness. But further detailed research is needed to understand this logic more fully as it is perceived and ordered by Liberian musicians and audiences.

5. MODERN DEVELOPMENTS. In addition to the music of the indigenous peoples, mention must be made of the two other types of music, neither of which has been studied extensively. The music of settler descendants has been explored by Agnes von Ballmoos, who studied the Johnsonville Singers, a group organized in the early 1950s. They perform chiefly religious music, and their songs bear some relationship to spirituals. She has also discussed the Greenwood Singers, a group with a mainly secular repertory; it was founded in 1949 and recorded that year by Alberts, but no longer exists. The music of both the Johnsonville and Greenwood Singers draws heavily on Western rhythmic, melodic and harmonic styles. The urban popular music reflects aspects of HIGHLIFE, jazz and American popular music, as well as indigenous music. It is important in Monrovia and is increasingly widespread elsewhere. Kru sailors introduced the palm wine guitar style in ports from Sierra Leone to Fernando Po. This guitar style featured a two-finger picking style and flourished particularly up to the 1950s.

The civil war that began in late 1988 brought major disruption in everyday life and musical performance. Nevertheless, as the tension leading up to the war built throughout the country, powerful songs of protest provided opposition to the repression and abuse that was experienced by the Liberian people. Veiled song texts expressed the feelings on the people on many occasions.

6. RESEARCH. The earliest written accounts of music in Liberia are contained in the observations of 19th-century explorers, missionaries and scholars. On a journey in 1868, Benjamin Anderson observed a chief travelling from Totaquella to Boporu accompanied by an entourage of praise-singing musicians playing drums, horns and an iron percussion idiophone. Johann Büttikofer, who began his travels in 1879, described music and dance performances and included drawings of drums, rattles, a sanza (lamellophone) and a triangular frame zither. The first detailed ethnomusicological work was George Herzog's study of Jabo music in south-east Liberia (1930, published 1934), which focussed on signalling music and the relationships between language and music. In later literature, Warren d'Azevedo has been concerned with the behaviour of musicians, dancers and other artists in Gola society, and with Gola aesthetic concepts. Bai T. Moore has described categories of songs in Liberian music, and Agnes von Ballmoos has examined music of the descendants of the 19th-century settlers.

Films and recordings of musical performances date from the 1920s. In 1923 H. Schomburgk made a silent film of dance in women's secret society rituals; Paul Germann filmed Gbande masked and stilt dances (1928, 1929). Early recordings include Herzog's 226 cylinder recordings of Jabo music (1930) and Robert Morey's recordings (1935) of Loma, Gbande and Mandingo music. Packard L. Okie, an Episcopalian missionary, collected music in various places (1947–54). Arthur Alberts, on his 1949 West African recording trip, collected music of the Loma and Mano, of the Fanti community on Marshall Island and songs in Monrovia from the community descended from settlers.

Hans G. Himmelheber made six extended ethnographic research trips to Liberia and Côte d'Ivoire (1949–65), during which he recorded Gio, Krahn and Mano music; many of his short research films include sound recordings of musical performances. Leo Sarkisian and Bai T. Moore (under-secretary of information and cultural affairs for Liberia) travelled extensively throughout Liberia in 1965–6 and collected a wide variety of music.

Detailed ethnographic studies of musical practices among the Kpelle, Kru, and Vai were carried out in the 1980s and 90s. Lester Monts documented the changes in musical practice brought about by Islamic influences in a Vai village, and Cynthia Schmidt explored the music of Kru mariners living in Liberia and other West African countries. Ruth Stone studied aspects of music events, particularly rhythm and temporal considerations among the Kpelle.

Many field recordings made in Liberia have been deposited at the Archives of Traditional Music, Indiana University, Bloomington. Films incorporating music and dance performance are available in the Institut für den Wissenschaftlichen Film, Göttingen.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GEWM, ii ('Kru Mariners and Migrants of the West African Cost', C. Schmidt; 'Islam in Liberia', L. Monts)
B.J.K. Anderson: Narrative of a Journey to Musardu, the Capital of the Western Mandingoes (New York, 1870), 31
J. Büttikofer: Reisebilder aus Liberia, ii (Leiden, 1890), 334ff
H.H. Johnston: Liberia (London, 1906)
D. Westermann: Die Kpelle: ein Negerstamm in Liberia (Göttingen, 1921), 34, 47, 286
M.J. Herskovits: 'Kru Proverbs', Journal of American Folklore, xliii (1930), esp. 259, 269 [transcr. by G. Herzog of two Kru melodies]
R.P. Strong, ed.: The African Republic of Liberia and the Belgian Congo, i (Cambridge, MA, 1930), 64ff, 90
P. Germann: 'Musik', Die Völkerstämme im Norden von Liberia (Leipzig, 1933), 62
G. Herzog: 'Speech-Melody and Primitive Music', MQ, xx (1934), 452–66
G. Herzog: 'Drum-Signaling in a West African Tribe', Word, i (1945), 217
G. Schwab: 'Tribes of the Liberian Hinterland', Papers of the Peabody Museum of American Archeology and Ethnology, xxxi (1947), 149, 270
G. Herzog: 'Canon in West African Xylophone Melodies', JAMS, ii (1949), 196–7
G.W. Harley: 'Masks as Agents of Social Control in Northeast Liberia', Papers of the Peabody Museum of American Archeology and Ethnology, xxxii/2 (1950), 3–41
P.L. Okie: disc notes, Folk Music of Liberia, FE 4465 (1954)
H. and U. Himmelheber: Die Dan: ein Bauernvolk im westafrikanischen Urwald (Stuttgart, 1958)
W.L. d'Azevedo: 'Some Historical Problems in the Delineation of a Central West Atlantic Region', Annals of the New York Academy of Sciences, xcvi (1962), 512
A.N. von Ballmoos: 'Liberian Music', Liberian Research Association Journal, iii/2 (1970), 30
B.T. Moore: 'Categories of Traditional Liberian Songs', Liberian Studies Journal, ii (1970), 117
R.M. and V.L. Stone: disc notes, Music of the Kpelle of Liberia, FE 4385 (1970)
H. Zemp: Musique Dan: la musique dans la pensée et la vie sociale d'une société africaine (Paris, 1971)
A.N. von Ballmoos: The Role of Folksongs in Liberian Society (diss., Indiana U., 1975)
R.M. Stone: Let the Inside be Sweet: the Interpretation of Music Events among the Kpelle of Liberia (Bloomington, IN, 1982)
R.M. Stone: Dried Millet Breaking: Time, Words, and Song in the Woi Epic of the Kpelle(Bloomington, IN, 1988)
R.M. Stone: 'Travelling Home: Music, Politics, and the Commemoration of a Life', Five Windows on Africa (Bloomington, IN, 2000) [CD ROM]

RUTH M. STONE

Libero Castro, Heinricus de. Composer, possibly identifiable with HEINRICH LAUFENBERG.

Libert, Gualterius [Liberti, Gualtero] (fl 1423–8). French composer. A work of his in GB-Ob Can.misc.213 is dated 1423; whether this is the date of composition or of copying is unknown. 'Gualtero Liberti' received four florins as a singer (tenth on the list) in the papal chapel in 1428. No link is known between Gualterius and Reginaldus Libert. The opinion that Gualterius was the same man as the English composer Walter Frye is no longer accepted.

Three works are known to be his: Se je me plains, Belle, plaissant plus que nulle autre née/Puisque je sui and De tristresse, de dueil. All appear uniquely in GB-Ob 213, where the last carries a date.

He is evidently not to be identified with CLEMENT LIEBERT.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.X. Haberl: 'Wilhelm du Fay', VMw, i (1885), 397–530, esp. 456; repr. as Bausteine für Musikgeschichte, i (Leipzig, 1885/R), 60

G. Reaney, ed.: Early Fifteenth-Century Music, CMM, xi/2 (1959), 90–93 [complete edn.]

TOM R. WARD

Libert, Reginaldus [Liebert] (*fl c*1425–35). French composer. He is sometimes identified with a Reginaldus who was magister puerorum in Cambrai in 1424. Stylistically his works belong to the period around 1430. The most interesting of these is the Marian mass (in I-TRmp 92). It resembles the Missa Sancti Jacobi of Du Fay in including settings of both Ordinary and Proper. All the movements except the Gloria and Credo are based on an ornamented form of the appropriate chant melody. Musical unification is achieved through the use of similar mensuration patterns throughout.

Two rondeaux are attributed to him in GB-Ob can.misc.213, Mourir me voy and Mon cuer s'en va. Both are set for three voices, with only the highest voice texted. He also wrote a four-voice Kyrie (in I-TRmp 92). (All his works are ed. in CMM, xi/3, 1966, pp.62–96.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. von Ficker: 'Die Kolorierungstechnik der Trienter Messen,' SMw, vii (1920), 5–47

E.H. Sparks: Cantus Firmus in Mass and Motet, 1420–1520 (Berkeley, 1963), esp. 403–7

TOM R. WARD

Liberti, Gualtero. See LIBERT, GUALTERIUS.

Liberti [van Groeninghen], Henricus [Hendrik] (*b c*1610; d Antwerp, 1669). Dutch composer and organist. He may have been the choirboy from 's-Hertogenbosch, the son of a Libertus van Groeninghen, who was employed at Antwerp Cathedral in 1617. He was certainly in service there by 1620 and was organist from 17 March 1628 to 1669 in succession to John Bull. Only his cantiones natalitiae survive enough to be studied; they are homophonic carols on Dutch texts in a strophic binary form. Liberti's portrait, painted by Anthony van Dyck about 1630, exists in at least eight copies and was also engraved. Its popularity may have been due to its suitability as a prototype for 'the exalted artist'.

WORKS

Paduanes et galiardes, 6 insts (Antwerp, 1632), lost
1 or more masses in Fasciculus missarum (Antwerp, 1640), lost
2 cantiones natalitiae, 4 vv, bc, 1648–52, inc.
6 cantiones natalitiae, 4–8 vv, bc, 1650–57, inc.; 3 ed. in EMN, xiii (1981)
6 cantiones natalitiae, 4–5 vv, bc, 1651–3, inc.
TeD, 1635, lost, mentioned in Antwerp Cathedral account books
Song, in Vermaeckelycke Duytsche liedekens (Antwerp, 1663), inc.

Other vocal compositions in 1634[2], 1648[2], 1650[7], 1651[3]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Noske: 'The Cantiones natalitiae', Essays in Musicology: a Birthday Offering for Willi Apel, ed. H. Tischler (Bloomington, IN, 1968), 123–30

R.A. Rasch: 'Henricus Liberti, organist van de Onze-Lieve-Vrouwe-Kerk te Antwerpen (1628–1669)', Visitatio organorum: Feestbundel voor Maarten Albert Vente, ed. A. Dunning (Buren, 1980), 507–18

R.A. Rasch: De cantiones natalitiae en het kerkelijke muziekleven in de Zuidelijke Nederlanden gedurende de zeventiende eeuw (Utrecht, 1985)

RUDOLF A. RASCH

Liberti, Vincenzo (b ?Spoleto; fl 1598–1609). Italian composer and organist. He was organist of Spoleto Cathedral from 1598 to about 1600, and he is probably the 'Don Vincenzo' who was maestro di cappella there in 1602–3; in the latter position he appears to have succeeded Antonio Liberti 'da Todi', who may have been his brother. The dedication to Cardinal Scipione Borghese of Liberti's Il primo libro de madrigali (Venice, 1608) for five voices was signed by G.A. Campelli and refers to the works therein being performed in a musical salon in Spoleto sponsored by Oddo Cecilio. The dedication to Cardinal Maffeo Barberini, Bishop of Spoleto (later Pope Urban VIII), of his Il secondo libro de madrigali (Venice, 1609), also for five voices, was signed by Liberti himself. His choice of texts was ambitious and prompts comparisons with the leading madrigalists of the time, but the music, while technically fluent, scarcely matches their standards.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Fausti: La cappella musicale del duomo di Spoleto (Perugia, 1916)

M.A. Balsano: 'Vincenzo Liberti pseudomadrigalista spoletino', Esercizi, v (1982), 67–97 [incl. edns of 2 madrigals]

TIM CARTER

Liber usualis (Lat.: 'Book of common practice'). The short title of a book first issued by the monks of SOLESMES in 1896, Liber usualis missae et officii pro dominicis et festis duplicibus cum cantu gregoriano ('Book of common practice for Mass and Office for Sundays and double feasts, with Gregorian chant'). It is a compendium, though not comprehensive, of prayers, lessons and chants for the more important services of the Roman Catholic Church as prescribed between the Council of Trent (1545–63) and the Second Vatican Council (1962–5). It includes the kyriale; Mass, Vespers and Compline for Sundays and feast days; Prime, Terce, Sext and None for Sundays and feasts of the First and Second Class; Matins for four festivals – Christmas, Easter, Pentecost and Corpus Christi; Lauds for feasts of the First Class; the liturgy for Holy Week; sundry litanies; and votive Masses.

The Liber usualis represents the culmination of a tendency, particularly noticeable in the Western Church, to combine in one volume for practical use selections from liturgical books hitherto kept separate; such combinations had earlier appeared in the BREVIARY, MISSAL and Anglican Book of Common Prayer. These multipurpose, non-comprehensive volumes differ somewhat from early compendia such as those made for the master-general of the Dominican order, Humbert of Romans, in the 13th century (I-Rss XIV lit.1, GB-Lbl Add.23935), which contain the entire Dominican liturgy: these consist of entire books – the gradual, antiphoner etc. – bound together, rather than of conflated selections like the Liber usualis, and were used during visitations to check the accuracy of local books.

The Liber usualis is not an official Vatican liturgical book, but was nevertheless widely used before the Second Vatican Council. It was frequently reprinted and also appeared in editions with introduction and rubrics in English or French. Although the book became a standard teaching aid in university music departments and in seminaries, its usefulness as a source book for medieval chant is severely limited by the fact that it provides little information about the period and provenance of the chants it contains.

See also LITURGY AND LITURGICAL BOOKS §III.

□

Libin, Laurence (Elliot) (b Chicago, 19 Sept 1944). American organologist and curator. He was educated at Northwestern University, Evanston (BMus 1966), and at King's College, University of London (MMus 1968), studying with Thurston Dart. He then returned to the USA to study for the PhD at Chicago University with Howard Mayer Brown and Edward Lowinsky (1968–71). In 1973 Libin became curator of musical instruments at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, and research curator in 1999. He taught at Ramapo College, New Jersey (1972–3), after which he was concurrently lecturer at Columbia University, the City College of New York and New York University (1974–94). His research interests include the history, construction, iconography and collection of all types of musical instruments.

WRITINGS

with H. Lenneberg: 'Unknown Handel Sources in Chicago', JAMS, xxii (1969), 85–100

'The "Restored" Stradivari and Amati Violins of the Metropolitan Museum of Art', Journal of the Violin Society of America, iv (1977–8), 34–47

Musical Instruments in the Metropolitan Museum (New York, 1978)

with C.A. Hoover and R. Rephann: 'The Role of the Museum in the Conservation and Preservation of Bowed Stringed Instruments', Journal of the Violin Society of America, v (1979), 9–30

'Thomas Appleton and his Organ at the Metropolitan Museum of Art', The Tracker, xxxvii/4 (1982–3), 12–15

'A Rediscovered Portrayal of Rameau and Castor et Pollux', EMc, xi (1983), 510–13

Keynotes: Two Centuries of Piano Design (New York, 1985)

'A Unique Organized Piano from Pennsylvania', Organ Yearbook, xviii (1987), 95–108

'The Eisenbrandt Family Pedigree', Studia organologica: Festschrift für John Henry van der Meer, ed. F. Hellwig (Tutzing, 1987), 335–42

'Folding Harpsichords', EMc, xv (1987), 378–83

'Major Instrument Collections', Ethnomusicology I: an Introduction, ed. H. Myers (London, 1992), 423–43

'John Huber's Pianos in Context', JAMIS, xix (1993), 5–37

'The Instruments', Eighteenth-Century Keyboard Music, ed. R.L. Marshall (New York, 1994), 1–32

'John Huber Revisited', JAMIS, xx (1994), 73–83

Our Tuneful Heritage: American Musical Instruments from the Metropolitan Museum of Art (Provo, UT, 1994)

'The "Lying Harp" and Some Early Square Pianos', Early Keyboard Studies, viii/3 (1994), 1–8

'Organs in American Life', The Organ: King of Instruments, ed. G. Hayes (Easthampton, MA, 1996), 9–17

'Remarks on the 1581 Hans Ruckers Virginal at the Metropolitan Museum of Art', Hans Ruckers (†1598), Stichter van een klavecimbelatelier van wereldformaat in Antwerpen, ed. J. Lambrechts-Douillez (Peer, 1998), 76–84

'Seeking the source of the Gaillard cornemuses', Musique – Images – Instruments, (1998), 168–77

'Preserving Pennsylvania German Instruments', Regional Traditions in Instrument Making: Challenges to the Museum Community, ed. M. Elste (Leipzig and Halle, 1999), 45–9

PAULA MORGAN

Libon, Philippe [Felipe] (b Cádiz, 17 Aug 1775; d Paris, 5 Feb 1838). Spanish violinist and composer. For six years he studied in London with Viotti, with whom he appeared in concerts. He studied composition with Cimador and subsequently held positions as court violinist at Lisbon (1796), Madrid (1798) and Paris (1800), where he worked until his death, in the service of the empresses Josephine and, from 1810, Marie-Louise. His compositions include six violin concertos, trios for two violins and cello, violin duos, variations and 30 caprices for solo violin.

GUY BOURLIGUEUX

Libraries. This article provides a survey of institutional libraries containing source materials of Western music. It does not deal with libraries of recorded sound, with privately owned libraries, with collections of instruments, or in a substantive way with collections of non-Western or traditional materials (which are referred to in entries on the cultures concerned). See also ARCHIVES AND MUSIC; COLLECTIONS, PRIVATE; INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MUSIC INFORMATION CENTRES; SOUND ARCHIVES; INSTRUMENTS, COLLECTIONS OF.

For a comprehensive list of LIBRARIES see volume 28.

1. DEFINITION. The English term 'library', related to the Latin liber for book (the words in most Western languages, Fr. bibliothèque, Ger. Bibliothek and It. biblioteca, derive from the Greek biblos for book and thēku for container), generally stands for a collection or repository of books. In contradistinction, an archive (often used in the plural) is defined as an organized body of records, often of an official or governmental nature, or the place where they are stored (see ARCHIVES AND MUSIC). Achives (in the first sense) may equally well be included in the holdings of libraries; similarly, many institutions bearing the title 'archive' include not only official records but also material more directly musical in nature (e.g. letters or contracts concerning musicians, as well as manuscript or printed compositions), and they are included in the discussion here. Even the term 'music library', which could long be taken to refer specifically and restrictively to a collection of music and books about music, encompasses a much more diversified group of materials, with their accompanying equipment.

2. EARLY HISTORY. Little is known about early music libraries: in part because so little is known of the early history of libraries in general, and in part because it is not known whether early libraries contained music (although recent research suggests that some did). Music libraries as separate entities or separate departments of large libraries did not appear until the late 18th century, but music can be found in libraries from a much earlier date.

Among the earliest known libraries was the collection of cuneiform tablets assembled in the 7th century BCE at Nineveh by King Ashurbanipal for the education of his subjects. It contained religious texts and histories as well as other documents. Similar collections of tablets, from Assur (9th century BCE) and Tell Harmal, have been thought to contain musical notation. Richard Crocker had drawn attention to what may be music on a tablet from Ras Shamra (*c*1800 BCE). These would, if correctly interpreted, confirm that some of these early libraries held musical documents.

Libraries were cultivated in both Greek and Roman cultures, particularly in the former, when the library at Alexandria was perhaps the most extensive collection in antiquity. Although it probably included writings on music, there is no positive evidence that it did so, and most of the collection was destroyed during the Roman campaign of 47 BCE. While such collections were either universal collections or were based on the works of the principal authors, their successors in medieval times, the monastic libraries, were concerned primarily to collect sacred texts, commentaries on the scriptures or patristic writings. Thus few secular manuscripts were preserved in them. Despite this – and the fact that they were generally closed institutions, the contents read and copied only by members of the monastery – they were the guardians of Western culture. Early libraries and archives almost certainly contained documents on musicians and theoretical writings, a hypothesis supported by the widely documented connection between theoretical music and the sciences of the Quadrivium, by the equally general theories as to the ethical and physical virtues of music, and by the place of music in the seven liberal arts.

Three medieval scholars in particular are often cited, both for their encouragement of libraries and for their encyclopedic knowledge. Cassiodorus (*d c*580), Boethius (*d c*524) and Isidore of Seville (d 636) all published comprehensive works which included large sections on music. Cassiodorus's Institutiones was important in transmitting musical theory, and the Etymologiae of Isidore (who owned one of the richest libraries of his time, some of it still extant at the University of Madrid) defined many musical terms, especially those used in connection with the liturgy. Other famous continental monastic libraries came into existence about this time, often through the work of Irish monks under the leadership of St Columba.

Particularly important for music is that at St Gallen (founded 614) because of the concern for Gregorian chant and for musical theory expressed by its leaders (e.g. Notker, d 912, and Notker Labeo, d 1022). The monastery was famous for its scriptorium, and the collection there still includes among its important holdings of practical and theoretical music 20 volumes of the 9th to 12th centuries with neumatic notation, some of them Irish in origin. The monastery at Fulda, founded by the English, developed a famous scriptorium, library and school of chant, although little of the library survived the Thirty Years War. Charlemagne, through his efforts to establish the general adoption of Roman chant, founded reading schools and made provision for advanced education at cathedral schools (Lyons, Orléans) or monastic schools (Tours, Corbie, Metz) with associated scriptoria. Rome remained an important centre for manuscripts as late as 855, but the collection seems to have passed into disuse soon after; apparently it was destroyed during the 14th century, so it is not known whether it contained music.

In the Byzantine Empire similar patterns of development can be traced, beginning with the important collection established by Constantine the Great. Musical studies flourished, particularly in St Sabas during the 8th century and later at the Studium monastery in Constantinople. Among the existing monastic libraries, there are important musical collections at St Catherine, at the foot of Mount Sinai, and in the 20 monasteries of Mount Athos. The function of Islam and Arab libraries in disseminating the culture of the Eastern Empire through western Europe, and particularly Spain, should not be underestimated. Toledo, for example, which boasted a famous choir school at the cathedral, had one of the most famous scriptoria in Spain, from which Latin translations of Arabic works, many descended from Greek thinking and often including musical philosophy, spread throughout Europe.

3. TYPES. Although some of the information provided in this discussion reappears in the entries on individual institutions, it is here placed in a more general setting, providing an overview of the subject. It may serve to remind those seeking source material of the broad range of avenues open for their exploration.

(i) Monasteries. Among the earliest collections known to have music were the libraries of monasteries. During the late Middle Ages some monastery collections fell into neglect or were ravaged by war or insurrection; others avoided or overcame such disasters and grew in importance and wealth. Among the latter were many of the Benedictine order, which retained among its tenets rules for the organization, cataloguing and enlargement of their libraries and their performing repertory. Important Benedictine collections included Monte Cassino (the principal abbey, founded 529), St Germain (590), St Gallen (614), Metz (662), St Peter in Salzburg (700), St Emmeram in Regensburg (739; since suppressed), St Martial in Limoges (848, dissolved in 1771), Montserrat (888), Einsiedeln (934) and Göttweig (1070). Archives of mendicant orders, although tending to exclude secular music, also had sizable collections as at Assisi (Franciscan), Bologna (Dominican), El Escorial, Klosterneuburg and St Victor in Paris (Augustinian). The Jesuit order, not founded until 1539, differed from other mendicant orders in its special cultivation of school-drama, particularly during the era of the Counter-Reformation: somewhere between a Singspiel and an opera, these plays were performed by students, sometimes with professional musicians, in both the vernacular and Latin. Unfortunately only a small proportion of scores and librettos survived the order's suppression in 1773 by Pope Clement XIV. (E. Tittel, Österreichische Kirchenmusik, 1961, discusses early musical treasures of Austrian monasteries and contemporary evidence concerning their libraries.)

A wave of suppression and secularization of religious houses swept through Europe, beginning in the 1530s with Henry VIII's abolitions and continuing until the Swiss persecutions of 1838–47. The motives were often economic gain or the issue of state supremacy, but sometimes such movements as agnosticism, materialism or rationalism provided the incentive.

Despite the loss of many treasures, numerous books survived because governments provided for the distribution of religious libraries among public institutions, where many still remain. During the French Revolution, for example, the libraries of émigrés and the condemned were added to those of religious houses to form the biens nationaux (national property) – an elaborate scheme both saving the libraries and using their books for the instruction of the uneducated; it involved the establishment of regional distribution depots, a plan for uniform cataloguing and a national union catalogue, but it eventually had to be abandoned (see P. Riberette, Les bibliothèques françaises pendant la Révolution, 1970). It is nevertheless to this type of programme that we owe the survival of many important theoretical treatises, liturgical works and other genres of music still being discovered in unlikely corners of municipal libraries, particularly in France, Italy and Spain. Some monasteries, especially in Austria, Italy and Spain, have been restored to their orders, and the care of books and music once more undertaken by the monks (e.g. St Florian, St Peter at Salzburg, El Escorial, Montserrat, Monte Oliveto, Subiaco and S Maria del Monte near Cesena). The last three are support given by the Italian government as national monuments.

(ii) Cathedrals. From the 10th century onwards, cathedral libraries gradually became more important than those of monasteries. The former were usually closer to the centres of population and more often were linked with schools for the training of priests and for secular education. Their book collections tended to be broader in content, more modern and better organized. In addition, as headquarters for bishops or archbishops, cathedrals often maintained trained performers to provide the service music. From these origins, and often from the personal possessions of the attached musicians, important musical archives remain in many cathedrals (e.g. Aachen, Bologna, Cologne, Évora, Faenza, Florence, Milan, Salzburg and Tarragona). Non-Catholic cathedrals similarly own valuable music collections (e.g. Canterbury, Durham and Worcester). Some rich collections of cathedral music have been incorporated into governmental archives, or were during socialist rule (e.g. the many works from the Prague Loreta Cathedral, now in the State Archive in Žitenice, and the neumed manuscript of the Metropolitan Cathedral deposited in the Zagreb National Library).

(iii) Other ecclesiastical institutions. Interesting music collections often belong to parish and diocesan churches and offices: for example Pfarramt St Peter in Görlitz, Diözesanarchiv in St Pölten, the Proske Library in the Bischöfliche Zentralbibliothek in Regensburg (belonging to the Bischöfliches Ordinariat) and the Bistumsarchiv in Trier. Others may belong to church music societies (St Gregoriusvereeniging, Utrecht), to seminaries (Bischöfliches Priesterseminar, Münster; Grand Séminaire, Strasbourg; Seminario Maggiore, Aosta), to the archives of particular orders or denominations (Brüder-Unität, Herrnhut; Biblioteca Oratoriana, Naples), to chapter or bishopric archives kept in or close to cathedrals (Cuenca, Granada, Lisbon, Modena, Piacenza), to museum libraries, of which many are also attached to cathedrals (Évora, St Ambrose in Milan), and to schools of sacred music (Pontificio Istituto di Musica Sacra, Rome; Institut Supérieur de Musique Liturgique, Paris).

(iv) Universities. The 12th century saw the rise of the first universities, formed from loosely-knit groups of students attached to faculties (e.g. Bologna, Montpellier, Oxford and Paris). For many years the separate colleges or nations maintained their own libraries, each with its own organization, rules and subject emphases; outsiders were usually permitted to use the books. Central university libraries began to appear two centuries later. Oxford, after several false starts, finally centralized in 1411, and Cambridge in 1415. At Prague the Charles University formed a central library soon after its founding in 1348, and before the end of the century Coimbra, Kraków and Orleans had university libraries. With over 50 individual college and school libraries, Paris did not form a central library until the 19th century, basing it on the Sorbonne nucleus.

In addition to works donated by members of the university community and those acquired from defunct monasteries, universities have often received gifts from kings, nobles, bishops and other collectors, and holdings have been increased with the help of endowments and the exchange of duplicates with other libraries. G. Pietzsch (Zur Pflege der Musik an den deutschen Universitäten bis zur Mitte des 16. Jahrhunderts, 1971) discusses early holdings of musical material at the universities of Prague (*c*1370), Heidelberg (1396–1432), Erfurt (1412), Cologne (1474–94) and Greifswald (*c*1482); at Trier University (founded in 1473), students may have had to use books from the abbey and cathedral (Pietzsch could locate no early library inventory). In countries where historic geographical divisions have prevented establishment of a single national library, large regional or city libraries have merged with university libraries in function and administration (e.g. the Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek in Frankfurt, the Dessau Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek and the Öffentliche Bibliothek of the Universität Basel). In smaller countries, university libraries have sometimes merged with state libraries (e.g. Lisbon, Oslo and Brno). In countries requiring more than one example for copyright deposit, additional copies are usually designated for universities (e.g. Oxford, Cambridge, and Trinity College, Dublin; for fuller discussion, see COPYRIGHT).

Today university libraries often have strong research collections to facilitate the work of their faculty and graduate students. They continue to acquire the libraries of scholars and to serve as archives for composers and performers.

(v) National libraries. These are a special class of library which are generally responsible for acquiring, cataloguing and maintaining copies of the national bibliographic output and preparing the national bibliography. Much of the stock is acquired through copyright deposit (the legal protection granted to composers and authors in their creative work) or legal deposit (the requirement that copies of works either protected by copyright or published in the country be filed with the national bibliographic agency). These institutions are usually the central governmental libraries, whatever the form of government: e.g. the royal libraries of Belgium, Denmark or Sweden, or the National Diet Library in Japan and the Library of Congress in the USA. Regardless of their present titles, they are often descended from collections maintained by ruling houses for the use of their families, their chapels, their private theatres or other musical establishments (Lisbon, Madrid, Paris and Vienna). In some instances a national museum rather than a library houses the central music collection (e.g. The Hague Gemeentemuseum, Prague National Museum, London British Museum – given autonomy from the museum under the title British Library in 1973 and separated physically in the late 1990s). The music divisions of national libraries are almost always administered as separate departments or divisions. Some divisions are separated physically from other departments (Paris, Vienna) but most are in the same building. The most prolific source for the building of national collections is material received on obligatory deposit

Some national libraries have become their country's national RISM centres (see RÉPERTOIRE INTERNATIONAL DES SOURCES MUSICALES). Many have maintained central union catalogues of music holdings throughout the country; some assist small libraries that lack qualified personnel for the proper cataloguing of music and retain photocopies of unique items held in remote areas of the country. Several national centres have issued series of printed catalogues of the country's important music collections (e.g. Italy and Poland). Some socialist countries instituted centralizing of collections, with increasing numbers of ecclesiastical and private collections being absorbed into national libraries, where they are more easily available to users and where trained personnel are available to catalogue and care for the treasures. Since the breakup of the Eastern bloc many of these collections have been reclaimed by their former owners, although not all are willing to undertake the expense of administering this material.

(vi) Public libraries. Collections open to the public have existed in Europe for at least four centuries. They were originally established by social, religious, commercial or benevolent societies and were limited in appeal and access. Probably the earliest of those supported directly by cities were the council libraries or Ratsbüchereien of 14th-century Germany. Like the others mentioned, it was in fact used mainly by the 'Bürger' class of established citizens, although theoretically open to all.

Two factors were chiefly responsible for the development on a much broader scale of truly public libraries: the invention of printing in the late 15th century, and the social, cultural and religious changes brought about by the Reformation in the early 16th. Despite the positive influence of Luther's 1524 appeal to German mayors, urging them to spare no pains to procure good libraries in large cities, negative forces were at work and reformist zeal caused the destruction of thousands of European monastery libraries. Among the earliest municipal libraries were several in Germany – at Nuremberg (founded 1429), Ulm (1516) and Magdeburg (1525). City halls in other countries had small reference libraries or collections (often little used) received as gifts or taken over from monasteries; but the first real advance towards the more general availability of library facilities occurred during the French Revolution, when public libraries received the possessions of clergy and nobility. But the circulating public library used freely by a broad segment of the population is a phenomenon of the late 19th century and the 20th. Commercial music lending libraries operated by publishers or music dealers made music materials available to subscribers at reasonable rates in many cities in Europe and the United States before the advent of the public lending library.

In the modern municipal or regional public library, music usually forms a part of much broader circulating holdings serving the musical needs of the local population. Some music collections are run as semi-autonomous departments, physically separate from other branches; several have become famous for their research collections (e.g. Civica Biblioteca Musicale Andrea della Corte in Turin, Henry Watson Music Library in Manchester, Musikbibliothek in the Leipzig city system and the New York Public Library of the Performing Arts, although the Research Division is supported by endowments and not the municipal government). Besides government support for administration and growth, these institutions frequently have to depend on gifts from private donors and from commercial, performing or other types of organization (e.g. the library of the Allgemeine Musikgesellschaft in the Zürich Zentralbibliothek, collections of orchestral societies and other performing groups in the public libraries of Milan and Turin, and recordings from the now defunct USA Information Service libraries deposited in various Italian institutions).

Public libraries sometimes serve as repositories for centralizing collections. For instance music from various small parish churches of the area have been deposited at the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek in Munich, where printed catalogues are being prepared. A less typical amalgamation, demonstrating the same trend towards centralization, was the absorption of the former Landesbibliothek in Weimar by the city's Zentralbibliothek in 1969.

(vii) Conservatories. Most conservatory libraries originally had a largely practical function, their collections of music editions and textbooks having been assembled for teaching or performance; over the years such collections have often become historic treasures, forming important research materials in their own right. The foundation of some conservatories, however, in the late 18th and early 19th centuries, coincided with the foundation of libraries, in which earlier sources – representing a national or local musical tradition – were gathered and preserved. Such is the case with Stockholm (founded 1771), Prague (1811), Parma (1818), Madrid (1830), Brussels (1832), Lisbon (1835) and the various institutions of Naples. The Paris Conservatoire, founded in 1784 to train opera singers, formerly held one of the world's richest collections of source material; in 1964 these holdings were transferred to the Music Department of the Bibliothèque Nationale, in the interest of better preservation and public service. In the USA some institutions have combined the roles of the conservatory and university. This has resulted in the development of large libraries that serve the dual needs of performance and research (e.g. at the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester, and the School of Music of Indiana University).

(viii) Music information centres. A relatively new type of music library has developed in the various national music information centres, usually financed by the government, sometimes jointly with the music publishing industry. The centres have as their chief purpose the promotion at home and abroad of their national music (with emphasis generally on contemporary art music), and collect scores, parts, recordings, books, articles, analyses of compositions, interviews and press clippings. (See also INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MUSIC INFORMATION CENTRES.)

(ix) Composers' and performing rights associations. In most countries there exist organizations for the protection of artistic properties and to provide their creators with aid and information concerning copyright, performance and other legal rights. These societies often preserve in their archives letters and contracts concerning composers, as well as autograph manuscripts and early editions of their works. Associations include the Société des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique, founded in Paris in 1851, the Composers Guild of Great Britain, the Society of Norwegian Composers in Oslo, and the Sociedad General de Autores de España in Madrid. Most of these national organizations are banded together within the framework of the international Confédération Internationale de Sociétés d'Auteurs et Compositeurs (CISAC). In some cases the composers' associations are related in function or administration to music information centres. (For fuller discussion, see COPYRIGHT, §II.)

(x) Opera houses. Besides the theatrical collections deposited in governmental libraries, many theatres preserve the documents (scores and orchestral material, librettos, programmes, scenic designs, costumes etc.) of their careers virtually intact in annexed libraries or museums. Among the most valuable are those of the Deutsche Staatsoper in Berlin (now partly in the Stadtmuseum), La Scala in Milan and the Paris Opéra. In Parma the Archivio Storico of the Teatro Regio is kept at the theatre but administered as a section of the city's Biblioteca Municipale.

(xi) Music publishers. Although the archives of some important defunct or reorganized firms have been deposited in public institutions (e.g. Artaria in the Vienna Stadtbibliothek, Peters in the Leipzig Stadtarchiv), long-established firms with long histories have often retained autograph manuscripts of works they have published, their early editions (and sometimes actual printing plates), letters and contracts with composers, or publication records that may supply missing dates or other important data. For some of these houses, catalogues or other descriptive literature concerning earlier periods have been issued: André in Offenbach, Breitkopf & Härtel in Wiesbaden and Leipzig (although some of that collection was dispersed or lost during World War II; various publishers' archives are in the Leipzig Sächsisches Staatsarchiv), the Plantin firm in Antwerp, Ricordi in Milan, LeDuc in Paris, and Schott in Mainz. Some firms whose records are not open to the public are nevertheless prepared to provide information to scholars. Alas, as many of the older firms have merged or gone out of business their valuable archives have been lost or sold off (e.g. Novello). (See entries on individual publishers.)

(xii) Mass media. Broadcasting libraries, which generally preserve both commercial material and their own recordings of broadcast programmes, often have in addition excellent facilities for music reference work as well as collections of manuscripts of unpublished works or arrangements that have been commissioned for particular occasions. Outstanding among these organizations are the BBC in London, the Radio France in Paris, Sveriges Radio in Stockholm, the CBC in Toronto and the German broadcasting companies. In the USA live radio broadcasting of music is the exception rather than the rule, thus they rarely have printed music collections but they often have substantial recording collections. In tune with the prevailing tendency towards centralization, part of the CBS library has passed to the New York Public Library. Through the International Association of Music Libraries, Archives and Documentation Centres (IAML), broadcast librarians are seeking to encourage the mutual exchange of performance materials and recordings as well as cooperative cataloguing of their rich holdings. European broadcasting libraries have much in common with the libraries of major symphony orchestras in Europe and North America.

The scores from motion pictures are generally the property of the studios that produce those films. Increasingly archives from the major movie studios are finding their way from the studios into libraries and archives (e.g. United Artists Corporation including Warner Brothers and RKO in the Wisconsin State Historical Society).

(xiii) Special collections. This category includes a variety of institutions not otherwise catered for. The archives of many such bodies have already been deposited in large libraries, but enough remain to warrant listing here.

(a) Societies for the propagation of a single composer's works. Such centres usually also collect documents concerning the composer's contemporaries. Many of them pursue programmes of research and issue publications (complete works, yearbooks, journals, congress reports); some are intended for staff use rather than for a visiting public, but will usually respond to inquiries. Among the active institutions are the Istituto di Studi Verdiani in Parma, the Joseph-Haydn-Institut in Cologne, the Mozarteum in Salzburg (which is also a conservatory), the Bach-Archiv in Leipzig, the Beethoven-Haus in Bonn and the Museo Donizettiano in Bergamo.

(b) Organizations dedicated to a particular genre or geographical area of musical activity. The Moravian Music Foundation maintains rich libraries at its branches in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Fraternal lodges frequently have small music collections which may be related to their rites or members (e.g. the library of Freemasonry in Washington, DC). Other collections in this category are the William Ransom Hogan Jazz Archive (at Tulane University), the English Folk Dance and Song Society in London and the Institut del Teatre in Barcelona.

(c) Artistic, historical or scholarly societies. These include the following (titles are self-explanatory): American Antiquarian Society in Worcester, Massachusetts, the Academia das Ciências in Lisbon, the Accademia Nazionale Virgiliana di Scienze, Lettere e Arti in Mantua, the Hispanic Society of America in New York, the Literary and Historical Society of Quebec and the Royal Norwegian Scientific Society.

(d) Societies of friends of music or the arts. These organizations sometimes consist solely of a group of persons joined together for promotion or philanthropic purposes. This is often the case in the USA, where associations called 'Friends of the Library' or 'Friends of Music' help support the library with donations or fundraising activities. Such societies may however have a headquarters office and some of these have libraries (e.g. the Academia de Amadores de Música in Lisbon, the Société des Amis des Arts de Strasbourg). The Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde, Vienna, dedicated to the furtherance of music by the establishment of various concert series and a conservatory, justified its name, in 1815, by appealing to 'friends of music' to donate worthwhile musical works in their possession to the society's library. The subsequent gifts of Czerny, Köchel, Brahms and many others testifies to the success of the solicitation.

(e) Museums devoted to topics more or less closely related to music, such as the arts, church history, dance, folklore, general history or instruments, often have valuable music holdings (e.g. the Carolino Augusteum in Salzburg, the Musée Guimet in Paris, the Museum für Geschichte der Stadt Leipzig, the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC, the Victoria and Albert Museum in London and the Museo del Risorgimento in Vicenza).

(xiv) Private libraries. Although private libraries may be available to only a single individual, many of them eventually come into the public domain through gift, purchase or default. Because of the care usually bestowed on the selection of items, private libraries tend to be more homogeneous and complete in their chosen subject areas than other types of collection. Music collectors fall into two main types, the first choosing items with a scholarly purpose or for the sheer joy of collecting, the second with the more immediate, utilitarian aim of having them performed. Some collectors combine both aims. For fuller discussion and a list of important collections, historical and present-day, and information on the present whereabouts of historical collections, see COLLECTIONS, PRIVATE.

4. OTHER FUNCTIONS.

(i) Recordings and sound archives. After World War II many music libraries began adding sound recordings to their collections. In the public library there are now circulating collections of long playing records, sound cassettes, compact discs and video recordings. In academic and conservatory libraries sound and video collections facilitate the teaching and study of an ever broader range of music. Music libraries have been at the forefront in developing systems to facilitate the use of their growing collections of audio-visual materials in a broad range of formats (see SOUND ARCHIVES).

The enormous popularity of recordings and their increased availability to a much broader segment of the population have brought new users to the music library. As recorded music has become a pervasive cultural and recreational interest for a large segment of library users, the demand for information about composers and performers, as well as about such subjects as opera, instruments, acoustics, aesthetics, forms, history, psychology of music, and popular and world music, has intensified. With the rapid technological changes it is clear that changes in how sound is purveyed in libraries will also change. Difficult questions about copyright and fair use must be resolved before a clear picture of these changes can be drawn.

Technological developments have already brought about remarkable changes in access to the holdings of many libraries. The Internet is allowing libraries to provide their users with increased access to a broad but mediated range of resources and increased connectivity. Lists of library catalogues available via the Internet seem to grow daily. The development of cataloguing networks pioneered in the USA and now increasingly international have made the sharing of bibliographic data relatively easy and efficient. The online public access catalogue, free text searching, electronic inter-library loan networks, the fax machine and optical digital scanners can allow users in far flung places to share information in minutes rather than days. Music libraries are actively participating in this revolution.

(ii) Musicology and libraries. The worldwide growth of musicology since World War II was a powerful stimulus to the growth of many academic music libraries. Taking as its chief area of investigation the history of western music, although not excluding other aspects of musical research (e.g. ethnomusicology, gender studies, popular music, theory, acoustics, psychology and aesthetics), the discipline is naturally heavily dependent on library resources. The growth in number and size of university departments and independent institutes of musicology has necessitated the creation and enlargement of collections of reference and source materials in order to provide the tools for student and faculty research. Newer institutions have often had to rely on reprint editions and microforms to build up their holdings of rare or early works.

Changes in the focus of this discipline over time are also reflected in the changes in emphasis of music libraries. Among the great concerns of research libraries at the beginning of the 21st century are the preservation of materials published between 1865 and the 1970s whose paper is rapidly deteriorating. Shrinking budgets, ever-expanding lists of new publications and the growth of electronic publication are forcing librarians to make hard choices as they develop their collections. All too often this results in collections containing mainstream publications which mirror each other and precluding the acquisition of materials which give libraries their individual personalities.

Many of the early music librarians came from the scholarly community. Their knowledge of the discipline helped in establishing the foundations of many collections. At present most academic music libraries are led by people trained in both music scholarship and library science. Music librarians grow through their contacts in professional organizations such as IAML and its national branches, the Music Library Association (MLA), the International Association of Sound and Audiovisual Archives (IASA) and the Association of Recorded Sound Collections (ARSC).

Librarians today carry the responsibility of participation and contribution to the several important international cooperative projects dependent on their aid. These enterprises, most of them jointly sponsored by IAML and the IMS, facilitate the location of early prints and manuscripts (RÉPERTOIRE INTERNATIONAL DES SOURCES MUSICALES), current published scholarly literature on music (RÉPERTOIRE INTERNATIONAL DE LITTÉRATURE MUSICALE), musical iconography (RÉPERTOIRE INTERNATIONAL D'ICONOGRAPHIE MUSICALE), and the retrospective indexing of music periodical literature (Répertoire International de la Presse Musicale).

(iii) Supplementary services. Beyond reference service, providing access to, and usually the circulation of, the collections of music, books on music, sound recordings and videos usually expected today, some music libraries are able to offer certain additional services.

(a) The circulation of performing parts for orchestra, band, choir or glee club. Many libraries make this a special feature of their services (e.g. the Westminster Music Library in London, the Statens Musikbibliotek in Stockholm, and the Free Library of Philadelphia with the Fleischer Collection of orchestral music and the Drinker Collection of choral music).

(b) The administration of live or recorded concerts on the library premises or elsewhere (e.g. in a park in summer), sometimes broadcast, with the double purpose of service and publicity.

(c) Participation in inter-library loan, to broaden the scope and depth of their resources while avoiding the necessity for expensive duplication of materials. Growing numbers of libraries are interconnected by computer networks and fax machines, making possible rapid transmission of the desired material.

(d) The sharing by many music librarians of information about tough questions via several specialized electronic mailing lists where to the delight of their users they are often able to obtain answers to questions that have proved elusive.

5. CATALOGUING AND CLASSIFICATION. One of the most important tasks for the music library is the provision of a catalogue of its contents. Traditionally, this process has several layers: describing the items held, arranging these descriptions either alphabetically or systematically and providing a retrievable arrangement of the materials themselves in the library shelves. Each of these elements has a history, although the arrangement of the catalogue and the arrangement of the collection itself may not be linked.

The development of codes for the descriptive cataloguing of music has its origins at the end of the 19th century. But the realization that the efforts put into this process could be shared between libraries brought with it a desire for standardization of practices, which reached its zenith in the last quarter of the 20th century. Many musical works appear in a multiplicity of editions and recordings, issued in various countries and often with different forms of title; this led music librarians to develop a scheme for attaching a uniform title to each work so that the bibliographic descriptions would file together in library catalogues; in an online context this should also facilitate searching. Accordingly, IAML endeavoured to establish an international cataloguing code in the 1950s. The International Standard Bibliographic Description (ISBD), which started to be developed in the mid-1960s, was closely linked to the development of the Machine Readable Cataloging (MARC) format, a data structure for carrying cataloguing information in the automated environment.

Transcription of the bibliographic data from the publication, including physical description and description of the 'musical format' (score, vocal score, parts etc.), is provided for each item. Subject information may be carried either though a classification scheme or through the use of subject terms from a standard list; these schemes can be accessed through the catalogue or may be used for the arrangement of the material on the library shelves. Subject headings are usually accessible through the catalogue in American libraries, where the arrangement of the material on the shelves usually follows a classification scheme, while European ones more often use pressmarks independent of intellectual content and access to subject content is provided either by subject headings or a classification scheme available in the catalogue.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LIBRARIES AND LIBRARIANSHIP

K.-H. Köhler: 'Zwei Grundtypen historischer Musiksammlungen', IMSCR VII: Cologne 1958, 162–4
Music Libraries and Instruments: Cambridge 1959
V.H. Duckles: 'Music Libraries and Librarianship', Library Trends, viii/4 (1960)
L.R. McColvin and H. Reeves: Music Libraries (London, rev. and enlarged 2/1965 by J. Dove)
C.J. Bradley, ed.: Manual of Music Librarianship (Ann Arbor, 1966)
F. Riedel: 'Zur Geschichte der musikalischen Quellenüberlieferung und Quellenkunde', AcM, xxxviii (1966), 3–27
V.H. Duckles: 'Music Literature, Music and Sound Recordings', Library Trends, xv (1967), 494–521
R. Benton, ed.: Directory of Music Research Libraries, RISM, C/I–V (Iowa City, IA, 1967–72; Kassel, 1975–; 2/1983–) [i: Canada and the United States, 1967, 2/1983; ii: Thirteen European Countries, 1970; iii: Spain, France, Italy, Portugal, 1972; iv: Australia, Israel, Japan, New Zealand, 1979; v: Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, Yugoslavia, ed. L. Pruett, 1985]
Music Librarianship and Documentation: Adelaide 1970
F. Lesure: 'Archival Research: Necessity and Opportunity', Perspectives in Musicology, ed. B.S. Brook, E.O.D. Downes and S. Van Solkema (New York, 1972), 56–79
C.J. Bradley, ed.: Reader in Music Librarianship (Washington DC, 1973) [mostly reprs. of articles published since 1897, incl. many from Notes and FAM; bibliographies]
S.E. Thorin: International Directory of Braille Music Collections (Washington DC, 1984)
E.T. Bryant: Music Librarianship: a Practical Guide (London, 2/1985 with G.A. Marco)
B.L. Bell: An Annotated Guide to Current National Bibliographies (Alexandria, VA, 1986)
FAM, xxxiv/2–3 (1987) [special issue on national bibliographies and music]
A. Veinstein, ed.: Bibliothèques et musées des arts du spectacle dans le monde (Paris, 4/1992)
World Guide to Special Libraries (Munich, 3/1995)
M.H. Harris: History of Libraries in the Western World (Metuchen, NJ, 4/1995)
Directory of Special Libraries and Information Centers (New York, 23/1999)
World of Learning (London, 49/1999) [lists learned societies, incl. libraries]

CATALOGUING

Code international de catalogage de la musiqu e, ed. IAML (Frankfurt, 1957–83) [i: The Author Catalog of Published Music, ed. F. Grasberger; ii: Limited Code, ed. Y. Fédoroff; iii: Rules for Full Cataloging, ed. V. Cunningham; iv: Rules for Cataloging Music Manuscripts, ed. M.L. Göllner; v: Cataloging of Sound Recordings, ed. S. Wallon and K. Dorfmüller]
Code for Cataloging Music and Phonorecords, ed. Music Library Association and American Library Association (Chicago, 1958)
Music Cataloging Bulletin, ed. Music Library Association (Ann Arbor, 1970–; suppls. every five years)
Proceedings of the Institute on Library of Congress Music Cataloging Policies and Procedures: Washington DC 1971, ed. D. Sommerfield (Ann Arbor, 1975)
B. Redfern: Organising Music in Libraries (London, 2/1978–9)
D. Seibert: The MARC Music Format: from Inception to Publication (Philadelphia, 1982)
M. Gentili-Tedeschi, ed.: Guida a una descrizione catalografica uniforme dei manoscritti musicali (Rome, 1984) [see also 'Music Manuscripts', Guida a una descrizione uniforme dei manoscritti e al loro censimento, 1990, pp.103–4]
D.W. Krummel: 'The Origins of Modern Music Classification', Festschrift Albi Rosenthal, ed. R. Elvers (Tutzing, 1984), 181–98
L. Coral and others: 'Automation Requirements for Music Information', Notes, xliii (1986–7), 14–18
ISBD(NBM): International Standard Bibliographic Description for Non-Book Materials (London, 2/1987)
H. Hell: 'Musikalien im Schlagwortkatalog', Forum Musikbibliothek (1988), 185–201
L. Coral: 'The ISBD (NBM) Revision: an Historical Review', FAM, xxxvi (1989), 55–7
M. Dewey: Dewey Decimal Classification and Relative Index (Albany, NY, rev. 20/1989 by J.P. Comaromi and others)
R.P. Smiraglia: Music Cataloging: the Bibliographic Control of Printed and Recorded Music in Libraries (Englewood, CO, 1989)
R.P. Smiraglia: 'Uniform Titles for Music: an Exercise in Collocating Works', Cataloging & Classification Quarterly, ix/3 (1989), 97–114
D. Lerch: 'Der Computer-Katalog und die Zukunft der Regelwerke', Forum Musikbibliothek (1989), 141–8; (1990) 256–75
J. Weitz: Music Coding and Tagging: MARC Content Designation for Scores and Sound Recordings (Lake Crystal, MN, 1990)
R.B. Wursten: In Celebration of Revised 780: Music in the Dewey Decimal Classification, Edition 20, ed. R.B. Wursten (Canton, MA, 1990) [incl. A.S. Wajenberg: 'Online Music Subject Retrieval Using the New Schedule', pp.53–9]
M.R. Damiani: Le norme di catalogazione della musica a stampa: una panoramica internazionale (diss., Università degli Studi di Pavia, Scuola di Paleografia e Filologia Musicale, 1990–91)
ISBD(PM): International Standard Bibliographic Description for Printed Music, ed. IAML (Munich, 2/1991)
M. Muller-Benedict: 'Klassifikatorische Inhaltserschliessung im Fachgebiet Musik', FAM, xxxix (1992), 185–8
L. Coral: 'Indexing and Retrieving Special Materials in Online Catalogues', FAM, xl (1993), 110–15
C. Elliker: 'Classification Schemes for Scores: Analysis of Structural Levels', Notes, l (1993–4), 1269–320
H. Hemmasi: 'The Music Thesaurus: Function and Foundations', ibid., 875–82
J.P. Cassaro: 'Music Cataloguing and the Future', FAM, xli (1994), 245–50
R. Hartsock: Notes for Music Catalogers: Examples Illustrating AACR 2 in the Online Bibliographic Record (Lake Crystal, MN, 1994)
D. Baumann: 'Music Documentation in Switzerland: the Future of Shared Cataloguing and RISM A II', FAM, xliv (1997), 23–31

S.L. Vellucci: Bibliographic Relationships in Music Catalogs (Lanham, MD, 1997)
M. Gorman and P.W. Winkler: Anglo-American Cataloguing Rules (Chicago, 2/1998)
H. Hemmasi: Music Subject Headings, compiled from Library of Congress Subject Headings (Lake Crystal, MN, 2/1998)
Apart from the catalogues and descriptive literature cited in the list of music libraries in volume 28, much information on the location of sources can be gleaned from the bibliographies and repertory guides cited in Bibliography of music, §2; Répertoire international des sources musicales; and composer and genre articles.

RITA BENTON/R

Libretto (It.: 'small book'; Fr. livret; Ger. Textbuch). A printed or manuscript book giving the literary text, both sung and spoken, of an opera (or other musical work). The word has also come to mean the text itself (for discussion of the literary text see GroveO, 'Libretto (ii)').

1. General. 2. Italy. 3. Other main centres. 4. The 20th century.

1. General. For three centuries the principal purpose of the published libretto was to provide for those attending a performance of an opera the text and a list of the characters. In most operatic centres until late in the 19th century, and in many until early in the 20th, a new libretto was customarily printed for each production and was available before the first performance. From simple beginnings the libretto gradually developed in extent and scope to become a detailed and reliable source of information on many aspects of the performance of individual operas, and it sometimes provides the sole surviving record of the very existence of an opera.

Up to about 1900 the libretto generally gives information about the date of the production, the size and constitution of the orchestra (often with the names of the principals), the names of the composer, the poet, the singers (which enables their mobility, careers and repertories to be studied), the musical director, the impresario, the scene designers, the machinists and other stage staff, the choreographer and the dancers; sometimes it also gives details of the dances performed and, especially in Italy, full synopses of the ballets that were traditionally given on the same bill as operas. Evidence of censorship is often present, especially in Italy and France. It is evident therefore that the libretto, as well as providing valuable testimony about textual variants between different productions of individual operas, makes possible the study of the repertories and histories of opera houses, local customs, censorship and many other factors relating to the mounting of particular operas and to the history of opera in general.

Although librettos are now recognized as important tools for researchers, when originally published they were intended for nothing more than immediate, practical use. Until well into the second half of the 19th century they were the basic source of information for the operagoer, who would purchase a copy inside or outside the theatre (profits being the perquisite of the librettist) together with the playbill, and would be able to follow the text during the performance, thanks to undimmed lighting and assisted if necessary by wax tapers. Librettos were usually pocket-sized, printed on cheap paper, sewn into wrappers and rife with typographical errors: ephemeral objects, quickly redundant. Especially valuable to scholars are copies that survive with contemporary annotations – noting a change of cast, a cut or, all too rarely, details of stage movement or revisions by a librettist or impresario.

Towards the end of the 19th century the flexibility brought by electricity to theatre lighting, combined with the evolution of the opera programme and the standardization of the repertory, transformed the libretto into an object intended to have a more enduring function, with much of its topical content discarded – a source to be read or referred to not so much in the theatre as at home, before and after the performance.

A number of collected editions, providing permanent records of the writings of several eminent librettists, have been published, invariably in more elegant form than the original separate editions. The earliest date from the 17th century.

2. Italy. The earliest librettos, published in Florence, were printed in small quarto format (about 21 cm high) and contained between 12 and 20 leaves. The first to appear was for the first opera, Peri's setting of Rinuccini's Dafne, performed in Carnival 1598 and published by Giorgio Marescotti in 1600. The title-page names the poet, the sponsor of the performance (Jacopo Corsi), the person in whose honour it was given, the place and date of publication and the publisher. The only other preliminary to the text is the list of characters (without the singers' names), here called 'interlocutori' – for which alternative terms include 'personaggi', 'intervenienti' and 'attori'. The libretto concludes with verses addressed to Corsi – the first tribute of a kind that was to become a common feature of 17th-century librettos. The title-page of the second published libretto, Rinuccini's Euridice (1600), mentions the occasion for the performance; the preliminaries include a three-page dedication from Rinuccini to Maria de' Medici, an important historical note that refers to the previous performances of Dafne, expresses Rinuccini's approval of the suitability of the modern music for the setting of tragedies, names Peri as the composer, and justifies his own alterations to the conclusion of the fable.

These two librettos contain only brief stage directions; those for Monteverdi's Arianna and Ballo delle ingrate (published in Compendio delle sontuose feste, Mantua, 1608) are more extensive. Gradually during the first half of the century further information began to be given and librettos were more commonly printed in a smaller format (octave, duodecimo or sextodecimo). Exceptions were sometimes made for special occasions, when a more sumptuous publication, perhaps illustrated with scene designs, might be produced; one of the earliest such examples is the libretto for Marco da Gagliano's La Flora (Florence, 1628), text by Andrea Salvadori, which includes illustrations of five scenes, designed by Giulio Parigi and engraved by his son Alfonso.

It was usual for an 'argomento' (an outline of the plot before the action commences) to be printed. From about 1650 this was sometimes divided by the words 'che si finge' into two sections, the first having historical or documentary precedent while the second was the invention of the author. From the 1620s for about a century the argomento was occasionally published separately from, or instead of, the libretto. An early example is Marco da Gagliano's sacred drama La regina Sant'Orsola (text by A. Salvadori): the argomento was published in 1624 and the libretto in the following year. In 1638 an 'Argomento e scenario' was published for Manelli's La Delia (text by G. Strozzi): this formula was occasionally reverted to during the following half-century.

It was also customary to print an address to the reader (headed, for example, 'ai lettori' or 'l'autore a chi legge'); this was sometimes written and signed by the composer, impresario or printer but more often by the librettist. The names of the performers were seldom printed in 17th-century Italian librettos. A rare exception occurs in the publisher's informative preface to Andromeda (the opera that inaugurated in 1637 the first public opera house, the S Cassiano in Venice); this names and makes brief comments on the composer, singers, dancers and choreographer. One of the earliest librettos to print a formal cast list was Alessandro vincitor di se stesso, text by F. Sbarra, music by A. Cesti and M. Bigongiari (1654, Lucca), but it was not until about 1700 that the singers were regularly named in Italian librettos; when they were, the posts they held at court were often stated and, where relevant (particularly for castratos), their nicknames.

Librettos vary in content and appearance according to their publisher and the place of performance, but by early in the 18th century most contained not only the features already mentioned but others as well. Among these were lists of scenes and of machines and effects, a 'protesta' (an affirmation of the poet's belief in the Catholic Church, despite what might be inferred from the characters and subject matter of the opera), alternative arias (usually printed as a supplement at the end) and cuts observed in the performance. The latter were often indicated (from the late 17th century) by versi virgolati, double commas in the margin to indicate passages which either were not set to music at all or were omitted from the performance for the sake of brevity (fig.1): this procedure allowed the poet's work to be read unabridged. Paste-over slips were also used to make changes or to correct mistakes.

During the first half of the 18th century it became customary to name the musical director and costume designer and, in the second half, the producer, copyist, orchestral principals, chorus and even (though rarely) the understudies; occasionally notices were printed about the precise dates of performance during the season and the availability of the music. From the early years of the 19th century it became usual to name the prompter and lighting director and from the 1820s the whole orchestra was sometimes listed.

Dance was an important ingredient of opera until the mid-19th century and the libretto is one of the best sources of information about it. There are numerous references to ballets, dances, dancers and choreographers in 17th-century librettos, but it was not until the mid-18th century that synopses of full-length ballets and lists of all the participants began to be printed in the libretto, normally on a few pages at the end or, less frequently, between the acts of the opera. This practice lasted until the 1860s, after which ballet synopses were published as separate booklets on their own, a custom that had been initiated as early as the 1770s.

During the 19th century there were many further innovations in the development of the Italian libretto. Printed wrappers, replacing plain ones, were introduced no later than 1814, and by the early 1830s the back wrappers had started to be used for announcing the ballets to be performed or for advertising publications. At about this time publishers began to print the price of the libretto, on either the wrappers or the title-page, and to give typographical emphasis to star names in the cast list; and in the mid-1830s polychrome printing on both title-page

PRIMO. 5

Neghittoſa, e che fai ? torna in te ſteſsa,
E à preparar le ſchiere or volgi il piè;
Mà il ben mio,che ſà? dov'è ?
Dove, oh Dio, Virginia andò?
Ah che il nudo infant e arciero
A ſue voglie
Or la toglie,
Or la rende al mio penſiero;
Onde in tutti i deſir miei
Sol,che lei bramar non sò.
Il ben mio,&c.
Si ferma Appio come fuor di ſe guardando in quella parte, dove ſtava Virginia.

SCENA V.

Valeria, ed Appio.

Val. Signor, mediti forſe
Onde tu ſia caro à Virginia i modi?
O rimembrar tu godi
Cheto così degl'occhi ſuoi le faci,
Il ſuo labro, il ſuo crin?
Ap. Valeria taci.
,, Val. Valeria taci! Ingrato,
,, Di tal noja ti ſon gl'accenti miei?
,, Ap (Virginia, e dove ſei?)
,, Val. E prendi à ſchivo tanto
,, Chi tanto amaſti ſempre?ahi duolo,ahi pena;
,, E d'un volto, che appena
,, S'offerſe à gl'occhi tuoi sì ti compiaci?
,, Ahi pena, ahi duolo;
,, Ap. Taci.
Val. Senti.
Ap. Taci Valeria, e à miglior tempo
Serba i lamenti, e parlami d'amor e,
D'altra cura maggiore
A 3 Seguir

1. Alessandro Scarlatti, 'La caduta de' Decemviri': first edition of the libretto by Silvio Stampiglia (Naples, 1697), showing verses in inverted commas ('versi virgolati') to indicate a passage cut in the performance and wrappers was introduced. Until the 1840s the libretto was not normally printed by the publisher of the music but by a general publisher who had the concession from the theatre. Thereafter the more powerful music publishers also began to take over publication of the text. In addition to the fully detailed librettos printed for particular performances, copies of regularly performed operas were printed for general sale without any performance or production details; these could be adapted for use for a specific performance by the substitution of a newly printed title-page and cast-leaf or by paste-over addenda slips. New forms of in-house control were instigated: from 1843 Ricordi included librettos within their regular system of plate numbers, from 1860 they applied blind date stamps to indicate the year and month of issue, and from 1865 both they and Lucca sometimes used printed date stamps. Until 1874 wrappers were generally printed by letterpress, often embellished by typographical ornaments, but in that year Ricordi published the first Italian libretto (Verdi, Macbeth, designed by Prina) whose wrappers set out to give a visual impression of the flavour of the opera, usually by depicting a scene from the work. Macbeth was printed in monochrome, but from 1877 chromolithographic wrappers on librettos, just as on vocal scores, were frequently used.

3. Other main centres. The development of the libretto in Italy strongly influenced the form in which the artefact was published elsewhere. The first libretto for a German opera was for Schütz's Dafne, to a text by Martin Opitz after Rinuccini, published in 1627. This quarto names both the composer and the librettist and contains a dedicatory poem and a list of characters. Among the earliest Italian operas to be performed in Germany was Antonio Bertali's L'inganno d'amore (1653, Regensburg): Benedetto Ferrari's libretto, printed in Italian, includes a synopsis in German and is embellished with seven engraved scene designs by Giovanni Burnacini, the pioneer of Venetian theatrical machinery. Burnacini's earlier designs for La Gara, text by Alberto Vimina, had also been published in the same manner (Vienna, 1652). This was a libretto of the commemorative type, published after the performance; it included a description of each act and an account of the impression made by the spectacle. Burnacini's son, Ludovico, worked principally in Vienna, where nine librettos between 1661 and 1700 carried engravings of his scene designs, including Cesti's Il pomo d'oro (1668) and Draghi's Il fuoco eterno (1674). Viennese 17th-century librettos tended to follow the Italian models and usually named the librettist, composer and machinist but not the singers. German librettos did not always name even the librettist, and rarely the composer. That for Handel's first opera, Almira (published in Hamburg, 1704), gives no names at all but lists in the preliminaries the dances and scenes. The arias are in German and Italian, a German translation being provided for the latter. Later in the 18th century and early in the 19th the participants are sometimes named in both German and Viennese librettos, and translations into German often given for foreign-language texts. Three editions of Gluck's Orfeo (Vienna, 1762) were published at about the time of the première – one with Italian and French text, one with German and one with Italian only; all three name the singers. The first printing of Idomeneo (Munich, 1781) names the composer, librettist, translator and also the singers (the only libretto of one of Mozart's major operas to name them); it has an argomento and list of scenes, and a German translation faces the Italian text. The second edition, which reflects the changes made in the rehearsals for the original production (see Mozart's letters to his father in early 1781), has Italian text only. There are exceptions, but in general the German and Viennese libretto from about 1750 is sadly uninformative, usually having a list of characters ('Personen') but no other preliminaries. The 1805 Vienna libretto of Fidelio provides an example of this, while Weber's Der Freischütz (Berlin, *c*1821) names the singers but, in common with many other German librettos, contains the text of only the 'Arien und Gesänge'.

The first opera produced in France was Luigi Rossi's Orfeo, to a text by F. Buti; an abrégé in French was published but not a libretto. The first French libretto was probably Buti's text for Carlo Caproli's Le nozze di Peleo e di Theti (1654, Paris); this was published with dual Italian and French texts and named the singers. In the same year an English translation, The Nuptials of Peleus and Thetis, was published in London – probably the earliest libretto to be published in England, though no performance was given. The librettos of the first French opera, Michel de La Guerre's Le triomphe de l'amour, text by C. de Beys, and that of Cambert's Pomone, which inaugurated the Paris Opéra, were published at the end of 1654 and in 1671 respectively. In 1672 the first of Lully's operas was given. The original editions of his librettos are quartos and many have an engraved frontispiece depicting a scene from the work. In most of them the names of the singers and dancers, and sometimes also the leading instrumentalists, are given before the prologue and first act (fig.2); further names are occasionally inserted at points within the text. For works produced at the Opéra the quarto format was maintained throughout the 18th century, after which the octavo format used by the other Paris theatres was adopted. From the 1720s comic operas appeared in a new type of publication that was to become popular in England with the advent of ballad opera: the music of some or all of the airs, though usually only the melodic lines, was printed within or as a supplement to the libretto. This format was continued, principally by the publisher Duchesne, in librettos of many comic operas and parodies from the 1730s to the 1770s, especially those of C.-S. Favart. Until the late 1820s publishers issued librettos in plain wrappers; thenceforward printed

ACTEURS DU PROLOGUE.

LA RENOMME'E. Mademoiſelle Verdier.

Chœur de la ſuite de la Renommée. Les Rumeurs, les Bruits, &c.

Cinq Trompettes. Les Sieurs Lorange, Beaupré, Barberay, Chervillac, & la Plaine.

Vingt-ſix ſuivants de la Renommée chantants.

Meſſieurs Bony, Bernard, Rebel, Gillet, Beaumont, Perchot, Aubert, Pouyadon, Leroy, Gaudin, Jollain, Huart, Champenois, Leſcuyer, Prevoſt, Moreau, Beaupuits, Martial, Hannot, Laurent, Liron, & Boutelou. Les Sieurs Lanneau, Paiſible, Henry, & de Lorme Pages.

NEPTVNE. Monſieur Foreſtier.

Suite de Neptune, Tritons, & autres Dieux de la Mer.

Six Tritons joüants de la Flûte.

Meſſieurs Louys, Nicolas Hotteterre, Philidor l'aiſné, Philidor cadet, Pieſche, & Bonnet.

Deux Tritons chantants. Meſſieurs du Meſny, & Nouveau.

* ij

2. Jean-Baptiste Lully, 'Isis': first edition of the libretto by Philippe Quinault (Paris, 1677), showing the first page of the list of singers and instrumentalists for the Prologue wrappers were gradually adopted and frequently carried advertisements.

In England the early librettos were usually quartos, similar to the contemporary playbooks. The libretto for the first English opera, William Davenant's The Siege of Rhodes, music by Matthew Locke and others, is particularly informative: it names the place of performance, the singers, the composers of each entry and of the instrumental music, and it gives precise descriptions of the scenery and includes an address from Davenant to the reader. Other pre-1700 librettos normally have a dedication or preface but do not name the singers, though publisher's advertisements are sometimes included.

From the beginning of the 18th century the normal format changed to small quarto or octavo. From this period English librettos invariably name the composer, librettist, singers and dancers and often include a preface or dedication. Arsinoe (1705) has a preface by the composer, Thomas Clayton, in which he defines his aims in introducing the Italian manner to the English stage. The libretto of Handel's first London opera, Rinaldo (1711), has the Dedication, Preface and Argument in English, Giacomo Rossi's address to the reader in Italian and Aaron Hill's English translation of the text facing Rossi's Italian original; the printing of dual texts became routine for most operas performed in a foreign language in London until about the end of the 19th century. In 1728 the libretto of The Beggar's Opera was published in two octavo editions, the first having the melodic lines of the airs printed as a supplement, the second having them interspersed with the text, preceded by the overture in score. This remained the standard format in which the early ballad operas appeared (the tunes usually being printed from woodcuts).

Innovations later in the 18th century include the occasional provision of a frontispiece depicting a singer or a scene from the production, while an abridged form of libretto was introduced for some English-language operas, in which the text of only the vocal numbers was printed and the spoken dialogue omitted. An early example, for Der Freischütz at Drury Lane in 1824 (published retrospectively in the series Dolby's British Theatre, 1825), includes six pages of 'critical remarks' on the music, a description of the costumes, and stage directions supplied by the editors 'from their own personal observations, during the most recent performances'. An advertisement for further titles in the series appears on the printed wrappers (introduced in the 1820s). From the late 1840s Covent Garden librettos often include a full list of the orchestra and give the name of the conductor. In the 1850s Davidson's began a series of 'Musical Libretto-Books' in which the original and English texts were printed in double column and 'the music of the principal airs' interspersed; some of Davidson's librettos have extensive prefaces commenting on the history of the opera and previous productions. By the 1860s it is not uncommon to find advertisements for miscellaneous goods and services printed on the wrappers and on several pages at the front and back of the libretto itself.

4. THE 20TH CENTURY. During the 20th century the libretto became associated with publishers and recording companies rather than with opera houses, although very occasionally an opera programme printed the complete libretto (particularly for a concert performance, when a translation was normally included). Most opera publishers still issue librettos, for both new and repertory operas, printed on better paper and in thicker wrappers than formerly; their contents are generally confined to normal title-page information, copyright claims, a list of the characters and scenes, a statement of the place and date of the first performance, possibly a preface and synopsis, the text itself, and advertisements for other publications. Boxed sets of gramophone records normally contained a booklet (up to 30·5 cm square) that included the text, often in several (usually four) languages, laid out in columns; the same procedure is usually followed for the booklets (12·5 × 14·5 cm) that accompany compact discs.

A number of private individuals and institutions have assembled significant collections of librettos. The most internationally representative is probably that formed by Albert Schatz, now in the Library of Congress, Washington; other particularly fine collections are those of the British Library, London, the Manoel de Carvalhoes collection at the Accademia di S Cecilia, Rome, and the Ulderico Rolandi collection at the Fondazione Cini, Venice. Further extensive collections are at the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Vienna, the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek, Munich, the Herzog August Bibliothek, Wolfenbüttel, the Biblioteca Marciana, Venice, the Central Library of the Mariinsky Theatre at St Petersburg, the New York Public Library, the university libraries of California (at Berkeley) and Texas (at Austin), and the conservatory libraries of Bologna, Brussels, Milan, Naples and Paris. The best-known catalogues of librettos are O.G.T. Sonneck's Library of Congress: Catalogue of Opera Librettos Printed before 1800 (Washington DC, 1914), a monumental work, extensively annotated, in which librettos are listed by title, librettist and composer, and Claudio Sartori's I libretti italiani a stampa dalle origini al 1800 (Cuneo, 1990–95), which lists all Italian and Latin libretto texts published up to and including 1800 and states the location of copies worldwide; 16 indexes are provided.

The importance of librettos not only as texts but as documentary evidence of multifarious aspects of operatic history has now come to be fully appreciated and has in recent years inspired a major bibliographical undertaking known as the US RISM Libretto Project, with its seat at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville. The object is to coordinate the cataloguing in machine-readable form of all historical librettos in collections in the USA, beginning with the Schatz Collection. The records (which are entered into the Research Libraries Information Network, where they are accessible as work proceeds) include not only the standard bibliographic descriptions but the indexing of all performance and production personnel named in the source, the names of the characters and the city and theatre of production.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AllacciD; Grove6 (E.J. Dent, P.J. Smith); GroveO (R. Macnutt) [incl. further bibliography]; LoewenbergA; MGG1 (A.A. Abert); SartoriL; SolertiMBD; StiegerO; StrunkSR1

G. and C. Salvioli: Bibliografia universale del teatro drammatico italiano (Venice,1903), i

A. Solerti: Le origini del melodramma (Turin, 1903/R)

A. Solerti: Gli albori del melodramma (Milan, 1904–5/R)

P. Bergmans: 'Une collection de livrets d'opéras italiens 1669–1710',SIMG, xii (1910–11), 221–34

R. Haas: 'Zur Bibliographie der Operntexte', Deutsche Musikgesellschaft: Kongress I: Leipzig 1925, 59–61

V. Raeli: 'Catalogazione statistica delle collezioni di libretti per musica', Musica d'oggi, xii (1930), 356–8

F. Biach-Schiffmann: Giovanni und Ludovico Burnacini: Theater und Feste am Wiener Hofe (Vienna and Berlin, 1931)
U. Rolandi: Il libretto per musica attraverso i tempi (Rome, 1951)
S.T. Worsthorne: Venetian Opera in the Seventeenth Century (Oxford, 1954/R)
U. Manferrari: Dizionario universale delle opere melodrammatiche (Florence, 1954–5)
R. Allen, ed.: The First Night Gilbert and Sullivan, Containing Complete Librettos of his Fourteen Operas, Exactly as Presented at their Première Performances (New York, 1958, 2/1975)
A. Caselli: Catalogo delle opere liriche pubblicate in Italia (Florence, 1969)
P.E. Gossett: The Operas of Rossini: Problems of Textual Criticism in Nineteenth-Century Opera(diss., Princeton U., 1970)
P.J. Smith: The Tenth Muse: a Historical Study of the Opera Libretto (New York, 1970)
A.C. Ramelli: Libretti e librettisti (Milan, 1973)
M. Chusid: A Catalog of Verdi's Operas (Hackensack, NJ, 1974)
R.L. and N.W.Weaver: A Chronology of Music in the Florentine Theater 1590–1750 (Detroit, 1978)
H.F.G. Klein: Erst-und Frühdrucke der Textbücher von Richard Wagner: Bibliographie(Tutzing, 1979)
SMC, iv/1–3 [Opera 1, ed. D.J. Neville], iv/4 [Opera 2, ed. R. Macnutt, M.H. Rose and L. Levetus] (1979)
J.J. Fuld: The Book of World-Famous Libretti: the Musical Theater from 1598 to Today (New York,1984)
J. Rosselli: The Opera Industry in Italy from Cimarosa to Verdi: the Role of the Impresario(Cambridge, 1984)
W. Dean and J.M.Knapp: Handel's Operas 1704–1726(Oxford, 1987)

RICHARD MACNUTT

Libya [Great Socialist People's Libyan Arab Republic] (Arab. Jamahiriya Al-Arabiya Al-Libiya Al-Shabiya Al-Ishtirakiya Al-Uzma). Country in North Africa. It has an area of approximately 1,759,540 km² and covers various cultural areas. Its coastline of approximately 2000 km between Egypt and Tunisia is part of the Mediterranean region, although most of its territory lies in the Sahara desert, extending from the Sudan to southern Algeria; to the south, it borders the sub-Saharan African states of Chad and Niger.

Since ancient times Libya has been situated at a cultural crossroads, where different musical currents co-exist without destroying each other. Two factors contribute to the cohesion of Libyan society, which comprised an estimated 6·39 million people at the beginning of the 21st century, namely uniformity of religion (all groups of the population, whatever their origins, are Muslim) and a single official language, Arabic. Some minority dialects are used in the sung poetry of various regions. Traditional music continues to flourish, preserving certain features of ancient societies, which include the reservation of musical instruments for certain social groups, although such differences have been abolished in the institutions of contemporary Libya.

1. General musical characteristics. Arabo-Andalusian music, which has its own theoretical system, is traditional art music rather than traditional folk music. This article will concentrate on orally transmitted musical traditions, often of a functional nature, which act as markers of identity and have not been conceptualized into an explicit theory. While these traditions are shaped by rules that are often complex, these rules remain implicit; they are learnt by participation in the music and transmitted by imitation.

Notwithstanding their diversity, these musical traditions have certain common features that demarcate them as Saharan traditions and distinguish them from the music of sub-Saharan Africa and the traditions of the northern shores of the Mediterranean. They are all monodic; various percussion instruments are used to accompany a single melodic line, either vocal or instrumental, the range of which is often limited to a 5th or 6th. (Tuareg female fiddle players are an exception, often playing an octave leap at the beginning of or during a piece.) Instrumental ensembles therefore comprise a single melodic instrument (a chordophone or an aerophone) accompanied by percussion instruments, which vary with region and repertory. Vocal performance is most frequently of the responsorial type, alternating between a solo voice and a homophonic chorus. There is sometimes a slight overlap between the verse and the refrain, and most of this music is metrical.

2. Musical repertories. The most obvious distinctions between the different repertories are based on functional criteria linked to the circumstances in which the music is performed.

Despite the latent disapproval of certain prominent fundamentalist Muslims, the population in general has a positive attitude towards musical performance on certain occasions, notably the periods of communal festivity that punctuate the religious calendar (in particular the end of the month of Ramadan) and wedding ceremonies. The music performed at wedding ceremonies in towns differs in certain respects from that performed at rural weddings. Differences that are regional or peculiar to certain communities are especially marked where traditional customs persist, and the celebration has not entirely lost its ritual aspects; this is particularly the case in certain oases, which until quite recently were separated by distances assessed in terms of several days' journey by caravan. The advent of motor transport has reduced travelling time, but distinctive cultural features several centuries old have not necessarily disappeared.

The more directly religious repertories are connected with the popular Sufism of the various religious fraternities found in Libya. The music, which is closely linked to their ceremonies, may be a sequence of alternating song (a soloist and a male chorus) accompanied by an ensemble of bandīr frame drums; a similar ensemble may be used to accompany a solo oboe. Music may also be performed by a more varied percussion ensemble, with voices merely repeating the name of God rhythmically in order to achieve ecstasy.

Private music does not involve the whole community. Included in this category are songs performed by women among themselves and music performed in isolation by herdsmen, who sing and play music that may have amorous or nostalgic themes. Herdsmen may play either the tazammart (small flute) or the magruna (double clarinet).

3. Musical instruments.

(i) Aerophones. There are three reed instruments with different areas of distribution, namely the magruna, the zokra (bagpipe) and the ghayṭa or gaita (oboe); the latter is also found far beyond the boundaries of Libya. The flute, which is common in neighbouring Arab regions, is not played widely in Libya, but the sedentary populations (originally slaves) of the south-western oases play the tazammart. This differs from the Arab nay both organologically and in performance technique; it has four finger-holes, which are grouped in pairs, and the musician adds a vocal drone while playing the instrument.

The magruna has two melodic pipes made of reed or sometimes brass, each with five finger-holes; there is no hole at the back. The pipes are fixed together in parallel, so that the holes of each can be stopped at the same time by the same finger and will sound in unison. A small mouthpiece to hold the reed is inserted into each pipe. The reeds are of the idioglot type (cut directly in the wall of the pipe); their beating length is carefully regulated by a cotton ligature sliding over the tongues to keep them synchronized. The far end of each pipe has a horn-shaped bell. These features distinguish the magruna from the Egyptian double clarinet, which has no bells and only one melodic pipe; the second pipe of the Egyptian instrument has no finger-holes and acts as a drone. Players of the magruna use a circular breathing technique and can therefore play for a long time without interrupting the flow of sound.

The zokra has two melodic pipes fixed together like those of the double clarinet; they differ from the pipes of the magruna in that each pipe only has four finger-holes. Consequently the entire repertory of the zokra can be performed on the magruna, but the reverse is not true. The reeds of the zokra are about twice as long as those of the magruna. The bag, which acts as an air reservoir, is made of a whole kidskin with the feet tied. In general, the Libyan zokra resembles the Tunisian mezwid bagpipe, although the latter has pipes with five finger-holes rather than four and therefore has features in common with both the Libyan zokra and the magruna. (In Tunisia the name zokra designates an oboe.)

The ghayṭa is widely distributed both within and beyond the Mediterranean area. It is made of turned wood; the pipe has a conical bore and flares at the end. The ghayṭa has a double reed with a disc (usually made of metal) on which the musician's lips can rest and is played using a continuous breathing technique. Some *ghayṭa*s are entirely covered by a thin sheet of brass to prevent them from splitting in dry atmospheric conditions.

(ii) Chordophones. These are played mainly by two minority groups: the Tubu (sometimes called the Tibu or Teda in Libya), who are originally from Chad and live in large numbers in the Khufrah and Fezzan regions of the extreme south, and the Tuareg, who live mainly along the western frontiers of the country (see TUAREG MUSIC). There are two varieties of chordophone in Libya, namely the keleli (plucked lute) played by the Tubu, and the fiddle, played by both the Tubu and the Tuareg.

The keleli has a hemispherical resonator, which may be made of gourd, wood or enamelled sheet metal; this is covered with a soundtable of stretched skin laced into position. Its two strings have no pegs and are attached to the neck by ligatures; a third, shorter string is sometimes added, tuned an octave above the lower string. The body of the instrument can be turned into a kiiki fiddle simply by replacing the gut strings of the lute with a single 'string' made of a hank of horsehair, which is played with a bow consisting of a curved stick with another length of horsehair stretched between its ends.

The Tuareg imzad fiddle (sometimes called inzad or amzad) is also a monochord and is always played by women. Its resonator consists of a hemispherical gourd covered with skin laced in place, but its diameter is considerably larger than that of the Tubu kiiki, and the skin of its soundtable is usually decorated with symbolic designs in henna. The string is fixed to the neck, and, like the Tubu kiiki, the instrument has no pegs, but performance technique differs in the way in which the bow is held; a musician playing the kiiki moves the bow outwards, while a performer on the imzad draws it in the opposite direction. The two-stringed Arab rabāb does not seem to be played in Libya, but the imzad is sometimes known as the rabāba.

(iii) Membranophones. The membranophones have resonating bodies of various shapes and dimensions, which may be made of wood or pottery. These instruments differ from one repertory and region to another, but for the sake of clarity their organological characteristics have been adopted here as the prime criterion of presentation.

(a) Double-headed drums. The ṭabl is a cylindrical drum with two laced skins. The player rests it on the ground and strikes the upper skin with bare hands. The ṭabl is in widespread use, particularly to enliven the evening before a wedding ceremony, and may be used to accompany a singer or a magruna. The term ṭabl may also be used to refer to a kettledrum. The nuba drum, although much heavier and larger, is slung from the player's shoulder by a strap and beaten on both skins with a straight drumstick; it is mainly used during the dhikr religious ceremonies performed by various fraternities of the popular Sufism which flourishes in Libya.

The term GANGA is used to refer to double-headed drums, which belong to two different organological categories: one variety of ganga is a tubular or cylindrical drum and the other a frame drum. Tubular *ganga*s are 40 to 60 cm deep and are played in pairs, one drum being regarded as a female voice and the other as a male. This idea is common in sub-Saharan Africa and indicates the southern African origin of these instruments. They are carried using a shoulder strap and the upper skin is struck with a curved beater, the lower skin is played with the bare hand, though some drummers never strike the lower skin.

The other form of ganga has a supple wooden frame (often of the kind used to make large flour sieves); this is held vertically with the left hand, while the right hand strikes one of the skins with a cross-shaped curved beater similar to that used to play the tubular ganga. The tubular ganga has snares on the lower skin, which produce a characteristic 'chirping' sound when the skin against which they are stretched vibrates (sympathetically, when the other skin is struck). Such drums are played for entertainment and may accompany a ghayṭa or a magruna, but are not used in religious ceremonies.

The Tubu in the Khufrah and Fezzan regions play the nang'ara, a large drum which has two laced skins. In performance, it is placed on the ground or suspended in a vertical position; its upper skin is struck by two men who each use two straight sticks. Blacksmith musicians (a special caste among the Tubu) accompany their songs by striking a drum called the kidi with their bare hands.

(b) Single-headed drums. This category includes drums of many shapes and sizes, the bodies of which may be made of wood or pottery. Pottery drums are always of the goblet type, although there are many variations in form and dimension. This category includes the type widely distributed throughout North Africa under the name of darbouka (see DARBUKKA), which has an almost hemispherical body on which the skin is stretched. The conical drum is more specifically Libyan; Gharyan, in the west of the country, is one of the main centres where it is made. The skin of the darbouka, which may be goatskin or fish-skin, is glued in place. Some darboukas are played in ensembles of three instruments of different sizes, which produce varying pitches; the smallest is about 15 to 20 cm high and is named qullāl or al-darbouka al-ghadāmsī, from the name of the town of Ghadamis on the Tunisian border. These drums are women's instruments, particularly among the Berbers.

Other goblet drums have wooden cases and are considerably larger (about 80 cm high). The debedha, which has a rounded body like that of the darbouka, has a head made of sheepskin with a central cap placed on it to weight it; in this respect it resembles the debedba of the Hon region, the body of which is cylindrical. Libyan musicians consider that these drums have been in use much longer than pottery drums and that they produce the finest sound of all the local drums.

Bandīr frame drums without jingles are mainly played at religious dhikr ceremonies, as are the small baz kettledrums. Some fraternities prefer to use the small ṭār frame drums, which are approximately 20 cm in diameter and have jingles attached, and the drum also known as al-bandīr al-Aīssāwī, which has two rows of jingles.

The large tindé mortar drum is particular to the Tuareg and is played by women as an accompaniment to non-religious songs on various occasions.

(iv) Idiophones. The most important instruments in this category are the large metal castanets called shakshaka (known in Morocco as qarqabou); these are plates about 30 cm long shaped into a hollow cup and are joined in pairs by a leather strap. They are played by a professional musician, who holds a pair of them in each hand, and are usually found in ensembles with ganga drums and *ghayṭa*s or *magruna*s.

Cymbals are used by certain religious orders in their ceremonies, while everyday utensils such as spoons and bottles are often used as percussion instruments for entertainment; for instance, empty jerrycans balanced on a small pile of sand or a bale of fabric are struck with bare hands and make satisfactory substitutes for drums.

4. MUSICIANS. The institutions of modern Libya are founded on the principle of equality of all citizens. This rules out official recognition of castes of musicians, but the caste system persists strongly in minority groups of non-Arab cultures (mainly the Tuareg and Tubu peoples) and is apparent in the exclusive use of certain instruments and repertories by certain groups within these cultures.

Members of the musician caste are often blacksmiths. Among the Tubu, their instrument is the kidi drum, while among the Tuareg it is the ganga of either variety. Members of this caste are the only ones who perform praise-songs in public for a fee. As well as qualification by caste, gender is a factor in the performance of certain repertories; the Tuareg women, who do not constitute a caste but enjoy high social status, play the imzad, which is played exclusively by men in all neighbouring societies. Age is a relatively minor consideration, in contrast to many African societies in which the repertories performed by children and those performed by adults are substantially different.

The Arab, or Arabic-speaking Libyan population as a whole, does not recognize castes of musicians, but specialization in music has implications for the social status of those involved. There is a distinction between those who perform merely for the love of music and those who perform for a fee. In general, musicians are semi-professionals; they participate in the activities of the social group as a whole, and payment for their music is merely incidental. In the southern provinces, most of these musicians are of African origin. The men play the ghayṭa, the magruna or the zokra and the women specialize in certain song repertories, especially for wedding ceremonies; but while music is an indispensable feature of certain occasions, the performers' activities carry no particular social cachet.

During the closing decades of the 20th century, a new category of professionals developed in the urban environment; these musicians take part in 'folk' performances of traditional music and dance adapted to some extent to modern tastes, and their activities are broadcast on television and local radio.

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

AMe (M. Brandily)
J. Rouanet: 'La musique arabe', EMDC, I/v (1922)
L. Balout and A. Sautin: 'Le jeu de l'imzad', Annales de l'Institut d'Études Orientales, xvi (1958)
M. Brandily: 'Le son ininterrompu, remarques sur quelques exemples africains', Africa-Tervuren, xxvi (1980)
M. Guettat: La musique classique du Maghreb (Paris, 1980)
M. Brandily: 'Le même et l'autre, sur l'appellation de quelques instruments de musique en Libye', Les fantaisies du voyageur: xxxiii variations Schaeffner (Paris, 1982) [pubn of the Société Française de Musicologie]
M. Brandily: 'Qu'exprime-t-on par et dans la musique traditionelle? Quelques exemples libyens', Maghreb Review, xi/2–4 (1986)
M. Brandily: 'La pratique musicale traditionelle en Libye et ses instruments', Maghreb Review, xviii/1–2 (1993)
Al musyqat al sha'abyat fi al jamhurya al 'arabya al Libya (Tripoli, n.d.) [pubn of the Organisation Générale pour le Théâtre, la Musique et les Arts Populaires]
Libye: musiques traditionelles, coll. M. Brandily [forthcoming]

MONIQUE BRANDILY

Licenza (i) (It.: 'licence'). (1) In the 17th and 18th centuries a passage or cadenza inserted into a piece by a performer.

(2) In the same period, an epilogue inserted into a stage work (opera or play) in honour of a patron's birthday or wedding, or for some other festive occasion. This usually consisted of recitatives and arias but choruses were sometimes included. The licenza could be an integral part of the main work (as in Fux's Costanza e Fortezza, 1723) or it could be written later by a different composer and librettist; in 1667 the Emperor Leopold I composed his own licenza for the Viennese performances of Cesti's Le disgrazie d'amore.

WILLIAM C. HOLMES

Licenza (ii) (It.: 'licence'). The directions 'Con alcuna licenza' or 'con alcune licenze' indicate either that a piece is to be performed somewhat freely in the matter of tempo or expression (the slow movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony is marked 'Andante cantabile, con alcuna licenza') or that in its composition some liberty has been taken with strict forms and procedures (e.g. the fugue in Beethoven's Hammerklavier Sonata op.106).

WILLIAM C. HOLMES

Licette, Miriam (b Chester, 9 Sept 1892; d Twyford, 11 Aug 1969). English soprano. She studied under Marchesi, Jean de Reszke and Sabbatini, making her début in Rome as Butterfly (1911). After further successful European appearances, she returned to England, where she became one of the leading lyric sopranos of her day, singing with the Beecham Opera Company (1916), the British National Opera Company (1922), and at Covent Garden (1919–1929). Her roles included Mimì, Desdemona, Eva and Louise, and she was specially admired in Mozart. Her voice was pure and steady, with firmly placed tone and a remarkably even scale, well represented in Beecham's complete recording in English of Faust (1930).

J.B. STEANE

Lichfild [Lichfield], Henry (fl 1613). English composer. The preface of his only publication, The First Set of Madrigals of 5. Parts, Apt both for Viols and Voyces (London, 1613/14; ed. in EM, xvii, 1922, 2/1969/R), reveals that he was in the service of Lady Cheyney (Cheney) of Toddington, near Luton. He was not employed primarily as a domestic musician but possibly, as Edmund Fellowes suggested, as a household steward. In her will Lady Cheyney, who died in 1614, left £20 to Lichfild.

Lichfild's madrigals were composed in his leisure hours under the encouragement of Lady Cheyney, and were first performed by the 'instruments and voyces' of her family. They are unpretentious pieces that take no account of the technical and expressive elaboration of the form already displayed in the work of Weelkes and Wilbye, but return to the simplest canzonet manner that Morley had established in England 20 years earlier. Lichfild handled this undemanding manner cleanly but without enterprise, and his music is acceptable, though it may be perceived as lacking in individuality.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.H. Fellowes: English Madrigal Verse, 1588–1632 (Oxford, 1920, enlarged 3/1967 by F.W. Sternfeld and D. Greer)

E.H. Fellowes: The English Madrigal Composers (Oxford, 1921, 2/1948/R)

DAVID BROWN

Lichnowsky. Austrian family of patrons of music. Several members of the Austrian branch of this aristocratic family supported the arts in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

(1) Prince Karl [Carl] (Alois Johann Nepomuk Vinzenz Leonhard) von Lichnowsky (b Vienna, 1756/1758/1761; d Vienna, 15 March 1814). He lived mostly in Vienna but also maintained an estate at Hradec nad Moravicí, near Troppau (now Opava, Czech Republic). From 1776 to 1782 he studied law in Leipzig and Göttingen. In Göttingen he also had contact with Forkel and started to collect works by J.S. Bach. In 1788 he married Maria Christiane (1765–1841), daughter of Countess Maria Wilhelmine of Thun-Hoherstein. Prince Karl was a pupil and patron of Mozart; they belonged to the same masonic lodge. A year after his marriage he invited Mozart to accompany him on a trip to Prague, Dresden, Leipzig and Berlin. The trip did not bring Mozart the hoped-for improvement in his financial situation, on top of which he apparently had to lend the Prince 100 gulden (letter, 23 May 1789). Two years later Prince Karl won a judgment against Mozart for over 1400 gulden for non-payment of a debt of an unknown nature. Half of Mozart's salary was attached as part of the judgment. Whether or not Lichnowsky was responsible for bringing Beethoven to Vienna, as Czerny states, he did invite the composer to live in his house once he arrived. He also regularly engaged a string quartet, led by Schuppanzigh, for music sessions, in which the composer participated. In return, Beethoven dedicated to him the piano trios op.1, the Sonata 'Pathétique' op.13, the Piano Sonata op.26, the Second Symphony and the piano variations WoO69. He is the only member of the aristocracy explicitly thanked in the Heiligenstadt Testament of 1802, and Beethoven praised him in a letter of 1805 as 'one of my most loyal friends and promoters of my art'. In 1800 Prince Karl offered Beethoven an annuity of 600 gulden as support until he should receive a suitable post. A rupture occurred in 1806: it is usually attributed to an incident involving French officers at Lichnowsky's palace in Troppau, although Jürgen May argues that other factors (such as the Prince's financial situation) were also responsible. Nonetheless, in 1809 Prince Karl joined with Archduke Rudolph and Prince Kinsky in committing enough of an income to Beethoven to prevent his having to leave Vienna to take up a Kapellmeister position in Kassel. However, as the economic hardship brought about by the occupation of Vienna by Napoleon's army worsened, the money was not forthcoming and Beethoven resorted to filing a lawsuit against Lichnowsky and Kinsky. Lichnowsky had an eccentric character; he was described as a 'cynical degenerate and a shameless coward' by Countess Lulu Thürheim and died (according to his autopsy report) of a malady resulting from his 'licentious way of life'.

(2) Countess Henriette von Lichnowsky (b Vienna, 10 May 1769; d after 1829). Sister of (1) Karl von Lichnowsky. She also befriended Beethoven in Vienna and received the dedication of his rondo op.51 no.2 in 1802. After her marriage to the Marquis of Carneville she moved to Paris, where she was associated with musicians, including Chopin.

(3) Count Moritz (Josef Cajetan Gallus) von Lichnowsky (b Vienna, 17 Oct 1771; d Vienna, 17 March 1837). Pianist and composer, brother of (1) Karl von Lichnowsky. He was married to Maria Anna Carmelli di Castglione-Faleta, 1797–1817, and the actress Josephine Stummer (with whom he had a daughter in 1814), 1820–37; the second marriage caused a rupture with his family. He was also a patron and friend of both Mozart and Beethoven, and a constant promoter of Beethoven's interests. Beethoven dedicated the Prometheus Variations op.35 (1803) and the Piano Sonata op.90 (Vienna, 1815) to him. His involvement with Beethoven was at its height in the 1820s when he tried to secure him a position as court composer, tried to bring him and the poet Grillparzer together for an opera text, offered advice in Beethoven's business affairs and participated vigorously in the arrangements for the first performance of the Ninth Symphony. He was a fine amateur musician and published a set of seven piano variations on Paisiello's 'Nel cor più non mi sento' (Vienna, 1798). In his last years he became acquainted with Chopin.

(4) Prince Felix von Lichnowsky (b Vienna, 5 April 1814; d Frankfurt, 18 Sept 1848). Son of the poet Eduard Maria and grandson of (1) Karl von Lichnowsky. Felix was a member of the National Assembly at Frankfurt, and became a friend of Franz Liszt, with whom he corresponded.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Schindler: Biographie von Ludwig van Beethoven (Münster, 1840, enlarged 2/1845, 3/1860; Eng. trans., 1966, as Beethoven as I Knew Him)
'Franz Liszts Briefe an den Fürsten Felix Lichnowsky', Bayreuther Blätter, xxx (1907), 25–48
T. Frimmel: Beethoven-Handbuch (Leipzig, 1926/R), ii, 345ff
C. Preihs: 'Mozarts Beziehungen zu den Familien von Thun-Hohenstein', Neues Mozart-Jb 1943, 63–86
P. Nettl: Beethoven Encyclopedia (New York, 1956/R, 2/1967/R as Beethoven Handbook)
E. Forbes, ed.: Thayer's Life of Beethoven (Princeton, NJ, 1964, 2/1967)
C. Czerny: Errinerungen aus meinem Leben, ed. W. Kolneder (Strasbourg, 1968), 9, 19
J. Racek: 'Z hudební minulosti zámku Hradce u Opavy' [From the music history of Hradec Castle in Opava], Casopis Slezskeho musea, xxii (1973), 1–21
L. Gräfin Lichnowsky: 'Aus der Geschichte unserer Familie', Beethoven-Bildnis des Isidor Neugass und die Familie Lichnowsky, ed. M. Staehelin (Bonn, 1983), 41–50
H. Krones: '" . . . er habe ihm seine Liebsgeschichte in Musik setzen wollen": Ludwig van Beethovens e-moll Sonate, op.90', ÖMz, xliii (1988), 592–601
W. Brauneis: '" . . . wegen schuldigen 1435 f 32 xr": neuer Archivfund zur Finanzmisere Mozarts im November 1791', MISM, xxxix (1991), 159–63
W. Brauneis: 'Zwei adelige Musiksalons im Wien des späten Jahrhunderts: zur Topographie der Palais Thun-Hohenstein und Lichnowsky', Mitteilungsblatt der Wiener-Beethoven Gesellschaft, iii (1991), 9–12
Y. Kobayashi: 'Frühe Bach-Quellen im altösterreichischen Raum', Johann Sebastian Bach: Beiträge zur Wirkungsgeschichte, ed. I. Fuchs and S. Antonicek (Vienna, 1992), 35–46
J. Moore: 'Beethoven and Inflation', Beethoven Forum, i (1992), 191–222
J. May: 'Beethoven and Prince Karl Lichnowsky', Beethoven Forum, iii (1994), 29–38
H.C.R. Landon: The Mozart Essays (London, 1995), 213–23
K.M. Kopitz: 'Das Beethoven-Erlebnis Ludwig Tiecks und Beethovens Zerwürfnis mit Fürst Lichnowski', ÖMz, liii (1998), 16–23

ELLIOT FORBES/WILLIAM MEREDITH

Lichtenegger, Mathilde. See MALLINGER, MATHILDE.

Lichtenfels, Hainrich. See FABER, HEINRICH.

Lichtenhahn, Ernst (b Arosa, canton of Graubünden, 4 Jan 1934). Swiss musicologist. He studied musicology at Basle University with Schrade and Arnold Schmitz, and German literature with Walter Muschg; at the same time he completed a course at the Basle Academy for school music (1959). In 1961 he became an assistant lecturer at Basle University Musicology Institute; he took the doctorate at Basle in 1966 with a dissertation on Schumann and became lecturer on instruments in 1968. In 1969 he was appointed to the chair of musicology at Neuchâtel University, where he has taught both historical musicology and ethnomusicology. In addition to studying European music history, particularly that of the 18th and early 19th century, Lichtenhahn has specialized in the works of Swiss composers and the history of musicology in Switzerland.

WRITINGS

'Über einen Ausspruch Hoffmanns und über das Romantische in der Musik', Musik und Geschichte: Leo Schrade zum sechzigsten Geburtstag (Cologne, 1963), 178–98
Die Bedeutung des Dichterischen im Werk Robert Schumanns (diss., U. of Basle, 1966; Basle, 1974)
ed.: L. Schrade: De scientia musicae studia atque orationes (Berne, 1967) [Schrade's collected articles and bibliography]
'"Ars perfecta": zu Glareans Auffassung der Musikgeschichte', Festschrift Arnold Geering, ed. V. Ravizza (Berne, 1972), 129–38
'Die "Popularitätsfrage" in Richard Wagners Pariser Schriften', Schweizer Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft, i (1972), 143–61
'Aus Paul Sachers Briefwechsel mit Arthur Honegger', ÖMz, xxxi (1976), 208–15
ed., with T. Seebass: Musikhandschriften aus der Sammlung Paul Sacher (Basle, 1976) [incl. facs.]
'Sinfonie als Dichtung: zum geschichtlichen Ort von Schumanns "Rheinischer"', Schumanns Werke: Text und Interpretation: Düsseldorf 1985, 17–27
'Othmar Schoeck, der "letzte Romantiker": Missverständnis und Einsicht', Auseinandersetzung mit Othmar Schoeck: Berne 1986, 151–66
'Der musikalische Stilwandel im Selbstverständnis der Zeit um 1750', Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach und die europäische Musikkultur: Hamburg 1988, 65–77
'Musikwissenschaft in der Schweiz: Entwicklungen, Erträge und Projekte der letzten Jahre', AcM, lxi (1989), 327–41
'"Neue geniale Wendungen": die musikalische Improvisation um 1800', Improvisation: Luzern 1990, 100–11
'Aspekte einer Geschichte der Kammerorchester', Fünfzig Jahre Collegium Musicum Zürich ... die Konzerte des Kammerorchesters Collegium Musicum Zürich 194 1/2–1991/2, ed. S. Ehrisman (Zürich, 1994), 73–108

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Ballmer and T. Gartmann, eds.: Tradition und Innovation in der Musik: Festschrift für Ernst Lichtenhahn (Winterthur, 1993) [incl. list of writings, 233–7]

JÜRG STENZL

Lichtenstein, Karl August, Freiherr von (b Lahm, nr Kronach, 8 Sept 1767; d Berlin, 10 Sept 1845). German composer and theatre manager. After spending his childhood in Gotha, where his father was a government official, and further education at Göttingen, he served for a while with the English army before entering Hanoverian service; his opera Glück und Zufall, to his own libretto, was performed at Hanover in 1793. In 1797 he was appointed manager of the court opera in Dessau, whose new house opened on 26 December 1798 with a performance of his opera Bathmendi. Apart from his administrative responsibilities and the works he wrote, he and his wife frequently performed in operas. His Singspiel Die steinerne Braut proved very successful in 1799; a duet from it was published in the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung.

In 1800, following financial difficulties after an ambitious and artistically successful guest season at Leipzig, Lichtenstein left Dessau for Vienna, where he became Kapellmeister and artistic director under Baron von Braun, Intendant of the Hoftheater, for three years. Bathmendi was a failure when, newly revised, it was given on 16 April 1801. Five years later Lichtenstein gave up theatrical activities and returned to diplomacy, as minister to the Duke of Saxe-Hildburghausen, but in 1811 he went to Bamberg and in 1813 became director of the theatre. He also took up composing again, with Die Waldburg (1811), Imago (1813–14) and a considerable number of other stage works. In 1814 Lichtenstein moved from Bamberg to Strasbourg, as musical director. He returned to Bamberg in 1817, and in 1823, after a brief stay in Dresden, he settled in Berlin, where his opera Die Edelknaben was given. After a period of responsibility for the spoken theatre, he took up an appointment at the opera in 1825. He was pensioned in 1832 though he continued to adapt, translate and even compose stage works.

In addition to his own operas, Lichtenstein provided librettos for other composers (including a revision of Agnes von Hohenstaufen for Spontini in 1837), and he translated or arranged nearly 20 operas by some of the leading composers of the day.

WORKS

Glück und Zufall (komische Oper, 2, Lichtenstein), Hanover, 26 April 1793
Knall und Fall, Bamberg, 1795
Bathmendi (grosse allegorisch-komische Oper, 2, E.W. Behrisch), Dessau, Hof, 26 Dec 1798; rev. version, Vienna, Hof, 16 April 1801
Die steinerne Braut (Spl, Lichtenstein), Dessau, Hof, 25 April 1799
Ende gut, alles gut (komische Oper, 1, F.X. Huber), Dessau, Hof, 26 Oct 1800
Mitgefühl (Liederspiel, 1, Troitschke), Dessau, Hof, 26 Oct 1800
Der Kaiser als [und der] Zimmermann, oder Frauenwerth (grosse komische Oper, 3, Lichtenstein, after J.-N. Bouilly), Strasbourg, 22 June 1814
Imago, die Tochter der Zwietracht, 1813–14, ?unperf.
Das Mädchen aus der Fremde (Operette, 3), Bamberg, National, 1821
Die Waldburg, 1811 (2, Lichtenstein), Dresden, 11 June 1822
Die Edelknaben, oder Zur guten Stunde (Spl, 2, Lichtenstein, after N. Dezède), Berlin, Kgl, 27 May 1823
Jerusalem (lyrisches Drama, 2, Lichtenstein), Bamberg, National, 1824
Singethee und Liedertafel (Spl, 2, Lichtenstein), Berlin, 25 March 1825
Die deutschen Herren in Nürnberg (grosse Oper, 3, Lichtenstein, after E.T.A. Hoffmann), Berlin, 14 March 1834
Der Gluthengeist, ? Darmstadt
Trübsale eines Hofbankiers (komische Oper), sent to Dessau in 1838, ? unperf.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (R. Eitner); SteigerO; WurzbachL
G. Schilling: Das musikalische Europa (Speyer, 1842), 210
E. Bernsdorf: Neues Universal-Lexikon der Tonkunst, ii (Dresden, 1857)
C. Schäffer and C.Hartmann: Die königlichen Theater in Berlin: statistischer Rückblick (Berlin, 1886)
F. Leist: Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Theaters in Bamberg (Bamberg, 1862, enlarged 2/1893 as Geschichte des Theaters in Bamberg zum Jahre 1862)
M. von Prosky: Das herzogliche Hoftheater zu Dessau: in seinen Anfängen bis zur Gegenwart(Dessau, 1884, 2/1894)
G. Fischer: Musik in Hannover (Hanover and Leipzig, 1903) [2nd edn of Opern und Konzerte im Hoftheater zu Hannover bis 1866]
F. Schnapp, ed.: E.T.A. Hoffmanns Briefwechsel, iii (Munich, 1969)
F. Schnapp, ed.: E.T.A. Hoffmann: Tagebücher (Munich, 1971)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Lichtenstein, Ulrich von. See ULRICH VON LIECHTENSTEIN.

Lichtenthal, Peter [Pietro] (b Pressburg [now Bratislava], 10 May 1780; d Milan, 18 Aug 1853). Austrian writer on music and composer. A doctor of medicine by profession, having earned his degree in Vienna, he settled in Milan in 1810 as a censor for the government. He was a close friend of Mozart's son Karl, and an ardent proponent of Mozart's chamber music. He composed about 50 works, including seven ballets for the Teatro alla Scala, church music, orchestral music (about 15 symphonies), chamber music, songs, piano and organ works. A number of these were published; most of his manuscripts are in the Milan Conservatory library.

Lichtenthal's importance lies in his writings, in particular his four-volume Dizionario e bibliografia della musica (1826), which although full of factual errors, and being in significant measure a translation of the dictionaries of Gerber (1790–92), Koch (1802) and Castil-Blaze (1821) and the bibliography of Forkel (1792), is nevertheless a landmark in the development from dilettantism to modern, systematic bibliographic method.

WRITINGS

Harmonik für Damen (Vienna, 1806)
Der musikalische Arzt, oder Abhandlung von dem Einflusse der Musik auf den menschlichen Körper (Vienna, 1807; It. trans., 1811/R)
Orpheik, oder Anweisung, die Regeln der Komposition auf eine leichte und fassliche Art gründlich zu erlernen (Vienna, 1816)
Cenni biografici intorno al celebre maestro Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (Milan, 1816/R)
Dizionario e bibliografia della musica (Milan,1826/R)
Estetica, ossia Dottrina del bello e delle belle arti (Milan, 1831)
Mozart e le sue creazioni (Milan, 1842)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; MGG1(C. Sartori); SchmidlD
G. Vecchi: ' Idee estetyczne-muzyczne we Włoszech pierwsze połowie XIX. wieku i estetyka P. Lichtenthala (1831) i R. Boucherona (1842)' [The notion of music aesthetics in Italy in the first half of the 19th century and the aesthetics of P. Lichtenthal (1831) and R. Boucheron (1842)], Incontro con la musica italiana e polacca VII: Warsaw 1975, 11–38 [with It. summary]
M. Dona: 'Peter Lichtental, musicista e musicologo', Ars iocundissima: Festschrift für Kurt Dorfmüller, ed. H. Leuchtmann and R. Münster (Tutzing, 1984), 49–63

ALFRED LOEWENBERG/BRUCE CARR

Lichtenwanger, William (John) (b Asheville, NC, 28 Feb 1915). American music librarian. He attended the University of Michigan, where he took the BM in 1937 and the MM in 1940; he also did postgraduate work at Indiana University. From 1937 to 1940 he was music librarian at the University of Michigan. He then joined the staff of the Library of Congress, where he was head of the reference section in the music division, 1960–74. His particular interests as a librarian were music reference problems and services and musical lexicography. He was also active as an editor of reference works and Notes (the quarterly journal of the music library association), for which he edited 'Bibliography of Asiatic Musics' (1947–51) and which he supervised, 1960–63. He compiled two important directories of instrument collections (1961, 1974), was music editor of, and a contributor to, Church Music and Musical Life in Pennsylvania (1947) and Collier's Encyclopedia (New York, 1949–51), and was joint editor of the index to Modern Music (1976).

WRITINGS

ed.: Church Music and Musical Life in Pennsylvania in the Eighteenth Century, iii (Philadelphia, 1947/R)
with L.E. Gilliam: The Dayton C. Miller Flute Collection: a Checklist of the Instruments (Washington DC, 1961)
'Another Treble Flute d'Allemagne by P.-J. Bressan', GSJ, xv (1962), 45–8
'Star-Spangled Bibliography', College Music Symposium, xii (1972), 94–102
A Survey of Musical Instrument Collections in the United States and Canada (Ann Arbor, 1974)
ed., with C. Lichtenwanger: W.D. Shirley: Modern Music, Published by the League of Composers, 1924–1946: an Analytic Index (New York, 1976)
'The Music of "The Star-Spangled Banner" from Ludgate Hill to Capitol Hill', Quarterly Journal of the Library of Congress, xxxiv/3 (1977), 136–70; pubd separately (Washington DC, 1977)
'The Music of the Star-Spangled Banner: Whence and Whither?', College Music Symposium, xviii/2 (1978), 34–81
'94-553 and All That: Ruminations on Copyright Today, Yesterday, and Tomorrow', Notes, xxxv (1978–9), 803–18; xxxvi (1979–80), 837–48
'When "Notes" Was Young: 1945–1960', Notes, xxxix (1982–3), 7–30
ed.: Oscar Sonneck and American Music (Urbana, IL, 1983)
'Oscar Sonneck Writes to Carl Engel', American Music, i/2 (1983), 60–69
The Music of Henry Cowell: a Descriptive Catalog (Brooklyn, NY, 1986)
'Richard S. Hill and the "Unsettled" Text of "The Star Spangled Banner"', Richard S. Hill: Tributes, ed. C.J. Bradley and J.B. Coover (Detroit, 1987), 71–184
'Thor Johnson: a Personal Memoir', A Celebration of American Music: Words and Music in Honor of H. Wiley Hitchcock, ed.

R.A. Crawford, R.A. Lott and C.J. Oja (Ann Arbor, 1990), 97–104
'Music and Copyright Law in the United States', Music Publishing & Collecting: Essays in Honor of Donald W. Krummel, ed. D. Hunter (Urbana, IL, 1994), 69–94

PAULA MORGAN

Li Chunyi (b Tianjin, 12 Feb 1920). Chinese musicologist. He attended the No. 1 Provincial Middle School of Hebei province and Department of Economics, College of Industry and Commerce in Tianjin. In 1942–3 he attended the National Opera College in Chongqing, where he majored in theory and composition.

He worked in north-east China (Manchuria) as a music instructor in the Guandong Social Education Service (1948–9); music instructor, research fellow and director of the Research Centre for Music at Dongbei Lu Xun Academy for the Arts (1949–52); and deputy dean and director of the Research Centre and Library of the Dongbei College of Music (1953–6) which he and An Bo established jointly in 1949. In 1956 he was appointed director of the Division of Ancient Chinese Music History at the Chinese Music Research Institute in Beijing. He has been a research fellow of that institute (renamed as Music Research Institute, Chinese Academy of Arts) in Beijing ever since. Since 1948 Li had numerous publications in ancient Chinese music aesthetics, history, archaeology and theory.

WRITINGS

Woguo yuanshi shiqi yinyue chutan [Preliminary study of Chinese music in the primitive period] (Beijing, 1957)
Zhongguo gudai yinyue shigao [Draft history of ancient Chinese music], i (Beijing, 1958/R)
Zhongguo shanggu chutu yueqi zonglun [Survey of ancient excavated musical instruments in China] (Beijing, 1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Han Kuo-huang: 'Three Chinese musicologists: Yang Yinliu, Yin Falu, Li Chunyi', EthM, xxiv (1980), 483–529
Zhongguo yinyue cidian, xubian [Dictionary of Chinese music, supplementary vol.] (Beijing, 1992), 103–4

HAN KUO-HUANG

Licino, Agostino (fl 1545–6). Italian composer. His only known works are two volumes of canonic duos, Primo libro di duo cromatici … da cantare et sonare (Venice, 1545) and Il secondo libro di duo cromatici … da cantare et sonare (Venice, 1546). All that is known about his life is stated in these volumes: he was from Cremona, he worked in the service of Benedetto Guarna of Salerno, and he intended his duets for the instruction and enjoyment of his patron's sons and their friends. Though printed without text, they were intended, according to the title-page, to be sung or played.

The two volumes contain canons in each of the eight modes at various intervals of time and pitch, although the majority are at the 5th above or below. The modal organisation of the first volume suggests that the collection started as a systematic modal cycle with five canons each in modes 1 through 4; the second volume is less systematic, containing six examples in modes 5 and 7, nine in mode 6 and four in mode 8. Licino's treatment of mode suggests familiarity with Pietro Aaron's treatises. In both volumes each mode is defined by the final, system and ambitus of the leading voice, and is strengthened by cadence points. Authentic and plagal modes are separated by the use of high and low clef combinations. The rigorous use of exact imitation in a modal context supports claims of pedagogical intent. The duos are diatonic; the 'cromatici' of the titles refers to their many black notes and hence fast passages, rather than to accidentals.

HOWARD MAYER BROWN/NAOMI JOY BARKER

Lick. A term used in jazz, blues and pop music to describe a short recognizable melodic motif, formula or phrase. Improvising jazz and blues musicians have at their disposal a repertory of licks, some of their own invention by which they can be identified, some borrowed from other players, and a solo may be little more than the stringing together of a number of such fragments. In some styles (e.g. slow blues) and for some ubiquitous chord progressions (e.g. I–II–V–I in major or minor keys) a common stock of licks is in circulation.

ROBERT WITMER/R

Lickl. Austrian family of musicians.

(1) Johann Georg Lickl (b Korneuburg, Lower Austria, 11 April 1769; d Fünfkirchen [now Pécs], Hungary, 12 May 1843). Composer and conductor. Orphaned at an early age, he studied music under Witzig, the Korneuburg church organist. In 1785 he went to Vienna, teaching music and studying with Albrechtsberger and Haydn. He was appointed organist at the Carmelite church in the Leopoldstadt, where Eybler was choirmaster. From about 1789 (or later) he was on the music staff of Schikaneder's Freihaus-Theater auf der Wieden, from 1793 contributing complete or partial scores to a series of popular Singspiele, including Der Zauberpfeil, Das Zigeunermädchen, Die Haushaltung nach der Mode, Der Bruder von Kakran, Der Kampf mit dem Fürsten der Finsternis, Fausts Leben, Taten und Höllenfahrt, Der vermeinte Hexenmeister, Der Orgelspieler and Der Durchmarsch. For the new Theater an der Wien he wrote Der Brigitten-Kirchtag in 1802, and in 1812 he supplied the Theater in der Leopoldstadt with a comic opera, Slawina von Pommern. Despite these successes, sacred music was his particular interest, and in 1804 he composed a mass for Empress Maria Theresa, followed by one for Princess Esterházy. In 1805 he was appointed regens chori at Fünfkirchen Cathedral, where he lived and worked for nearly 40 years. During this period he wrote a quantity of church music, including 24 masses, two requiems and many smaller pieces, chamber music for wind instruments and a number of keyboard works.

(2) Karl Georg Lickl (b Vienna, 28 Oct 1801; d Vienna, 3 Aug 1877). Physharmonica player and composer, son of (1) Johann Georg Lickl. He became a civil servant but was a talented amateur musician who gained particular fame as a virtuoso on, and composer and theorist for, the physharmonica.

(3) Aegidius [Ferdinand] Karl Lickl (b Vienna, 1 Sept 1803; d Trieste, 22 July 1864). Composer and conductor, son of (1) Johann Georg Lickl. After study with his father and gaining some eminence as a pianist he moved to Trieste in the 1830s, where he became a popular teacher, conductor and composer. His opera La disfida di Berletta was staged in February 1848, the oratorio Der Triumph des Christentums was performed in Vienna in 1855, and he wrote a quantity of church music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ADB (R. Eitner); GerberNL; WurzbachL
A. Gross: Obituary, Allgemeine Wiener Musik-Zeitung, no.84, vol.iii (1843), 349–50

E. Bernsdorf, ed.: Neues Universal-Lexikon der Tonkunst, ii (Dresden, 1857), 759
K. Moeck: 'The Beginnings of the Woodwind Quintet', NACWPI Journal, xxvi/2 (1977), 22–33
K. Birsak: 'Die Bläsercassation KVC 17.11 ist von Georg Lickl', Jahresschrift: Salzburger Museum Carolino Augusteum, xxiii–xxiv (1977–8), 88–90

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Lidarti, Christian Joseph [Cristiano Giuseppe] (b Vienna, 23 Feb 1730; d ?Pisa, after 1793). Austrian composer of Italian descent. He studied at a Cistercian monastery in Klagenfurt and afterwards at the Jesuit seminary in Leoben. While enrolled in philosophy and law courses at the University of Vienna, he studied the harpsichord and harp and began to teach himself composition. In Vienna the Kapellmeister Giuseppe Bonno, his uncle, reproached him for his dilettantism and directed him to study the classic theorists. In 1751 he went to Italy to complete his musical education. After short stays in Venice and Florence, he spent five years in Cortona as a music teacher and composer and studied with Jommelli in Rome in 1757. From then until at least 1784 he was a player in the chapel of the Cavalieri di S Stefano in Pisa. In 1761 he became a member of the Accademia Filarmonica in Bologna and later in Modena. His last dated composition is from 1793. Lidarti's regular association and correspondence with his colleagues such as Martini, Jommelli and Burney indicates that they held him in high esteem. Five letters to Martini spanning the years 1762–84 are in the Bologna Conservatory library.

Lidarti's instrumental works (of which there are nearly 200) are bipartite in structure and show a preference for forms such as the minuet, even in sonata finales. They are lightly ornamented and often approach near-equality in voicing. Van der Straeten depicts Lidarti as a cellist, a fact omitted from his autobiography but borne out by the unusual technical demands placed on the cello in much of his chamber music, especially the quartets, in which the cello is more prominent than in the majority of quartets of that time. His compositions maintain a serene songlike quality, interrupted only by occasional fugal or canonic passages.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: Sonata, 2 vn, bc, in 6 Sonatas ... by Salvatore Galleotti and ... Lidarti (London, 1762); 6 str qts (Pisa, after 1762); 6 sinfonie, 2 vn, va, b, other insts ad lib, op.2 (Paris, *c*1768); 6 trii, 2 vn, b, op.3 (Paris, *c*1770); 6 Sonatas, 2 fl/vn, bc (hpd) (London, *c*1770); 6 Duetts, vn, vc (London, *c*1795); others, A-Wgm (incl. sonata, viola pomposa, bc, attrib. in EitnerQ) B-Bc; D-Hs, MÜs; GB-Lbl; I-Mc, MOe, Nc

Vocal: La tutela contrastata fra Giunone, Marte e Mercurio, col giudizio di Giove, componimento drammatico, 1767, A-Wn; arias, D-Dl, I-MTventuri; sacred works, Baf, Fc, PAc, PIst

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyFI; MGG1 (L.F. Tagliavini)
C.G. Lidarti: Aneddoti musicali (MS, I-Bc)
E.S.J. van der Straeten: History of the Violoncello (London, 1915/R)
R. Meylan: 'La collection Antonio Venturi, Montecatini-Terme (Pistoia), Italie', FAM, v (1958), 31–44
E. Grolman: Cristiano Giuseppe Lidarti: Six String Quartets (diss., U. of Missouri, 1986)

GUIDO SALVETTI/ELLEN GROLMAN SCHLEGEL

Lidel, Andreas. See LIDL, ANDREAS.

Lidholm, Ingvar (Natanael) (b Jönköping, 24 Feb 1921). Swedish composer. In 1940 he entered the Royal Swedish Academy of Music to study the violin with Barkel, the piano with Brandel and conducting with Mann, but in 1943 he broke off his studies to join the royal chapel as a viola player. He stayed there until 1946, also studying composition with Rosenberg during this period. Later he was associated with other Rosenberg pupils (Blomdahl, Bäck, Johanson and others) in the influential Monday Group. He conducted the partly amateur Örebro Orchestra from 1947 to 1956, during which period he visited France, Switzerland and Italy (1946–7), the Darmstadt summer courses (1949) and England for further composition studies with Seiber (1954). He has also served as director of chamber music for Swedish Radio (1956–65), professor of composition at the Royal Swedish Academy of Music (1965–75) and director of planning for the radio music department (1974–9) and consultant (1979–84).

Lidholm's early works, especially the often performed Toccata e canto for chamber orchestra, the songs and piano pieces, reveal a Nordic tone and an affiliation to Nielsen and Hindemith. Of the Monday Group composers he was at first the most concerned with Stravinsky and early vocal polyphony, as is evident from the very successful choral Laudi (1947); but subsequent contacts with new tendencies in Europe profoundly altered his thinking. As early as 1949 he took up 12-note serialism in the Klavierstück, and this was followed by his adoption of later serial practices and of improvisatory sequences, as in the orchestral Poesis (1963), with its central piano cadenza. However, within this development he has maintained and even emphasized certain distinctive characteristics, such as his marked sensitivity to choral scoring (his major works hold a pre-eminent place in modern Swedish choral music), his colourful orchestral language and his lyricism, which permeates even the large-scale works.

Although Lidholm has composed in most genres, he is at his best in vocal works, in which he has evolved a style often at variance with those of his colleagues, such as Blomdahl and Bäck. If the earlier pieces lie within the middle ground of modern music, the pedagogical A cappella-bok, begun in 1956, raises all manner of artistic problems and seeks their solution. Its basis is a single 12-note series with tonal associations (to assist singers), but gradually a whole range of techniques is brought into play, culminating in the great Canto LXXXI. The symphonic cantata Skaldens natt ('The Poet's Night') uses words as symphonic elements, while in Nausikaa ensam textless vocal effects are skilfully applied. All of Lidholm's vocal techniques are brought to a masterly integration in ... a riveder le stelle.

His technical development in the orchestral genre is represented in a twin set of works characterized by the brilliance of the orchestral writing: Greetings from an Old World, written for the 1976 USA bicentenary, in which Heinrich Isaac's Innsbruck ich muss dich lassen forms part of the thematic material; and Kontakion, commissioned by the Royal Stockholm PO for its first Soviet tour in 1979, in which the quotation of a Russo-Byzantine hymn (very similar to the one used by Britten in his Cello Suite op.87) is given a sombre, requiem-like character. Ett drömspel, his first opera, which had a highly successful première at the Swedish Royal Opera in 1990, is a compendium of many aspects of his style. The mood moves from mild elegy to roaring aggression, often using a chamber orchestra texture. A long a cappella hymn (De profundis, 1983) closes the first act and the work ends with a sombre quotation from Kontakion.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Riter (ballet, E. Lindegren), orch, tape, 1960; Holländarn (TV op, H. Grevenius, after A. Strindberg), 1967; Inga träd skall väcka dig (TV drama), 1974; Ett drömspel (op, 2, Strindberg), 1978–89, Stockholm, 1990

Orch: Toccata e canto, chbr orch, 1944; Conc., str, 1945 [after Str Qt]; Vn Conc., 1951; Musik för stråkar, 1952; Ritornell, 1955; Mutanza, 1959; Motus-colores, 1960; Poesis, 1963; Greetings from an Old World, 1976; Kontakion, 1979

Vocal: Laudi, chorus, 1947; 6 Songs, 1v, pf, 1946–8; Cant., Bar, orch, 1949; 4 Choruses, unacc., 1953; A cappella-bok, 1956–, incl. Canto LXXXI (E. Pound), 1956; Skaldens natt [The Poet's Night] (C.J.L. Almqvist), S, chorus, orch, 1957–8; Nausikaa ensam (E. Johnson), S, chorus, orch, 1963; ... a riveder le stelle (Dante), 1v, chorus, 1971–3; The Persians (dramatic scena, Aeschylus), T, Bar, nar, male chorus, 1978; 2 Madrigals (Strindberg), chorus unacc., 1981; De profundis (Strindberg), chorus unacc., 1983; Inbillningens värld (J.H. Kellgren), male chorus, 1990

Chbr and inst: Str Qt, 1945; Sonata, fl, 1946; Pf Sonata, 1947; 10 miniatyrer, pf, 1948; Klavierstück, 1949; Pf Sonatina, 1950; Little Str Trio, 1953; Invention, cl + b cl/va + vc/pf, 1954; 4 Pieces, vc, pf, 1955; Stamp Music, score on postage stamp, 1971

Principal publishers: Gehrman, Nordiska Musikförlaget, Universal

WRITINGS

'Tankar kring Ritornell för orkester', Modern nordisk musik, ed. I. Bengtsson (Stockholm, 1957), 204–15

'Rörelser, färger. . .', Nutida musik, iv/2 (1960–61), 23–5 [on Motus-colores]

'Poesis for Orchestra', Three Aspects of New Music (Stockholm, 1968), 57–80; Ger. trans. in Melos, xxxvi (1969), 63–76

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (L. Lesle)

I. Bengtsson: ' Sven-Erik Bäck och Ingvar Lidholm', Melos, xxii (1956), 345–9

H. Herresthal: 'Greetings from an Old World av Ingvar Lidholm', Nordiskamusikdagar/ Nordische Musiktage: Stockholm 1978, 143–54

N.L. Wallin: 'Struktur och funktion: funderingar kring Ingvar Lidholms "Greetings"', ibid., 167–204

B.E. Brolsma: The Music of Ingvar Lidholm: a Survey and Analysis (Ann Arbor, MI, 1981)

G. Larsson: 'Ingvar Lidholms Kontakion', Artes [Stockholm] (1982), no.4, pp.96–107

G. Schönfelder: 'Kontakion' Beiträge zur Ästhetik der reuere schwedischen Musik (Stockholm, 1984), 255–89; Eng. trans. in Contemporary Music through the Telescopic Sight (Stockholm, 1993), 111–46

L. Reimers: 'Lidholm-veckan på Stockholms Konserthus', Kungl. musikaliska akademien årsskrift 1986 (Stockholm, 1987), 35–8

B. Wallner: ' Att uppenbara tonens skönhet: Ingvar Lidholm – ett tonsättarporträtt', Nutida musik, xxx/1 (1986–7), 45–57

B. Wallner: 'Ingvar Lidholms röda tråd: andens fria forskning', Konsertnytt, xxii/Oct (October, 1986–7), 3–23

J. Tillman: Ingvar Lidholm och tolvtonstekniken: analytiska och historiska perspektiv på Ingvar Lidholms musik från 1950-talet (diss., U. of Stockholm, 1995)

HANS ÅSTRAND

Lidl [Lidel], Andreas (b ?Vienna; d London, before 1789). Austrian baryton and viola da gamba player. He was in the Eszterházy Kapelle from 1769 to 1774; it is recorded in the Eszterházy archives that on 23 July 1770 'paper with 8 staves was purchased for Herr Lidl to write paradon music for His Highness Prince Nicolaus'. Pohl records that Schubart heard him in Augsburg in 1776 and that he went to London in 1778, where he lived for ten years. In Pohl's lists (1867) of virtuosos in London Lidl is given as baryton player in 1776 and viola da gamba player in 1778. Contemporary newspaper advertisements show that Lidl played in London on 28 May 1777 for his own benefit, under the direction of 'Mr Bach'. The programme included a duet for violin and baryton, played by Franz Lamotte and Lidl, followed by a viola d'amore concerto played by Stamitz. Fétis said 'il brillait encore à Berlin, 1784'; and Burney said that he was dead by 1789. To Junker we owe the information that his performance enchanted through 'sweet grace, with German strength unexpectedly linked with most harmonious melody'. He also increased the wire understrings to 27 so that the self-accompaniment could be fully chromatic. Burney's reference to Lidl states that he played with exquisite taste and expression and includes an amusing account of what he considered to be the outlandishness of self-accompaniment on the baryton.

At a meeting of the Society of Antiquaries in London on 22 November 1849 Mr Lidel, grandson of Andreas Lidl, exhibited his grandfather's baryton (made by Tielke in 1687, and given to him by the Bishop of Salzburg). The instrument was also exhibited at a meeting of the Musical Society of London on 2 July 1862.

WORKS
all published in London

op.
1	6 Trios, vn/fl, vn, vc (1776)
2	6 Quartettos (1778); 3 for 2 vn, va, vc; 3 for fl, vn, va, vc
3	6 Duettos, vn, va/vc/vn (1778)
4	6 Sonatas, vn, va, vc (1778)
5	3 Quintettos, fl, vn, 2 va, vc (*c*1780)
6	A 2nd Sett of 6 Duettos (*c*1780); 3 for vn, va; 3 for vn, vc
7	A 2nd Sett of 6 Quartettos (*c*1780); 5 for 2 vn, va, vc; 1 for ob, vn, va, vc
8	A 3rd Sett of 6 Duettos, vn, vn/vc (1785)

Songs pubd singly and in 18th-century anthologies

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; EitnerQ; FétisB

C.L. Junker: Musikalischer Almanach auf das Jahr 1782 (Alethinopel [Berlin], 1782)

W. Sandys and S.A. Forster: History of the Violin (London, 1864), 131

C.F. Pohl: Mozart und Haydn in London (Vienna, 1867/R), i, 52; ii, 96, 374

C.F. Pohl: Joseph Haydn, i (Berlin, 1875, 2/1878/R), 251; ii (Leipzig, 1882/R), 16, 18

S. Gerlach: 'Die chronologische Ordnung von Haydns Sinfonien zwischen 1774 und 1782', Haydn-Studien, ii/1 (1969–70), 34–60, esp. 50

J. Harich: 'Haydn Documenta IV', Haydn Yearbook 1970, 47–168, esp. 67, 84

G. Hellwig: Joachim Tielke: ein Hamburger Lauten- und Violenmacher der Barockszeit (Frankfurt, 1980), 190

PETER PLATT/TERENCE PAMPLIN

Lidón (Blázquez), José (b Béjar, Salamanca, 2 June 1748; d Madrid, 11 Feb 1827). Spanish composer and organist. He was first taught by his father, organist of the parish church of S María, Béjar, then in 1758 entered the Real Colegio de Niños Cantores in Madrid. He became second organist at Orense Cathedral and, from 1768, fourth organist at the royal chapel in Madrid. In 1771 he was appointed 'maestro de estilo italiano' of the choristers at the Real Colegio and in 1787 was made first organist and assistant master at the royal chapel. From 1780 to 1792 he also worked for the house of Osuna as a composer and harpsichord teacher to the Duchess of Benavente and directed her private orchestra. The orchestra's repertory included works by Haydn, who, from 1783, was contracted to send all his compositions to the duchess. In 1805 Lidón was appointed master of the royal chapel and rector of the Colegio de Niños Cantores, succeeding Antonio Ugena. Lidón retained his post during the Napoleonic invasion (1808–14), as a result of which Fernando VII, although confirming his duties in 1814 as chapel master and rector, demoted him to a lower category, thereby preventing his participation in the music of the royal household. Among his pupils were Joaquín Asiain, Pedro Carrera y Lanchares, Ramón Garay, Melchor López and Lidón's nephews Alfonso, Andrés and Mariano.

Lidón was one of the most important Spanish composers of his generation. He composed over 70 sacred works, of which only his Ave maris stella for four voices and strings has been published. His keyboard works, which number more than 40, include versos, glosas, tientos or intentos (some in three sections), preludes, fugues and sonatas. Some of the sonatas are in binary form while others develop 'en forma de versos' or are made up of a prelude and variation on a pre-existant hymn. His keyboard music contains a mixture of tradition and modernity: plainchant themes and imitative motifs, though with a profusion of melodic repetition typical of the galant style. Some of his works, such as the Sonata de sexto tono, could be considered close to the pre-Romantic aesthetic. Lidón's heroic drama Glaura y Cariolano (1791) is notable as an attempt to create an Italian opera seria in Spanish. The plot is based on an episode from the conquest of Chile. The work, which is in two acts, is written in a deliberately simple style, using a vocal quartet and orchestra but without choruses or dances.

Two of Lidón's brothers were also musicians. The elder, Lorenzo (1740–95), was organist from 1760 at the monastery of Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, where he was known as Fray Lorenzo de Béjar.

WORKS

Stage: Glaura y Cariolano (drama heroico, 2, I. García Malo, after A. de Ercilla: La Araucana), 1791, Madrid, Príncipe, 1792, E-Mn; El barón de Illescas (zarzuela, L.F. de Moratín), music lost; Los das hermanos (tonadilla), lost

Vocal: more than 70 sacred works, some acc., incl. at least 5 masses, vespers, complines, hymns, 33 Lamentations, lits, Misereres, ps settings, Salve regina settings, seqs, Mp, GU, MO, ORI, SA, Convento de la Encarnación, Madrid, Santuario de Aránzazu, Guipúzcoa, Parroquia de S Esteve de Olot, Gerona; villancicos, Mn, Mp, GU, MO

Org: 6 fugas para órgano con sus intentos formadas sobre el canto de 6 himnos (Madrid, ?1778, 2/?1781), MS in SEG; 6 piezas, o sonatas . . . en forma de versos grandes de octavo tono (Madrid, 1787), MS in Mn; 12 Pange lingua, Mn; 12 glosas sobre el Tantum ergo, Mn; Juego de versos, MO; 4 versos o sonatas, *c*1799; Preludio y fuga sobre el Pange lingua español, ALB; Preludio, fuga y Pange lingua, ALB; other works, VAcp; 3 intentos ed. S. Rubio, Organistas de la Real capilla, i (Madrid, 1973); Glosado and Pange lingua, ed. J.M. Muneta, Música de tecla de la Catedral de Albarracín, i: Música de órgano (Teruel, 1981); 10 piezas ed. D. García Fraile and G. Bovet, José Lidón: obras completas para organo, i (Fleurier 1996)

Chbr: 1 vn sonata, 1 va sonata, both Mp; Qt, hn, str, 1800, Mp, ed. T. Garrido, Música espagñola para orquesta de cuerda (siglos XVIII y XIX) (Madrid, 1998)

Theoretical: Colección de bajetes, in F.M. López: Reglas generales, o Escuela de acompañar al órgano o clave (MS, Mn); Compendio teórico y práctico de la modulación, Bc, ?identical with Arte de modular cited in Mitjana; Reglas para aprender a acompañar, *c*1820, Santuario de Aránzazu, Guipúzcoa, ?identical with Tratado de acompañamiento: reglas muy útiles para los organistas y aficionados al piano para acompañar con método, cited by Mitjana; Directorio del órgano, cited in MGG1 suppl.; Tratado de fuga o paso, cited by Soriano Fuertes and Mitjana

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LaborD; NewmanSCE; SubiráHME

M. Soriano Fuertes: Historia de la música española, iv (Madrid, 1859), 297 [incl. list of works in E-Mp]

B. Saldoni: Diccionario biográfico-bibliográfico de efemérides de músicos españoles (Madrid, 1868–81/R), i, 247–51; ii, 85; iv, 268

R. Mitjana y Gordón: 'La musique en Espagne', EMDC, I/iv (1920), 1913–2351

H. Anglès and J. Subirá: Catálogo musical de la Biblioteca nacional de Madrid, i (Barcelona, 1946) [with addl bibliography]

S. Rubio: 'José Lidón (1746–1827): organista de la Capilla Real', TSM, lvi (1973), 53–5

A. Martín Moreno: Historia de la música española, iv: Siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1985/R)

L. Robledo: 'La música en la corte de José I', AnM, xlvi (1991), 205–43

M.A. Gómez Pintor: 'Fuentes documentales para el estudio de las casas de Osuna y Arcos', RdMc, xvi (1993), 3459–75

D. García Fraile: 'Un drama heroico en verso castellano: Glaura y Cariolano de Joseph Lidón, representado en Madrid, en el tercer centenario del descubrimiento de América', Teatro y música en España: Salamanca 1994, 145–76

MARÍA GEMBERO USTÁRROZ

Lié (Fr.). See LEGATO.

Lie, Sigurd (b Drammen, 23 May 1871; d Vestre Aker, 30 Sept 1904). Norwegian composer. He was first taught music by August Rojahn, the organist of Kristiansand Cathedral. He studied the violin with Gudbrand Bøhn and theory and composition with Iver Holter at Lindeman's conservatory in Christiania, where he was also a violinist in a theatre orchestra. In 1891 he went to Leipzig, where for two and a half years he studied theory and composition with Reinecke and Rust and the violin with Arno Hilfs at the conservatory. His first music was published in 1892 – six songs to texts by his friend Vilhelm Krag. A piano quintet written at Leipzig was performed in 1894 after his return to Christiania, and its acclaim led to a state stipend. He went to Berlin and studied composition with Heinrich Urban (1894–5), writing, among other things, a suite for strings and a concert piece for violin and orchestra based on the folksong Huldra aa'n Elland.

In 1895 Lie was invited to become the leader of the Harmonien music society in Bergen. He soon added to his duties the conductorship of the Musikforening, which in 1897 performed his Erling Skjalgsøn, a large work for baritone solo, male chorus and orchestra. During the winter of 1898–9 he was conductor of the orchestra of Fahlstrøm's Centre Theatre in Christiania and in October 1899 he gave a concert of his own works which established him as one of the most promising Norwegian musical talents. He divided the next two years between periods of study in Berlin and engagements in Bergen, where in October 1901 he conducted the first three movements of his Symphony in A minor. In the following year his health deteriorated seriously; he was forced to defer taking up a conducting appointment in Christiania and to spend the winter of 1902–3 in a sanatorium. There he tried to finish his symphony for performance in Christiania, but in order to meet the deadline he required the assistance of his friend and former teacher Iver Holter, who also conducted the first complete performance in February 1903. His health improved during 1903 and in spring 1904 he took the Handelsstandens Sangforening of Christiania on a successful tour of northern Norway; but after a concert in the autumn he collapsed and died shortly after.

In a short working life plagued by illness, Lie produced a sizable output, including a String Quartet in D minor, a violin sonata, a number of orchestral pieces, character-pieces for piano, choral pieces and some 80 songs. Few of his works, apart from the songs, have been published.

Undoubtedly his prominence in Norwegian musical life of the ambitious nationalistic period was as much an investment in his promise of future achievements as it was a reward for his actual accomplishments. Nevertheless, a number of his songs, including the famous Sne ('Snow', text by Helge Rode), choral pieces (especially those for male voices) and, among his instrumental works, the two fine Norwegian dances for violin and piano, have deservedly maintained a firm place in the repertory. A complete edition of his songs can be found in H.M. Græsvold and T. Mathisen, eds.: Siguard Lie: Sanger (Kristiansand, 1999).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NBL (J. Arup)

O.M. Sandvik and G. Schjelderup: Norges musikhistorie(Christiania, 1921)

N. Grinde: Norsk musikkhistorie (Oslo, 1971, 3/1981; Eng. trans., 1991)

H.M. Groesvold and T. Mathisen, eds.: Sigund Lie: Sanger (Kristiansand, 1999)

JOHN BERGSAGEL

Liebe [Lieben, Lieber], Christian (b Freiberg, Saxony, 5 Nov 1654; d Zschopau, Saxony, 3 Sept 1708). German composer and organist. He received his earliest musical training at Freiberg, where Christoph Frölich was cathedral Kantor and schoolmaster; he also acquired a wide knowledge of ancient languages. In 1676 he became a theology student at the University of Leipzig. At Leipzig he was probably encouraged to compose church music by Johann Schelle, who was appointed Kantor at the Thomaskirche early in 1677. From 1679 Liebe was employed as music master in an aristocratic household at Dresden. His reputation as a keyboard player led in 1684 to his appointment as organist at Frauenstein, Erzgebirge, where he also became Rektor of the school. From 1690 until his death he was Rektor of the school at Zschopau, where in addition to his teaching duties he devoted himself to music and the musical life of the town, as composer, organist and organizer of church musical events. His sacred works were known about 1700 as far afield as Gottorf, Stettin and Strasbourg, as well as more locally at Freyburg, Grimma and Leipzig; he may have had direct connections with some of these towns.

The majority of Liebe's surviving works are cantatas, some with accompaniments for up to nine instruments, including rich wind scoring. The concerto-aria cantatas contain aria sections with several verses, or, in place of a straightforward sequence of arias, chorale verses and short concertato passages with or without simple concluding chorales. Of the 22 compositions by Liebe at Strasbourg, 16 form a sequence from the liturgical year. According to Mattheson the funeral aria Es ist nun aus mit meinem Leben was still widely known and used towards the mid-18th century.

WORKS

CANTATAS

at D-Bsb.: Ich habe einen guten Kampf gekämpfet, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, org, also F-Ssp; Komm heiliger Geist, vv, 2 vn, 2 shawms, bc; Meine Schafe hören meine Stimme, B, 5 inst, bc; Und du Bethlehem, 4vv, 5 insts, bc at Dl: Ach, liebster Jesu komm herein, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Als der Tag der Pfingsten erfüllet war, 4 vv, 3 ob, bn, 2 vn, bc; Aus der Tiefen rufe ich, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Das neugeborne Kindelein, 5vv, 2 clarini, timp, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Der Herr ist Gott, 4vv, 2 clarini, 2 vn, bn, bc; Ihr wisset die Gnade unsers Herrn, 4vv, 4 ob, vn, 2 viols, violone, 4 hp, bc; Komm an, du sanftes Brausen, 5vv, vn, 4 viols, bn, bc; Machet die Tore weit, 4vv, 2 clarini, 2 vn, bn, bc; O heiland aller Welt, 4vv, 2 vn, bc at F-Ssp: Alle Bitterkeit und Grumm und Zorn, 4vv, vn, 2 viols, bc; Darum seid barmherzig, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bc; Der Engel des Herrn, 4vv, 2 clarini, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Der Mensch vom Weibe geboren, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, 2 vn, bc; Es ist unsonst, daβ ihr früh aufsteht, 4 vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Gnade! Gnade! Jesu, Gnade, 5vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, org; Herr, höre und sei mir gnädig, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bc; Ich bleib, o Jesu, ganz der deine, 4vv, insts, bc; Ich danke dir, Gott, 4vv, vn, 3 viols, bc; Liebet eure Feinde, 4vv, clarino, 2 vn, va/trbn, bc; Machet euch Freund, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, 2 vn, bc; Mein Freund, ich tue dir nicht unrecht, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, bc; Meine Seele erhebet den Herrn, 4vv, clarino, timp, 2 vn, va, bc; Sehet euch für den falschen Propheten, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, 2 vn, bc; Sei nun wieder zufrieden (Ps cxvi.7–9), 5vv, 2 vn, 2 shawms, 4 cornetts, bn, org, bc; Siehe, des Herrn Auge siehet auf die, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Trachet am ersten nach dem Reich Gottes, 4vv, vn, 2 viols, bn, bc; Und du, Kindlein, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, bc; Wenn du es wüβtest, 4vv, 3 ob, bn, 2 vn, bc; Wohl dem, dem ein tugendsam Weib beschert ist, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 viols, bn, org

Doubtful: Das Verlangen der Elenden hörest du, Herr, 4vv, vn, 2 viols, bc, MÜG

MOTETS

at Bsb: Alleluja, ach mein herzliebes Jesulein, 8vv, bc; Selig ist der Mann, 8vv, bc

Waschet euch, reiniget euch, 8vv, bc, Bsb

at Dlb: Das Wort ward Fleisch, 5vv, bc; Fürchtet euch nicht, 5vv, bc; Ich halte es dafür, 5vv, bc

Es ist nun aus mit meinem Leben, funeral aria, mentioned in Mattheson

OTHER SACRED

Missa brevis, A, 5vv, 4 inst, F-Ssp

Gloria, C, 6vv, 2 clarini, timp, 2 vn, 3 viols, vle, bc, D-Bsb

Mag (Ger.), 4vv, tpts, timp, F-Ssp

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; GerberL; MatthesonGEP

A. Schering: 'Die alte Chorbibliothek der Thomasschule in Leipzig', AMw, i (1918–19), 275–88

W. Braun: 'Die alten Musikbibliotheken der Stadt Freyburg (Unstrut)', Mf, xv (1962), 123–45, esp. 125, 130, 139

F. Krummacher: 'Zur Sammlung Jacobi der ehemaligen Fürstenschule Grimma', Mf, xvi (1963), 324–47, esp. 340, 346

F. Krummacher: Die Überlieferung der Choralbearbeitungen in der frühen evangelischen Kantate (Berlin, 1965), 292ff

D. Parr Walker and P. Walker: German Sacred Polyphonic Vocal Music between Schütz and Bach (Ann Arbor, 1992)

KARL-ERNST BERGUNDER

Liebermann, Lowell (Seth) (b New York, 22 Feb 1961). American composer, conductor and pianist. At the age of 16, Liebermann gave the Carnegie Hall première of his First Piano Sonata, which later received prizes from both the Music Teachers National Association and the Yamaha Music Foundation. At the Juilliard School, he studied composition with Diamond and Persichetti (DMA, 1987), and piano with Jacob Lateiner, also receiving private tuition in conducting from László Halász. He served for a time as assistant conductor of the Nassau (Long Island) Lyric Opera Company (1982) and has remained a frequent conductor and performer of his own music.

A prolific composer, maintaining a steady output of around six substantial works a year, Liebermann has also become one of the most widely performed Americans of his generation. His music has been championed by a number of distinguished performers, among them the pianist Stephen Hough, who was responsible for the first performances (and later a Grammy-nominated recording) of both piano concertos. His works for flute have rapidly established themselves in the instrument's repertory: the Sonata for flute and piano was recorded seven times in the ten years following its 1988 première, attracting the attention of James Galway, for whom Liebermann subsequently composed a solo concerto (1992) and a Concerto for Flute and Harp (1995). His two-act opera The Picture of Dorian Gray (1995) was the Monte Carlo company's first commission from an American composer. In 1998 he was appointed composer-in-residence with the Dallas SO.

Though labelled conservative by some critics, Liebermann's music is notable for its stylistic resourcefulness and polished craftsmanship. It resists identification with any particular school of composition. While his earliest works were chromatic and contrapuntal in texture, often verging on atonality, the Sonata notturna (1983) brought clearer harmonic direction, with an emphasis on formal articulation and thematic unity. The Variations on a Theme by Bruckner (1986), also for solo piano, marked a further watershed, its structural intricacies masked by a new melodic breadth. Something of the character of Shostakovich, a freely acknowledged influence, can be felt in the terse power of the Concerto for Violin, Piano and String Quartet (1989). The Second Piano Concerto, on the other hand, produced only three years later, is an expansive work close to the Romantic virtuoso tradition.

WORKS

Op: The Picture of Dorian Gray (2, Liebermann, after O. Wilde), op.45, 1995, Monte Carlo, Salle Garnier, 8 May 1996

Orch: Concertino, op.8, vc, chbr orch, 1982 [from Sonata no.1, op.3]; Sym. no.1, op.9, 1982; Pf Conc. no.1, op.12, 1983; The Domain of Arnheim, op.33, 1990; Fl Conc., op.39, 1992; Pf Conc. no.2, op.36, 1992; Conc., op.48, fl, hp, orch, 1995; Paean, op.49, wind band, 1995; Revelry, op.47, 1995; Kontrapunktus, op.52, taiko, orch, 1996; Pic Conc., op.50, 1996; Loss of Breath, op.58, 1997

Vocal: 2 Choral Elegies (A. Tennyson), op.2, SATB, 1977; War Songs (H. Melville), op.6, B, pf, 1980, orchd as op.7, 1981; 3 Poems (S. Crane), op.11, B, orch, 1983; 6 Gesänge (N. Sachs), op.14, S, pf, 1985, orchd as op.18, 1986; Missa brevis, op.15, T, B, SATB, org, 1985; Final Songs (R. Tagore and others), 6 songs, op.21, B, pf, 1987; Night Songs (M. Van Doren, R. Graves, R. Jarrell), 3 songs, op.22, Bar, pf, 1987; Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking (W. Whitman), op.41, Mez, str qt, 1993; A Poet to his Beloved (W.B. Yeats), 6 songs, op.40, T, fl, str qt, 1993; Appalachian Liebeslieder (L. Stover), op.54, S, Bar, 2 pf, 1996; 3 Dream Songs (L. Hughes), op.53, Bar, pf, 1996; Struwwelpeterlieder (H. Hoffmann), op.51, S, va, pf, 1996; 6 Songs (H.W. Longfellow), op.57, T, pf, 1997

Chbr: 2 Pieces, op.4, vn, va, 1978; Sonata no.1, op.3, vc, pf, 1978, orchd as Concertino, 1982; Str Qt no.1, op.5, 1979; Sonata, op.13, va, pf, 1984; Sonata, op.23, fl, pf, 1987; Sonata, op.24, db, pf, 1987; Qnt, op.26, cl, str trio, pf, 1988; Sonata, op.25, fl, gui, 1988; Conc., op.28, vn, pf, str qt, 1989; Fantasy on a Fugue by J.S. Bach, op.27, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, pf, 1989; Pf Qnt, op.34, 1990; Pf Trio, op.32, 1990; Variations on a Theme by Mozart, op.42, 2 pf, 1993; Sonata no.1, op.46, vn, pf, 1994; Sonata, op.56, fl, hp, 1996; Sonata no.2, op.61, vc, pf, 1998; Str Qt no.2, op.60, 1998

Nocturnes, pf: no.1, op.20, 1986; no.2, op.31, 1990; no.3, op.35, 1991; no.4, op.38, 1992; no.5, op.55, 1996

Other pf: Sonata no.1, op.1, 1977; Sonata no.2 (Sonata notturna), op.10, 1983; Variations on a Theme by Bruckner, op.19, 1986; 4 Apparitions, op.17, 1987; Gargoyles, op.29, 1989; Album for the Young, op.43, 1993

Other solo inst: De profundis, op.16, org, 1985; Fantasy, op.30, b koto, 1990; Soliloquy, op.44, fl, 1993; 8 Pieces, op.59, b fl/a fl/fl, 1997

Principal publisher: Presser

RICHARD FREED

Liebermann, Rolf (b Zürich, 14 Sept 1910; d Paris, 2 Jan 1999). Swiss composer and opera manager. He studied law at Zürich University and took music lessons at the José Berr Conservatory there. In 1937–8 he was private secretary and music assistant to his conducting teacher, Scherchen, in Vienna. He returned to Switzerland as a music critic, studying composition (particularly 12-note technique) with Vogel in Ascona. Appointments followed as producer at the Zürich Radio Studio (1945–50) and as manager of the Beromünster RO until 1957. In that year he was made musical director of NDR, Hamburg, and two years later he became general manager of the Hamburg Staatsoper, which he made into one of the centres of modern music theatre, giving many works their world première. He occupied a similar position with the Paris Opéra from 1973 to 1980 and returned to his previous post in Hamburg from 1985 to 1988. Honours he received included an honorary doctorate from the universities of Berne and Spokane, Washington, an honorary professorship from the Hamburg Senate (1966), membership of the Berlin and Hamburg fine arts academies, and honorary membership of the Mozarteum in Salzburg and of the Royal Society of Arts, London. As a composer he made an international reputation through his operas and, more sensationally, through the Concerto for Jazzband and Symphony Orchestra – an early attempt to bring jazz and conventional performers together – and the Concert des échanges for machines. Liebermann used 12-note technique in a free and individual way, with a predilection for bitonality and with tonal references. The structures are clear, and the vocal lines of the operas are eminently singable. On taking up his Hamburg appointment in 1959, he withdrew almost completely from composition until the early 1980s.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Das neue Land (Festspiel, A. Ehrismann), Basle, 1946; Leonore 40/45 (opera semiseria, H. Strobel), Basle, 1952; Penelope (opera semiseria, Strobel, after Molière), Salzburg, 1954; Die Schule der Frauen (opera buffa, Strobel), as The School for Wives, Louisville, 1955, orig., Salzburg, 1957; La forêt (op, H. Vida), Geneva, 1987; Cosmopolitan Greetings (multimedia jazz op, A. Grinsberg), collab. G. Gruntz, Hamburg, 1988; Freispruch für Medea (op, 2, U. Haas), Hamburg, 1995; incid music, radio scores

Vocal: Une des fins du monde (cant., J. Giraudoux), Bar, orch, 1944; Chinesische Liebeslieder (Li Bai, trans. Klabund), T, hp, pf, str (1945); Musik (C.P. Baudelaire, P. Verlaine), spkr, orch, 1948; Chinesisches Lied (Klabund, H. Leeb), A, T, pf, 1949; Streitlied zwischen Leben und Tod (cant., after R. Kothe), 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, 1950; Capriccio, S, vn, wind orch, perc, db, 1959; $3 \times 1 =$ CH + x, S, chorus, 12 perc

Orch: 5 polyphone Studien, chbr orch (1943); Furioso, 1947; Suite über 6 Schweizer Volkslieder (1947); Sinfonie, 1949; Conc., jazz band, orch (1954); Geigy Festival Conc., Basle drum, orch (1958); Liaison, vc, pf, orch, 1983; Conc., pf, orch, 1995

Other works: Pf Sonata, 1951; Concert des échanges, machines, perf. Lausanne, 1964; Essai 81, vc, pf, 1981

Principal publishers: Ars Viva, Universal, Sikorski

WRITINGS

with B. Sizaire and S. Wendt: Actes et entractes (Paris, 1976, Ger. trans., 1977, as Opernjahre)

Und jedermann erwartet sich ein Fest: Musiktheater (Frankfurt, 1981)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.H. Stuckenschmidt: 'Rolf Liebermann', SMz, xcii (1952), 137–43

H. Liepman: '195 Sekunden alle 15 Minuten 6 Monate lang', Melos, xxx (1963), 357–62

J. Müller-Marein and H. Reinhardt, eds.: Das musikalische Selbstporträt (Hamburg, 1963)

H.J. Pauli: 'Liebermanns Konzert für Maschinen', Melos, xxx (1963), 363 only

I. Scharberth and H. Paris, eds.: Rolf Liebermann zum 60. Geburtstag (Hamburg, 1970)

C. Riess: Rolf Liebermann, 'Nennen Sie mich einfach Musiker' (Hamburg, 1977)

H. Bünte: Porträts aus dem Musikleben (Frankfurt, 1987)

PETER ROSS

Lieberson, Goddard (b Hanley, Staffs., 5 April 1911; d New York, 29 May 1977). American recording executive and composer. Brought to the USA in childhood, he grew up in Seattle. After studying composition with George Frederick McKay at the University of Washington and Bernard Rogers at the Eastman School, he worked as a teacher and critic in Rochester. In 1936 he went to New York, where he continued to write criticism (sometimes under the pseudonym 'John Sebastian') and composed; he was one of the founders in 1938 of the American Composers Alliance. He joined the classical music (Masterworks) department of Columbia Records in 1939, becoming the company's president as well as a vice-president and director of CBS (of which Columbia Records was a division) in 1956. Lieberson brought the sensibilities of a creative musician to a position of great power and influence that has more commonly been filled by people trained in the law, finance or marketing. In 1940 he supervised the first recordings of Berg's Violin Concerto and Schoenberg's Pierrot lunaire (conducted by the composer). He then went on to direct important series of recordings of modern American music, works by black composers, Broadway musicals, documentaries and the spoken word.

Most of Lieberson's well-crafted, mildly dissonant compositions were written in the 1930s. His novel Three for Bedroom C (1947) was made into a film and a collection of his essays was published privately in 1957. The composer Peter Lieberson is his son. The Lieberson Fellowships, granted to young composers by the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters, were established in his memory in 1978.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Alice in Wonderland (incid music, L. Carroll), 1936; Yellow Poodle, ballet, 1936

Orch: Five Modern Painters, 1929; Satire in Tango Rhythm, 1935; Homage to Handel, 1937; Sym., 1937

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata for Qnt, ob, bn, va, vc, pf, 1934; Sonata for Str Qt, 1937; pf works

Choral works, incl. Three Chinese Poems, SATB, 1936

MSS in US-NH and US-NYcu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CBY 1976

C. Reis: Composers in America: Biographical Sketches (New York, 1938 [3rd edn of American Composers], enlarged 4/1947/R)

S. Chapin: 'Remembering Goddard Lieberson', Symphony, xlii/1 (1991), 38–42, 74–6

R. Long: 'A Classic at Columbia: Goddard Lieberson', Audio, lxxvi/ Sept (1992), 32–40

LEONARD BURKAT/MICHAEL MECKNA

Lieberson, Lorraine Hunt. See HUNT-LIEBERSON, LORRAINE.

Lieberson, Peter (b New York, 25 Oct 1946). American composer, son of GODDARD LIEBERSON. After completing a degree in English literature at New York University (1972), he studied informally with Babbitt for several years. He pursued further study at Columbia University (MA 1974), where his teachers included Wuorinen and Sollberger. A performance of his Variations for solo flute by the Group for Contemporary Music (1972) led to commissions and performances from, among others, Speculum Musicae, Oppens, Fred Sherry and Tashi. In 1972 Lieberson was an assistant to Leonard Bernstein and assistant producer of the Young People's Concerts for CBS; he was also the founder and conductor of two contemporary music groups, the Composer's Ensemble and New Structures Ensemble.

Between 1976 and 1981 Lieberson studied Tibetan Buddhism, attending a seminary in Boulder, Colorado, and founding a meditation programme in Boston. When he began doctoral studies in composition at Brandeis University in 1981 with Donald Martino, Boykan and others, he had already begun work on his Piano Concerto, commissioned by the Boston SO for its centennial and written for Peter Serkin. The work, a large romantically virtuoso score in three connected movements, reflects the Buddhist concepts of 'Earth', 'Man' and 'Heaven'. Its most overt musical influences are of Stravinsky and the syncopations of popular song, though the piece employs a 12-note set (dominated by major 2nds) and its derivations in a gradual expansion from dense, rhythmically active textures ('Earth') to airy, widespread, shimmering colours ('Heaven') As a result of the work's success, the Boston SO commissioned Lieberson to write a symphony. Drala (1986), the title of which comes from two Tibetan words implying the transcendence of aggression and achievement of a higher spiritual plane, introduced a theme of pacifism though self-control that was to become characteristic of Lieberson's work. Other compositions on Buddhist themes have included Ziji (Shining out, 1987), which creates an outgoing, energetic 'American' sound, and Raising the Gaze (1998), the complicated, changing metres of which express the spirit of dance. In 1997 Lieberson completed his first opera, Ashoka's Dream, based on the narrative of a famous Indian emperor who sought first to control his own weaknesses, then to bring compassion and peace to his subjects. Prominent writing for percussion is a notable feature of this sonorous, yet transparent score. Later works include concertos for the horn (for William Purvis), the piano (for Serkin) and the cello (for Yo-Yo Ma)

Although Lieberson taught briefly at Harvard (1984–8), he resigned his post to become international director of the Buddhist Shambhala Training centre in Halifax, Nova Scotia. His honours include the Rapoport Prize (1972), the Ives scholarship of the National Institute of Arts and Letters (1973) and the Goddard Lieberson Fellowship (1984) He married the mezzo-soprano Lorraine Hunt Lieberson in 1999.

WORKS

Op: Ashoka's Dream (2, D. Pennick), 1997, Santa Fe, NM, 26 July 1997

Orch: Pf Conc., 1980–83; Drala, sym., 1986; The Gesar Legend, 1988; World's Turning, 1991; Va Conc., 1992–4; Fire, 1995; Processional, 1995; Hn Conc., 1999; Pf Conc. no.2, 1999; Vc Conc., 1999–2000

Vocal: 3 Songs (Pennick), S, 14 insts, 1981: Listen and hear, The palm and its lines; The reed is broken; Stiller Freund (R.M. Rilke), Mez, pf, 1997; Song Cycle (Rilke), 1v, ens, 1999–2000

Chbr and solo inst: Variations, fl, 1971; Conc. for 4 Groups of Insts, (fl, ob, cl), (2 vn, va), (bn, vc, db), (hp, pf) 1972–3; Conc. for Vc with Accompanying Trios, vc, (fl, ob, tpt), (2 vn, va), (Man, hp, 5 timp), (b cl, pf, db), 1974; Accordance, a fl, ob, b cl, glock + vib, hp, pf, va, db, 1975–6; Tashi Qt, vn, cl, vc, pf, 1978–9; Lalita, variations, fl + pic, ob, cl + b cl, hn, vn, va, vc, db, pf, perc, 1983–4; Feast Day, fl + pic + a fl, ob, vc, pf/hp, 1985; Ziji, cl, hn, vn, va, vc, pf, 1987; Raising the Gaze, fl + pic;, cl + b cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 2 perc, 1988; Elegy, vn, pf, 1990; Wind Messengers, 3 fl, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 b cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, 1990; A Little Fanfare, fl, tpt, vn, hp, 1991; King Gesar (Pennick, after A.D. Neel), nar, fl + pic, cl + b cl, hn, trbn, vc, 2 pf, perc, 1991–2; A Little Fanfare II, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1993; Variations, vn, pf, 1993; Rumble, medley, va, db, perc, 1994, Str Qt, 1994

Pf: Fantasy, 1975; Bagatelles, 1983; Fantasy Pieces, 1989; Breeze of Delight, Dragon's Thunder, Memory's Luminous Wind, Scherzo, 1989; Garland, 1994

Principal publisher: G. Schirmer

STEVEN LEDBETTER

Liebert [Lyebert, Hebert], Clement (documented 1433–54). Franco-Flemish composer. He sang in the papal chapel from February to June 1433 and in the Burgundian court chapel from 1441 to 1454. The song Comment porray in the lost Strasbourg manuscript (F-Sm C.22) is ascribed 'C. Liebert' and seems to date from the 1430s. The view that the name could be a miscopying for 'G. Libert' seems incompatible with the musical style of the piece.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.X. Haberl: Bausteine für Musikgeschichte, i (Leipzig, 1885), 66
J. Marix: Histoire de la musique et des musiciens de la cour de Bourgogne sous le regne de Philippe le Bon (Strasbourg, 1939/R), 245–53

DAVID FALLOWS

Liebert, R. See LIBERT, REGINALDUS.

Liebesflöte (Ger.). Flûte d'amour. See FLUTE, §II, 3(iii).

Liebesfuss (Ger.; Fr. pavillon d'amour). In a woodwind instrument, a globular or pear-shaped bell with a narrow opening, a distinguishing feature of such instruments as the CLARINETTE D'AMOUR and the oboe d'amore. See BELL (ii) and OBOE, §III, 1.

Liebesgeige (Ger.). See VIOLA D'AMORE.

Liebhold [Liebholdt] (fl Udestedt, nr Weimar, early 18th century). German composer. According to Walther, writing in 1740, Liebhold was 'found a few years ago, frozen to death on the highway not far from Weimar'. This and other details of his life – such as a change of name and his refusal of the sacraments – point to a rejected composer, perhaps an organist or Kantor, who became an itinerant musician, playing the oboe, horn and violin in taverns. His cantatas and motets, which considerably enriched the repertory of village choirs, are based on a variety of miniature forms, both homophonic and polyphonic. Liebhold's predilection for writing 'utility music' for the church year, and particularly for Christmas and New Year, is shown by most of the cantatas and motets (including several cycles) so far ascribed to him, whose distribution from Königsberg (now Kaliningrad) to Brussels is proof of their popularity. A special cycle of 47 cantatas, based on the symbola (religious mottoes) of various members of the ducal or electoral family of Saxony and their relatives, is extant at Schotten, Hesse. Liebhold probably intended to publish them and dedicate them to the elector in order to gain some form of sponsorship from the court. Walther wrote that he sent to a friend Liebhold's cantata cycles rather than Telemann's and made a fair copy of them. According to J.N. Forkel, however, Telemann referred to 'a certain Liebhold, of no fixed abode', who 'collected musical snippets and glued them together into an unfortunate hotch-potch'. This opinion (shared by Moser) is contradicted by Liebhold's actual music, which is always technically assured, contains programmatic and symbolic details and is representative of the Thuringian choral tradition of his time.

WORKS

cantatas for 4 voices, instruments, unless otherwise stated

Auf, ihr ernstlichen Gemüter, 10 March 1735; Ist mir aller Trost entschwunden, B solo, insts: B-Bc

Alle, die gottselig Leben wollen; Der jüngste Tag wird bald sein Ziel erreichen; Gott hat uns selig gemacht; Ihr seid alle Gottes Kinder; Ihr Völker, bringet her dem Herrn; Mein Kind, willst du Gottes Diener sein; Mein Jesu, ist dirs denn verborgen; Mein Jesus bleibet mir ein Heil und Hülfs-Panier; Wie lieblich sind deine Wohnungen: all D-Bsb

Ich will meinen Geist ausgiessen; Preise, Jerusalem: Mücheln

Des Menschen Sohn ist kommen, B solo, insts; Mein ganzes Wissen soll Jesus sein, B solo, insts: D-MÜG

In Deo est salus et gloria mea: Gdańsk, St Jan

105 cantatas, D-SCHOT

22 motets a 4: Befiehl dem Herrn; Da die Zeit erfüllet war; Das ist meine Freude [2 settings]; Das ist das ewige Leben; Das Wort ward Fleisch; Der Herr wird sein Volksegnen; Ehre sei Gott in der Höhe; Es ist in keinem andern Heil; Freuet euch, ihr Gerechten; Gott, du krönest das Jahr; Gott, gib Fried; Güldner Fried uns sehr ergötzet; Habe deine Lust; Ich bin arme und elend; Ich verlasse mich auf Gott; Jauchzet ihr Himmel; Kommt herzu und lasset; Kündlich gross ist das gottselige geheimnis; Lobe den Herrn, meine Seele; Uns ist ein Kind geboren [2 settings]: RUS-KAg, ed. in DDT, xlix–l (1915/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; WaltherL
K. Schmidt: 'Beiträge zur Kenntnis des Kantatenkomponisten Liebhold', AMw, iii (1921), 247–69
G. Schünemann: 'J. Gottfried Walther und H. Bokemeyer', BJb 1933, 86–118
O. Brodde: 'Von dem thüringer Motettenmeister Liebhold', ZMw, xvi (1934), 248–60
H.J. Moser: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik in Deutschland (Berlin, 1954)
J. Schlichte: 'Ein vergessener Bestand von Manuskripten evangelischer Kirchenmusik des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts in Schotten', Mf, xxxi (1978), 451–2

G. KRAFT/DOROTHEA SCHRÖDER

Lieblich Gedackt (Ger.). See under ORGAN STOP.

Liechtenstein, Ulrich von. See ULRICH VON LIECHTENSTEIN.

Lied (Ger.: 'song'). A song in the German vernacular.

I. The polyphonic lied. II. The Generalbasslied, *c*1620–*c*1750. III. Lieder *c*1740–*c*1800. IV. The Romantic lied. V. The 20th century.

I. The polyphonic lied

1. Introduction. 2. 14th and 15th centuries. 3. 1500–*c*1630. 4. German choral song, 1630–1950.

1. INTRODUCTION. The term 'polyphonic lied' is generally used in German to describe a polyphonic composition for any combination of forces, with or without the human voice, which is either songlike in character or derives its particular identity from the technical elaboration of a pre-existing lied melody, for instance as a cantus firmus. In the terminology of music history this wide definition in fact applies only to the heyday of the polyphonic lied in the 15th and 16th centuries. The earliest polyphonic songs with German text date from around 1400. From the mid-15th century a growing repertory made greater use of folk-like melodies and texts than did the dominating French song repertory of the time; this in its turn led to the major flourishing of an indigenous and distinctive tradition in the first half of the century, supported by the flourishing German music printers of those years. After about 1570, German song fell under foreign, especially Italian, influence, and from the mid-17th century it was found concealed within other forms of vocal and vocal-instrumental chamber music, so that the term 'polyphonic lied' ceased to have a defining function. Only towards 1800 did one kind of polyphonic lied – the choral song – achieve some degree of independent significance, particularly from a musico-sociological point of view.

2. 14TH AND 15TH CENTURIES. Whoever the legendary MONK OF SALZBURG may have been, his six two-part German songs in the Mondsee-Wiener Liederhandschrift were presumably composed before 1400 and are the oldest written examples of the polyphonic lied. In both text and melody they are successors of the late MINNESANG and apparently reflect the practices of polyphonic improvisation rather than following the brilliant technical achievements of the Ars Nova and the Italian Trecento. In the song Das Nachthorn the lower part consists almost entirely of tonic and dominant, to be blown on the 'pumhart' (pommer, or lower-register shawm). The Tagelied is more decisively developed: its lower part is sung by the 'Wächter' (watchman), while the upper part consists of a trumpet prelude followed by a love dialogue between 'him' and 'her'.

The songs of Oswald von Wolkenstein, a knight from the Tyrol, surpass those of the monk in quantity and quality. Among his 120 or more songs (including love songs, sacred songs and songs with biographical and political texts) are 36 in two or three parts in which the diction of the later Minnesang mingles with popular themes. The widely travelled Oswald, who was both poet and composer, was not only familiar with the original practice of two-part organum (as witness his frequent use of parallel octaves and 5ths) but also with the melodically and rhythmically varied cantilena style of the western chanson. Nearly half of Oswald's polyphonic songs have been shown to have borrowed their music from elsewhere, mostly from the French song repertory of the years 1360–1420; his contribution is mainly in the new texts, often brilliant inventions that share nothing with the originals for their music. On the other hand, much of his polyphony – irrespective of whether it is his own – is resolutely German and fits well into the tradition stretching from the monk to the next surviving repertory, that of the Lochamer Liederbuch. The canon Gar wunniklaich is probably an original composition. Though eclectic in some respects, the works of this 'edler und vester Ritter' ('noble and perfect knight') do not lack warmth and sentiment. His best-known song, Wach auff, myn hort, was sung throughout the German-speaking world until the end of the 15th century. As in some of Oswald's other works, its vocal line is set against a textless upper part (ex.1).

While Oswald left several personally supervised copies of his works, polyphonic songs from the second half of the 15th century have survived mainly anonymously in civic manuscript collections. The Lochamer Liederbuch (*c*1452–60), which probably originated in Nuremberg, contains 35 monophonic, two two-part and seven three-part compositions. Of the 128 works collected in the Schedelsches Liederbuch, mostly copied out personally in the 1460s by Hartmann Schedel (a Nuremberg doctor and historian), 69 are polyphonic lieder, 18 are textless and the rest are chansons and Latin or Italian pieces. The Glogauer Liederbuch (*c*1480) is even more varied, including 70 German songs along with 224 other compositions of every kind, though mainly of western origin. These collections demonstrate on the one hand how strongly the musical repertory of the cultured German middle classes had been penetrated by Franco-Flemish and Burgundian influence, and on the other the unmistakable identity of the specifically German song, now known as the TENORLIED. The characteristics of the Tenorlied first appear clearly in the three-part Der wallt hat sich entlawbet from the Lochamer Liederbuch. Its distinctive feature is that a pre-existing vocal line used as a cantus firmus (Liedweise or Tenor, often in the highest voice) forms the axis of the polyphonic construction. Clear musical caesurae mark the divisions between the lines of the text, and the melodic and rhythmic movement is usually well balanced, although declamation of the words is sometimes emphasized by a change from simple to compound time. Texturally these songs move between a simple three-part note-against-note or 'contrapunctus simplex' construction, and a two-part 'framework' form, with soprano and tenor contrapuntally independent and a countertenor filling in between them. In many cases the character of the Tenor and the text will have determined the choice of form; thus the elegant Easter hymn Du Lenze gut, to a text by Conrad von Queinfurt (d 1382), is notably more elaborate contrapuntally than the simple popular song Elslein, liebstes Elslein (both from the Glogauer Liederbuch). Unadulterated folksongs are rare in polyphonic collections, where most melodies have obviously been modified to fit polyphonic settings, or were originally composed. Purely instrumental performance is also a possibility, and the keyboard arrangements surviving in early tablatures such as the Buxheimer Orgelbuch may thus be included in the repertory of the polyphonic lied.

Ex.1 Oswald von Wolkenstein: Wach auff, myn hort

3. 1500–*c*1630. Soon after 1500 the polyphonic lied became an established genre through the printing of the first books by Erhard Oeglin (Augsburg, 1512), Peter Schoeffer (Mainz, 1513) and Arnt von Aich (Cologne, *c*1519). Although these do not give the composers' names, later editions do mention famous musicians, among them Adam von Fulda, Erasmus Lapicida, Isaac, Heinrich Finck and Hofhaimer. A new stylistic standard evolved under the influence of these masters: four-part compositions became the norm, and while in the 15th century any borrowed material frequently lay in the highest sounding part it now appeared almost without exception in the tenor, while the soprano, alto and bass were distinguished from this melodic cantus firmus by their livelier rhythms and often more disjunct melodic lines. The so-called 'Hofweisentenores' (courtly tenors) in particular were set to polyphony in this style (ex.2; see also HOFWEISE). The lyrical texts, faintly reminiscent of the Minnesang, place them in a more sophisticated social context and their melodies, many of which were original, sometimes tend towards the formal style of the mastersingers. Hofweise settings represent the apogee of the Tenorlied and determined the style contained in the early printed editions.

The best-known example of the early German polyphonic lied, Isaac's four-part Isbruck, ich muss dich lassen, is actually in no way typical of this style; with its soprano cantus firmus and chordal accompaniment, it tends more in the direction taken by Isaac's pupil Ludwig Senfl in his popular songs. In this versatile composer's output (nearly 250 songs), every type of poetic verse deemed appropriate in his day for musical setting is represented – coarse ditties and delicate love-lyrics, popular dance-songs and sophisticated morals, sacred songs and political diatribes. Senfl explored and developed the stylistic potential of the Tenorlied in every conceivable way, drawing on his thorough knowledge of Netherlandish polyphony. When he introduced the thematic material of the cantus firmus into all the contrapuntal parts in through-imitation ('Durchimitation') he had already reached the limits of traditional treatment of the Tenorlied, as when, in his five- and six-part compositions, he had doubled the Tenor canonically or combined two or three different borrowed melodies to be sung simultaneously. On the whole, however, Senfl's compositions, like those of his contemporaries Thomas Stoltzer, Arnold von Bruck, Balthasar Resinarius, Sixt Dietrich and Benedictus Ducis, are firmly within the tradition of the Tenorlied.

The traditional Tenorlied style is also evident in the works of the younger composers attracted to Heidelberg around 1530 by the teacher Laurenz Lemlin – Othmayr, Jobst vom Brandt, Georg Forster and Stephan Zirler. Their assignment of texts to melodies and their cantabile accompaniment style were new, however, indicating the lied's changing social function, a change outwardly shown by the large-scale publications of lieder after 1530. In contrast to the courtly repertory of earlier publications, the collections of Hans Ott (1534 and 1544), Christian Egenolff (1535), Peter Schoeffer and Mathias Apiarius (1536), Hieronymus Formschneider (1536), Georg Forster (1539–56) and others look towards the wider circles of the musical middle class and the student world with their Gesellschaftslieder or community songs. Everything points to an attempt to satisfy the needs of communal music-making in all possible situations: varying numbers of parts (from two to eight; the general instruction for performance by any combination of voices and instruments ('zum Singen und auf allerlei Instrumenten dienlich'); and even the fact that from 1536 all the parts of a polyphonic composition were usually supplied with words (albeit clumsily) in reprints of older Tenorlieder which originally had textless accompaniments. Georg Forster gave the most comprehensive survey in his five-volume collection Ein Ausszug guter alter und neuer teutscher

Ex.2 Hofhaimer: Zvcht eer vnd lob

Liedlein, parts of which were reprinted several times, and which contains 380 songs by at least 50 different composers. The quodlibets collected by Wolfgang Schmeltzl in 1544 should be mentioned in this context as curiosities (see QUODLIBET).

With Othmayr's death in 1553 the heyday of the secular Tenorlied came to an end; the compositions of Paul Kugelmann (1558), Matthaeus Le Maistre (1566), Antonio Scandello (1568, 1570 and 1575) and Caspar Glanner (1578 and 1580) were only echoes. At the same time, however, the sacred cantus firmus song had found a lasting foothold in Protestant church music, as witnessed by outstanding works such as the Wittenberg songbooks of Johann Walter (i) (1524, with an introduction by Martin Luther) and Georg Rhau (1544). Divergent stylistic trends were already apparent in these collections: on the one hand the influence of florid counterpoint which led to the motivic through-imitation found in the song motet; on the other the development of simple, chordal hymn settings ('Cantionalsatz', 'Cantionalstil') with the melody in the highest part (e.g. those by Lucas Osiander, 1586). In Protestant church music the old cantus firmus principle has remained important, because, like plainchant, it is particularly well suited to preserving the sacred vocal line as an invulnerable liturgical basis. The Lutheran church was for a long time the mainstay of the sacred polyphonic lied, with important contributions by Rogier Michael, Johannes Eccard, Seth Calvisius, H.L. Hassler and Michael Praetorius, while Catholic and Calvinist composers such as Lassus, Aichinger and Mareschall used this form relatively little.

In about 1570 the secular polyphonic song received a decisive new impetus from Lassus who, although he did still occasionally set old texts to music, did so in a freer form, often like a motet or chanson and only rarely using the old cantus firmi. While Lassus was enriching his lieder with the elaborate modes of expression of the madrigal, Jacob Regnart, in 1576 and after, very successfully sowed the seeds in Germany of the popular villanella. Lassus's pupils (Ivo de Vento, Johannes Eccard and Leonhard Lechner) also sought a stylistic synthesis of madrigal, villanella and canzonetta in their lieder, as did such minor German musicians as Christian Hollander, Alexander Utendal, Jacob Meiland, H.G. Lange, Thomas Mancinus and the Fleming Lambert de Sayve. The highpoint of this later period of polyphonic lied was indisputably reached in the works of Hans Leo Hassler of Nuremberg. He studied in Italy under Andrea Gabrieli, and wrote about 60 lieder to his own texts, beginning in 1596 with Neue teutsche Gesang nach Art der welschen Madrigalien und Canzonetten for four to eight voices. His perfect synthesis of Italian style (e.g. that of Gastoldi's ballettos) with German lyricism influenced virtually all musicians who devoted themselves to the polyphonic lied in this period (J.C. Demantius, Melchior Franck, Valentin Haussmann, Johann Staden and Daniel Friderici).

4. GERMAN CHORAL SONG, 1630–1950. On the threshold of the high Baroque period, polyphonic lieder in canzonetta style for a few performers quickly gave place to the solo lied over a figured bass accompaniment (the so-called Generalbass lied; see §II below). Meanwhile, the first experiments with other stylistic innovations of the seconda pratica occurred in the more heavily scored lied derived from the madrigal. Concertante vocal parts with obbligato instruments, interludes in recitative style and instrumental ritornellos gave this polyphonic vocal chamber music an almost unlimited stylistic potential, beside which the principle of the strophic lied relying entirely on its cantabile melody hardly survived. Throughout the secular works of Schein the true polyphonic lied figured only slightly (Venuskränzlein, 1609), and thereafter it appeared virtually only in company with cantatas or dramatic quodlibets, as, for example, in the works of Sebastian Knüpfer, Johann Theile, W.C. Briegel and Daniel Speer, and also in J.V. Rathgeber's multi-volume Augsburgische Tafelkonfekt (1733–46). Almost the only exception is Heinrich Albert, whose 'Arien' (in collections published from 1638 to 1650) adhere to the strong Königsberg tradition of polyphonic lieder. Relatively untouched by current trends, however, the sacred polyphonic lied developed on the stylistic basis of simple chordal hymns in cantional style (Schein, 1627, Schütz, 1628, and later Johannes Crüger), and numerous ad hoc wedding and funeral songs were written by, for instance, Hammerschmidt, Rosenmüller and Adam Krieger. It reached its climax in the 400 or so chorale settings of Bach, received an additional impulse from C.F. Gellert's Geistliche Oden und Lieder set polyphonically by C.P.E. Bach, J.F. Doles and J.A. Hiller, and finally died out in about 1800 in occasional works of the simplest hack variety. More demanding forms of vocal-instrumental cantus firmus technique survived in chorale concertos, cantatas and settings of the Passion.

Towards 1800 J.A.P. Schulz made one of the first attempts to revive the secular polyphonic song. Any hope of its sustained success, however, lay only in a new awakening of communal interest. Polyphonic songs for freemasons had already led the way, but in Austria the political situation left little scope for communal gatherings and Vienna's contribution was confined to a few unimportant four-part choruses by the Haydns. The new choral song was, however, well nurtured in Berlin by the members of C.F. Zelter's exclusive Liedertafel (1809) and in Zürich, where from 1810 H.G. Nägeli tried with his male-voice choir to improve popular musical education on a broad basis. The members of the Liedertafel were committed to artistic collaboration: Zelter himself wrote 100 choral songs, some to texts by Goethe; Nägeli, too, promoted his ideas by compiling eight collections of his own songs. Early attempts to form male-voice choirs, often with patriotic motives, were encouraged by compositions such as Weber's settings of Theodor Körner's poems. Schubert's polyphonic songs, mostly with piano accompaniments, stand apart from this line of development; they were written largely as household music for solo voices, and rank with many of his classic solo lieder in their imaginative, expressive style. Their artistic quality excels not only that of the works of his contemporaries Konradin Kreutzer, Spohr and H.A. Marschner, but even that of Mendelssohn's and Schumann's choruses. The male-voice choir movement spread fast, though no great 19th-century composer was closely connected with it; P.F. Silcher satisfied the growing demand for new repertory with his 144 successful Volkslieder (1826–60). In the hands of minor composers, German choral song sank into the abyss of kitsch. Brahms, however, wrote his a cappella choruses, mostly for mixed voices, with dedicated seriousness and discrimination, thereby creating a synthesis of the old folksong and its more studied counterpart, on occasion even relying directly on medieval sonority. Liszt, Cornelius, Bruckner and in particular Wolf and Reger, who all worked with demanding late Romantic harmonies, partially blurred the line between the true partsong and large-scale choral composition. Reger was also responsible for reviving the sacred choral song. After the great masters came a long line of worthy composers of Volkslieder, such as Franz, Schreck and Jenner, while Arnold Mendelssohn began the renaissance of the choral madrigal.

Although the beginning of the 20th century saw a great stimulus to the male-voice choir tradition through the publication of the Kaiserliederbuch in 1907, it was the youth movement, begun in 1918 and led by Fritz Jöde and Walther Hensel with their song circles (the Finkensteiner Bund and the Musikantengilde), that guided the choral song into new channels. Enthusiastic reverence for the rediscovery of old folksongs and art songs gave composers the task of forging a new type of choral song, uniting the modern tendency away from tonality with a strongly historical stylistic pattern, while respecting as far as was possible the technical limitations of amateur music. In the Protestant church a similar problem was posed by the revival of evangelical church music, especially from Luther's time. A large number of composers have made a significant contribution to 20th-century polyphonic song, both sacred and secular, including Schoenberg, Krenek, Hindemith, Pepping, J.N. David, Kurt Thomas, Distler, Günther Raphael, H.F. Micheelsen, E.L. von Knorr, Armin Knab, Hermann Grabner, Kurt Hessenberg, Hans Lang, Günther Bialas, Helmut Bornefeld, Hermann Reutter and Cesar Bresgen. Most of them worked within the framework of a very free tonality in a strongly contrapuntal style, and often with recourse to historical forms. Because the song – and especially the polyphonic song – is essentially a traditional genre, it has been unable to lend itelf to the post-1950 musical avant garde.

II. The Generalbass lied, c1620–c1750

1. Introduction. 2. The Opitz lied (to *c*1660). 3. The late Baroque lied.

1. INTRODUCTION. The German Generalbass or continuo lied of the 17th and early 18th centuries is a secular, strophic song for one or occasionally more voices, with an instrumental bass accompaniment and sometimes with additional instruments playing obbligatos or ritornellos. The musical style varies from simple, syllabic, homophonic dance-songs to relatively ornate, more melismatic, contrapuntal art songs, but in all cases there is a careful synchronization of musical and poetic prosody. The genre flourished especially from the mid-1630s to the 1670s, but there are a few earlier and numerous later examples; its locale was mostly Protestant Germany. While it was an outgrowth of traditional German 16th-century songs, there were clear influences of Dutch, French and Italian songs. The lieder survive almost exclusively in prints in score or choirbook format; there are only a few manuscripts.

The history of the continuo lied is inextricably linked with the history of its poetry. Many lieder collections were compiled by poets who determined the nature of the collection and invited minor composers to write music to fit the texts. When a composer compiled the collection, the music was usually more ornate, although from 1640 to 1670 nearly all lieder conformed to established patterns of simplicity. The collections were written for the amusement of literati, students, the cultivated middle classes of such cities as Hamburg and Leipzig, and a few noblemen; German continuo lieder thus were similar to Dutch solo songs, but simpler and often cruder than the solo songs of France, Italy and Spain, which were designed exclusively for aristocratic audiences.

2. THE OPITZ LIED (TO *c*1660). The continuo lied before 1660 was dominated by Martin Opitz, whose Buch von der deutschen Poeterey (1624) established firm rules for High German poetry. Under the influence of French and Dutch poets (e.g. Ronsard and Heinsius), Opitz preached clarity and consistency in diction, metre and rhyme, and advocated moral or pastoral subject matter.

Contrast between the older, earthy German dialect texts and the reform texts can be seen in Johann Nauwach's Teutsche Villanellen (1627), the first collection of German continuo lieder. It contains both the old and new kinds of verse, both set syllabically. The long, gangling, asymmetrical, falsely-rhymed traditional verse had awkward musical rhythm which upsets both poetic and musical metre. Opitz's symmetrically structured concise, rhyming verses, on the other hand, have music with a strong metre that does not contradict the strict, heavily accented iambs of the poetic metre. This same contrast can be seen in the only two earlier isolated continuo lieder: Schein's wedding song Mirtillo hat ein Schäfelein (1622) foreshadows the Opitzian lied, while the anonymous Ein ... Kipp [Wipp] und Münster Lied (1623) has poetically awkward metre with italianate music typical of songs of the decades immediately preceding Opitz.

Thomas Selle's two collections Deliciarum juvenilium decas (1634) and Mono-phonetica (1636), the next continuo lied publications, have little to do with the mainstream of the genre. Selle's lieder use long melismas, frequent word-painting, echoes and other expressive devices which link them more to Italian than German tradition. The absence of any reform verse denies them the historical importance achieved by the lieder included in Caspar Kittel's Cantade und Arien (1638), for Kittel, despite clearcut italianisms in the music, set exclusively Opitz's poems. He introduced Italian strophic variations ('cantade') to Germany, and here as well as in his simple homophonic strophic arias he followed Opitz's verse metre, rhyme and phraseology concisely and without contradiction.

The most important composer of the early continuo lied is Heinrich Albert, whose eight collections (1638–50) had more influence during the 1640s and 50s than any others. The collections include solo and polyphonic lieder, sacred and secular. Only a few texts are actually by Opitz; the rest are by a group of lesser-known but in many cases more gifted poets, all of whom were indebted to Opitz's reforms. A few texts are translations from French. The solo songs are strophic and syllabic, with strict adherence to correct poetic accent and only occasional Italian expressive devices such as word-painting or echoes. Ex.3

Ex.3 H. Albert: Arien, iii (1640), no.16

shows how the structure of Albert's music corresponds to Opitz's text: the alexandrine line has a regular caesura after the sixth syllable which is clearly stressed in the music, and the German iambs are strictly maintained within a regular musical metre.

During the 1640s many collections of continuo lieder were compiled and composed by different men in different places. (Kretzschmar has classified these works by locale, e.g. Hamburg, Saxony.) The most important collections besides Albert's are those by Andreas Hammerschmidt (Oden, 1642–9) and Johann Rist (Des edlen Daphnis aus Cimbrien Galathee, 1642[9]). Hammerschmidt, who is also well known for his dances, is the more interesting musically. He included polyphonic madrigals in the third volume, and the more ornate style of his strophic continuo lieder shows both his skill as a composer and his independence from Albert. Occasionally Hammerschmidt included a violin obbligato and recast a solo song polyphonically. He generally followed the reform verse, though in a few instances he purposely used plattdeutsch phrases. A few lieder are dance-songs incorporating the musical rhythms of the saraband or the courante. Rist, on the other hand, was primarily a poet, and his texts are set very simply by minor composers living in or near Hamburg, such as Heinrich Pape and Johann Schop (i). There is no polyphony, no ornamentation of any kind, no use of obbligato instruments; he stood completely in the shadow of Opitz and Albert. Perhaps because of the simplicity of its text and music, Rist's collection was exceptionally popular.

Other collections of the 1640s continued the new tradition of continuo lied established by the above composers. J.E. Kindermann devoted his two-volume Opitianischer Orpheus (1642) exclusively to the poems of Opitz. Like Hammerschmidt he was a composer of dances and included dance-like lieder and some more ornate musical flourishes. In general, however, he followed the simple Albert-Rist pattern. There is one dialogue, which introduces an unusual recitative-like passage, and elsewhere Kindermann used some imitation between the continuo and the voice. Gabriel Voigtländer's large collection, Allerhand Oden (1642), also of the Albert-Rist type, contains 100 poems and 95 melodies with both old German verse and reform verse. There are other collections by Christoph Antonius, Göring and Johann Weichmann.

The influence of Albert and Opitz continued in the 1650s with collections by Grefflinger (1651), J.A. Glaser (1653), C.C. Dedekind (1657) and Rist. Rist published another collection, Des edlen Daphnis aus Cimbrien besungene Florabella (1651) and also school plays with continuo lieder. Similar lieder appeared in other plays, ballets, pastorals and romans, most notably those by Harsdörffer with music by S.T. Staden. The latter also published the isolated continuo lied Poetische Vorstellung (1658), which is rich in symbolism. J.J. Löwe and J.J. Weiland's Tugend- und Schertz-Lieder (1657) includes a strophic madrigal and use of echo, both of which demonstrate a superficial Italian influence on the basically Albert-Rist type. Georg Neumark's two lied collections (1652 and 1657) are probably the most significant of the decade. They include dialogues, dance-songs (some apparently of Polish origin) and violin obbligatos. Despite these and other interesting features the songs are still in the Albert-Rist style and do not approach Hammerschmidt's ornateness. Caspar von Stieler's Die geharnschte Venus (1660, published under the pseudonym Filidor) is another large collection following Rist's models; ex.4, Die ernstliche Strenge, shows how dance-songs fit a reform scheme. The typical courante rhythm in no way contradicts the poetic amphibrachic metre, with phrases and rhymes neatly coinciding.

Ex.4 Stieler: from Die geharnschte Venus (1600), i, 6

Adam Krieger stands out as the greatest of all continuo lied composers. He himself published only one collection of Arien (1657), which is incomplete and survives only in a sacred contrafactum. The lieder were for one to three voices with violin obbligato and may have resembled Neumark's collections. Much more can be said about the later, posthumous collection of Arien (1667, enlarged 1676). The compiler, David Schirmer, was a distinguished poet who supplied Krieger with many texts. The songs, mostly solos with continuo and with ritornellos for five instruments, vary from pastoral love songs or tragedy songs to frivolous and lascivious dance-songs and drinking-songs for the entertainment of Krieger's student friends. The influence of Opitz and Neumark is offset by the introduction of expressive dramatic Italian vocal contours.

Perhaps the best poet of the continuo lieder was Philipp von Zesen, who expanded on Opitz's verse forms with dexterity and whose poetry shows greater aesthetic and human insight. His principal collections span several decades, the most important being Dichterische Jugend-flammen (1651) and Dichterisches Rosen- und Lilientahl (1670). The music is often borrowed from Dutch lieder; Zesen had close ties with the Netherlands and even wrote some Dutch verse. Since the poet is far superior to the composer, Zesen's very simple melodies and accompaniment are too easily ignored by literary historians, but they clearly were popular and are fine examples of the continuo lied. The influence of Rist is especially pronounced in the music, though Zesen's style owes little or nothing else to Rist.

3. The late Baroque lied. Just as the earlier continuo lied followed Opitz, so from the 1660s Caspar Ziegler's treatise Von den Madrigalen (1653, enlarged 2/1685) played an ever-increasing role. Ziegler introduced and adapted into German the concepts of Italian madrigal verse; poems were no longer strophic or in the set number of lines of sonnets and other types, but could be of any length, while the lengths of individual lines had to be either the shorter type, seven or eight syllables, or the longer, 11 or 12. From Opitz, Ziegler accepted the rules of High German spelling, accent and rhyme, the regularity of metre, and the lofty subject matter. Sebastian Knüpfer applied this theory in Lustige Madrigalien und Canzonetten (1663), and David Schirmer composed numerous madrigals in this fashion. Ziegler's madrigal ideas were still applied in the 18th century, most notably in the recitatives of cantata texts set by, among others, Bach.

By the 1670s two important new musical stimuli to the lied were changing it in a way that led to its virtual disappearance as a genre. The Italian cantata and German opera became much more popular, and when collections of German songs appeared they were full of either opera and cantata arias or imitations of such arias. No longer was the text of paramount importance, and the Albert-Rist tradition still maintained by Krieger and, to a lesser extent, even by Knüpfer gave way to an operatic style. Only Laurentius von Schnüffis's four more conservative collections (1682–95) and a few others had links with the earlier lied. After 1670 the music became more florid, more melismatic and more difficult, as can be seen, for example, in P.H. Erlebach's Harmonische Freude musicalischer Freunde (1697). Da capo form replaced the strophic forms and the vocal line was operatic. Similar arias were written by Jakob Kremberg in Musicalische Gemüths-Ergötzung (1689) alongside more traditional strophic types, and the songs in Musicalischer Ergetzigkeit (1684) contain echoes and other musical repetition which distort the order of the text. Such songs were in general too difficult for the amateur, who had relished the Generalbass lied before 1670, and as a result they did not have the popularity of the earlier lieder. Amateurs continued to sing the older songs, or turned to the new collections of sacred music in similar style. The professional singer concerned himself with opera and the cantata and, though capable of singing the more complicated arias in the new collections, would probably have had little use for them.

As a result, there was a drastic decline in the number of Generalbass lied collections during the last quarter of the century. At the beginning of the 18th century sacred collections of solo songs with continuo accompaniment were popular, beginning with J.A. Freylinghausen's Geistreiches Gesangbuch (1704), but these songs belong more to the history of chorales and church music than to that of the continuo lied. A few collections of secular continuo lieder appeared sporadically. Christian Schwartz's Musae teutonicae (ii, 1706), for example, contains strophic folklike love songs for tenor or bass and accompaniment. The rather mediocre poetry was set by J.A. Schope. In many cases the tunes were taken from other sources and words were fitted to them. Whereas in the mid-17th century borrowed melodies were adjusted to fit new poetry, in the first half of the 18th the new poetry was usually forced to fit the existing metre of the borrowed music, often resulting in serious conflict between the prosody of the text and the music. Albrecht Kammerer's manuscript book (1715) includes keyboard dances with added texts; the texts might be well-known folksongs or newly composed, but in any case they seem to be optional and arbitrary.

A new upsurge in the lied began in the 1730s, but at first the collections were primarily for keyboard with incidental texts. A collection of strophic dance-songs and drinking-songs by J.V. Rathgeber, Ohren-vergnügendes und Gemüth-ergötzendes Tafel-Confect (1733–46), includes solo songs and duets as well as polyphonic quodlibets or parodies of earlier instrumental works. The work has special importance for its folk melodies, but as lieder the pieces are crudely constructed. The same borrowing occurs in Sperontes' Singende Muse an der Pleisse (1736–45), where the author added words to dances and marches. This ornate printed collection was the most popular in the 18th century, and because of its longevity as household music it is an important milestone in the social history of German music. It contains about 250 songs for one voice and keyboard accompaniment. Although in later editions the accompaniment is fully written out and the text appears with the top part, in the first editions the accompaniment is still a basso continuo and the text appears only by itself, after the music, seemingly as an afterthought.

J.F. Gräfe's Samlung verschiedener und auserlesener Oden (1737–43), written in competition with Sperontes' collection, contains 144 old poems with new music by various composers (including C.P.E. Bach), all for solo voice and continuo. Telemann's collections, which seem not to have been as popular as his other works, and J.V. Görner's Sammlung neuer Oden und Lieder, consisting of 70 songs mostly on texts by Friedrich von Hagedorn, resemble the mid-17th-century lied in care of setting and in musical form. Görner's long preface, an aesthetic treatise on poetry, links the volume to the tradition of Opitz and his followers. Both represent a resurgence of the continuo lied in the 1740s which continued into the second half of the century.

III. Lieder c1740–c1800

If there is a meeting-ground for German musical thought starting around the fifth decade of the 18th century, it is a belief in the primacy of song. As Mattheson put it in 1739 in Der vollkommene Capellmeister, 'All playing is merely an imitation and accompaniment of singing'. C.P.E. Bach elaborated the point when he revealed in his autobiographical sketch of 1773 that his chief effort in recent years had been 'playing and composing as songfully as possible', thereby rising to 'the noble simplicity of song'. In his Clavierschule (1789) D.G. Türk reaffirmed the sentiment: the 'instrumentalist plays best who comes closest to the singing voice or who knows how to bring out a beautiful singing tone. When it comes to true music, what are all of these motley passages against a melting, heart-lifting, genuine melody!'. Yet for critics today, accustomed to fixing the birth of German song to 19 October 1814 – the day on which Schubert composed Gretchen am Spinnrade – the temptation to ignore such comments has been strong. Indeed, few musical genres have been more misunderstood than the 18th-century lied. Whether measured against Schubert's contributions or the rise to pre-eminence of purely instrumental music in the last quarter of the 18th century, the typical response has been to dismiss virtually all lieder from Johann André to Zumsteeg as little more than a succession of 'tuneful trifles', 'blanched tunes' eked out by 'anemic chords and arpeggios'.

Such an attitude has worked to obscure vastly more than it has opened up for inquiry. Foremost has been the fact that, like the 19th-century lied, that of the 18th century was sparked by German poets embarking on a new path. The desire for 'naturalness' and simplicity stemmed not, as has been asserted, from 'folksong' and Herder in the 1770s, nor Krause in 1753 and the so-called First Berlin School, but rather the move from the Baroque to the neo-classicism advocated in the 1730s by Gottsched and, later, his disciple Scheibe, the Hamburg poet Friedrich von Hagedorn and the Ansbach poet Johann Peter Uz, both of whom set forth literally in their verse criteria for the fledgling art form. What is more, the traditionally poor press accorded German song in the age of Haydn and Mozart has concealed its didactic standing – one spanning from Telemann when in the preface to his Oden (1741) he spoke of his desire to inaugurate a 'renewed golden age of notes' worthy of Homer, to Beethoven in An die ferne Geliebte (1816), wherein, in keeping with the sentiments of the poetry, he created songs 'without the adornments of art'.

The new direction sought by German poets effectively starts with J.C. Gottsched, professor of poetry at the University of Leipzig beginning in 1730 and self-appointed guardian of German classicism. As he declared in his Versuch einer critischen Dichtkunst (1730), the song composer must strive for 'nothing more but an agreeable and clear reading of a verse, which consequently must match the nature and content of the words'. Those words ought to aspire to an 'exact observation of nature', thereby enabling the poet to avoid the artificiality associated with the Baroque and also making it possible to satisfy the maxim from Horace's Ars poetica with which Gottsched's treatise begins: 'In short, everything you write must be modest and simple'. It was an aesthetic shared by Hagedorn, who, in the preface to his Oden und Lieder of 1742 (although his ideas were in circulation before that date), provided a thumbnail sketch of the lied as it would be cultivated for the next 70 years or so. Quoting from a 1713 essay by Ambrose Philips from the short-lived British literary journal The Guardian (Hagedorn had served as private secretary to the Danish ambassador to the court of St James), he made no bones as to the kind of poetry from which he sought to distance himself: that variety of verse whose authors 'starve every Thought by endeavouring to nurse up more than one at a time' and where 'one Point of Wit flashes so fast upon another that the Reader's Attention is dazled by the continual sparkling of their Imagination'. In such poetry 'you find a new Design started almost in every Line, and you come to the end, without the Satisfaction of seeing any one of them executed'. Far better to imbue a poem with 'great Regularity, and the utmost Nicety; an exact Purity of Stile, with the most easie and flowing Numbers; an elegant and unaffected Turn of Wit, with one uniform and simple Design'. The poet would be best advised to follow the example of Sappho, Anacreon or Horace, for 'you will find them generally pursuing a single Thought in their Songs, which is driven to a Point, without . . . Interruptions and Deviations'. In his Abhandlungen von den Liedern der alten Greichen (*c*1744) Hagedorn affirmed his poetics in the name of classical antiquity, just as Uz would in the introduction of his Lyrische Gedichte (1749) in his encomium to 'gentle feelings, the likeness of nature, the noble simplicity of unadorned expressions, or the beautiful essence of long ago antiquity'. (Uz thus anticipated by six uyears Johann Joachim Winckelmann's famous 1755 formulation on the 'noble simplicity and quiet grandeur' of Greco-Roman sculpture.) Repeating the credo in the poem Die Dichtkunst from the same publication, Uz implores his muse: 'O poetry, withhold from me your glossy demeanour! Strive not for overweening ornament, rather sound here your gentle song that it may inspire the enraptured shepherd to take up unadorned song'. Note well the invocation to nature, a trait common to Hagedorn as well. Deprecating (as the English poet Richard Payne Knight later would) 'the giant of unwieldy size, / Piling up hills on hills to scale the skies', Hagedorn set his verse within what he called the 'middleground' of 'blessed nature', for it is nature that leads to 'happiness and enjoyment'. Such poetry therefore partakes of the Horatian golden mean, the ideal disposition that enables one to attain a harmony of mind and spirit, the same harmony seen by such writers as Kant and Schiller as forming the basis of Enlightenment.

Nature, too, provided the model for Gottsched's pupil J.A. Scheibe, who, now in Hamburg (Hagedorn's city), set forth guidelines as to how the composer might respond to such poetry, devoting an entire issue of his journal Critischer Musicus (no.64, 17 November 1739) to the matter. Citing the authority of the ancients, for whom 'order and nature' counted above all, he advised the would-be song composer to begin with a consideration of the poem's overall form. Given the invariably strophic nature of contemporaneous poetry – what Hagedorn had meant by 'one uniform and simple Design' – the musician who would 'give an ode or a lied an expressive, skilful and affecting tune or melody' must take care that the music suit every strophe; also, the composer must observe 'the type of verse and the metre' of the poem and match them in music. (Gottsched in his Versuch had defined the ode as 'the comprehensive name for all lieder'). The composer must not create a cadence, repeat a word nor extend a syllable in one strophe where to do so would be inappropriate in another. That done, the composer's last step is the creation of a relatively short melody, one that stays close to the harmonic home base and adheres to 'a moderate range', is 'free, flowing, pure and really natural' in order that it may be sung 'at once and without particular effort by someone inexperienced in music'. Lied composers at work in north Germany at this time include J.V. Görner and Telemann in Hamburg, J.F. Gräfe in Brunswick, and C.H. and J.G. Graun in Berlin. In keeping with the history of the genre well into the next century, it ought to be said that while composers adopted all of Scheibe's suggestions when writing lieder, in other genres they favoured greater complexity. To be sure, one would not recognize the future composer of Montezuma from his contributions to the important lied collection Oden mit Melodien (Berlin, 1753–5), or, for that matter, the composer of the Missa solemnis in An die ferne Geliebte.

In positing the 18th-century lied's inception in Hamburg rather than Berlin, it ought to be said immediately that the statement in no way diminishes the latter city's role in the history of the genre. Nevertheless it is surely time to eschew the evolutionary march-of-progress approach so familiar from 19th-century music historiography with its schoolmasterly 'periods' and 'schools' (e.g. R.G. Kiesewetter, Geschichte der europäisch-abendländischen oder unsrer heutigen Musik, 1834). Hence, the origin of the lied as part of the aesthetic speculations of a younger generation of poets and musicians reacting against what today we would call the Baroque calls into question the continued use of such phrases as 'First Berlin School' or 'Second Berlin School' of lied composition. It is more exact to speak of the 'north German lied' given the locales of composers such as C.G. Neefe in Bonn and A.B.V. Herbing in Magdeburg and publication patterns both before 1770 (the traditional date for the start of the 'Second Berlin School') and thereafter. This caveat made, musicians at Frederick the Great's court contributed greatly to the lied, particularly C.G. Krause who, with K.W. Ramler (librettist of Graun's Der Tod Jesu), published the previously mentioned Oden mit Melodien; in 1755 a second volume was brought out, and in 1767–8 the four-volume Lieder der Deutschen containing 240 songs. Noteworthy too is Krause's Von der musikalischen Poesie (1752), one of four major music treatises by authors at Frederick's court (the three others are C.P.E. Bach's on keyboard playing, Quantz's on playing the flute, and J.F. Agricola's Anleitung zur Singekunst, a translation, with additions, of Tosi's Opinioni de' cantori antichi e moderni). The significance of Krause's study notwithstanding, it has been frequently misrepresented. In large measure he did little more than endorse Gottsched, Hagedorn and Scheibe's neo-classical views on the lied within the context of a theoretical investigation concerned primarily with the kind of opera cultivated by Hasse and Graun; and, as a reading of the treatise reveals, nowhere within his circumscribed coverage of the lied did he state, as has been claimed, that it should aspire to the folklike (Volkstümlich). The terms he did use are either Natürlich or Einfältig (natural or artless). Along with the Graun brothers, other lied composers in Berlin before 1770 were Marpurg, Kirnberger and C.P.E. Bach, who composed both secular and sacred songs and whose collection of Gellert settings, Geistiche Oden und Lieder (1758), shos the genre at last throwing off its ties to the old Baroque continuo lied; as Bach noted in the preface: 'I have added the necessary harmonies to my melodies. In this way I have not had to relinquish them to the whimsy of bumbling-fingered bass players'. Nevertheless keyboard parts, like the melodies themselves, were generally diatonic in the extreme and devoid of ornamentation, and frequently double the melodic line itself in the right hand (the voice part and right hand of the keyboard are often notated on the same staff) or else shadow it a 3rd below. Block homophonic accompaniments prevail, less often Alberti basses, with descending passing notes filling in the typically harmonic movement by root only at cadences. Harmonic rhythm as a rule is slow, sometimes for an entire bar or phrase, and the phrases themselves are invariably balanced. So simple were the accompaniments that – as the ubiquitous title Lieder am Clavier implies – they could be played simultaneously by the singer. With the rise of a growing middle class with leisure time for amateur music-making, such 'artlessness' was well appreciated by both consumers and music publishers.

The lied also provided the German lands with what might be termed a national musical identity. Starting with Leibniz in the 1680s writers increasingly expressed themselves on the 'enforced blindness' that characterized the German 'mode of life, speech, writing, indeed even of thinking' and the 'Sklayerei' to things French; as Christian Thomasius, a lecturer at the University of Leipzig, observed in 1687: 'if our German forefathers were to rise from the dead . . . they might think they were in a foreign land'. Thus Telemann in his 1741 collection spoke of his desire not only for a 'renewed golden age of notes', but also to 'show foreigners how more maturely we are able to think than do you!' Similarly, Krause dedicated his 1753 collection not 'to weighty erudition but to the science of joy and pleasure' as a suitable antidote to the superfluities of Italian opera, an art form he saw as the province of the upper classes; in contrast, the simple tunes and accompaniments of lieder promote 'the pleasure and happiness of all society', a view upheld half a century later when Koch, in his Lexicon, described the lied as 'the one product of music and poetry whose content today appeals to every class of people and every individual'.

In the last quarter of the century the lied continued much along the same lines, although keyboard parts were becoming more active. Formal designs, too, were becoming more adventurous, as the numerous modified strophic and through-composed songs by Reichardt and Zelter in Berlin and Zumsteeg in Stuttgart, not to mention those by Haydn and Mozart, attest. Yet even as the century was witnessing such landmark musical events as Haydn's op.33 string quartets (written, as he declared, in 'an entirely new and special way') in 1781 or Mozart's move from Salzburg to Vienna the same year, the lied retained its distinctive diatonic clarity and fondness for sparse textures, evident in such disparate works as Mozart's masterly Abendempfindung K523 or Das Lied der Trennung K519. Although the former – Mozart's only through-composed song – displays a wider-ranging tonal scheme than most lieder from the century, and the latter an inventive modified strophic design with a poignant move from tonic minor to relative major in the antepenultimate strophe, both nonetheless hark back to Hagedorn's 'elegant and unaffected Turn of Wit'. The same may be said of the first song cycle, Beethoven's An die ferne Geliebte, with its carefully worked-out and balanced key scheme and reprise of music from the first song in the concluding sixth. As Kerman has shown convincingly, the cycle is a 'quiet herald' of Beethoven's final style period, one marked in part by simple song and directness of expression. Beethoven's decision to embrace the lied's 'free, flowing, pure, and really natural' style is even more interesting when placed against the perspective of the genre's role within German musical thought throughout the greater part of the 18th century. Just as Uz had praised song devoted to 'the noble simplicity of unadorned expressions', so too did Christoph Martin Wieland in his widely read Geschichte des Agathon (1766–7) write of 'music that soothed the passions and gently moved the soul'. Revealingly enough, such music, Wieland reflected, should be marked by the 'tenderness of virtue and the touching joy of unadorned nature'. In 1781 Reichardt went so far as to claim that the lied is 'truly that upon which the steadfast artist relies when he begins to suspect his art is on the wrong track': the musician's 'polestar'. How fitting, then, that Beethoven, after a compositionally lean period immediately before An die ferne Geliebte, renewed his dedication to his art by setting to music the modest poem by Aloys Jeitteles, situated within Hagedorn's 'blessed nature', where 'at the sound of songs all time and space recede'. How fitting, indeed, for as is disclosed in the concluding sixth lied, such song, metaphorically accompanied by the 'lute's sweet sound', springs from 'a full heart, without the adornments of art'.

Given that it is nowadays unfashionable to view music or any aspect of history in terms of 'great men', the time is perhaps at hand to appreciate the 18th-century lied for what it was rather than what it was not, a state of affairs that requires as well a more realistic means of assessment. The creation of musicians who aspired neither to the plaudits of posterity nor to the permanence of a musical canon not then invented, the lied attracted composers who, by and large, were happy to satisfy the era's appetite for 'pleasing' music; 'pleasing', a concept according to the Chronik von Berlin for May 1791, 'which has gained citizenship throughout the realm of thinking beings'. Consequently it is not to the lieder of Mozart or Haydn that one ought necessarily to turn for a true indication of the genre, but rather to the little-known and frequently anonymous contributors of such publications as Angenehme und zärtliche Lieder (Dessau, 1760), the 25 Lieder in Musik gesetzt (1786) by Corona Schröter (which includes the first setting of Goethe's Der Erlkönig), the Frohe und gesellige Lieder für das Clavier of Carl Gottlob Hausius (1796) or the literally countless collections of social strophic songs published expressly for German freemasons, such as the intriguingly titled Mildheimisches Lieder-Buch von acht hundert lustigen und ernsthaften Gesängen über alle Dinge in der Welt und alle Umstände des mencshlichen Lebens, die man besingen kann (Gotha, 1815), not to mention the work by such a peripatetic figure as J.F.H. Dalberg or the forgotten likes of F.W. Rust or J.F. Christmann. At a time when Mozart's Don Giovanni could be described in the Journal des Luxus und der Moden of February 1791 as 'very artificial and overloaded', the songs in publications or by composers such as these arguably provide a more accurate barometer of musical taste in German-speaking lands during the second half of the 18th century than more 'elevated' fare, a point seemingly affirmed by the statement by Türk quoted above.

Pleasant and easy-going, well ordered and imbued with both 'nature and facility', it is tempting to view the lied before Schubert as the quintessential music of the age that Kant once referred to as 'the century of Frederick' the Great. The genre provided both a yardstick, even a paradigm, against which progress in the natural sciences could be measured and, if need be, the medium of escape from the cares of an increasingly all-too-modern, frenetic world. Here the unchanging simplicity of the music itself, founded on an aesthetic that sought to mirror the 'touching joy of unadorned nature', provides the most compelling evidence for this claim. And it explains in part why Gottfried Wilhelm Fink, editor of the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung, could ask in 1826 'has there even been an age more prolific in song than ours?' It accounts, too, for the growth in the number of song collections published, from a mere 779 issued between 1736 and 1799 to more than 100 a month by the year of Fink's musing – in other words, from a rate of one collection a month during those 64 years to a hundred times as many by 1826.

IV. The Romantic lied

In the 19th century the German vernacular song developed into an art form in which musical ideas suggested by words were embodied in the setting of those words for voice and piano, both to provide formal unity and to enhance details; thus in Schubert's Gretchen am Spinnrade (19 October 1814 – a date usually taken to mark the birth of the German Romantic lied) the image of the spinning wheel in the title evokes the recurrent circling semiquavers of the accompaniment, while the text later suggests (by its exclamation and repetition) the cessation and resumption of the semiquaver figure at the climax of the song. The genre presupposes a renaissance of German lyric verse, the popularity of that verse with composers and public, a consensus that music can derive from words, and a plentiful supply of techniques and devices to express that interrelation.

1. Intellectual, social and musical sources.

The lied thus defined essentially began with its greatest poet, Goethe. But minor poets like Hölty and Müller and gifted amateurs like Mayrhofer had their importance. The seminal quality of the new verse was not its literary merit but its emotional tone, which blended both higher and lower lyric styles. The former expressed mid-18th-century sentiment in classical metres, in such poems as Klopstock's Die Sommernacht (1776). At the same time Claudius and others of peasant stock were writing simple popular lyrics like Abendlied in rhymed folksong couplets or quatrains. Primitive, national or traditional verse of all kinds and from all lands was a growing influence strongly fostered by Herder (Volkslieder, 1778–9) and a source of resurgent interest in the BALLAD. Classical and popular styles, metres and themes are found together in the verses of Hölty (d 1776), who wrote fluently in either style and could also combine the two, as in his anacreontic or elegiac verses. All these styles and forms were practised by Goethe and Schiller, who both added a further dramatic dimension to lyric verse by writing songs for plays (e.g. Faust and Wilhelm Tell).

This lyric renaissance, though multi-faceted, has a discernible central theme: personal, individual feeling is poignantly confronted with and affected by powerful external forces, whether of nature, history or society. The human being and the human condition are typically conceived as isolated yet significant (as in the landscape painting of Caspar David Friedrich). In the words of Charles Rosen (The Romantic Generation, 1996, p.236):

> To ennoble both landscape poetry and painting, the late eighteenth century turned to the example of music, pre-eminent as the art of time, and this gave landscape literally a new dimension and allowed the revolutionary conceptions of Nature to be carried out in the arts of painting, prose and poetry. From the poems, the songs of Beethoven and Schubert inherited the new sense of time and found the most striking musical expression for it.

This new poetry, particularly when it pitted the individual against the great outdoors in the manner of Friedrich's landscapes, was both heroic and vulnerable, solitary as well as aspiring to the universal, grandiose at the same time as intimate. The tension generated by these contrasts accerlated the development of the lied, which was intially something small and homely but which gradually acquired a surprisingly protent expressive power disprportionate to its size. A musical form that had been temporal and peripheral became enduring and of central significance in the hands of the right composers; indeed, as Rosen (op. cit) has pointed out, it took on a timeless quality, seemingly to contain traces of both past and present, as well as pointed to the future. The abandoned fragment and the mysterious understatement, the very stuff of Romanitc poetry, could be ideally amplified and elucidated through musical means; as the 19th century progressed, German writers (Novalis, Hölderlin, the Schlegel brothers, Heine, Müller, Mörike, Kerner) ploughed the depths of neurotic intrspection in verse, and composers followed in their footstpes reaping a musical harvest of unprecedented riches. It was fortunate, and not entirely fortuitous, that German poetry found its natural counterpart in the increasingly sophisticated musical language available to contemporary German-speaking composers. (it is significant that such great poets as Keats and Byron were to find no comparable musical echo among their English contemporaries.) The Protean and far-reaching implications were clear: Romantic lyrics could be adapted to the expression of national and social aspirations as well as the traditional subjects of lyric verse, both religious and secular. It made a particular appeal to the rapidly expanding German-speaking educated classes, whose feelings it embodied, and to whom the cultural journals and almanaks of the time, where much of the new poetry was published, were specifically addressed. A middle class was well placed to appreciate not only the new personal and emotional content of this poetry but also its stylistic blend of elevated courtly style with popular lyric.

The Romantic lied directly mirrored these literary developments by combining the styles and themes of opera, cantata or oratorio with those of folk or traditional song, and reducing the result to terms of voice and keyboard. The poetry of individual feelings could thus ideally be expressed by one person who might, in theory at least, be poet, composer, singer and accompanist simultaneously. The piano (from about 1790 the titles of songbooks refer to 'Fortepiano' rather than 'Klavier') had so evolved that it could render orchestral sound-effects in addition to the homelier lilt or strumming of the fiddle or guitar. Thus string tremolandos were reproduced at the keyboard to symbolize the sights and sounds of nature, from thunder and lightning to brooks and zephyrs, symbols that could then be used as images of human feeling in the lyric mode. Recitative and arioso could be enriched by the simpler movement and structure of popular song melody and the directness of its syllabic word-setting, and these, too, could in turn be used as symbols of emotional immediacy.

Yet the new art lay dormant for some decades. The intellectual climate was unpropitious to further growth, which though fostered by the popularity of poetry was retarded by the denial of equal rights to music. Many 18th-century songs were entitled simply 'Gedichte' for voice and piano. Gluck's Oden und Lieder beim Klavier zu singen in Musik gesetzt exemplify his famous dictum (preface to Alceste, 1769) that music in mixed forms was ancillary to poetic expression. This doctrine, evidently unconducive to the development of the lied as an independent art form, was warmly espoused by the north German songwriters J.F. Reichardt, J.A.P. Schulz and C.F. Zelter, as well as the renowned Swabian ballad composer J.R. Zumsteeg, and Conradin Kreutzer who was active largely in Vienna.

They were all composers of opera or Singspiele, and imported the expressive devices of those forms into their songs. But as Gluckians they did so only sparingly and with restraint. Not surprisingly, this attitude was approved by Goethe, whose texts they often set. But he knew instinctively that a new art was about to be born, remarking in a letter to Zelter (21 December 1809) that no lyric poem was really complete until it had been set to music. 'But then something unique happens. Only then is the poetic inspiration, whether nascent or fixed, sublimated (or rather fused) into the free and beautiful element of sensory experience. Then we think and feel at the same time, and are enraptured thereby.'

The process had been anticipated by Mozart in Das Veilchen K476 (Goethe) and Abendempfindung K523 (anon.). Each poem prefigured aspects of Romantic individualism; each setting is musically varied yet unified, in response to the poetic mood, by the use of vocal recitative and keyboard symbolism (light staccato for the tripping shepherdess, sighing 6ths for the evening winds). These and other Mozart songs were published in Vienna in 1789, and hence were readily available to Schubert, who used analogous motifs (staccato in the pastoral Erntelied, wind-effects in Abendbilder, Der Lindenbaum etc.).

Another precursor was Beethoven, who can plausibly be claimed to have created the lied. Although his songs remain in the 18th-century tradition of self-effacing enhancement of the words, his inventive genius often restored the balance, partly by the detail of his illustrative writing (for example, not just birdsong but nightingales, larks, doves and quails) but also by the variety and imagination of his more conceptual musical equivalents (from the welling of tears in Worre der Wehmut op.83 to the crushing of fleas in Aus Goethes Faust op.75). Each such motivic usage is integrated into a prevailing unity of musical mood, for example in the song cycle An die ferne Geliebte op.98, where such purely musical elements as folksong melody, harmony, variation form, and cyclic unity are themselves used as expressive devices. A typical example of the conceptual lied-motif would be the repeated chords which for Beethoven the songwriter signify 'stars' (Adelaide op.46, bar 33; Die Ehre Gottes aus der Natur op.48, bars 19ff; Abendlied unterm gestirnten Himmel WoO150, bars 10ff and 44f). This idea has a precursor in Haydn's Creation, at the moment when stars were created.

In these ways Beethoven (and to some extent Haydn, as in The Spirit's Song, a setting of English words) asserted the composer's right to independence, a right further implicit in Beethoven's familiar phrase 'durchkomponiertes Lied', that is, a continuous musical structure often superimposed on a strophic poem. In contrast, Weber favoured, both by precept (letter to F. Wieck, 1815) and by example, a consistently 18th-century attitude; form as well as declamation were to derive from the poem, and the music was to forgo autonomy.

2. Schubert. It was Schubert who, by fusing the verbal and musical components of the lied, first synthesized in significant quantity the new element predicted by Goethe. His essential apparatus was a mind infinitely receptive to poetry, which he must have read voraciously from early boyhood on. His 660 or so settings (including duets, trios and quartets, as well as songs in Italian) demonstrate familiarity with hundreds of textual sources, including novels and plays as well as poems, and ranging from the complete works of acknowledged literary figures to the sometimes overabitious verses f his friends and, on one occasion at least (Abschied D578), his own heartfelt, if undeniably amateur, efforts. His passionate response to imaginative writing impelled him to bring the musical component of song to a level of expressiveness and unity never since surpassed.

It is arguable that Schubert made no innovation; even the continuous narrative unity of Die schöne Müllerin and Winterreise was already inherent in Müller's verses. Even with such a pre-ordained structure, however, the hand of the master is to be discerned in what he chose to leave out or change. For example, in transposing the order of Müller's poems (in Die Nebensonnen and Mut) Schubert infused the closing minutes of Winterreise with a spellbinding intensity which owes almost as much to his literary sensibility as to his musical genius. All Schubert's infinite variety of styles and forms, melodic lines, modulations and accompaniment figures are essentially the result of responsiveness to poetry. Equally notable is his evident sense of responsibility. His revisions confirm that he was actively seeking to re-create a poem, almost as a duty; he would rewrite, rethink, give up and start again, rather than fail a poem that had pleased him, and his aim was to find an apt expressive device that could also be used as a structural element. Each such device occurs, at least in embryo, in his predecessors, whether the quasi-operatic techniques and popular elements of the north German school or the inspired motivic ideas of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. From the former he absorbed the ideas of simplified folklike melody, interpolated recitative, a range of forms from miniature strophic or modified strophic to extended cantatas, and expressive sound-effects. Thus the 'typically Schubertian' brooks and rivers that flow so effortlessly through his piano parts took their rise in north Germany. So did the musical metaphors of human motion and gesture: walking or running rhythms; tonic or dominant inflections for question and answer; the moods of storm or calm; the major–minor contrasts for laughter and tears, sunshine and shade; the convivial or melancholy melodies moulded to the shape and stress of the verse. All these abound in Schubert's precursors, notably Zumsteeg, on whose work his own is often closely and deliberately modelled.

Schubert's debt to the musical resources of Zumsteeg's generation is so evident in his earliest surviving song, Hagars Klage, as to suggest a set composition exercise. The music, though manifestly immature, rises fresh from deep springs of feeling about human fate, here a mother's concern for her dying child and a father's inexplicable cruelty to his youngest son, factors which seem to have some resonances in the psyche of the 14-year-old composer and his tempestuous relationship with his own father. (The early songs Der Vatermörder and Leichenfantasie, not to mention Erlkönig, also explore father-son relationships.) Like Schumann (particularly in 1840) and Brahms after him, but unlike the fastidious and secretive Hugo Wolf, there are often telling, if contentious, biographical conclusions to be drawn from Schubert's choice of texts at different points in his career. Although music cannot in itself be autobiographical, it is a unique feature of song that a composer is susceptible, when selecting a text, to poetry that happens to chime with current moods, feelings or predicaments, in the manner of any ordinary reader – indeed, some sort of personal identification may well be needed in order to kindle a musical response. In this context it is unsurprising that the pubescent composer, already fighting with a disapproving father for a measure of musical independence, should have alighted on Hagars Kalge as a first-time model in preference to Zumsteeg's many other ballads; what songs were about mattered to Schubert from the start, and that fact is at the heart of his subsequent greatness. The composer identifies with poet, character, scene and singer and strives to concentrate lyric, dramatic and graphic ideas into an integrated whole. It was this concentration that distilled the whole essence of the Schubertian lied, but the process was a gradual one and took time to master. Long, diffuse ballads or cantatas on Zumsteegian lines continued for some years, as in Die Bürgschaft and Die Erwartung. They seek with varying success to unify disparate elements such as melody, often inset for dramatic purposes to indicate a song within a song (as at 'Ich singe wie der Vogel singt' in Der Sänger), recitative, and interpolated descriptive or narrative music (the interludes in Der Taucher or Die Bürgschaft). It is no coincidence, however, that Schubert's earliest masterpieces are settings of shorter and more readily unifiable lyrics on his favourite theme of intense personal concern, whether of a girl for her absent lover (Gretchen am Spinnrade), a father for his doomed son (Erlkönig) or an awestruck observer for the immensities of nature (Meeres Stille). Each is imagined against a background of moods and scenes suitable for quasi-dramatic re-creation in sound. Further, all three poems are by Goethe, whose genius lay in making the universal singable, and these songs were selected by Schubert for earliest publication as reflecting the greatest poet and the most modern spirit of the new age.

They made an instant and intense appeal to an intellectual avant garde, the apostles of Romantic individualism. Thus 300 copies of Erlkönig were sold within 18 months; the correspondence of Schubert's own circle and its adherents (comprising lawyers and civil servants as well as musicians and artists) is full of excited references to new songs; the Schubertiads in his honour were staunchly supported by his numerically few but culturally influential devotees. This professional middle-class audience was the musical segment of the wider public for the poetic renaissance described earlier. The musical components of the songs corresponded to the new poetry of which they were the setting and hence the equivalent: a blend of classical and popular, dramatic and lyric, complex and simple. The music of the palace had united with the music of the people to produce the music of the drawing-room. In the process the focus of artistic attention had shifted from the larger scale to the smaller, and from the plot or scene to the individual. So the musical motive power of each of these songs, and of Schubertian lied in general, comes from a dramatic source condensed into lyric terms. It is opera with orchestra reduced to voice and keyboard, with scenery and costumes thriftily expressed in sound, transported from the theatre to the home, and economically entrusted to one or two artists rather than to a company. And one stylistic source of the keyboard accompaniment effects and motifs in Schubert's songs is the piano scores of opera and oratorio (which may help to explain why Schubert's keyboard writing is sometimes held to be unpianistic). Thus the ominous figure of the night ride in Erlkönig recalls the dungeon scene of Fidelio, while the becalmed semibreves of Meeres Stille have their counterparts in Haydn's Creation. Each such sonorous image is set vibrating by verbal ideas, and the increasing range and resonance of response from these early masterpieces, through Die schöne Müllerin and the Rückert songs (both 1823) to the final year of Winterreise and the Heine settings, is the history of Schubert's development as a songwriter. In addition to obvious onomatopoeic devices and other self-evident equivalences, there are hundreds of deeper, more personal and less readily explicable verbo-musical ideas, corresponding, for example, to springtime, sunlight, evening, starlight, sleep, love, grief, innocence and so on, and occurring in infinitely variable permutation. Songs in which such expressive motifs are embodied represent the apotheosis of Schubert's lieder, whether the linking force is rhythm (Geheimes), harmony (Dass sie hier gewesen), melody (all strophic songs), tonality (Nacht und Träume), variation form (Im Frühling), imitation (Der Leiermann), quasi-impressionism (Die Stadt), or incipient leitmotif used either for dramatic (Der Zwerg) or descriptive ends (the river music of Auf der Donau or the brook music of Die schöne Müllerin). The 'star' chords already noted in Beethoven, to take just one instance out of hundreds, can be observed in a wide range of illustrative or structural use, as in Adelaide, Die Gestirne, Der Jüngling auf dem Hügel, Todesmusik, Abendstern, Die Sterne, Der liebliche Stern, Totengräber-Weise, Im Freien and many other songs.

3. Loewe and Mendelssohn. By comparison with those of Schubert, the approximately 375 songs of Carl Loewe lack the dimension of musical independence. Loewe maintained the 18th-century tradition of subordination to words designedly, because he was above all a musical raconteur without the emotional range needed to match the great German lyrics (although his 30 Goethe settings include many of the better-known poems). In search of the narrative ballads that best suited him, he used no fewer than 80 different poets, including many in translation. Loewe ran little risk of allowing over-concentrated dramatic and scenic invention to impede the action, nor, conversely, was he usually content with a strophic repetition that relied overmuch on the poem to provide variety and development. In both respects he improved on his mentor Zumsteeg. Comparison with Shubert shows a very different musical mind at work: Loewe's setting of Goethe's Erlkönig is thought be some enthusiasts to be superior to Schubert's, but it lacks the elemental and visceral power of the more famous song: Loewe eschews the thundeing intensity of horse's hooves in order to achieve his ingratiating depiction of the supernatural. On the other hand, Schubert's Eine altschottische Ballade, his 1828 setting of Herder's translation from Percy's Relinques, seems at first hearing to be undeveloped in comparison to Loewe's melodramatic and famous ballad. Schubert's work has its own terse power however, and greater familiarity with both works does not necessarily confirm a preference for Loewe's setting. Instead of condensed drama or formular narrative Loewe offered a storybook with pictures – expository melody with descriptive accompaniments. His harmony, though mainly monochrome, adds an occasional surprising splash of colour. The vocal line adopts the style appropriate to the reciter of the poem, ranging from monotone (as for the century-long sleep of the hero of Harald op.45) to a free cantilena (in songs about singing, such as Der Nöck op.129). The voice can further be put to illustrative use to suggest a harp (Der Nöck) or a bell (Des Glockentürmers Töchterlein op.112*a*), as well as by the skilful exploitation of other techniques and styles, including bel canto. Developed preludes and postludes are rare because the piano accompaniments tend to begin and end with the voice, as the narrative form requires. But there are often extended interludes, exploiting particularly the upper register, which are especially effective in illustrating narratives of the supernatural, such as the elves and sprites of Die Heinzelmännchen op.83 or Hochzeitlied op.20. So broad was Loewe's command of expressive vocabulary that any song is likely to offer a thesaurus of such devices; Die verfallene Mühle op.109 is a typical if rarely heard example. But his practice of stringing such effects on the narrative thread of the poem was not conducive to change and development. It is true to say that his earliest songs are his best-known, and probably his best, but there are many treasures to be discovered in the 17-volume complete edition including a surprisingly beautiful Frauenliebe which offers a refreshing alternative to Schumann's celebrated reading of Chamisso's poems. On the other hand, his abundant and continuous invention, and its clear relation to the texts, make Loewe an exemplary if neglected master of the lied, understandably admired by Wolf and Wagner and influential for both. His work still holds the platform, particularly in Germany (it is a brave native English speaker who essays Loewe, whose music often requires a death-defying speed for textual delivery). If at times he seems neglected, his posthumous standing need only be compared with that of the once-celebrated Marshcner, whose 400 songs have utterly disappeared from the repertory.

Mendelssohn is Loewe's antithesis. His approximately 90 songs include no true ballads; indeed, there is rarely any hint of drama, character or action. The music is autonomous in most, and one can readily imagine them arranged as 'Lieder ohne Worte' (which may have been the origin of that title). Although Mendelssohn was taught for many years by the doyen of the north German school, Carl Zelter, only the very earliest songs (such as Romanze op.8) show any influence of opera or Singspiel, or any hint of musical subordination to the words. On the contrary, the texts seem almost to have been chosen to be dominated by the music; thus the most frequent of Mendelssohn's 30 poets was his versifying friend Klingemann, with eight settings (as against five by Goethe). Songs and sketches alike suggest that the main aim was formal perfection, normally conceived as strophic with a varied last verse or coda. The piano offers unobtrusive accompaniment in arpeggios or four-part harmony; the tonality is diatonic with occasional altered chords, often diminished 7ths over a bass pedal. But none of these effects seems clearly related to the poems; and in general there are few overt equivalents for verbal ideas, as though the music had no deep roots in language. Yet Mendelssohn was both original and influential, especially on Brahms. His genius for expressive melody, well exemplified by Auf Flügeln des Gesanges (op.34 one of five Heine settings), was manifest from the first. Indeed, publication of his earliest songs in Paris in 1828 may have stimulated the development of the Mélodie there. His aim of formal perfection was both salutary and timely; and there are many German poems of the period for which melodic and formal beauty are in themselves close equivalents. In such settings, where the musical expression relies on vocal lilt and cadence, structural pattern and design – Lenau's An die Entfernte op.71 or Geibel's Der Mond op.86 – Mendelssohn excels. More than a mere footnote to the songwriting achievements of Mendelssohn are the lieder of his sister, whose roughly 300 songs show a considerable creative personality; indeed it is arguable that Fanny Mendelssohn was temperamentally better suited than her brother to explore the passionate and dramatic aspects of the medium.

4. Schumann and Franz. Mendelssohn's praxis compared with Loewe's suggests that the Schubertian compound of words and music was still unstable and could readily split into its narrative and lyric components, losing some energy in the process. Schumann was well placed to reunite them. Like Mendelssohn he was a melodist; like Loewe he was literary. But he too began with the 18th-century notion that the music of a song should just express the poem, which implied not only that songwriting was an inferior art (as he at first believed, according to a letter of June 1839 to Hirschbach) but also that the composer had a secondary role – whereas Schumann was by temperament a dominant innovator and leader. Hence perhaps his own tentative début as a songwriter at 18. The following decade as a pianist and composer gave him the necessary foundation of independent musicianship; the emotional crisis of his betrothal to Clara Wieck heightened his receptivity to poetry. The mixture was explosive: his total of 140 songs written in the 12 months beginning February 1840 is unmatched even by Wolf or Schubert for quality and quantity of output in a single year, and it includes most of the best and best-known of his nearly 260 lieder.

These recombine the two basic elements of the lied, the verbal equivalence exploited by Loewe and the musical independence stressed by Mendelssohn, thus revealing Schumann as the true heir of Schubert, with whose quasi-verbal expressive style he had always felt the deepest affinity (according to passages in the Jugendbriefe and Tagebücher) and whose immense legacy of songs was increasingly available for study throughout the 1830s. Schumann had complete command of the musical metaphor exploited by Schubert. In particular, his introduction of contrasting sections in related keys (such as the mediant minor) without genuine modulation yielded new and subtle contrasts. But his personal innovation was a new independence, to the point of dominance, in the piano part. The paradigm of a Schumann song is a lyric piano piece, the melody of which is shared by a voice. As Mendelssohn played songs on the piano and called them Lieder ohne Worte, so Schumann sang piano pieces and turned them back into lieder. Thus the preludes and postludes to his songs tend to be self-expressive solos rather than merely illustrative as were Loewe's.

This piano style, together with Schumann's literary leanings and his personal feelings, led him to write love songs in groups or cycles arranged by poet, often with a deliberately unified tonality. It seems as though Schumann understood better than anyone before him that 'the song cycle is the embodiment of the Romantic ideal: to find – or create – a natural unity out of a collection of different objects without compormising the independence or the disparity of each member ... the large form must appear to grow directly from the smaller forms' (Rosen, op. cit., 212). Heine (Dichterliebe op.48 and Liederkreis op.24) and Eichendorff (Liederkreis op.39), both master lyricists of intense and changing moods, were Schumann's favourite poets in early 1840, with 41 and 14 settings respectively. Later in the same year his songwriting became more objective, beginning with the 16 Chamisso songs, including Frauenliebe und -leben, lyrics that reflected his lifelong social concern.

Schumann's second songwriting phase began with the Rückert and Goethe songs of 1849. His harmonic language had become more intensely chromatic, and the consequent absence of diatonic tensions and contrasts meant than a new principle of organization was needed. In the Wielfried von der Neun songs of 1850 Schumann sought a solution through use of the short adaptable motif, already adumbrated by Schubert and Loewe, which could be changed and developed to match the changing thoughts of the verses; but his increasing illness probably inhibited his further development of such ideas, which later became the province of Wagner in opera and of Wolf in the lied. The extent to which the songwriting of Schumann's later years represented the deliberation of illness rather than a consciously adopted new style remains controversial. Some of his later lieder, once almost universally thought to be ineffective and rambling, found increasing favour with performers and critics in the late 20th century, alongside many other non-vocal works of the final period. Moreover censensus now seems to be that Schumann, even if his powers were weakened by illness, possessed talent superior to that of most of his songwriting contemporaries of unimpaired health. Another important developement in Schumann studies has been emergence of Clara Schumann as a prolific and significant composer, and the subject of a spate of biographichal study and re-evaluation. If she is not the equal of Fanny Mendelssohn Hensel as a song composer, it is probably because the lied interested her less than instrumental forms. Certainly the study of Schumann's songs would have been easier if Clara had made an annotated performing edition fo his lieder, which she regularly accompanied; unfortunately, many of their secrets (particularly as regards tempos) died with her and Brahms. Schumann himself acknowledged Clara's influence by publishing some three of her songs as part of their joint op.37 (1840), a cycle from Rückert's Liebesfrühling which celebrated nuptial bliss. Mendelssohn had led the way with this kind of family collaboration 12 years earlier in his songs opp.8 and 9, in which six of the 24 songs are by his sister Fanny.

With Schumann songwriting was conscious, even cerebral; he was the first theorist of the lied, which he described as the only genre in which significant progress had been made since Beethoven (NZM, xix, 1843, pp.34–5). This he attributed to the rise of a new school of lyric poets – Eichendorff and Rückert, Heine and Uhland – whose intensity of emotion and imagery had been embodied in a new musical style. As example he chose the op.1 of Robert Franz, himself a notable theorist of the lied as well as a practitioner with about 280 songs. For Franz, musical expression of poetry in the 18th-century tradition was a sine qua non. He was explicit, too, about his aims and methods: 'In my songs the accompaniment depicts the situation described in the text, while the melody embodies the awareness of that situation'. He claimed that in addition to all the techniques developed by previous songwriters he (and he alone) had deliberately sought to draw on the resources of Bach and Handel, the Protestant chorale, and traditional folksong; and it is true that Franz included modal as well as chromatic harmony.

His own invention, however, especially of melody, was not quite abundant enough to give his songs the musical autonomy characteristic of the best 19th-century lieder, so that his work seems old-fashioned by comparison with that of his contemporaries. As in Mendelssohn's songs, a deliberate limitation of scope resulted in the absence of dramatic or narrative songs. The piano parts are unobtrusive to a fault, and there are few independent preludes or postludes because the musical material is so economically tailored to the poem. Mendelssohnian too is Franz's extensive use of the undistinguished verses of a close friend (Osterwald, with 51 settings). There are also certain palpable defects, such as an overreliance on the sequential treatment of melody (as in Für Musik op.10) and an overinsistence on formal perfection, with sometimes contrived effects. The compensation is a Schubertian devotion to lyric verse, typified in his passionate identification with Heine (67 settings, the greatest concentration in the lied repertory). Thus in Aus meinen grossen Schmerzen op.5 the piano part is itself a small-scale song because the poem is about the fashioning of small songs; the illustrative arpeggios at 'klingend' are woven into the texture with unobtrusive dexterity; and the slight divergence of vocal and instrumental lines at the end makes the poetic point most tellingly. The craftsmanship is self-effacingly immaculate. Though a minor composer, Franz is a major lied writer, greatly admired by Schumann, Liszt and Wagner; his work is long overdue for reappraisal.

5. Wagner, Liszt and Cornelius. The admiration of both Liszt and Wagner is relevant because they too belong to lied history, even though their creative gestures were generally too wide and sweeping for the lyric form. Their early songs are rather inflated in style, as in Wagner's 1840 setting of Heine's Die Grenadiere in French. Liszt himself later acknowledged this aspect of his own early songs (letter to Josef Dessauer, Franz Liszts Briefe, ed. La Mara, ii, 1893, p.403), and although he stood far nearer than Wagner to the lyric mode (writing 83 songs as against Wagner's 20), he was not a native German speaker, which caused him some uncertainty of style and scansion (see the first versions of Über allen Gipfeln and Die Loreley). In general Liszt's songs are eclectic and experimental, and their inspiration seems to have been social or personal rather than literary, drawing on 44 poets in five languages, with texts ranging from acknowledged masterpieces to trivial salon verses. They are treated with musical unity and fidelity to the text, and they tend to be dominated by local colour or sound-effects. Thus even the late Die drei Zigeuner illustrates the surface rather than the substance of Lenau's poem. Although the listener may protest that the song is musically exciting as a portrait of gypsy music, the poet makes a broader philosophical point which is overwhelmed by Liszt's pianistic illustrations. The much later setting by the Swiss composer Othmar Schoeck is to be preferred for its understanding of Lenau's intentions, and the preservation of the poem's shape.

Liszt was well aware of his difficutlies with the form, these problems, as his revisions show. His integrity as well as his development can be measured by comparing various versions of a single song, as, for example, the three settings of Goethe's Mignons Lied (1842–60); his perseverance was comparable only to Schubert's and was equally motivated by genuine devotion. He may also have been fired by Schumann's songwriting, for his own 62 German settings began in 1840 (when the two met) with a Heine poem set by Schumann in that year, I'Am Rhein. Although lack of deep knowledge and response to language may leave Liszt as only a tributary to the lied, he was nevertheless a powerful influence in the mainstream, and through several channels. He was an active propagandist, both in his prose writing (essay on Franz in Gesammelte Schriften, iv, 1855–9) and more generally through his piano transcriptions of lieder (Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn and Franz as well as his own songs). His keyboard techniques were a source of new effects and sonorities, and his harmonic originality was also seminal (for example, some passages in Die Loreley of 1840 and Ich möchte hingehn of 1847 are strikingly predictive of Tristan). Finally, his gift for simple but refined melody, especially in his late settings of unpretentious texts, enabled Liszt to achieve unusual effects of poignancy and even irony, with altered chords and semitonal clashes (as in Es muss ein Wunderbares sein, 1857), which look forward to the 20th century, in particular to the songs of Richard Strauss.

Wagner's later songs, notably the five Wesendonk lieder of 1857–8, are also forerunners of Tristan (avowedly so in the third and fifth, implicitly in the rest). Despite their voice and piano scoring they were clearly conceived in broad orchestral terms rather than as re-creations of lyric poetry. In a small, intimate genre like the lied, it is often the minor master like Franz or Peter Cornelius who excels. Cornelius, too, was praised by Liszt and Wagner, and for much of his life he fell directly under their shadow, since he worked for each in turn as an amanuensis. If they were turbulent tributaries, he was a mainstream backwater, receiving multiple influences but contributing little. Yet his very receptivity, to plainsong and Baroque traditions as well as to the latest developments in harmony and declamation, gave him, like Franz, a broad-based originality. Cantus firmus (in the Vater unser cycle op.2) and chorale (in the Weihnachtslieder op.8) appear as unifying devices. Free tonal fluctuations are used for colour or contrast within a diatonic style or, as in the juxtaposition of E major within D♭ major at the word 'Jubel' in op.2 no.2, as a deliberate equivalent for a verbal image. Vocal melodies often linger on one note or move by step, as though the words were recited. Such devices and many more, including meaningful motifs, are put at the service of lyric verse.

Alone among lied composers Cornelius was his own favourite poet, with 50 settings of his approximately 100 songs. This was both strength and weakness. Its advantage was that Cornelius had a genuine if slender poetic gift, and as a composer he was well placed to know what musical equivalence was appropriate and how it could be achieved. But the essence of the lied was diluted by using his own poetry: pre-existing familiarity must inevitably lessen the impact of verse on the musical mind. Further, his lyrics themselves tended to be rather wistful and colourless, and hence not especially striking or memorable when wearing their matching music. The repetitive or limited emotional content, form and metre of the verses is often reflected in repeated rhythms and melodies of restricted range. Thus the well-known Ein Ton (op.3 no.3), in which the voice part has but a single note, in its way symbolizes not only the poem but the whole Cornelian approach to the lied. Yet this quietly inward and spiritual work in music and poetry, based on domestic scenes of worship (Weihnachtslieder) or betrothal (Brautlieder, 1856–8) and often grouped, like Schumann's songs, into sequences or cycles, has its own enduring value. Among other works of the so-called New German School, the songs of Adolf Jensen have received little attention, regrettably so since there are his Spanish-inspired settings, for example, a verve and theatrical flair not to be found in Cornelius's deeply felt lieder. Indeed, Jost (MGG2) has identified the lieder of Jensen as the missing stylistic link between the songs of Schumann and Wolf.

6. BRAHMS. In his approximately 200 songs Brahms was both more and less objective than Cornelius. He was neither poet nor connoisseur, and never set any verse of his own, but his choice of texts regularly reflects his own inner moods and needs. Hence his comparative neglect of such major poets as Goethe (only five settings) and Mörike (three) and his devotion to such minor lyricists as Daumer (19) and Groth (11) whose specialities were erotic and nostalgic sentiment respectively. Similarly, Brahms had a predilection for anonymous texts, notably so-called folksongs, whether originally German or translated (46 solo settings, including four from the Bible). Such verses have no identifiable creative personality of their own, and are thus easily adapted for autobiographical purposes. In that sense Brahms departed radically from the 18th-century tradition of re-creating the poem, but in that sense only. In other respects he was both by temperament and by training the supreme traditionalist. He received perhaps the most thorough grounding of all great lied composers, and was a practised songwriter at an early age: Heimkehr (1851) and Liebestreu (1853) are already mature in their grasp of word-music relations and synthesis. Apart from some essays in the extended Schubertian ballad style, the Magelone-Lieder op.33, almost all Brahms's songs are carefully unified formal structures consciously elaborated from certain basic ideas by a process described by the composer in a discussion with Georg Henschel (M. Kalbeck, Johannes Brahms, 1904–14, ii/1, pp.181ff). In his insistence on craftsmanship he reverted to the practice of Mendelssohn, whom he much admired and whose influence is apparent in even the earliest songs. He felt that a strophic poem should be set in verse-repeating forms, and in fact nearly half his own songs are strophic, most of the rest being simple ternary forms. Even Brahms's expressive devices are academic and formular. Like Franz and Cornelius, Brahms had assimilated the forms and techniques of early music, including the modality of folksong (Sonntag) and the four-part texture of chorale (Ich schell mein Horn), together with such devices as augmentation (Mein wundes Herz), inversion and contrary motion (Vier ernste Gesänge). Like Schubert, of whose songs he was collector and orchestrator as well as general devotee, Brahms preferred a song texture of melody plus bass, and indeed he advocated this approach not only as a procedure but as a criterion. The essential Brahms song model is the instrumental duo, the violin or clarinet sonata, whence the typical long-breathed melodies (Erinnerung), some of which are embodied in the violin sonatas (for example, Regenlied in the finale of op.78).

Brahms's song melodies rarely have purely vocal inflections, and thus it is rare in Brahms to find a syllable prolonged or shifted in response to its poetic significance or proper scansion. Similarly, the use of harmonic or textural colouring for analogous reasons is as rare in Brahms as it is common in Schubert or Wolf. The tonal schemes are usually long-range, much as in instrumental forms. Though often complex, the piano parts are essentially integrated with or subordinate to the vocal lines, rather than being dominant or independent. They are mainly accompaniment figurations (arpeggios or broken chords) altered and disguised; textural and rhythmic variety are cultivated as deliberately yet unobtrusively in the songs as in the duo sonatas.

Against this background Brahms's expressive vocabulary tends to sound so purely musical that its quasi-verbal significance may not be readily apparent. Thus the favourite hemiolas used at cadence points had for Brahms the idea of a calming and broadening finality, as of a river reaching the sea (Auf dem See) or, more metaphorically, eternal love (Von ewiger Liebe). His other motivic elements tend to be similarly unobtrusive and predictably related to personal feeling rather than to the poem as such; thus the descending octaves that signify death in Auf dem Kirchhofe and *Ich wandte mich*are almost incongruous in Feldeinsamkeit. This autobiographical element gives Brahms's lieder a special and unique development over 40 years of personal and musical experience, with heights of nostalgia and longing scaled by no other songwriter, culminating in the Vier ernste Gesänge of 1896.

7. WOLF. Hugo Wolf represented the opposite end of the spectrum of lied composition; hence, no doubt, his fanatical anti-Brahmsian, pro-Wagnerian, stance as a critic. His procedures in his own 300 songs were intuitive and poetry-orientated. As an originator rather than a traditionalist he had to create his own models by assimilating the wide variety of vocal and keyboard techniques and devices needed to express the deep emotive content of verse. In one sense this involved a return to the 18th-century concept of poetic dominance; like Schumann, Wolf published songbooks devoted to particular poets (Mörike, Goethe, Eichendorff) under the title 'Gedichte von ...'. Far more vital, however, were the 19th-century metamorphoses of poetic elements into musical substance. Wolf was no theorist, but his descriptions of the word-music relation instinctively drew on metaphors of organic unity and symbiosis: music absorbs and thrives on the essence of poetry like a child on milk, or a vampire on blood. These similes are pertinent to Wolf's own creative function. From the first he battened on poetry and language, absorbing their rhythms, overtones and cadences. In several ways his development as a songwriter is reminiscent of Schumann's career. Like Schumann, he acquired relevant linguistic disciplines through his years as a critic. By composing in all forms he gradually accumulated a personal compendium of expressive device designed to subserve compositional ends which – again like Schumann's – were essentially associated with words and ideas. The parallel is completed by Wolf's choice of texts (the early Heine and Chamisso settings strongly under the Schumann influence, later independent treatments of translations from the Spanish) and most spectacularly by Wolf's delayed and Schumannesque outburst of concentrated songwriting in 1888 – as if the word-music hybrid compensated for its slow germination and growth by a sudden and profuse flowering.

The basic Wolf song style is keyboard writing enriched by vocal and instrumental counterpoint. As with Franz, Wolf's years of training and practice in choral music yielded a four-part piano texture that could be used expressively in its own right for religious songs (Gebet) and also serve as background material on which to embroider expressive motifs. In the depiction of individual emotion (as distinct from the re-creation of great poetry) towards which Wolf evolved in the Spanish, Italian and Michelangelo songs, the four parts can become so independent as to suggest string quartet writing (Wohl kenn ich Euren Stand). Such linear thinking also yields a variety of counterpoints for expressive purposes, like the duet between voice and piano in Lied eines Verliebten, or within the piano part itself in the postlude to Fühlt meine Seele (the latter a frequent image in the love songs generally). Wolf's keyboard style is related to that of the contemporary piano reductions of Wagner operas by Klindworth and others, including such masters of expressive techniques as Liszt and Rubinstein. His own pianistic prowess disposed him to add bravura illustrative interludes (Die Geister am Mummelsee) like those found in Loewe, and to write songs whose piano parts are in effect independent solos, as so often in Schumann. To this basic concept Wolf often added a voice part that was not only itself independent, as in Brahms, but was also moulded to the words in their every inflection, whether of sound or sense; Auf dem grünen Balkon is an example. This characteristic fluidity of melodic line is wholly Wolfian, differing from its Wagnerian equivalent as poetry recitation differs from stage declamation. Thus, the sustained notes Wagner gave Isolde in Tristan (Act 1 scene iii) express the feeling of the character, while the same effect in Wolf's Die ihr schwebet expresses the beauty of the individual word 'geflügelt'. The same distinction applies to Wolf's use of the extended harmonic language of Wagner and Liszt: for Wolf harmonic complexity expressed the symbolic connotations of poetry. Wolf regarded the development of his own detailed motivic language as his most significant contribution; it is a language that varies, in ways too detailed to summarize, from the illustration of a single word (such as 'traurig', in Alles endet, with a deliberately altered minor chord) to the development and contrast of motifs throughout a whole song (Auf einer Wanderung). It includes local colour effects, instrumental imitations and a Debussian sensitivity to the placing and spacing of chords and notes. It offers musical equivalents not only for the subject matter of poetry but also for its technical devices such as dialogue and irony. All this is further enhanced by the extremes of his emotional range – hilarity and desperation, comedy and tragedy. Finally he added a new dramatic dimension within the lyric frame, for his songs encompass dance and incidental music as well as lighting, costume and scenery. The Wolfian lied thus continued the Schubertian tradition, culminating in a complete theatre of the mind, a Gesamtkunstwerk for voice and piano.

Wolf's creative maturity was perhaps too brief to permit radical change or development; the four-part textures of the Italian songs, for example, are already outlined in the Mörike volume. But there is a discernible trend: the dramatic or theatrical element became more rarefied, more generalized. The Spanish songs, and more particularly the Italian, are a musical comédie humaine. Social life is conceived as a stage, with ordinary men and women the players. In this respect the Romantic lied ended as it had begun, with individual concern set against a broader social background as its principal theme. But the element of conflict had evaporated. Neither nature nor society was conceived as puzzling or hostile in the Wolfian lied. Rather, in the poems Wolf chose, the human heart and mind increasingly engender their own delight and despair, without reference to an external cause. Increasingly, too, Wolf turned to translations for his texts, and not to original German verse (as Brahms had similarly had recourse to the Bible in German translation). The end of the century seems to signal an end of the German poetic renaissance, and hence a decline in the power of the lied.

The same may apply to audiences. The Schubert song had become accredited and established; Schumann and his successors, especially Brahms, had come to command a wide public for their songs. But Wolf was offering a new genre. Just as Schubert had reduced Mozart and Beethoven operas and Haydn oratorios to the miniature domestic frame, so Wolf adopted Wagner. That allegiance and that idiom imposed difficulties of appreciation, further restricting the appeal of an arct already limited to the poetry lovers among music lovers. So Wolf's work took longer to gain ground and find adherents. As before, dissemination of the new art was through friends and admirers and their immediate circle. The Wolf-Verein in Vienna corresponded to the Schubertiads of 70 years earlier, but with fewer active members (a relation that persists in posterity). It is as if the springs that had powered the early years of the lied had, for whatever reason, relaxed. An art of strong direct expressiveness culminated in an art of refinement, nuance, subtlety, and perfection within limitations.

The high road had narrowed and arguably reached an impasse. So had some earlier byways, such as accompanied recitation, despite one example from Schubert (Abschied D829), three from Schumann (e.g. Die Flüchtlinge) and six from Liszt (e.g. Lenore). A much more rewarding development was the addition of vocal lines, as in the duets and partsongs with or without accompaniment written by all the major masters of the lied, and still, despite neglect, an essential aspect of their art. But most significant of all was the addition of extra instruments. Schubert had used instrumental obbligato for quasi-verbal effect (e.g. the pastoral sound of the clarinet in Der Hirt auf dem Felsen). Schumann orchestrated his song Tragödie, presumably in order to enhance its dramatic content. Liszt's song orchestrations and Wagner's Wesendonk lieder pointed clearly along that road; so, less demonstratively, did Brahms's songs with viola obbligato, op.91. A crucial stage was reached with Wolf's 20 orchestral versions, including one (Der Feuerreiter) for chorus instead of solo. But these new departures meant a farewell to the lied as here considered, namely as a musical expression of the poetry of individual or social concern within the framework of domestic music-making. At the same time, poetry and its musical setting were losing their power to unify and stimulate any special segment of European society, German or other. The hegemony of the lied was in decline.

V. The 20th century

The lied was essentially a 19th-century genre, and its history in the 20th century is that of a brief and rapid continued development followed by a sudden decline. Schoenberg and Strauss, to take two representative composers, both wrote many lieder before 1918 and few thereafter: Schoenberg's opp.1–22 (1897–1916) include 45 lieder, his subsequent works only three. The reasons for this falling of interest have certainly as much to do with public tastes and requirements as with compositional techniques and aesthetics. Hindemith, the 20th-century composer of practical music par excellence, recognized that there was little call for lieder from the amateurs of his time. In general, the lied since World War I has been the province of specialist composers (Kilpinen, Schoeck, Reutter), or else it has been cultivated to meet commissions from those few lieder artists interested in the 20th-century repertory (notably Fischer-Dieskau in the 1960s and 70s).

1. 1900–18. 2. After 1918.

1. 1900–18. Before World War I the genre was flourishing, even if many lied composers were in thrall to the examples of Brahms and Wolf. Reger was proving himself the heir of Brahms, although he was not a naturally lyrical musician and his lieder suffer more than his instrumental works from clogged counterpoint and a resurrection of Baroque devices and attitudes. Strauss, on the other hand, was cultivating a dramatic, declamatory style, with a free use of melisma and opulent accompaniments; his allegiances were to Wolf, Wagner and Liszt. The possibility of a novel departure in the lied was offered by the new symbolist poetry, concentrating on the significant moment rather than on narrative, and in particular by the work of Richard Dehmel. Dehmel's poems were set by Reger and Strauss around the turn of the century, and also by Schoenberg (in opp.2, 3 and 6, 1899–1905), who remarked in a letter to the poet that his verses had helped him 'to find a new tone in the lyrical mood'. This 'new tone' involved a floating harmonic stasis and an exquisiteness of texture, a sumptuous clarity illuminating the instant, and it contrasts with that of the rhetorical monologue lieder which were Strauss's great strength and which were being composed by Schoenberg at the same time. It is to be found most clearly and purely in the Dehmel settings of Schoenberg and his pupil Webern (Fünf Dehmel Lieder, 1906–8).

If a modern poet was thus encouraging composers to press forward the expressive possibilities of the lied, another contemporary, Mahler, had already found his stimulus in the quasi-folk poetry of Des Knaben Wunderhorn. In fact, the Lieder eines fahrenden Gesellen (1883–5), to his own words, had displayed his mature lied style before he had composed his first settings from that collection, but it was there that he found the qualities – observation of nature, religious feeling and a Romantic sense of apartness, all expressed without selfconsciousness – which most appealed to him as a song composer in the 1890s. Where others found new subject matter for the lied in symbolist verse, Mahler took up the old Romantic themes, but presented them with a new nakedness of expression. The set of Lieder aus 'Des Knaben Wunderhorn' was conceived with orchestral accompaniment, as were the later settings of Rückert (the cycle Kindertotenlieder and five other songs, 1901–4) and Hans Bethge's Chinese translations (the symphony–song cycle Das Lied von der Erde, 1908–9), for only with a full and sensitively used instrumental ensemble could Mahler bring to his texts the weight, exactitude and complexity of response that made possible the extremely subjective character of his lieder. With Mahler the lied was taken from the drawing-room or recital platform to the concert hall: it was no longer a polite genre.

Mahler's favouring of the orchestra, as well as his choice of texts from Des Knaben Wunderhorn and Die chinesische Flöte, was not without effect on his contemporaries. Strauss was least influenced, for he had established both his song style and his orchestral brilliance before 1890; his lieder, even – or perhaps especially – those with orchestra, remained more comfortable, smoother and richer than those of Mahler. Schoenberg, however, produced a quite Mahlerian work in his Sechs Orchesterlieder op.8 (1903–5), two of which are to Wunderhorn poems, and he developed the Mahlerian orchestra of varied chamber ensembles to a culmination in the Vier Lieder op.22 (1913–16). (His other set of orchestral songs, Gurrelieder, 1901–11, is almost an oratorio.) The influence of Mahler is also present in the lieder of Zemlinsky and of Schoenberg's two principal pupils, particularly in Berg's Sieben frühe Lieder (1905–8, orchestrated 1928) and Webern's Vier Lieder op.13 for voice and small orchestra (1914–18), which include two settings from Die chinesische Flöte. Webern, however, distilled Mahler's style to produce the fine lyricism and urgency that characterize many of his lieder from after World War I as well.

Alongside the influence of Mahler on the Second Viennese School must be placed their continuing interest in new poetry. For Schoenberg and Webern, Dehmel was succeeded by Stefan George, whose still more rarefied images helped bring atonality to birth in Schoenberg's cycle Das Buch der hängenden Gärten op.15 (1908–9) and Webern's opp.3–4 (1908–9), both for voice and piano. Rilke, Altenberg, Mombert, Trakl and Kraus were all set by Schoenberg, Berg and Webern during the next decade, the intense, visionary and often brief poems fitting well with the qualities of early atonal music, delicate, erratic and adrift.

Strauss has already been mentioned as relatively unaffected by the means and matter introduced by contemporary poets and composers. He was not alone. Medtner wrote lieder in a somewhat Brahmsian manner, and Wolf had a direct follower two decades after his death in Joseph Marx, who even set those poems from Heyse's Italienisches Liederbuch which his model had omitted. Pfitzner, with his conscientious respect for Schumann, Eichendorff and the spirit of German high Romanticism in general, went on composing lieder essentially in the old mould throughout the first four decades of the century, contributing some fine examples to close a rich tradition.

2. AFTER 1918. It was perhaps no accident that the lied tradition as Pfitzner might have seen it was also perpetuated after 1918 by two composers from outside the Austro-German territories, the Swiss Othmar Schoeck and the Finn Yrjö Kilpinen; for they were able on occasion, despite their ties with the tradition (Schoeck was a pupil of Reger), to produce something new and distinctive in conventional modes. Their works contrast markedly with the lieder of composers who, in the 1920s, attempted to recapture the 19th-century manner from the perspective of later experiences. Krenek, for example, made such a deliberate effort in his Schubertian *Reisebuch aus den oesterreichischen Alpen*op.62 (1929), and the cycle has a feeling of irony, of stylistic displacement, which is quite lacking from the lieder of Pfitzner or Schoeck. In general, however, the neo-classical movement had little effect on the lied: most composers associated with it were looking to periods well before the early Romantic. Hindemith's Das Marienleben op.27 (1922–3, controversially revised in 1936–48) is a rare instance of an important song cycle composed on neo-Baroque lines.

Nor did Schoenberg and Berg pay much attention to the lied after World War I. For Schoenberg words had given a framework in the atonal period of opp.15 and 22; the development of 12-note serialism provided once more the means for elaborating independent musical structures, and it was not until 1933 that he returned, for the last time, to song composition with the Drei Lieder op.48. Berg, who had been a compulsive writer of lieder in his youth, produced only one song in his last 20 years. Webern, however, cultivated the lied almost to the exclusion of other genres between 1914 and 1925. Most of his works of this period are accompanied by a small group of instruments, enhancing his nervously mobile and intensely lyrical responses to the texts. The influence of Pierrot lunaire in this (though it is noteworthy that Webern's Zwei Lieder op.8 for voice and eight instruments antedate Schoenberg's work) is particularly clear in the Sechs Lieder op.14 (1917–21), setting Trakl poems for voice, two clarinets and two strings. Hindemith also drew something from Pierrot in his Trakl cycle, Die junge Magd op.23 no.2 (1922) for contralto, flute, clarinet and string quartet.

Pierrot lunaire itself has not been considered here, since its use of Sprechgesang perhaps disqualifies it from classification as a cycle of lieder; but it could be regarded as the tradition's culmination, remaining unique despite imitation, exacerbating the expressive possibilities of both voice and accompaniment. One source of the work, the cabaret song (a genre to which Schoenberg had contributed in 1901), was developed in a quite different direction by the composers associated with Brecht: Weill, Eisler and Dessau. Their lieder, often using popular dance rhythms, tinges of jazz and a dance band instrumentation, were explicitly designed to appeal widely and to encourage activism in the socialist cause. Eisler, a Schoenberg pupil, was the greatest exponent of this style, and notable examples of his work include the Solidaritätslied op.27 (1931) and Das Einheitsfrontlied (1934), both to Brecht texts. The genre originated with the 'Songspiel' version of the Brecht-Weill Mahagonny (1927) and persisted after World War II as an important part of musical life in the German Democratic Republic.

In the 1930s, therefore, one might distinguish three categories of lied composition: the mass-directed political style; the direct continuation of the 19th-century tradition by Pfitzner and others, and also by new composers such as Hermann Reutter; and the beginning of an exploration of lyricism on 12-note serial lines. Webern, like Schoenberg and Berg, had turned away from the lied on mastering the new technique, but he returned to it for two final sets with piano accompaniment, opp.23 and 25 (1933–4). During the next 20 years some of the finest lieder were composed by musicians from outside Austria and Germany: Martin in his Sechs Monologe aus 'Jedermann' for contralto or baritone with piano or orchestra (1943), Babbitt in his Stramm setting Du for soprano and piano (1951) and Dallapiccola in his Goethe Lieder for female voice and three clarinets (1953).

Writing during the same period, Strauss could reasonably have thought his Vier letzte Lieder (1948) bore their epithet for the genre. Even Henze, with the abundant lyrical gift displayed in so much of his music, contributed only his Fünf neapolitanische Lieder for voice and small orchestra (1956) and a few numbers in Voices for two soloists and chamber ensemble (1973) which might count as lieder. Other composers at that time wrote lieder for particular singers, notably Benjamin Britten and Aribert Reimann for Fischer-Dieskau, but the culture of intimate, personal and national expression that had produced the lied seemed moribund by the 1970s. (The national aspect had been undermined by the gathering of foreign composers to set German poetry, a phenomenon crucial to the history of the lied since 1918.) The writing of lieder was then revived by a new generation of German composers, among whom Wolfgang Rihm has composed several sets, usually on verse conveying emotional extremity to the point of insanity (e.g. Hölderlin-Fragmente, 1976–7; Wölffli-Liederbuch, 1980–81), as if at the end of the tradition could come only mad songs. Berio in some works, notably Coro for chorus and orchestra (1975–6), has explored the lied tradition as part of the larger history of song; his one composition with the title Lied is a recorder piece.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GENERAL

KretzschmarG

W.K. von Jolizza: Das Lied und seine Geschichte (Vienna, 1910/R)

G. Müller: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes vom Zeitalter des Barock bis zur Gegenwart (Munich, 1925/R)

O. Bie: Das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1926)

E. Bücken: Das deutsche Lied (Hamburg, 1939)

POLYPHONIC LIED

ReeseMMA; ReeseMR

W. Gurlitt: 'Burgundische Chanson- und deutsche Liedkunst des 15. Jahrhunderts', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Basle 1924, 153–76

L. Nowak: 'Das deutsche Gesellschaftslied in Österreich von 1480 bis 1550', SMw, xvii (1930), 21–52

O.A. Baumann: Das deutsche Lied und seine Bearbeitungen in den frühen Orgeltabulaturen (Kassel, 1934)

H. Osthoff: Die Niederländer und das deutsche Lied (1400–1640) (Berlin, 1938/R)

H. Rosenberg: 'Frottola und deutsches Lied um 1500', AcM, xviii–xix (1946–7), 30–78

K. Gudewill: 'Zur Frage der Formstrukturen deutscher Liedtenores', Mf, i (1948), 112–21

K. Gudewill: 'Beziehungen zwischen Modus und Melodiebildung in deutschen Liedtenores', AMw, xv (1958), 60–88

C. Petzsch: '"Hofweisen": ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Liederjahrhunderts', DVLG, xxxiii (1959), 414–45

W. Salmen: 'European Song (1300–1530)', NOHM, iii (1960/R), 349–80

H. Besseler: 'Renaissance-Elemente im deutschen Lied 1450–1500', SMH, xi (1969), 63–8

H.-J. Feurich: Die deutschen weltlichen Lieder der Glogauer Handschrift (ca. 1470) (Wiesbaden, 1970)

R. Caspari: Liedtradition im Stilwandel um 1600 (Munich, 1971)

N. Böker-Heil, H. Heckmann and I. Kindermann, eds.: Das Tenorlied, CaM, ix–xi (1979–86)

GENERALBASS LIED c1620–c1750

C.F. Becker: Die Hausmusik in Deutschland in dem 16., 17. und 18. Jahrhunderte (Leipzig, 1840/R)

K. Goedeke: Grundriss zur Geschichte der deutschen Dichtung, iii (Dresden, 1859, 2/1887)

W. Niessen: 'Das Liederbuch des Leipziger Studenten Clodius', VMw, vii (1891), 579–658

J. Bolte: 'Die Lieder-Handschriften des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts, iii: Das Liederbuch der Prinzessin Luise Charlotte von Brandenburg', Zeitschrift für deutsche Philologie, xxv (1893), 33–4

P. Spitta: 'Die Anfänge madrigalischer Dichtung in Deutschland', Musikgeschichtliche Aufsätze (Berlin, 1894)

K. Vossler: Das deutsche Madrigal (Weimar, 1898/R)

M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)

M. Breslauer: Das deutsche Lied (Berlin, 1908/R)

A. Einstein: 'Ein unbekannter Druck aus der Frühzeit der deutschen Monodie', SIMG, xiii (1911–12), 286–96

W. Vetter: Das frühdeutsche Lied (Münster, 1928)

H. Abert: 'Entstehung und Wurzeln des begleiteten deutschen Sololieds', Gesammelte Schriften und Vorträge, ed. F. Blume (Halle, 1929/R), 156–72

H.J. Moser: Corydon, das ust Geschichte des mehrstimmegen Generalbassliedes und des Quodilbets (Brunswick, 1933/*R*1966)

E.-F. Callenberg: Das obersächsische Barocklied (Freiburg, 1952)

H.C. Worbs: 'Die Schichtung des deutschen Liedgutes in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts', AMw, xvii (1960), 61–70
R.H. Thomas: Poetry and Song in the German Baroque: a Study of the Continuo Lied (Oxford, 1963)
J.H. Baron: Foreign Influences on the German Secular Solo Continuo Lied in the Mid-Seventeenth Century (diss., Brandeis U., 1967)
J.H. Baron: 'Dutch Influences on the German Secular Solo Continuo-Lied in the Mid-Seventeenth Century', AcM, xliii (1971), 43–55
Weltliches und geistliches Lied des Barock: Lund, Sweden, 1978
W. Braun: 'Weltliche Vokalmusik', Die Musik des 17. Jahrhunderts (Wiesbaden and Laaber, 1981), 131–84
Studien zum deutschen weltlichen Kunstlied des 17. und 18. Jahrhunderts: Wolfenbüttel 1990

c1740–c1800

A. Reissmann: Das deutsche Lied in seiner historischen Entwicklung (Kassel, 1861)
E.O. Lindner: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes im XVIII. Jahrhundert, ed. L. Erk (Leipzig, 1871/R)
M. Blumner: Geschichte der Sing-Akademie zu Berlin (Berlin, 1891)
M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin,1902/R)
I. Pollak-Schlaffenberg: 'Die Wiener Liedmusik von 1778–1789', SMw, v (1918), 97–151
E. Alberti-Radanowicz: 'Das Wiener Lied von 1789–1815', SMw, x (1923), 37–78
F. Blume: Goethe und die Musik (Kassel, 1948)
H.J. Moser, ed.: Das deutsche Sololied und die Ballade, Mw, xiv (1957; Eng. trans., 1958)
A. Sydow: Das Lied (Göttingen, 1962)
H.W. Schwab: Sangbarkeit, Popularität und Kunstlied Studien: zu Lied und Liedästhetik der mittleren Goethezeit (Regensburg, 1965)
R.A. Barr: Carl Friedrich Zelter: a Study of the Lied in Berlin during the Late Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries (diss., U. of Wisconsin, 1968)

AFTER 1800

E. Schuré: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Berlin, 1870, 3/1884/R)
A. Reissmann: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (Berlin, 1874)
H. Kretzschmar: 'Das deutsche Lied seit Robert Schumann', Gesammelte Aufsätze über Musik und anderes, i (Leipzig, 1910), 1–35
O. von Hazay: Gesang: seine Entwicklung (Leipzig, 1911, 2/1915 as Entwicklung und Poesie des Gesanges)
F.E. Pamer: 'Deutsches Lied im 19. Jahrhundert', AdlerHM
H.J. Moser: Das deutsche Lied seit Mozart (Berlin, 1937, enlarged 2/1968)
M. Castelnuovo-Tedesco: 'Music and Poetry: Problems of a Songwriter', MQ, xxx (1944), 102–11
G. Baum: 'Wort und Ton im romantischen Kunstlied', Das Musikleben, iii (1950), 136–40
J. Müller-Blattau: Das Verhältnis von Wort und Ton in der Geschichte der Musik (Stuttgart, 1952)
J.H. Hall: The Art Song (Norman, OK, 1953)
M. Beaufils: Le lied romantique allemand (Paris, 1956, 2/1956)
H.J. Moser: Das deutsche Sololied und die Ballade, Mw, xiv (1957)
P. Radcliffe: 'Germany and Austria', A History of Song, ed. D. Stevens (London, 1960/R, 2/1970/R), 228–64, esp. 237–64)
M. Bortolotto: Introduzione al lied romantico (Milan, 1962)
H.W. Schwab: Sangbarkeit Popularität und Kunstlied, Studien zu Lied und Liedästhetik der mittleren Goethezeit, 1770–1814 (Regensburg, 1965)
F.A. Stein: Verzeichnis deutscher Lieder seit Haydn (Berne, 1967)
E. Sams: The Songs of Robert Schumann (London, 1969, 3/1993)
D. Ivey: Song: Anatomy, Imagery, and Styles (New York, 1970)
J.M. Stein: Poem and Music in the German Lied from Gluck to Hugo Wolf (Cambridge, MA, 1971)
E.F. Kravitt: 'Tempo as an Expressive Element in the Late Romantic Lied', MQ, lix (1973), 497–518
W. Oehlmann: Reclams Liedführer (Stuttgart, 1973, 4/1993)
E.F. Kravitt: 'The Orchestral Lied: an Inquiry into its Style and Unexpected Flowering around 1900', MR, xxxvii (1976), 209–26
W. Dürr: Das deutsche Sololied im 19. Jahrhundert: Untersuchungen zu Sprache und Musik (Wilhelmshaven, 1984)
L. Kramer: Music and Poetry: the Nineteenth Century and After (Berkeley, 1984)
K. Whitton: Lieder: an Introduction to German Song (London, 1984)
E. Staiger: Musik und Dichtung (Zürich, 5/1986)
K. Muxfeldt: Schubert Song Studies (diss., SUNY, 1991)
Schumann und seine Dichter: Düsseldorf 1991
V.K. Agawu: 'Theory and Practice in the Analysis of the Nineteenth-Century Lied', MAn, xi (1992), 3–36
H. Platt: Text-Music Relationships in the Lieder of Johannes Brahms (diss., CUNY, 1992)
T.J. Roden: The Development of the Orchestral Lied from 1815 to 1890 (diss., Northwestern U., 1992)
S. Youens: Hugo Wolf: the Vocal Music (Princeton, NJ,1992)
L. Correll: The Nineteenth Century German Lied (Portland, OR, 1993)
W.M. Frisch: The Early Works of Arnold Schoenberg, 1893–1908 (Berkeley, 1993)
D. Gramit : 'Schubert and the Biedermeier: the Aesthetics of Johann Mayrhofer's Heliopolis' ML, lxxiv (1993), 355–82
M.W. Hirsch: Schubert's Dramatic Lieder (Cambridge, 1993)
S. Gut: Aspects du lied romantique allemande (Arles, 1994)
S.A.M. Reichert : Unendliche Sehnsucht: the Concept of Longing in German Romantic Narrative and Song (diss., Yale U.,1994)
L.D. Snyder: German Poetry in Song: an Index of Lieder (Berkeley, 1995)
R. Hallmark, ed.: German Lieder in the Nineteenth Century (New York, 1996)
E.F. Kravitt: The Lied: Mirror of Late Romanticism (New Haven, CT, 1996)
D. Stein and R. Spillman: Poetry into Song: Performance and Analysis of Lieder (New York, 1996)
S. Youens: Schubert's Poets and the Making of Lieder (Cambridge, 1996)
R. Brinkmann : Schumann and Eichendorff: Studien zum Liederkreis Opus 39 (Munich, 1997)
L. Kramer: Franz Schubert: Sexuality, Subjectivity, Song (Cambridge, 1998)
A.L. Glauert : Hugo Wolf and the Wagnerian Inheritance (Cambridge, 1999)

NORBERT BÖKER-HEIL/DAVID FALLOWS (I), JOHN H. BARON (II), JAMES PARSONS (III), ERIC SAMS/GRAHAM JOHNSON (IV), PAUL GRIFFITHS (V)

Liederbuch (Ger.: 'songbook'). A term applied to certain 15th- and 16th-century German collections of polyphonic songs or short lyric poems that were usually sung. F.W. Arnold was perhaps the first to use it in an article, 'Das Locheimer Liederbuch nebst der Ars organisandi von Conrad Paumann' (Jahrbücher für musikalische Wissenschaft, ii, 1867, pp.1–234), although the term 'Liederhandschrift' was more common, particularly when referring to the sources of Minnesang. It is not at all clear, however, the extent to which the term 'Liederbuch' was used during or before the 19th century. It does not appear in the manuscripts of those collections most commonly associated with it such as the Lochamer Liederbuch and the Glogauer Liederbuch; moreover, 15th- and 16th-century manuscripts and publications frequently use in their titles 'Lied', 'Liedlein', 'Gesänge', 'geistliche Gesänge' etc., but not 'Liederbuch'.

The term is also applied to collections of poetry that could be sung or were likely to have been sung (e.g. Das Liederbuch des Jakob Kebitz) or collections that contained some poetry with music and some without (e.g. Das Liederbuch des Hartman Schedel).

'Liederbuch' as used today refers to those manuscripts of polyphonic music found in partbooks, of which the earliest is thought to be the Glogauer Liederbuch. Not all the pieces found in these 'songbooks' are to be sung; many are obviously intended for instruments or for a combination of voices and instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

RiemannL12
NOHM, iv: The Age of Humanism, 1540–1630 (1968), 419–38
H. Rupprich: Die deutsche Literatur vom späten Mittelalter bis zum Barock, Geschichte der deutschen Literatur, iv/1 (Munich, 1970), 193ff [contains list of MSS now known by term 'Liederbuch']

See also SOURCES, MS, §IX.

WESLEY K. MORGAN

Liederkreis (i) [Liederkranz, Liederzyklus] (Ger.: 'song circle'). A term used to mean a circle (or cycle) of songs, for example Schumann's Liederkreis op.24. (See SONG CYCLE.)

LUISE EITEL PEAKE

Liederkreis (ii) (Ger.: 'song circle'). A circle or club of people dedicated to the cultivation of popular song. Examples are the 'Mittwochskränzchen' ('Cour d'amour') that met during the early 1800s in Goethe's Weimar home, the Stägemann circle in Berlin, 1815–18, that included the young poet Wilhelm Müller, the Dresden Liederkreis ('Dichtertee'), *c*1804–24, in which Weber met the poet Kind, and the 'Schubertianer' or friends of Schubert in Vienna, who held regular meetings during the 1820s. Liederkreis activities were varied, recreational as well as creative. They included singing simple group songs, playing charades and other games with songs, and listening to song performances staged with costumes, 'attitudes' or elaborate 'living pictures'. To supply the demand parody texts were often set to song melodies from, for example, Das Mildheimische Liederbuch (ed. R.Z. Becker, 1799, 4/1810); either the melodies were rearranged or the verse newly set. Collections that reflected the work of a Liederkreis were titled accordingly, like J.H.C. Bornhardt's Liederkranz für Freunde des leichten Gesanges (Hamburg, *c*1810) and similar publications by F. Methfessel, A.E.F. Langbein and G. Weber, or collections of texts and parodies by F.A. Tiedge, Das Echo oder Alexis und Ida: ein Zyklus von Liedern (Halle, 1812) or F.W. Gubitz, Abends-Atemzüge: ein Liederkreis (Berlin, *c*1815, 2/1859).

LUISE EITEL PEAKE

Liederspiel (Ger.: 'song-play'). A kind of dramatic entertainment developed in Germany in the early 19th century in which songs are introduced into a play. It differs from the older Singspiel principally in its inclusion of songs that as lyric poems already enjoyed some currency; the melodies (normally with simple instrumentation) were new, though some of the songs from such works later came to be regarded as folksongs. Ensembles and choruses were not at first admitted, and the music had an almost entirely lyrical rather than a dramatic character. Despite statements to the contrary, the Liederspiel differs generically from the French vaudeville and the British ballad opera, in both of which the melodies were normally familiar airs specially provided with new words, whereas normally in the Liederspiel the words were pre-existing and the melodies new.

The first Liederspiel was Lieb' und Treue, by J.F. Reichardt, staged at the Berlin Royal Opera House on 31 March 1800 with text by the composer, using poems by Goethe, Herder and Salis, as well as folksongs. The somewhat enlarged second edition of the libretto (Berlin, 1800) contains 12 songs, including the Swiss folksong 'Wenn ich ein Vöglein wär', Goethe's 'Heidenröslein' and three other poems, and two each by Herder and Salis. An afterword by the author mentions that the songs are reproduced as they were set for the piano, without preludes and interludes; and that the complete score (suitable also for domestic performance) could be obtained from the composer at a cheap price.

Reichardt was the principal theoretician and apologist for the Liederspiel as well as being its best-known author and composer. The Leipzig Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung for 22 July 1801 contains his article about the Liederspiel, which he says was born of the desire to encourage simple, pleasant songs as opposed to brilliant and difficult operatic music. Lieb' und Treue was written for a domestic occasion; the idea came to Reichardt when he so often found himself invited to perform the song 'Ach was ist die Liebe' from his own Singspiel Die Geisterinsel (a version of The Tempest, first given at Berlin in 1798). As Lieb' und Treue drew from certain quarters criticism that its tone was too sentimental, Reichardt followed it with a comic and gay example, Juchhei (later known as Der Jubel) which included military songs. In the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung article, Reichardt chided Himmel for the inappropriately heavy orchestration of his Liederspiel Frohsinn und Schwärmerey (libretto by C.A. Herklots, Berlin, 1801), though it enjoyed considerable popularity. Eberwein, Bergt and Lindpainter were among other successful exponents of the genre.

Mendelssohn's Die Heimkehr aus der Fremde and Schumann's Spanisches Liederspiel are examples of later works misleadingly entitled 'Liederspiel'. Schletterer in his valuable study (1863) of the Singspiel is not strictly accurate in his statement that the Liederspiel led to the racy vaudeville developed in Germany and Austria by Angely and others.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.F. Reichardt: 'Etwas über das Liederspiel', AMZ, ii (1799–1800), 709–17

J.F. Reichardt: Liederspiele (Tübingen, 1804)

J.F. Reichardt: Musik zu J.F. Reichardts Liederspielen (Strasbourg, 1804)

H.M. Schletterer: Das deutsche Singspiel von seinen ersten Anfängen bis auf die neueste Zeit (Augsburg, 1863/R)

L. Krauss: Das deutsche Liederspiel in den Jahren 1800–1830 (diss., U. of Halle, 1921)

R. Moering: 'Johann Friedrich Reichardts Liederspiele', Das deutsche Singspiel im 18. Jahrhundert: Amorbach 1979, 191–211

S. Johns: Das szenische Liederspiel zwischen 1800 und 1830: ein Beitrag zur Berliner Theatergeschichte (diss., U. of Tübingen, 1988)

PETER BRANSCOMBE

Liedertafel (Ger.: 'song-table'). Originally a small group of poets, singers and composers that came together to perform partsongs in an informal setting. The term was coined by Zelter, at whose instigation the first group was formed in Berlin on 21 December 1808 from his celebrated larger Singakademie. Its inaugural meeting was held on 24 January 1809. As Zelter explained in a famous letter to Goethe, the 25 members of the Liedertafel would meet together over a meal, and German partsongs would be performed. Original compositions were strongly encouraged: those whose contributions were well received would receive a medallion and have their health drunk, while the most successful would be crowned with a wreath by the 'Meister' (the 25th member) who presided over the evening's entertainment.

The Liedertafel's convivial atmosphere disguised a higher purpose: namely to advance the cause of German song and poetry. In this respect, it harked back to the medieval guilds of Meistersinger, while there was also some similarity to the musical gatherings that had been a feature of late 18th-century Freemasonry. Zelter's lead was soon followed, and Liedertafel sprang up throughout Germany: in Frankfurt an der Oder (1815), Leipzig (1815), Thüringen (1818), Magdeburg (1819), Münster (1822), Hamburg (1823), Minden (1824), Bremen (1827) and Bielefeld (1831). In 1819 the Jüngere Berliner Liedertafel was founded by Klein and Berger, seeking a wider membership than its older relation.

A second strand in the Liedertafel tradition was initiated by H.G. Nägeli, who in 1810 founded a male singing society in Zürich to support the pedagogical ideals of Pestalozzi. His example inspired Kocher's Sonntag-Abend Gesellschaft in Stuttgart in 1824, which in turn led to similar groups in Ulm (1825), Munich (1826), Frankfurt (1828), Schweinfurt (1833) and elsewhere. These generally eschewed the name 'Liedertafel' in favour of 'Liederkranz' ('song circle'), to stress their larger and less exclusive membership. During the latter 19th century, both terms gave way to 'Männergesangverein' as larger singing clubs were established in such cities as Vienna and Cologne. The term Liedertafel was subsequently applied to society gatherings at which selected members of the Männergesangverein performed for their invited guests.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Krüger: 'Ueber Liedertafeln', NZM, xi (1839), 138–43
P. Greverus: Ueber Liedertafeln und Liederfeste (Oldenburg, 1844)
W. Bornemann: Die Zeltersche Liedertafel in Berlin, ihre Entstehung, Stiftung und Fortgang (Berlin, 1851)
H. Kuhlo: Geschichte des Zelterschen Liedertafels (Berlin, 1909)
H. Dietel: Beiträge zur Frühgeschichte des Männergesanges (diss., U. of Berlin, 1938)
P. Nitsche: 'Die Liedertafel im System der Zelterschaen Gründungen', Studien zur Musikgeschichte Berlins im frühen 19. Jahrhundert, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Regensburg, 1980), 11–26
A. Heemann: Männergesangvereine im 19. und frühen 20. Jahrhunderte (Frankfurt, 1991)

EWAN WEST

Liederzyklus. See LIEDERKREIS (i).

Liedform (Ger.: 'songform'). Term given by A.B. Marx (1838) not to a single musical form but to a group of small-scale forms all of which exhibit balanced musical phraseology, a modulatory scheme and cadential parallelism, within overall closure. The term was adopted by many later German theorists (e.g. Jadassohn, Schering), and has remained in use throughout the 20th century. It was translated for English-speaking readers as 'Song form', a term adopted by some American writers (e.g. Goetschius).

The appellation does not relate to songs as such, though 'Lied-' probably alludes to folksong, in the belief that the essentials of musical form are all present in miniature within the organic structures of folk melody. (Marx provided an appendix of folksongs in Die Lehre von der musikalischen Komposition, i, 1837, pp.440–41, with discussion pp.378–86.) Marx's definition of 'Lied' (Die Lehre, ii, 1838, p.20) states:

> Any piece of music that comprises a main melodic line and one or more accompanying lines, and the essential content of which is contained within a single period ... we designate 'Lied', regardless of whether it is for voice or not.

In practice, the term is applied predominantly to short instrumental pieces, especially to movements of sonatas, notably slow movements and the themes of variation movements, and to characteristic piano pieces of the sort that became common after 1830.

Liedform may be constructed in a single section, in two sections or in three; only the second and third are widely called Liedform. Underlying the concept is the organic notion of melodic line, springing from a single motif and typically constructed as two parallel phrases, antecedent and consequent (a, a′). If proliferated further motivically, formal coherence might become threatened. If so, it might divide into two sections, which could be of the form AA or AA′ (e.g. Mozart, Piano Sonata in A K331, first movement theme), or possibly of AB or AxBx (e.g. Beethoven, Piano Sonata op.57, second movement theme), in which case the first section may be marked by a cadence in the dominant or relative key, the second with a return to the tonic (e.g. Mendelssohn, Variations sérieuses op.54, theme). In more developed two-section forms the second section tends to greater length, the form often being A BA (e.g. Schumann, Albumfürdie no.1, 'Melodie'), in which the roots of sonatina form can be seen. English usage terms such two-section constructions BINARY FORM, and they cover all the Baroque dances and many Romantic genres such as the prelude, mazurka and étude. If even greater proliferation were to take place, the second section might itself bifurcate to yield the three-section Liedform, ABA or ABA′ (e.g. the second-movement theme of Beethoven's Piano Sonata op.90: $A(=a^1, a^2)$ $B(=b^1, b^2)$ $A'(=a^{1'}, a^{2'})$), which English usage calls TERNARY FORM.

Liedforms may be elaborated by the addition of introductions, interludes, codas and postludes; and they may be compound, as in the da capo aria and the minuet and trio, resulting in such forms as: AB CD A′B′, and ABA′ CDC′ ABA′.

For Marx, all possible musical forms existed, like biological life-forms, in an infinite conceptual series rising from simplest (motif, phrase, period) to most complex (sonata form, compound forms). On this series, the Liedforms were the first fully articulated, free-standing, unified forms – the first 'art forms (Kunstformen)'. To the modern reader the Liedform may seem confusing, since it blurs the distinctions between basic structural types (binary, ternary). To Marx, who deplored fixed forms, and for whom form was the externalization of content, its very organic fluidity was its virtue. Heinrich Schenker took this even further: while adopting the term, he rejected all specifications based on the motif and working-out, or on periodic construction, and reasserted the form's basis in 'the content of the whole and its components' (Der freie Satz, 1935, §308).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.B. Marx: Die Lehre von der musikalischen Komposition, praktisch-theoretisch (Leipzig, 1837–47)
P. Goetschius: The Homophonic Forms of Musical Composition (New York, 1898)
S. Burnham, ed.: Musical Form in the Age of Beethoven: Selected Writings on Theory and Method: A.B. Marx (Cambridge, 1997)

IAN D. BENT

Liedhorn. A higher-pitched version of the BALLAD HORN.

Liedmotette (Ger.: 'song motet'). A type of 17th-century motet in free, lightly imitative style with occasional cantus firmus elements. See MOTET, §III, 3(i).

Lied ohne Worte (Ger.). See SONG WITHOUT WORDS.

Liège (Flem. Luik). City in Belgium. An independent episcopal principality within the jurisdiction of the Holy Roman Empire, it was annexed to France in 1795 and in 1815 to the Netherlands before becoming part of Belgium (1830). It was the centre of a vast diocese and of a principality that included the towns of Huy, Tongres, Leuven and Maastricht, and in the 19th century it became an industrial and commercial centre.

The offices instituted under Bishop Etienne (*c*850–920) included music, notably the antiphon Magna vox, from very early on considered the principality's hymn. Notger (bishop, 972–1008) encouraged music in the school of St Lambert's Cathedral and also in collegiate churches, convents and abbeys. The first choir schools were founded towards the end of the 13th century. At that of St Lambert, the model for the principality, from 1291, 12 duodeni (poor children) were instructed to read and sing the offices by day and night under the cantor, with a phonascus or succentor. 12 further singers, often clerics, were soon added so that polyphonic works could be sung. The average choir included six to eight choirmen, six children and a few instrumentalists, or a choirmaster, an organist, four choirmen and four children. Bursaries were set up in the 17th century to enable the most gifted duodeni to study abroad, mainly in Rome. The organ was introduced in 1212 and full-time instrumentalists as early as the 16th century; by the 18th the cathedral group comprised four violins, a cello and a double bass. The choir schools continued until 1797, when the French republican government closed down the churches.

The instrument makers Jan Verrijt and Daniel van der Diestelen were active in the 16th century. In the early 17th century and the 18th, André Séverin, Guillaume Robustelly and the Le Picard family built organs and Georges Palate and Jean-Joseph de Lannoy string instruments.

The tradition of theoretical writing and the system of choir schools, while guaranteeing continuous musical activity, tended to rigidify both discourse and musical practice, as can be seen in Jacques de Liège's Speculum musicae (beginning of 14th century) and in the repertory played. The Turin manuscript, for example (Biblioteca Reale, Vari 42), compiled in the abbey of St Jacques about 1320–40, contains only works of the Ars Antiqua. In the late 14th century and the early 15th, the reputation of musicians from Liège led to greater mobility on the part of singers and composers and an opening out to different repertories; the most gifted young musicians left Liège for Italy (among them Johannes Ciconia, Arnold and Hugo de Lantins, Johannes Lymburgia, Johannes de Sarto and Johannes Brassart) or the Holy Roman Empire.

With the destruction of the city by Charles the Bold in 1468 almost all musical and documentary records were lost, and at first musicians continued to emigrate. The bishoprics of Erard de la Marck (1505–38) and Georges d'Autriche (1544–57) brought stability, and Jean Guyot and Petit Jean de Latre breathed new life into their contemporaries and pupils: Gérard de Villers, Johannes Mangon, Johannes Claux, Pierre de Rocourt, Pierre de Xhénemont, Lambertus de Monte, Adamus de Ponta and Ludovicus Episcopius. Little secular music survives, but sacred music is preserved in numerous printed or manuscript anthologies (D-AAm, Chb I-III). This rebirth of musical activity sparked off new waves of emigration, mainly to the Holy Roman Empire (Antoine Goswin and Johannes de Fossa to Munich; Jean Guyot and Gérard Hayne to Vienna, Petit Jean de Latre to Utrecht; others to Spain to join the Capella Flamenca; fewer went to Italy, although there were still bursaries to finance advanced courses in Rome). Spa and Chaudfontaine, two popular watering-places, afforded musicians a supplement to their income.

The Counter-Reformation found fertile ground in the principality since so many musicians were employed at the choir schools, churches or convents. An echo of the new principles promulgated by the Council of Trent is found in the Grand livre de choeur de la cathédrale Saint-Lambert, a Liège anthology from the turn of the century (including works by Hodemont, Hayne, Remouchamps, Raymundi and Coolen). Instrumental music was also present in this movement, as in the Liber fratrum cruciferorum leodiensium (B-Lu 153), probably compiled for the organist Gérard Scronx in 1617. Sacred music was still the main output of local composers in the 17th century, as with Hodemont, Hayne, Pietkin and Lamalle, or organ music in the case of Chaumont and Babou. Still, however, the most brilliant composers did not stay in Liège, Henri Dumont making his career in Paris, Daniel Danielis in the Holy Roman Empire and France – a tendency that continued in the 18th century with André-Modeste Grétry and Antoine-Frédéric Gresnick. The 18th century was marked by the Hamal dynasty; Jean-Noël and Henri Hamal, like Grétry, Gresnick and Delange, travelled to Italy thanks to bursaries from the Fondation Darchis.

Music publishing came to Liège about 1630, apparently through Léonard Street; the output of printed material increased in the 18th century with François-Joseph Desoer, Jean-Etienne Philippart, the Latours and Benoit Andrez. Publishers also produced music journals: Andrez the Echo ou Journal de musique françoise (1758), Philippart Le rossignol (1765) and Bertrand L'année musicale (1771). Désiré Duguet, Isidore Gout and the Muraille family were publishers active in the 19th century. Victor Jaendel and André Bernard made string instruments up to the middle of the 20th century; Toussaint-Joseph Dumoulin, Victor Chèvremont, Jean-Lambert Hoeberecht and the Renson family built pianos.

In the 17th century, theatrical performances with music were given in the private rooms of educational institutions, including the city's principal hall, in the care of the Jesuits. In the 1750s Jean-Noël Hamal's burlesque operas in Walloon dialect were staged in the Hôtel de Ville. At the same time a theatre, La Baraque (also known as the Théâtre de la Douane), was opened on the Marché de la Batte for opera buffa and opéra comique given by itinerant companies. La Redoute opened its doors in 1762 and was the main stage for productions until 1805. The Société d'Emulation, founded in 1779, organized concerts mainly devoted to the music of local composers. The Société Philharmonique also gave concerts.

Musical life in Liège languished under French rule: the choir schools closed down and the bishop-princes were driven away. The Théâtre de la Douane was destroyed by fire in 1805 and replaced temporarily by a hall at the abbey of St Jacques which was apparently very successful. Under the Dutch, a music school was founded in 1821; this became the Ecole Royale de Musique de Liège in 1826. Daussoigne-Méhul was appointed director (1827–62) and an orchestra was set up comprising both teachers and students. In 1820, the Théâtre Royal de Liège was inaugurated. The theatre and the school, which became the Conservatoire Royale de Musique in 1831, constituted from then on the two centres of musical activity in Liège. The town developed a reputation based largely on its virtuoso violinists, who constituted a veritable school, founded by Léonard-Joseph Gaillard. It produced a stream of young virtuosos including F.C.J. Dupont, Désiré Heynberg, Jacques Dupuis, Lambert Massart, Mathieu Crickboom, Léon Van Hout, Joseph Jacob and Eugène Ysaÿe. Auguste Rouma and the virtuoso and composer Henri Vieuxtemps were influential teachers. In 1839 the Société des Concerts du Conservatoire took over the running of the conservatoire orchestra, now the Orchestre Philharmonique de Liège et de la Communauté Française. The conservatoire was endowed at its foundation with a library that included some private collections (Léonard Terry, Joseph Debroux etc.).

The influence of César Franck, who left Liège for Paris in 1835, dominated the work of Liège composers, including Guillaume Lekeu and later Joseph Jongen and Armand Marsick. Désiré Pâque, Victor Vreuls, Jean Rogister, Albert Dupuis, Maurice Dambois, Fernand Quinet and Albert Huybrechts seemed unaffected by modern developments; it was only in the post-war period that a new impulse was given to composition. Pierre Froidebise, who used serial techniques, and André Souris, together with the Association pour le Progrès Intellectuel et Artistique de la Wallonie, influenced Henri Pousseur and Philippe Boesmans. In 1970 the Centre de Recherches Musicales de Wallonie was formed on Pousseur's initiative. Frederic Rzewski, professor of composition at the conservatoire, influenced a new generation of composers that included Claude Ledoux. The Ensemble Musique Nouvelle de Liège promotes new music. Modernity has also been fervently championed in jazz: Bobby Jaspar, Jacques Peltzer, Sadi and René Thomas achieved distinction in bebop, and Robert Jeanne, Félix Simatine, Steve Houben and Guy Cabay followed in their footsteps.

Since 1967 the Théâtre Royal de Liège has been the home of the Opéra Royal de Wallonie. Concert venues include the conservatoire concert hall (built 1887), the Palais de Congrès, the Palais des Sports (where large-scale opera performances are given), the Société d'Emulation, the Maison de la Culture and the Chapelle de Vertbois. Festivals and concert series have proliferated since 1945: the Concerts de Midi, the Festival des Nuits de Septembre, the Festival de la Guitare and the Festival du Jazz de Comblain-au-Pont. Musicology in Liège, established by Antoine Auda, was developed by Suzanne Clercx-Lejeune (University of Liège) and José Quitin (who in 1972 refounded the Société Liégoise de Musicologie, originally of 1909) and, later, Maurice Barthélemy, Anne-Marie Mathy-Bragard, Philippe Vendrix and Pascal Decroupet.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (C. Pitt)

J. Martiny: Histoire du Théâtre de Liège depuis son origine jusqu'à nos jours (Liège, 1887)

A. Auda: La musique et les musiciens de l'ancien pays de Liège (Liège, 1930)

C. van den Borren: Pièces polyphoniques profanes de provenance liégeoise (XVe siècle) (Brussels, 1950)

J. Quitin: 'Les maîtres de chant de la cathédrale Notre-Dame et Saint-Lambert à Liège du XVe au XVIe siècles', RBM, viii (1954), 5–18

J. Quitin: Les maîtres de chant et la maîtrise de la collégiale Saint-Denis à Liège, au temps de Grétry: Esquisse socio-musicologique (Brussels, 1964)

J. Quitin: 'Orgues, organistes et organiers de l'église cathédrale Notre-Dame et Saint-Lambert à Liège aux XVIIe et XVIIIe siècles', Bulletin de l'Institut archéologique liégeois, lxxx (1967), 5–58

J. Quitin: 'La musique à Liège sous le règne de Georges d'Autriche (1544–1557)', Fédération archéologique et historique de Belgique: Congrès XL: Liège 1968

F. Peters and M.A.Vente: L'orgue et la musique d'orgue dans les Pays-Bas et la Principauté de Liège du 16e au 18e siècle(Antwerp, 1971)

A.-M. Bragard: 'Musique', Le Siècle des Lumières dans la Principauté de Liège (Liège, 1980), 379–410

J. Quitin: 'Importance et rôle international des maîtres de l'Ecole liégeoise de violon', Bulletin de la Société liégoise de musicologie, xxxi (1980), 1–23

R. Wangermée and P.Mercier, eds.: La musique en Wallonie et à Bruxelles (Brussels, 1980–82)

M. Haine and N.Meeus, eds.: Dictionnaire des facteurs d'instruments de musique en Wallonie et à Bruxelles (Liège, 1985)

J.-P. Schroeder: Histoire du jazz à Liège (Liège, 1985)

E. Contini: Une ville et sa musique: les concerts du Conservatoire Royal de Musique de Liège de 1827 à 1914 (Liège, 1990)

X. Frisque: 'Un reflet de l'Ecole liégeoise de chant grégorien àtravers les manuscrits de l'ancienne collégiale Sainte-Croix à Liège', Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, lxviii (1990), 1–30

M. Barthélemy: Catalogue des imprimés musicaux anciens du Conservatoire Royal de Musique de Liège (Liège, 1992)

C. Pirenne: 'La musique et le chant au Séminaire de 1735 à 1794', Grand Séminaire de Liège 1592–1992 (Liège, 1992), 103–17

P. Vendrix: 'La tradition lyrique à Liège', L'opéra: un rêve, une réalité (Liège, 1992), 12–23

M. Haine and P.Vendrix, eds.: 'Mille ans de vie musicale au Pays de Liège', RBM, xlvii (1993) 5–220

P. Vendrix: 'Au carrefour des influences: la chanson française dans la Principautéde Liège au XVIe siècle', Bulletin de la Société liégoise de musicologie, lxxxvi (1994), 14–20

P. Vendrix ed.: La genèse d'un opéra: le théâtre de Liège en 1820 (Liège, 1995)

J. Quitin: La vie musicale à Liège entre deux révolutions: 1789–1830 (Liège, forthcoming)

PHILIPPE VENDRIX

Liégeois, Nicolas. See CHAMPION family, (2).

Liège Organbook [B-Lu 153]. See SOURCES OF KEYBOARD MUSIC TO 1660, §2(iv).

Liegnitz (Ger.). Town, now Legnica in Poland. It was ruled for part of the 17th century by GEORG RUDOLPH.

Lienas, Juan de (*fl c*1617–54). Mexican composer. What little is known of his life comes from cursory ascriptions and statements in two large manuscript collections, the Carmen Codex at the Convento del Carmen in Villa Obregón, Mexico City, and the Newberry Choirbooks (US-Cn Case VM 2147 C36). Several manuscripts refer to him with the title 'Don', implying that Lienas was a Spanish nobleman or, more likely, a native American cacique of noble birth. Some references are derogatory, one calling him a 'galán tieso rollizo' (chubby, stuck-up fop), another the 'chiabato Lienas' (which Schleifer translated as 'billy-goat Lienas'). The same disgruntled scribe attributed compositions to Lienas with such flippant remarks as 'del cornudo Lienas' and 'del famoso cornudo', which some scholars have taken as indicating that Lienas was married.

Jesús Bal y Gay assumed that the Carmen Codex was from the Convento del Carmen in Mexico City. Schleifer (1973) suggested instead the Convento de Nuestra Señora de la Encarnación, the institution that once possessed the Newberry Choirbooks. Stevenson (1974), however, pointed out that the Carmen Codex includes parts for male voices (not present at the Encarnación convent), and that the Encarnación chapel was not constructed until 1639. He concludes that the Carmen Codex was probably written between 1617 and 1639 for the Convento del Carmen, and the Newberry Choirbooks at a slightly later period (*c*1639–54) for the Encarnación convent. Lienas's works in the two sources differ considerably in style. The Carmen Codex is steeped in the stile antico, whereas the Newberry Choirbooks explore polychoral sonorities for two or even three choirs, deployed antiphonally with vigorous, rhythmic energy. Among Lienas's finest compositions are the polychoral Credidi, loosely based on a cantus firmus and unified through a recurring motif, and the mass for five voices a cappella.

WORKS

Edition: El Códice del Convento del Carmen, ed. J. Bal y Gay, Tesoro de la música polifónica en México, i (Mexico City, 1952) [B]

Misa super fa re ut fa sol la, 5vv, B

Magnificat, 10vv, US-Cn; Magnificat primi toni, 8vv, Cn; Magnificat tertii toni, 5vv, Cn; B

Requiem, 5vv, B

2 Lamentations, 4vv, Cn, B; 5vv, B

Coenantibus autem, 4vv, B; Credidi propter, 8vv, Cn; Dixit Dominus, 4vv, Cn, B; Dixit Dominus, 8vv, Cn; Domine ad adiuvandum, 8vv, Cn; Himnus in die Nativitatis, 6vv, Cn; In manus tuas, 4vv, Cn; Laudate pueri, 8vv, Cn; Miserere mihi Domine, 3vv/8vv, Cn; Nunc dimittis, 8vv, Cn; Salve nos Domine, 4vv, Cn; Salve regina, 4vv, Cn, B; Salve regina, 8vv, Cn; Te lucis ante terminum, 5vv, Cn; Tristis est anima mea, 8vv, Cn

BIBLIOGRAPHY

StevensonRB

C. Chávez: Introduction to El Códice del Convento del Carmen, ed. J. Bal y Gay (Mexico City, 1952)

R. Stevenson: 'Mexican Colonial Music Manuscripts Abroad', Notes, xxix (1972–3), 203–14

E.A. Schleifer: 'New Light on the Mexican Choirbooks at the Newberry Library', Notes, xxx (1973–4), 231–41

R.M. Stevenson: 'El "Carmen" reivindicado', Heterofonía, no.36 (1974), 17–20 [Eng. summary, 40]

E.A. Schleifer: The Mexican Choirbooks of the Newberry Library (Case MS VM 2147 C36 (diss., U. of Chicago, 1979)

R. Stevenson: 'La música en el México de los siglos XVI a XVIII', La música de México, ed. J. Estrada, i/2 (Mexico City, 1986), 6–74, esp. 57–8

R. Stevenson: 'Catalogue of the Newberry Library Mexican Choirbooks (Case MS VM 2147 C36)', Inter-American Music Review, ix/1 (1987–8), 65–73, esp. 69–70

R. Stevenson: 'Mexican Baroque Polyphony in Foreign Libraries', ibid., 55–64, esp. 58–9

R. Stevenson: 'Mexico City Cathedral Music 1600–1675', ibid., 75–114, esp. 84–7

CRAIG H. RUSSELL

Lienau. German firm of music publishers. Emil Robert Lienau (b Neustadt, Holstein, 28 Dec 1838; d Neustadt, 22 July 1920) studied philosophy and music under Moscheles and Julius Rietz in Kiel and Leipzig. In 1863 he joined the publishing business of SCHLESINGER in Berlin, bought it in 1864 and continued it under the old firm name, adding 'Robert Lienau'; in 1875 he bought the Viennese firm of Haslinger. He retired from the business in 1898 and handed the management of the firms to his sons, first to Robert Heinrich Lienau (b Neustadt, 27 July 1866; d Berlin, 8 Nov 1949), and from 1907 to Friedrich Wilhelm Lienau (b Berlin, 6 Jan 1876; d Vienna, 15 Nov 1973) as well. In 1910, when the firm owned more than 25,000 titles, the brothers acquired the Viennese publishing firm of Rättig, and later also the Berlin firms of Krentzlin (1919), Wernthal (1925) and Köster (1928). Friedrich Wilhelm Lienau withdrew from the Berlin business in 1938 and directed sections of Haslinger in Vienna as an independent firm. The business in Berlin was managed by Robert Heinrich Lienau's children: Rosemarie from 1949 (b Berlin, 19 June 1903; d 19 Sept 1996) and Robert Lienau from 1958 (b Berlin, 1 May 1905). The firm was taken over by Maja Maria Reis and Cornelia Grossman on 31 December 1990 and administrated by Musikverlag Zimmermann.

The elder Robert Lienau carefully continued the classical tendency of the firm of Schlesinger (Beethoven, Weber, Chopin) with Bruckner's Eighth Symphony and expanded the catalogue considerably (from the purchase of Haslinger) with works by Schubert, Johann Strauss (father and son), Lanner and Ziehrer. His sons followed with Sibelius (opp.46–57), Juon and Jarnach, also including modern composers such as Hauer and Berg (opp.1–2). The firm specializes in neglected operas (Cimarosa, Donizetti), music for recorder and guitar, musicological literature and school music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DeutschMPN

Verzeichnis des Musik-Verlags der Schlesingerschen Buch- und Musikhandlung (Rob. Lienau) Berlin und des Carl Haslinger qdm. Tobias (Rob. Lienau) Wien (Berlin and Vienna, 1890)

W. Altmann, ed.: Johannes Brahms: Briefwechsel, xiv (Berlin, 1920/R)

R. Lienau: Erinnerungen an Johannes Brahms (Berlin, 1934)

R. Elvers: 150 Jahre Musikverlag (Adolf Martin Schlesinger, Robert Lienau) (Berlin, 1960)

Musikverlage in der Bundesrepublik Deutschland und in West-Berlin (Bonn, 1965)

C. Frese, ed.: Geschichte eines Musikverlages 1810–1985: Robert Lienau Berlin vormals Schlesinger (Berlin, 1985)

RUDOLF ELVERS

Lienike. See LINIKE family.

Liepmannssohn, Leo (b Landsberg, 18 Feb 1840; d Berlin, May 1915). German antiquarian music dealer. At the time when Liepmannssohn joined A. Asher & Co. (one of the best-known retail and second-hand booksellers in Europe) as an apprentice, the trade included a relatively small amount of music. He was thus prompted to develop his own strong musical interests into an independent business, which he ultimately established at Paris as Liepmannssohn & Dufour in January 1866. By the summer of 1872, when he disposed of the concern, he had issued no fewer than 37 catalogues, all of which included a section of music, while ten were entirely devoted to this subject. After a brief partnership in A. Asher & Co. following his return to Berlin, Liepmannssohn opened his own business there in 1874. In 1903 he sold it to Otto Haas, who had joined him early in that year, and who continued to trade under the name of Liepmannssohn.

Besides its own famous series of stock catalogues (discussed in A. Rosenthal: 'Die Lagerkataloge des Musikantiquariats Leo Liepmannssohn (1866–1935)', Festschrift Hans Schneider zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. R. Elvers and E. Vögel (Munich, 1981), 193–216), the firm became widely known for more than 70 auction sales of music held between 1881 and 1934. Many notable collections of rare music and musical literature passed through its hands and the catalogues themselves are monuments of scholarship. Some, compiled by scholars such as Johannes Wolf and Georg Kinsky, have become reference works. The sales included the libraries of Spohr, Riemann, Commer, Eitner, André's heirs, J.E. Matthew and Wolffheim.

ALEC HYATT KING

Lier, Bertus van (b Utrecht, 10 Sept 1906; d Roden, 14 Feb 1972). Dutch composer. He took lessons in music theory at the Toonkunst Muziekschool in Utrecht from the age of eight. Later he studied the cello with Max Orobio de Castro and composition with Pijper at the Amsterdam Conservatory (1926–32), and conducting with Scherchen in Strasbourg (1933). During his school years van Lier had participated in performances of Euripides' Bacchae and the Cyclops and Sophocles' Antigone, and this had two important consequences: his acquaintance with Pijper, who composed the incidental music for these performances, and his lifelong fascination with ancient Greek tragedy. In later years he was also active in the field of musicology: J.S. Bach, Schubert and Mozart were his favourite topics of research. From 1960 on he lectured at Groningen University, which awarded him an honorary degree in 1964.

His compositional style was, in the first period, strongly influenced by the polytonal structures of Pijper, though he did go on to employ tonal centres, as in the Third Symphony (1939). Textures built out of the superimposition of a number of melodic lines remain characteristic throughout his output of the later years. However, with his at times dense orchestration, the results can be a little overloaded, for example in the Bassoon Concerto (1950) and the Sinfonia (1954).

As a frequent conductor of Bach's St Matthew Passion, van Lier had noted that movement no.30 of the work contains a quotation from the Song of Songs. This led him to undertake extensive research on the text, finally resulting in the composition of his own Het hooglied ('The Holy Song') for soprano, tenor, bass, mixed chorus and chamber orchestra (1949). Along with the ballet music Katharsis (1945), it counts among his most successful and impressive works.

WORKS

Stage: De Magere (incid music to puppet play, B. Verhagen), 1927; Aias (incid music, Sophocles, trans. van Lier), 1933; Katharsis (ballet), 1945; Antigone (incid music, Sophocles, trans. van Lier), 1952

Orch: Sym no.1, 1928; Sym no.2, 1931, rev. 1945; Vc Concertino, 1933; Sym. no.3, 1939; Bn Conc., 1950; Sinfonia, 2 str orchs, ww, hn, perc, 1954; Divertimento facile, 1957; Variatie op een Uilenspiegel-thema [Variations on an Eulenspiegel Theme], 2 vn, orch, 1958; Concertante muziek, ob, vn, orch, 1959; Intrada reale e sinfonia festiva, 1964; Suite, 1966 [based on melodies from Haerlems oudt liedt-boeck]; Variations and Theme, 1967

Choral: 2 poésies de Ronsard, 1931; Canticum (P.H. Damsté), female vv, pf, str orch, 1939; Ps xxiii, 1940; O Nederland let op uw saeck (cant.), chorus, str, perc, 1945; Ik sla de trom (J. Greshoff), male vv, orch, 2 pf, 1948; Het hooglied [The Holy Song] (Bible: Song of Songs), S, T, B, chorus, orch, 1949; Cantate voor Kerstmis (J.J. Thomson), chorus, orch, 1955; 4 hollandse kwartijnen (P.C. Boutens), 1956; Vijf mei: zij [May 5th: They] (K. Josselin de Jong), boys' chorus, chorus, orch, 1962; Ps xxxvi, Bar, chorus, orch, 1964

Solo vocal: La fille morte (P. Fort), medium v, pf, 1926; 4 verzen van Leopold, S, orch, 1933; De dijk [The Dyke] (J. Engelman), nar, orch, 1937; Vrijheid [Freedom] (Engelman), high v/boys' chorus, pf/org, 1945; A tfile fun a ghettojid [A Prayer of a Ghetto Jew] (Kwiatkowska), low v, pf, 1948; 3 oud-persische kwartijnen [3 Old-Persian Quatrains] (P.C. Boutens), S, a fl, ob d'amore, pf, 1956; Eens [Once] (A. Roland Holst), medium v, pf, 1966

Chbr and solo inst: Nouvelles, pf, 1921; Sonate pour une poupée, pf, 1925; Suite of 7 dances, pf, 1926; Pf Sonatina no.1, 1927; Str Qt, 1929; Pf Sonatina no.2, 1930; Sonata, vc, 1931; Kleine Suite, vn, pf, 1935; Dance, pf, 1943; Liedje en canon, pf, 1944

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Badings: 'Bertus van Lier', De hedendaagsche Nederlandsche muziek (Amsterdam, 1936), 95–102

B. van Lier: Buiten de maatstreep [Beyond the barline] (Amsterdam, 1948) [incl. essays on J.S. Bach, Mozart and Schubert]

J. Wouters: 'Bertus van Lier: Sonatine no.2 and Three Ancient Persian Quatrains', Sonorum speculum, no.13 (1962), 9–14

J. Wouters: 'Bertus van Lier', Sonorum speculum, no.29 (1966), 1–17

W. Paap: 'Bertus van Lier', Mens en melodie, xxvii (1972), 99–102

MARIUS FLOTHUIS

Liera viol. See LYRA VIOL.

Liess, Andreas (b Klein Kniegnitz, Silesia [now Księginice Małe], 16 June 1903; d Weidling, nr Vienna, 21 May 1988). Austrian musicologist. After studying with Max Schneider at the University of Breslau (1922–5), he moved to Vienna, where he attended lectures in musicology by Adler, von Ficker and Wellesz (1925–8). He took the doctorate in 1928 with a dissertation on Debussy's harmony and continued his studies in Paris (1927–33). He made his living at first as a freelance journalist, but in 1952 he was appointed lecturer in music history at the Vienna Conservatory. He became reader in 1958 at the Vienna Music Academy (now Hochschule für Musik) and professor in 1972. His essential concern as a historian was to present music history in its broadest cultural-historical aspects. He did much for the understanding of French music in German-speaking countries.

WRITINGS

Die Grundelemente der Harmonik in der Musik von Claude Debussy (diss., U. of Vienna, 1928)

Claude Debussy: das Werk im Zeitbild (Strasbourg, 1936, 2/1978)

Claude Debussy und das deutsche Musikschaffen (Würzburg, 1939)

Joseph Marx: Leben und Werk (Graz, 1943)

Wiener Barockmusik (Vienna, 1946)

Johann Joseph Fux, ein steirischer Meister des Barock (Vienna, 1948)

Die Musik im Weltbild der Gegenwart: Erkenntnis und Bekenntnis (Lindau and Vienna, 1949)

Deutsche und französische Musik in der Geistesgeschichte des neunzehnten Jahrhunderts (Vienna, 1950)

Franz Schmidt: Leben und Schaffen (Graz, 1951)

J.M. Vogl, Hofoperist und Schubertsänger (Graz, 1954)

'Debussy, Claude Achille', 'Fux, Johann Josef', MGG1

Carl Orff: Idee und Werk (Zürich, 1955, 2/1977, rev. 1980 by H. Gassner; Eng. trans., 1965)

Fuxiana (Vienna, 1958)

Die Musik des Abendlandes im geistigen Gefälle der Epochen (Vienna, 1970)

Protuberanzen, i: Zur Theorie der Musikgeschichte (Vienna, 1970)

Der Weg nach innen (Ortung ästhetischen Denkens heute) (Zürich, 1973)

Kritische Erwägungen zu einer Ganzheitsphilosophie der Musik (Vienna, 1980)

Zwei Essays zu Carl Orff: De temporum fine comoedia (Vienna, 1981)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Berger: 'Die historische Dimension im musikphilosophischen Denken von Andreas Liess und Th.W. Adorno', IRASM, ii (1971), 5–35

R.M. Rozinek: Begegnung mit Andreas Liess (Suhr, 1984)

RUDOLF KLEIN

Lieto, Bartolomeo. See LIETO PANHORMITANO, BARTOLOMEO.

Lieto fine (It.: 'happy ending'). A term used to denote the happy conclusion of a drama or operatic libretto, a basic ingredient of the genre of opera, particularly during the first two centuries of its development. One aim in the choice and construction of operatic plots was to please the taste and political aspirations of the aristocratic patrons, but patronage and social considerations offer only a partial explanation for the procedure of the early librettists and composers: it was in tune with the optimistic view of society during the Enlightenment period. A large proportion of operas written after the 1820s project a tragic vision of life which extends from Norma via Aida and Carmen to Madama Butterfly and Lulu.

□

Lieto Panhormitano [Panormitano, Palermitano], Bartolomeo (b Palermo; fl Naples, 1558). Italian music theorist and ?composer. He was a priest and author of the Dialogo quarto de musica (Naples, 1559/R), which instructs those unable to read mensural notation how to intabulate part-music for viola a mano (probably a vihuela) or lute. The work includes 14 tables, each showing the gamut, clefs, staves, accidentals and the corresponding ciphers for Italian lute tablature. The pitch of the lowest note in the bass part determines which table should be consulted, and the parts are then intabulated in the order soprano, bass, tenor and alto. The treatise also contains information on selecting a properly proportioned lute, placing frets and tuning. He wrote other treatises, now lost, including one on transposition and reading ligatures, and another on counterpoint. Although he referred to himself in the Dialogo as a noted composer of masses, motets, hymns and madrigals, no works by a composer of this name have survived.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI; WolfH
J.M. Ward: 'Le problème des hauteurs dans la musique pour luth et vihuela au XVIe siècle', Le luth et sa musique: Neuilly-sur-Seine 1957, 171–8
P. Manzi: 'Bartolomeo Lieto obliato musicista del Cinquecento', Almanacco dei bibliotecari italiani (1973), 101–10
J.M. Ward: 'Changing the Instrument for the Music', JLSA, xv (1982), 27–39

ARTHUR J. NESS

Lieurance, Thurlow (Weed) (b Oskaloosa, IA, 21 March 1878; d Boulder, CO, 9 Oct 1963). American composer. He studied the cornet and played in various bands around Neosho Falls, Kansas. His first compositions range from marches for band (lost) to the oratorio Queen Esther (1897). He served as a bandmaster during the Spanish-American War, then studied harmony and arranging at Cincinnati College of Music for a short period. After two seasons in the Castle Square Opera Company chorus Lieurance returned to Kansas in about 1901 as a singing and piano teacher. In 1903 he visited the Crow Reservation in Montana and thereby began a life-long fascination with the music and customs of Amerindians. He made many attempts to obtain a position with the US government for the purpose of collecting Amerindian music but his offers were consistently declined, though he may have worked as a collector with the Wanamaker expedition of 1908. His first field recordings date from 1911; the results of this and subsequent trips comprise a large and important collection of Amerindian music now in the Archive of Folk Culture at the Library of Congress. Between 1917 and 1926 he led a touring group on the Chautauqua circuit which presented his arrangements of Amerindian melodies. After appointment as a faculty member of the Municipal University of Wichita he continued to devote most of his energies to studying Amerindian culture and was one of several composers who attempted to develop an indigenous American music based on Amerindian materials. One of his large-scale compositions, Minisa, won a Presser award; the majority of his works are songs and piano pieces, many of which he arranged for other forces. His best-known work, the song By the Waters of Minnetonka (also known as Moon Deer), has enjoyed widespread and enduring popularity.

WORKS

printed works published in Philadelphia unless otherwise stated

Stage: Drama of the Yellowstone, lost
Orch: Minisa, 1930; Sym. Sketches – Paris, France, 1931; Trails Southwest, 1932; The Conquistador, 1934; Colonial Exposition Sketches, lost; Medicine Dance; Water Moon Maiden Choral: Queen Esther (orat), vv, pf, 1897; [11] Indian Love Songs (E.D. Proctor, A. Fletcher, Lieurance), SSA (1925); [10] Indian Songs (L. Wolf, C. Roos, Proctor, E. Guiwits, F. Densmore, J.M. Cavanass, Lieurance), SATB (1934); 11 partsongs; many arrs.
Songs, 1v, pf: 5 Songs (W. Felter) (1907); 9 Indian Songs (Proctor, Felter, K. Jones, Lieurance) (1913); By the Waters of Minnetonka (Moon Deer) (Cavanass) (1917); Songs of the North American Indian (Cavanass, Fletcher, Lieurance) (1920); Songs from the Yellowstone (Lieurance) (1920–21); 8 Songs from Green Timber (Roos) (1921); Forgotten Trails (Roos), 4 songs (1923); 3 Songs, each in his own Tongue (W.H. Carruth) (1925); 6 Songs from Stray Birds (R. Tagore) (1937); From the Land in the Sky (Lieurance), 3 songs (1941); Singing Children of the Sun (Cavanass, Fletcher, Wolf, Jones, Guiwits, Roos, Lieurance), 16 songs (1943) [incl. 8 repr. from previous collections]
Chbr: over 200 salon pieces for various combinations of 1v, fl, vn, pf, 1904–55, incl. solo pf works; many arrs.

MSS held by Wichita State University, KS; autobiography and correspondence in US-NAu

Principal publisher: Presser

BIBLIOGRAPHY

[?T.W. Lieurance]: 'Legend of a Famous Lieurance Song', The Etude, xxxix (1921), 94
[?T.W. Lieurance]: 'From Broadway to the Pueblos', The Etude, xli (1923), 231–2
[?T.W. Lieurance]: 'Thurlow Lieurance (An Authentic Biography)', The Etude, xli (1923), 232
H.G. Kinscella: 'Lieurance Traces American Indian Music to Oriental Origins', Musical America, xxxvii/24 (1923), 3–4
D.A. Lee: 'Thurlow Lieurance and Music of the American Indians', Sonneck Society Bulletin, viii/2 (1982), 44–5
T. Browner: '"Breaking the Indian Spirit": Thoughts on Musical Borrowing and the "Indianist" Movement in American Music', American Music, xv/3 (1997), 265–84

DOUGLAS A. LEE

Lifar, Serge (b Kiev, 20 March/2 April 1905; d Lausanne, 15 Dec 1986). French dancer of Russian birth. See BALLET, §3(ii).

Ligabue, Ilva (b Reggio nell'Emilia, 23 May 1932). Italian soprano. Trained at the Scuola della Scala, Milan, she made her début there in 1953 as Marina in I quattro rusteghi. Engagements followed elsewhere in Italy and in Germany; she achieved a major success at Glyndebourne in 1958 as Alice (Falstaff) and returned as Fiordiligi and Donna Elvira. In 1961 she sang Bellini's Beatrice at La Scala and made her American début with the Chicago Lyric Opera as Margherita (Mefistofele). She also sang Alice at Covent Garden (1963) and appeared at the Vienna Staatsoper, in Buenos Aires and elsewhere. A lyric soprano of great tonal beauty and musical sensibility, she had a captivating stage presence. Her recordings include Alice with Solti and Bernstein, and Asteria in Boito's Nerone.

NOËL GOODWIN

Ligato. See LEGATO.

Ligature (i). A notational symbol that combines within itself two or more pitches and by its shape defines their rhythm. It is in fact a rhythmicized neume of two or more notes. Between the 12th century and the 16th the ligature had a variety of causes, meanings and uses. Several of its ambiguities arise from its attempt to serve both as a neume (denoting several notes to be sung to a single syllable) and as a part of the rhythmic system; others arise because it was often merely a calligraphical flourish with no meaning beyond that of the note values it represented.

Its rhythmic implications follow a system that is historically logical but somewhat complicated in practice. Once established, towards the end of the 13th century, the system remained unchanged in principle but was used more and more selectively until by the 16th century only a single form of ligature was in common use. With the advent of type-set music the ligature eventually became extinct.

The earliest ligatures derive directly from the rising and falling two-note neumes of chant notation, the pes and the clivis (ex.1*a*). By the 12th century these had taken, in central French notation, the forms shown in ex.1*b*. How often these signs had any rhythmic implications in monophonic chant is still much discussed; but there seems to be general agreement that when they had rhythmic meaning they implied some kind of a drive towards the second note, which would become more accented and longer.

Ex.1

(a) (b)

With the advent of modal notation for polyphony some time around 1200, the two signs in ex.1*b* became fundamental building-blocks of the system (see RHYTHMIC MODES and NOTATION, §III, 2). The number of notes in each neume and the combination of such neumes in ordines defined the rhythms in the modal system; in the majority of cases these two neume-shapes were to be interpreted as breve–long (as in ex.2).

Ex.2

(a) (b)

When the fully-fledged system of ligatures was described for the first time by Franco of Cologne (*c*1280) these two basic shapes retained their most common meanings, as in ex.2. Both shapes were described as being cum proprietate ('with propriety', i.e. with the first note in its standard form) and cum perfectione ('with perfection', i.e. with the last note in its standard form).

Alterations were made to these fundamental patterns by the addition or subtraction of stems, by turning notes round, or (for final notes only) by changing the shape of a ligature to an oblique form. Thus to turn round the last note of ex.2*a* as in ex.3*a* was to make it sine perfectione and to change its value from long to breve; the addition of a descending stem to that note would then restore its propriety, and therefore its original value (ex.3*b*).

Ex.3

(a) (b)

Exx.3*b* and 2*b* are the two shapes fundamental to an understanding of ligatures. Any of the changes just mentioned had the effect of turning a long into a breve or equally – and this is perhaps the confusing point – turning a breve into a long. Thus to add a descending stem to the first note of ex.3*b* would have exactly the same effect as subtracting the descending stem from the first note of ex.2*b* – changing the value of that note from a breve to a long (ex.4). Similarly with final notes: the subtraction of the stem from the second note of ex.3*b* changed it from a long to a breve. For a descending ligature, however, a different technique was used. Here, to avoid confusion with liquescent neumes, the ligature was altered by conversion to the oblique form (). In all other cases

Ex.4

Ex.5

Ex.6

Rising ligatures

First note Last note

cum proprietate

sine proprietate

Falling ligatures

cum proprietate

sine proprietate

Ex.7

(a) (b)

the oblique form was identical in meaning with the normal square form of ligature: it changed only the final note, and then only when the ligature descended to that note.

This system, deriving directly from the concepts of propriety and perfection in the basic ligature forms in exx.3*b* and 2*b*, has two important characteristics: the scheme in the rising form of ligature is different from that in the falling form; and it applies only to the first and last notes of ligatures. Ex.6 shows all the possibilities.

Two further features complete the system. A rising stem denotes the beginning of a ligature cum opposita proprietate ('with opposed propriety'): this is a ligature of two notes, each worth a semibreve (ex.7*a*). Whatever else may be happening in the ligature the two notes immediately following that rising stem are always semibreves (ex.7*b*). All other notes – that is to say, notes other than the first and last in a ligature and ones not covered by the cum opposita proprietate convention – have the value of a breve (ex.8), though a descending stem after any such note can turn it into a long (ex.9).

Ex.8

Ex.9

It is perhaps worth adding two points to the above explanation. First, while exx.2–9 are all in black-full notation they apply equally in the void notation that became customary in the 15th century. Second, the values of notes in ligature are of course subject to the same modifications as any other notes when used within the mensural system (see NOTATION, §III, 3).

This system grew up in the notation of melismatic tenors in the motet repertory of the late 13th century (though it is as well to bear in mind that many early motets are written in modal notation, an earlier system that works rather differently). In the 14th century it was used particularly in the untexted lower voices of secular songs and in the more melismatic sections in sacred music. Here, and in later music, scribes seem to have avoided placing ligatures so that more than one syllable must be sung to the ligature; and indeed the few discussions of texting in the theorists of the 15th and 16th centuries specifically forbid the singing of more than one syllable to a ligature. Yet there are many cases where there is no alternative to breaking the ligature for texting; and this rule should therefore be taken only as the norm, not as of universal application. As early as the 13th century the conflicting meanings of a neume (to denote several pitches for a single syllable) and of a ligature (to denote a particular rhythmic configuration) can often be seen leading to notational confusion.

In the 15th century, ligatures became increasingly rare. Some theorists of the time suggested that a ligature should be written whenever possible, and that to do otherwise would be to insult the musician. But there is very little evidence of this precept being followed at all rigorously. On the other hand, that state of mind may go some way to explaining why there is relatively little agreement among 15th-century sources in terms of ligatures that appear spasmodically. Several scholars have attempted, for example, to trace relationships between manuscripts by charting the ligature variants; but while such variants have often been recorded in the critical commentaries to editions, the findings in terms of manuscript filiation have in general proved inconclusive.

By the end of the 15th century there was in any case considerably less opportunity to write ligatures. As the minim and the semiminim became the most common note values, fewer and fewer occasions arose where a ligature of breve and long note values (as in exx.8 and 9) could be used. The cum opposita proprietate ligature of two semibreves therefore became almost the only form to appear; it can be found even in the 17th century. But long before that the ligature was in most cases only a scribal flourish, a more elegant way of writing notes. That ligatures were included in many printed editions of the 16th century – and even, occasionally, of the 17th – is no more significant than the retention of printers' ligatures for normal letter-press typography.

For bibliography see NOTATION.

PETER WRIGHT

Ligature (ii). The metal band with two screws by which the reed of a clarinet or saxophone is secured to the mouthpiece. It replaces the earlier method of binding the reed with a waxed thread or twisted cord, still regarded as the correct method in Germany. The screw ligature was initially introduced by Iwan Müller in his Gamme pour la nouvelle clarinette (Bonn, *c*1812), along with his revolutionary 13-keyed clarinet. Metal ligatures with one screw were introduced during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Modern ligatures are made in clear plastic; with material having a Velcro binding; and with a string or cord binding tightened by one or two screws.

ALBERT R. RICE

Ligeti, György (Sándor) (b Dicsőszentmárton [Diciosânmartin, now Tîrnăveni], Transylvania, 28 May 1923). Hungarian composer. After being exposed to two tyrannies in his youth, Nazi and Stalinist, he left Hungary following the 1956 Russian suppression of his country's independence and found himself, in western Europe, confronted by another stern ideology, that of the Darmstadt-Cologne avant garde. The effect was twofold. He was liberated to pursue long-cherished ideals of musical advance, but at the same time his critical, contrary spirit was sharpened. Unlike many of his young colleagues in the west, he was suspicious of system, rejoiced in the delightfulness and evocativeness of sound, and steadily reintroduced – though in quite new ways, guided by an exact ear – things that serial orthodoxy had refused, such as simple harmonies, ostinatos and palpable melodies. Just when this process of recuperation might have led him, in the early 1980s, to join the new dominant movement of postmodernist collage and retrospect, he found further stimulation and contradiction in non-European musical cultures, especially Caribbean, central African and East Asian. Always paradoxical, he found this music of the world enhancing his sense of himself as musically a Hungarian, and began to publish or republish many of the compositions he had written decades earlier.

1. YEARS IN HUNGARY. Ligeti was born into a Jewish family of some artistic distinction: his paternal grandfather had been a professional painter, and the violinist Leopold Auer ('Ligeti' being a Hungarianization of the surname) was a paternal great-uncle. Soon after his birth the family moved to the provincial centre of Kolozsvár, where he studied with Farkas at the conservatory (1941–3) and during the summers privately with Kadosa in Budapest. In 1944 he was called up into the labour corps, and not until September 1945 was he able to resume his studies, at the academy of music in Budapest, where his teachers included Farkas again, Veress and Járdányi. He graduated in 1949, and the next year returned as a teacher of harmony and counterpoint.

By this point he had already begun to make a mark as a composer. The cultural situation in Hungary, with Moscow setting the pace and Kodály a national monument, demanded a steady output of choral settings in folk style. Ligeti was able to use such opportunities in order to perfect his technique, and at the same time to write more adventurous music, especially in his songs and piano pieces of 1946–8. After that, between 1949 and 1953, came a period of despotism in Hungary, when musical innovation was as impossible as political dissent. Ligeti continued to produce the expected choral songs, and the unexpected, unwanted music that mostly went into his desk drawer: an example is his Musica ricercata (1951–3), a sequence of eleven piano pieces, of which the first uses only two pitch classes, the second three, and so on. In 1954 the totalitarian grip began to relax, and Ligeti responded with works more ambitious and challenging than anything he had composed hitherto: his First Quartet and a pair of Weöres choruses. But he was limited by what he knew (principally Bartók among the 20th-century masters) and his dream was of a largely amorphous but complexly figured music that, as yet, he did not have the means to create. Information about the new electronic music being generated in Cologne, and a broadcast of Stockhausen's Gesang der Jünglinge, filled him with hope.

2. From 1956 to 'Le Grand Macabre'. On fleeing Budapest, in December 1956, he travelled to Vienna, and from there to Cologne, where for a year or so he spent a lot of time listening and learning new techniques. He was fascinated by Webern, in whom he found a model of manifest construction allied with extreme expressive effect, and he familiarized himself with the thinking of his Western contemporaries. He wrote the classic analysis of a piece from the apogee of total serialism (Boulez's Structures 1a), but he voiced too an awareness of the dangers and limitations of such means of organization. With Koenig as his mentor, he then worked on three electronic pieces, of which Artikulation is a comic pendant to Gesang, a piece in which synthetic sounds mimic vocal behaviour. In 1958 he taught for the first time at Darmstadt, whither he regularly returned during the next decade. He also worked on realizing his dream of unmeasured rhythm, fantastical complexity and sonic drama in Apparitions for orchestra (1958–9), in which – simultaneously with but independently of Xenakis, Penderecki and Stockhausen – he introduced orchestral clusters. In 1959 he returned to Vienna, but he was back in Cologne in June 1960 for the first performance of Apparitions. That event was the foundation of his international reputation; the next year he began giving annual courses at the academy of music in Stockholm.

Apparitions led him to a more homogeneous and static handling of orchestral clusters in Atmosphères (1961), which is almost a single cloud, drifting through different regions of colour, harmony and texture, whether in the form of sustained tones (remarkably for the period, there is only one percussion instrument: a piano whose strings are brushed towards the close) or of what he called 'micropolyphony', consisting of dense weaves of canons at the unison, in which the lines move at different speeds and are not separately identifiable. Atmosphères was soon performed around the world and more than once recorded; it was also widely imitated. Ligeti himself, however, was on to other things. He wrote one more cluster composition, Volumina (1961–2) – though even here there are essential differences, in that the piece is for a solo player (an organist) and graphically notated. His other works from immediately after Atmosphères were ironic sketches (Die Zukunft der Musik, in which he as mute 'lecturer' chalked up on a blackboard instructions to his audience; the Poème symphonique for a hundred clockwork metronomes running down at different speeds, and so creating micropolyphony of unparallelled complexity) and a more substantial comedy, Aventures, a wordless sequence of quasi-operatic situations for three singers and seven instrumentalists.

The completion of a second such work, Nouvelles aventures (1962–5), was interrupted by the composition of the large-scale Requiem (1963–5), in which similar kinds of extravagant vocal behaviour are used in the setting of the Dies irae while other sections are composed in choral-orchestral micropolyphony. In the finale, the Lacrimosa, the resulting hazy clusters are sometimes and suddenly replaced by the clear light of simple intervals, including octaves and tritones, and Ligeti pursued the possibilities of harmonic centres in Lux aeterna for unaccompanied voices (1966) and Lontano for orchestra (1967). This was not a return to conventional tonality – Ligeti preferred chords with no clear diatonic sense (such as a major second superimposed on a minor third) – but, together with the principle of canon, it allowed him access to the continuity of conventional tonal music. Lontano is partly a salute, across a gulf of elapsed time, to the late Romantic symphony.

In Lontano, as in Atmosphères, Ligeti made his music of long, slow gestures, but there was another basic element in his world, that of rapid mechanical activity. ('Clocks and clouds' he would call these two kinds of music in the title of a later work, borrowing a phrase from an essay by Karl Popper.) Asked to write a piece for harpsichord, he found how such frantic speed, if applied to iterated formulae, could produce an impression of gradual change, and the result was Continuum (1968). He was also concerned to explore an alternative case of clocks becoming clouds – the confusion of intonation when a large number of voices, as in the Requiem, are singing micropolyphony – and in Ramifications (1968–9) he produced a work for two bodies of strings playing similar music in different tuning systems, a quarter-tone apart.

In other works of this period, including the Second Quartet (1968), Ten Pieces for wind quintet (1968) and Chamber Concerto (1969–70), he used multi-movement form to present several different faces of his music in succession. There are clock movements and cloud movements, and often these movements of diverse kinds will be made to 'rhyme' by means of cross-reference: such a conception of musical form goes back to previous works in two movements, the Cello Concerto and Apparitions, and further to the two-movement, opposing-but-similar forms of Bartók. The Double Concerto for flute, oboe and orchestra (1972) is again an example of this paired-movement type, and again an essay in microtonal intonation, profiting from recent developments in woodwind technique.

The works of 1968–72 were thus works of synthesis and expansion – expansion to embrace microtones and also, in the orchestral Melodien (1971), well defined melodies that emerge from and fold back into more characteristically Ligetian textures of held chords and fast arpeggios. In part the greater range of his music at this time came from the greater range of his travels. In 1969–70 a Deutsche akademischer Austauschdienst scholarship took him to Berlin, and he divided his time between that city and Vienna until 1973; in 1972 he was visiting professor at Stanford University; and in 1973 he accepted a permanent appointment to the Musikhochschule in Hamburg, where he made his main home. While in California he had come across the music of Partch, Reich and Riley, and gained a commission from the San Francisco SO, which he fulfilled with San Francisco Polyphony (1973–4). This piece and Clocks and Clouds (1972–3) were relics of a failed operatic project, in that they used sketches he had made for an Oedipus which was aborted on the death of Göran Gentele, who had commissioned the work for the Swedish Royal Opera, had written the libretto, and was to have been the director.

The opera Ligeti went on to write for Stockholm was Le Grand Macabre (1974–7), based on a play by the Belgian dramatist Michel de Ghelderode, and concerned, like the Requiem, with death and survival – the most meaningful subjects for a composer who had lived through World War II and had then been contributing to the debate about the death and survival of musical expression. The opera's central character – Nekrotzar, the Grand Macabre of the title – arrives on earth (or on a Ligetian revision of the earth, featuring a Breughelesque peasant, a pair of Monteverdian lovers and a court led by an inconsequential countertenor monarch) to announce the end. When the midnight hour is reached, however, he is the only one to die: the others go on into a life after death – a life not so different from the life they were living before, only perhaps more difficult in being less serious.

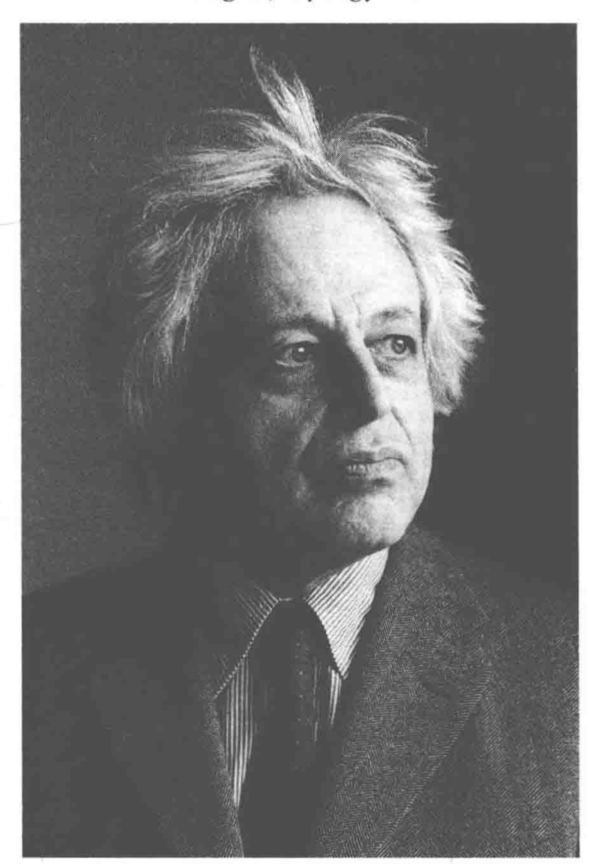
Composing Le Grand Macabre gave Ligeti the chance to bring together many of his discoveries (the still orchestral textures and luminous figurations of the Chamber Concerto and Double Concerto, the kind of comic-strip speed, precision and irony that had appeared in the Requiem, mechanical musical actions inherited from Continuum) and to try out new things, including the introduction to a decrepit world with ignoble instruments (in the prelude for motor horns), and the picturing of that world by reference to works and styles of the past. Some parts of the score consist of semi-quotation and collage, but the final passacaglia goes beyond retrospection to indicate how chains of quasi-diatonic chords might be fabricated so that their harmonic implications were continually estranged and subverted. Again as in the Requiem, the conclusion offers a glimpse of something new.

Following its première in Stockholm, Le Grand Macabre enjoyed an extraordinary number of productions for a modern opera, being seen in Hamburg (1978), Saarbrucken (1979), Bologna (1979), Nuremberg (1980), Paris (1981) and London (1982). The composer was most appreciative of the Bologna staging, on account of the designs by Roland Topor, but he grew dissatisfied with the work itself, and in 1996 gave the score a thorough overhaul in preparation for the 1997 Salzburg production.

3. After 'Le Grand Macabre'. If there were seeds for Ligeti's future output in his opera, there were intimations too in a work he wrote while the opera was in train: the set of three pieces for two pianos, Monument – Selbstportrait – Bewegung (1976). The 'self portrait' is an essay in repetitive patterning which pays homage to other practitioners of the art; the full title is 'Selbstportrait mit Reich und Riley (und Chopin ist auch dabei)'. Unlike Reich and Riley at this time, though, Ligeti was interested in making symmetry asymmetrical, and here he uses a technique of having keys held down silently, so that gaps will appear in the arpeggios that run across them. That technique was to appear again in one of the 1985 Etudes for solo piano, 'Touches bloquées'. More generally significant for the future is the algorithmic process of 'Monument', whereby the movement unfolds as if of itself, through the operation of carefully chosen rules. Ligeti's examination of Boulez's Structures Ia had not been profitless, but in his music the rules and their workings are laid out to view, and only become inaudible once the self-generation has reached a high level of complexity. There are parallels here with the drawings of M.C. Escher, which Ligeti had also come across during his time in California. As for 'Bewegung', it is a fluid version of 'Monument' (once again, these are a pair of similar opposites) and – though more disguised in this regard than the ending of the opera – a passacaglia, belonging to the formal type that appealed to Ligeti perhaps for its contrapuntal challenges and for its clear balance of repetition and change. Soon after the opera he wrote two more pieces of this kind, both for harpsichord: Hungarian Rock and Passacaglia ungherese.

These were, though, his last compositions for some years, while he struggled with a commissioned piano concerto and with the crisis in musical evolution. By the late 1970s the avant garde to which he had been attached, however sceptically, was no longer functioning as such: the time of shared ideals was over, and instead of being a challenge to established musical culture, the postwar generation had become the new establishment. Ligeti wanted to distance himself from that fate, but he was equally determined to avoid the postmodern flow back to the forms, styles and rhetoric of a century before. The work he eventually produced, after a long silence, was ostensibly a work of exactly that retrieving sort: the Horn Trio (1982), which pays homage to Brahms in its instrumentation and to Romantic music more widely in some of its structures and gestures. What is imitated, though, is often deliberately misinterpreted: on the most obvious level, Ligeti often asks the horn player to produce natural harmonics, and not only does this bring about – as in Ramifications and the Double Concerto – a play of different tunings but it also, in a more conventional context, gives an effect of oddity and misbehaviour. The Horn Trio maintains another feature of the old avant garde that younger postmodernists were abandoning: a sense of European culture as part of a global network. In particular, the music is invigorated by interactions between compound metres such as Ligeti had heard in recordings of Caribbean music, and the resulting syncopations are again very far from Brahms.

They are perhaps not so far, though, from the folk music of Hungary and the Balkans, as Ligeti seems to have recognized by returning, in 1983, to the medium that had most occupied him during his years in Budapest: the unaccompanied chorus. Of the two sets of choruses he wrote that year, the Magyar etüdök return also to his favourite Hungarian poet, Sándor Weöres, while the Drei Phantasien are settings of Hölderlin. Both works are far more sophisticated than anything he could have produced 30 or 40 years before – they are texturally complex and elaborately constructed – but their modal and rhythmic roots are in the Hungarian choral tradition.



However, the hoped-for renewal was slow in coming, and there was another hiatus before, in 1985, the appearance of the first book of Etudes for piano and the beginning in earnest at last of the Piano Concerto. Prompts for these works seem to have come from three sources: Ligeti's widening acquaintance with non-European music (especially the Banda-Linda polyphony of the Central African Republic and the semi-commercial music of Latin America and the Caribbean), which encouraged his exploration of polymetre; the boost that his interest in iterative processes (already apparent in Monument) received from the new art of computer graphics, based on the Mandelbrot set; and his growing recognition that there were alternatives to the impasses of atonality (as practised by a worn-out avant garde) and tonality (as re-embraced by minimalists and postmodernists). Some of those alternatives lay in new scales and new tunings, and in the Piano Concerto he again used natural harmonics on the horn (and other instruments). There were also new possibilities in dividing a totally chromatic texture between different modes, as he had done in Atmosphères by drawing out 'white-note' (diatonic) and 'black-note' (pentatonic) clusters. The effect of this procedure in the Etudes, where the modes are presented not as clusters but as melodies and ostinatos of supple and complex rhythm, is to suggest a direct continuation from Bartók or, more especially, Debussy – a connection confirmed by the poetry of the music and by some of the titles ('Fanfares', 'Arc-en-ciel').

The title of the sixth Etude, 'Automne à Varsovie', alludes to the Warsaw Autumn festival that had been one of the main showcases for contemporary music since the mid-1950s, to the hazardous political and economic condition of Poland in the early 1980s, and to the presence here, as in Selbstportrait, of Chopin, recalled in the almost continuous semiquaver arpeggiation. Against this the music moves mostly in descending chromatic scales, superimposed in up to four layers going at different speeds: at one point, for instance, there are scales whose notes occur at intervals of four, five and seven semiquavers (though with certain notes given double duration). As in the finale of the Horn Trio, the slowly descending chromatic scale evokes a common passacaglia bass of baroque laments, but now there is nothing above the bass other than smaller or larger versions of itself. The piece is, like Mandelbrot images, self-similar on different levels, and out of this oppressive sameness it creates a powerful effect of stalemate and ominousness.

For the composer, though, the 1985 Etudes were liberating. Not only did he go on to complete the Piano Concerto (1985–8), where similar processes of mechanized recollection appear in each of the five movements, but from there he continued into a second book of Etudes (1988–94) and a third (begun in 1995). While these later Etudes go further into the possibilities of musical algorithms, evocative imagery, frenetic activity, polymetre and abundant texture, at the same time Ligeti began to look further into new temperaments in his Violin Concerto (1989–93), which is again in five movements. As in the Piano Concerto, the brass sometimes play natural harmonics and there are instruments of uncertain intonation (ocarinas, slide whistles, recorder); in addition, one violin and one viola from the orchestra are tuned to harmonics on the double bass, and so make available the most delicate abrasions between equal temperament and natural resonance.

However, the concerto also reveals how music may be neither atonal nor tonal without the need of retunings. For example, its second movement, 'Aria, Hoquetus, Choral', is based on a melody which is diatonic but unable to settle into any stable key or metre, a melody of folkish style which recalls central Europe without finding a home. As the tripartite title suggests, the tune goes on to gain contrapuntal interruptions and harmonic reinterpretations (notably from a faltering ocarina quartet and a brass section also mouldering with mistuned harmonics); the movement is partly determined by repetitive process, but this relatively abstract kind of construction produces, in a characteristic way, concrete effects of resemblance to older music and of expressive force. The Sonata for solo viola is a further set of (six) movements in which memory and meaning are as if manufactured.

György Ligeti, 1982

While writing these major instrumental works of the 1980s and 1990s, Ligeti had in mind a second opera, which at first was to have been a setting of The Tempest, but which he later planned as a version of the Alice books of Lewis Carroll – subject matter well suited to his mathematical fantasy and to his appreciation of what is extreme but compact, absurd but humane, various but ordered. The variety of his own music makes it difficult to give an account of his style that would happily embrace, say, Atmosphères and the Viola Sonata. In terms of inquisitive, fundamental-seeking, exploratory process, though, and of reaction (usually surprising and contradictory) to the world around him, he has been always the same man.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Aventures & Nouvelles aventures (Ligeti), stage version of vocal works, 1966

Le Grand Macabre (op, 2, M. Meschke and Ligeti, after M. de Ghelderode), 1974–7, Stockholm, Royal Opera, 12 April 1978; rev. 1996, Salzburg, 1997

ORCHESTRAL

Régi magyar társas táncok [Old Hungarian Parlour Dances], str, fl/cl ad lib, 1949

Baladă şi joc [Ballad and Dance], school orch, 1950

Concert Românesc, 1952

Apparitions, 1958–9

Atmosphères, 1961

Requiem, S, Mez, chorus, orch, 1963–5

Cello Concerto, 1966

Lontano, 1967

Ramifications, str, 1968–9

Melodien, 1971

Double Concerto, fl, ob, orch, 1972
Clocks and Clouds, female vv, orch, 1972–3
San Francisco Polyphony, 1973–4
Piano Concerto, 1985–8
Violin Concerto, 1989–93

ENSEMBLE

Fragment, 10 insts, 1961, rev. 1964
Aventures, 3vv, 7 insts, 1962, rev. 1963
Nouvelles aventures, 3vv, 7 insts, 1962–5
Chamber Concerto, 13 insts, 1969–70
Mysteries of the Macabre, arr. E. Howarth, coloratura S, ens, 1991

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

Baladă şi joc [Ballad and Dance], 2 vns, 1950
2 Movements, str qt, 1950
Sonata, vc, 1948–53
6 Bagatelles, wind qnt, 1953 [arr. from Musica ricercata]
String Quartet no.1 'Métamorphoses nocturnes', 1953–4
10 Pieces, wind qnt, 1968
String Quartet no.2, 1968
Hyllning för Hilding Rosenbergs födelsedag (med besvärjandet av Bartóks anda), vn, vc, 1982
Trio, vn, hn, pf, 1982
Die grosse Schildkröten-Fanfare vom Südchinesischen Meer, tpt, 1985
Mysteries of the Macabre, arr. E. Howarth, tpt, pf/ens, 1988
Sonata, va, 1991–4

UNACCOMPANIED CHORAL

Idegen földön [Abroad] (B. Balassa, Hung. and Slovak trad.), women's vv, 1945–6
Betlehemi királyok [The Magi] (A. József), 1946
Bujdosó [Wandering] (Hung. trad.), 1946
Húsvét [Easter] (Hung. trad.), women's vv, 1946
Magány [Solitude] (S. Weöres), 1946
Magos kősziklának [By the Huge Rock] (Hung. trad.), 1946
Ha folyóvíz volnék [If I Could Flow Like the River] (canon a 4, Slovak trad.), 1947
Kállai kettős [Kálló Two-Step] (Hung. trad.), 1950
Lakodalmas [Weddding Dance] (Hung. trad.), 1950
Hortobágy (Hung. trad.), 1951
Haj, ífjúság! [Youth] (Hung. trad.), 1952
Pletykázó asszonyok [Gossip] (canon a 4, Weöres), 1952
Inaktelki nóták [Songs from Inaktelke] (Hung. trad.), 1953
Pápainé [Widow Pápai] (Hung. trad.), 1953
Mátraszentimrei dalok [Songs from Mátraszentimre] (4 songs, Hung. trad.), 1955
Éjszaka [Night], Reggel [Morning] (Weöres), 1955
Lux aeterna, 16 vv, 1966
3 Phantasien (F. Hölderlin), 16 vv, 1983
Magyar etüdök [Hung. Studies] (Weöres), 16 vv, 1983
Nonsense Madrigals, 6 men's vv, 1988–93

SONGS WITH PIANO

3 Songs (Weöres), S, pf, 1946–7; 4 lakodalmi tánc [4 Wedding Dances] (Hung. trad.), 3 female vv, pf, 1950; 5 Songs (J. Arany), S, pf, 1952; Der Sommer (Hölderlin), S, pf, 1989

PIANO SOLO

2 Capriccios, 1947
Invention, 1948
Musica ricercata, 11 pieces, 1951–3
3 bagatelles, 1961
Etudes, premier livre, 1985: no.1 Désordre, no.2 Cordes vides, no.3 Touches bloquées, no.4 Fanfares, no.5 Arc-en-ciel, no.6 Automne à Varsovie
Etudes, deuxième livre, 1988–94: no.7 Galamb borong [Melancholy Dove], no.8 Fém [Metal], no.9 Vertige, no.10 Der Zauberlehring, no.11 En suspens, no.12 Entrelacs, no.13 L'escalier du diable, no.14 Coloana infinita
Etudes, troixième livre, 1995–: no.15 White on White, no.16 Pour Irina, no.17 A bout de souffle

OTHER KEYBOARD

2 pf: Monument–Selbstportrait–Bewegung, 1976
pf 4 hands: Induló [March], 1942; Polifón etüd, 1943; 3 lakodalmi tánc [3 Wedding Dances], 1950 [arr. from 4 lakodalmi tánc, female vv, pf, 1950]; Sonatina, 1950–51 [partly arr. from Musica ricercata]
org: Ricercare: Omaggio a Frescobaldi, 1953 [arr. from Musica ricercata]; Volumina, 1961–2, rev. 1966; 2 Studies: Harmonies, 1967, Coulée, 1969 hpd: Continuum, 1968; Hungarian Rock (Chaconne), 1978; Passacaglia ungherese, 1978 player pf: Etude 14a, 1993

TAPE

Glissandi, 1957
Pièce électronique no.3, 1957–8, realized 1996
Artikulation, 1958

OTHER WORKS

Die Zukunft der Musik, lecturer, audience, 1961
Poème symphonique, 100 metronomes, 1962
Rondeau, actor, tape 1976

JUVENILIA

works the composer deems unworthy of performance

Orch: Little Serenade, str, 1945, rev. 1947; Mifiso la sodo, small orch, 1948; Grande symphonie militaire op.69, 1951
Vocal with insts: Cant. no.1 'Et circa horam nonam' (Lat. liturgy), Mez, 2 choruses, insts, 1944–5; Cant. no.2 'Venit angelus' (Lat. liturgy), Mez, chorus, insts, 1945; Bölcsőtől a sírig [From the Cradle to the Grave] (Hung. trad.), S, Mez, ob, cl, str qt, 1948; Ifjúsági kantáta [Cant. for Youth] (P. Kuczka), 4 soloists, chorus, orch, 1948–9; Tavaszi virág [Spring Flower] (music for a puppet play, Z. Körmöczi), 7 soloists, ens, 1949; Román népdalok és táncok [Romanian Folk Songs and Dances], Mez, Bar, small orch, 1950
Unacc. choral: 3 Attila József Choruses, 1945; Burját-Mongol aratódal [Buriatic-Mongolian Harvest Song], 1945; Bicinia biciae (7 duos, József, trad., textless), S, Bar, chorus, 1945; Dereng már a hajnal [The Dawn's Already Rising] (B. Fodor), 1945; Nagy idök [Great Times] (Petőfi), 1948; Tél [Winter] (Weöres), 1950; Az asszony és a katona [The Woman and the Soldier] (Hung. trad.), 1951
Chbr: Due, vn, vc, 1945; Duo, vn, pf, 1946
Songs: 3 Attila József Songs, 1950; Petőfi bordala [Petőfi's Drinking Song] (Petőfi), 1950; Középlokon esik az esö [It's Raining in Középlok] (Hung. trad.), 1951
Pf: Grande sonate militaire op.69, 1951; Chromatische Phantasie, 1956

MSS in CH-Bps

Principal publishers: Schott, Universal, Peters

WRITINGS

'Neue Musik in Ungarn', Melos, xvi (1949), 5–8
'Neues aus Budapest: Zwölftonmusik oder "Neue Tonalität"?', Melos, xvii (1950), 45–8
Preface to B. Bartók: String Quartet no.5 (Vienna, [1957])
'Pierre Boulez: Entscheidung und Automatik in der Structure Ia', Die Reihe, iv (1958), 38–63; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, iv (1960), 36–62
'Zur III. Klaviersonate von Boulez', Die Reihe, v (1959), 38–40; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, v (1961), 56–8
'Über die Harmonik in Weberns erster Kantate', DBNM, iii (1960), 49–64
'Wandlungen der musikalischen Form', Die Reihe, vii (1960), 5–17; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, vii (1965), 5–19
'Die Komposition mit Reihen und ihre Konsequenzen bei Anton Webern', ÖMz, xvi (1961), 297–302
'Neue Notation: Kommunikationsmittel oder Selbstzweck?', Notation Neuer Musik, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Mainz, 1965), 35–50
'Viel Pläne, aber wenig Zeit', Melos, xxxii (1965), 251–2 [letter to Ove Nordwall of 28 Dec 1964]
'Über Form in der Neuen Musik', Form in der Neuen Musik, DBNM, x (1966), 23–35
'Bemerkungen zu meiner Orgelstück "Volumina"', Melos, xxxiii (1966), 311–13
'Weberns Melodik', Melos, xxxiii (1966), 116–18
'Zustände, Ereignisse, Wandlungen: Bemerkungen zu meinem Orchesterstück "Apparitions"', Melos, xxxiv (1967), 165–9
'Spielanweisungen zur Erstfassung des zweiten Satzes der "Apparitions"', Musica, xxii (1968), 177–9
'Über neue Wege im Kompositionsunterricht', in G. Ligeti, W. Lutosławski and I. Lidholm: Three Aspects of New Music (Stockholm, 1968), 9–44
'Auf dem Weg zu "Lux aeterna"', ÖMz, xxiv (1969), 80–88

'Auswirkungen der elektronischen Musik auf mein kompositorisches Schaffen', Experimentelle Musik: Berlin 1968, 73–80
'Apropos Music und Politik', Ferienkurse '72, DBNM, xiii (1973), 42–6; Eng. trans. in PNM, xvi/2 (1977–8), 19–24
'Zur Entstehung der Oper "Le Grand Macabre"', Melos/NZM, iv (1978), 91–3
'Musik und Technik', Ruckblick in die Zukunft: Beiträge zur Lage in den achtziger Jahre, ed. H. Rossner (Berlin, 1981), 297–324
'Aspekte der Webernschen Kompositionstechnik', Anton Webern, ii, Musik-Konzepte (1984), 51–104 [special issue]
'Computer und Komposition: Subjektive Betrachtungen', Tiefenstruktur der Musik: Festschrift Fritz Winckel zum 80. Geburtstag, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Berlin, 1987), 22–30
'Ma position comme compositeur aujourd'hui', Contrechamps, nos.12–13 (1990), 8–10
'Konvention und Abweichung', ÖMz, xlvi (1991), 34–9 [on Mozart's 'Dissonance' Quartet K465]
'Rhapsodische, unausgewogene Gedanken über Musik, besonders über meine eigenen Kompositionen', NZM, Jg.154, no.1 (1993), 20–29

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MONOGRAPHS, COLLECTIONS AND CATALOGUES

O. Nordwall: Ligeti–Dokument (Stockholm, 1968) [incl. letters, sketches, scores, lectures, etc.]
E. Salmenhaara: Das musikalische Material und seine Behandlung in den Werken 'Apparitions', 'Atmosphères' und 'Requiem' von György Ligeti (Regensburg, 1969)
O. Nordwall: György Ligeti: eine Monographie (Mainz, 1971)
Musik und Bildung, vii/10 (1975) [Ligeti issue]
P. Griffiths: György Ligeti (London, 1983, 2/1996)
P. Michel: György Ligeti: compositeur d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1985)
E. Restagno, ed.: Ligeti (Turin, 1985)
O. Kolleritsch, ed.: György Ligeti: Personalstil – Avantgardismus – Popularität (Vienna, 1987)
H. Sabbe: György Ligeti: Studien zur kompositorischen Phänomenologie, Musik-Konzepte, no.53 (1987)
R.W. Richart: György Ligeti: a Bio-Bibliography (New York, 1990)
Für György Ligeti: Hamburg 1988 [HJbMw, xi (1991)]
W. Burde: György Ligeti: eine Monographie (Zürich, 1993)
NZM, Jg.154, no.1 (1993) [Ligeti issue]
U. Dibelius: György Ligeti: eine Monographie in Essays (Mainz, 1994)
S. Ferguson: György Ligetis Drei Stücke für zwei Klaviere: eine Gesamtanalyse zur grundsätzlichen Problematik der musikalischen Notation als Grundlage der Analyse von Musikwerken (Tutzing, 1994)
C. Floros: György Ligeti: jenseits von Avantgarde und Postmoderne (Vienna, 1996)

INTERVIEWS

GLIC – György Ligeti in Conversation (London, 1983)
J. Häusler: 'Interview mit György Ligeti', Melos, xxxvii (1970), 496–507; Eng. trans. in GLIC, 83–102
J. Häusler: 'Wenn man heute ein Streichquartett schreibt', NZM, Jg.131 (1970), 378–81; Eng. trans. in GLIC, 102–10
G. Ligeti: 'Fragen und Antworten von mir selbst', Melos, xxxviii (1971), 509–16; Eng. trans. in GLIC, 124–37
U. Stürzbecher: Werkstattgespräche mit Komponisten (Cologne, 1971), 32–45
M. Lichtenfeld: 'György Ligeti gibt Auskunft', Musica, xxvi (1972), 48–50
C. Gottwald: 'Gustav Mahler und die musikalische Utopie', NZM, cxxxv (1974), 7–11, 288–91, 292–5
C. Gottwald: 'Tendenzen der Neuen Musik in den USA', Melos/NZM, i (1975), 266–72
P. Várnai: Beszélgetések Ligeti Györgyel [Conversations with György Ligeti] (Budapest, 1979); Eng. trans. in GLIC, 13–82
C. Samuel: 'Entretien avec György Ligeti', in R. Topor: Le grand macabre: Entwurfe fur Buhnenbilder und Kostume zu Gyorgy Ligetis Oper (Zürich, 1980), 17–31; Eng. trans. in GLIC, 111–23
M. Lichtenfeld: 'Musik mit schlecht gebundener Krawatte', NZM, Jg.142 (1981), 471–3
D. Bouliane: 'Entretien avec György Ligeti', Sonances, iii/1 (1983), 9–27
M. Lichtenfeld: 'Gespräch mit György Ligeti', NZM, Jg.145, no.1 (1984), 8–11
S. Wiesmann: '"The Island is Full of Noise"', ÖMz, xxxix (1984), 510–14
P. Michel: 'Entretiens avec György Ligeti', György Ligeti: compositeur d'aujourd'hui (Paris, 1985), 127–82
E. Politi: 'Entretien avec Ligeti', Contrechamps, no.4 (1985), 123–7
W. Krützfeld: 'György Ligeti über Chancen und Möglichkeiten der Computer-Music', Schnittpunkte, Signale, Perspektiven: Festschrift zur Eröffnung des Neubaus der Hochschule für Musik (Hamburg, 1986), 60–61
C. Gottwald: 'Entretien avec Ligeti', InHarmoniques, no.2 (1987), 217–29
D. Bouliane: 'Geronnene Zeit und Narration: György Ligeti im Gesprach', NZM, Jg.149, no.5 (1988), 19–25
D. Bouliane: 'Stilisierte Emotion', MusikTexte, nos.28–9 (1989), 52–62
R. Dufallo: 'György Ligeti', Trackings (New York, 1989), 327–37
R. Oehlschlägel: 'Ja, ich war ein utopischer Sozialist', MusikTexte, nos.28–9 (1989), 85–102
S. Satory: 'Colloquy: an Interview with György Ligeti in Hamburg', Canadian University Music Review, x (1990–91), 101–17
D. Gojowy: 'György Ligeti über eigene Werke', Für György Ligeti: Hamburg 1988 [HJbMw, xi (1991)], 349–63
L. Duchesneau: 'Sur la musique de Claude Vivier', Circuit, ii/1–2 (1991), 7–16
T. Szitha: 'A Conversation with György Ligeti', Hungarian Music Quarterly, iii/1 (1992), 13–17
L. von Saalfeld: '"Ich glaube nicht an grosse Ideen, Lehrgebäude, Dogmen, . . ."' NZM, Jg.154, no.1 (1993), 32–6
L. Duchesneau: 'György Ligeti on his Violin Concerto', Ligeti Letter, no.2 (Hamburg, [1995]), 1–7

ARTICLES

H. Kaufmann: 'Strukturen in Strukturlosen: über György Ligetis Atmosphères', Melos, xxxi (1964), 391–8
H. Kaufmann: 'Eine moderne Totenmesse: Ligetis Requiem', Neues Forum, no.13 (1966), 59–61
H. Kaufmann: 'Ein Fall absurder Musik: Ligetis Aventures und Nouvelles Aventures', Spurlinien (Vienna, 1969), 130–58
H. Keller: 'The Contemporary Problem', Tempo, no.89 (1969), 25–8
O. Nordwall: 'György Ligeti', Tempo, no.88 (1969), 22–5
H. Kaufmann: 'Ligetis Zweites Streichquartett', Melos, xxxvii (1970), 181–6
C. Gottwald: 'Lux aeterna: ein Beitrag zur Kompositionstechnik György Ligeti', Musica, xxv (1971), 12–17
R. Stephan: 'György Ligeti: Konzert für Violoncello und Orchester: Anmerkungen zur Cluster-Komposition', Die Musik der sechziger Jahre, ed. R. Stephan (Mainz, 1972), 117–27
I. Fabian: 'Jenseits von Tonalität und Atonalität: zum 50. Geburtstag von György Ligeti', ÖMz, xxviii (1973), 233–8
K. Kropfinger: 'Ligeti und die Tradition', Zwischen Tradition und Fortschritt, ed. R. Stephan (Mainz, 1973), 131–42
O. Bernager: 'Autour du Concerto de chambre de Ligeti', Musique en jeu, no.15 (1974), 99–101
C. Miereanu: 'Une musique électronique et sa "partition"', Musique en jeu, no.15 (1974), 102–9
P. Op de Coul: 'Sprachkomposition dei Ligeti: "Lux aeterna": nebst einigen Randbemerkungen zu den Begriffen Sprach- und Lautkomposition', Über Musik und Sprache, ed. R. Stephan (Mainz, 1974), 59–69
W.-A. Schultz: 'Zwei Studien über das Cello-Konzert von Ligeti', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, vi/2 (1975), 97–104
H.-C. von Dadelsen: 'Über die musikalischen Konturen der Entfernung: Entfernung als räumliche, historische und ästhetische Perspektive in Ligetis Orchesterstück Lontano', Melos/NZM, ii (1976), 187–90
W. Klüppelholz: 'Aufhebung der Sprache: zu György Ligetis Aventures', Melos/NZM, ii (1976), 11–15
R. Febel: 'György Ligeti: Monument – Selbstportrait – Bewegung (3 Stücke für 2 Klaviere)', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, ix (1978), no.1, pp.35–51; no.2, pp.4–13
B. Reiprich: 'Transformation of Coloration and Density in György Ligeti's Lontano', PNM, xvi/2 (1977–8), 167–80
O. Nordwall: 'György Ligeti 1980', ÖMz, xxxv (1980) 67–78
C.D. Morrison: 'Stepwise Continuity as a Structural Determinant in György Ligeti's Ten Pieces for Wind Quintet', PNM, xxiv/1 (1985–6), 158–82
J.W. Bernard: 'Inaudible Structures, Audible Music: Ligeti's Problem, and his Solution', MAn, vi (1987), 207–36
R. Piencikowski: 'Les points sur les i: le Concerto de chambre de Ligeti', InHarmoniques, no.2 (1987), 211–6

D. Bouliane: 'Les Six Etudes pour piano de György Ligeti, ou L'art subtil de créer en assumant les référents culturelles', Canadian University Music Review, ix (1988–9), 36–83; repr. in Contrechamps, nos.12–13 (1990), 98–132

C. ten Hoopem: 'Statische Musik: zu Ligetis Befreiung der Musik vom Taktschlag durch präzise Notation', MusikTexte, nos.28–9 (1989), 68–72

M. Searby: 'Ligeti's Chamber Concerto: Summation or Turning Point?', Tempo, no.168 (1989), 30–34

R. Toop: 'L'illusion de la surface', Contrechamps, nos.12–13 (1990), 61–93

P.N. Wilson: 'Interkulturelle Fantasien: György Ligetis Klavieretüden Nr.7 und 8', Melos, li (1992), 63–84

M. Hicks: 'Interval and Form in Ligeti's Continuum and Coulée', PNM, xxxi/1 (1993), 172–90

J.P. Clendinning: 'The Pattern-Meccanico Compositions of György Ligeti', PNM, xxxi/1 (1993), 192–234

J.W. Bernard: 'Voice Leading as a Spatial Function in the Music of Ligeti', MAn, xiii (1994), 227–53

R. Steinitz: 'Music, Maths and Chaos', MT, cxxxvii/March (1996), 14–20; 'The Dynamics of Disorder', MT, cxxxvii/May (1996), 7–14; 'Weeping and Wailing', MT, cxxxvii/Aug (1996), 17–22

PAUL GRIFFITHS

Light, Edward (*c*1747–*c*1832). English composer and inventor. He created seven plucked, fretted chordophones compounded from lute, lyre and harp structures. In 1798 he invented the harp-guitar, and later also invented a harp-lute-guitar. Between 1810 and 1813 he invented a harp-lute, which was patented in 1818, and at some time he invented an apollo lyre, with 12 strings. In 1815 a harp-lyre was advertised in the Caledonian Mercury, and in 1816 he patented a 'British' harp-lute and a dital harp. Extant examples of his work are sometimes labelled as being made for him by A. Barry (18 Frith Street, Soho) and Wheatstone & Co. The title-page of his undated Collection of Psalms &c. indicates that he was organist of Trinity Chapel, St George's, Hanover Square, and 'Lyrist to H.R.H. The Princess [Charlotte] of Wales'. His teaching activity required his presence in London, and instrument labels and title-pages show that at various times he lived at 16 Harley Street; 34 Queen Anne Street, Portland Chapel; 3 and 8 Foley Place; 43 Portland Place (where his partner ANGELO BENEDETTO VENTURA also lived) and 38 Berners Street.

He arranged, composed and published much of his own teaching material. Most of his published collections include parts for his inventions. These are mostly binary pieces or strophic works, simple in harmony and texture and of short duration, and reflect the short-term need for simple instruments and music as an alternative to the pedal harp and its music before the piano became widely available.

For an instrument by Light see HARP-LUTE (ii), FIG.2*B*.

WORKS

all published in London

Vocal: The Ladies' Amusement, 1v, gui (1783); 6 English Songs, 1v, 1/2 vn, hpd, op.1 (*c*1800) [with 6 It. and Fr. songs]

Ensemble music: A Collection of Songs and Instrumental Pieces, harp-lute, pf (*c*1805); A Collection of Songs, arr. harp-lute, lyre, gui (*c*1810); A Collection of Psalms, Hymns, etc, arr. harp-lute, lyre (?1814)

Harp-lute solo: Preludes, Exercises and Recreations (*c*1810); National Airs, Songs, Waltzes, etc (*c*1810); Divertimentos, i (?1817)

THEORETICAL WORKS

The Art of Playing the Guitar (London, ?1785)

A First Book, or Master and Scholar's Assistant, Being a Treatise on, and Instructor for, Learning Music (London, 1794)

A Tutor, with a Tablature, for the Harp-Lute-Guitar (London, *c*1810)

New and Compleat Instructions for Playing on the Harp-Lute (London, ?1812)

A New and Complete Directory to the Art of Playing on the Patent British Lute-Harp (London, *c*1816)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Busby: Concert Room and Orchestra Anecdotes, ii (London, 1825), 275–6

L. Fryklund: Förteckning över Edward Lights musikaliska verk (Hälsingborg, 1931)

S. Marcuse: Musical Instruments: a Comprehensive Dictionary (New York, 1966, 2/1975)

A. Baines: Non-keyboard Instruments, Victoria and Albert Museum Catalogue of Musical Instruments, ii (London, 1968)

STEPHEN BONNER

Lightstone, Pauline. See DONALDA, PAULINE.

Ligne, Charles-Joseph(-François-Lamoral-Alexis), Prince de (b Brussels, 23 May 1735; d Vienna, 13 Dec 1814). Flemish writer. As the head of one of the most prominent aristocratic families in the southern Netherlands, he had a primarily military and diplomatic career in the service of Austria. His wit and his cheerful disposition won him the friendship of writers (including Voltaire, Rousseau, Casanova and Goethe) and of monarchs (Catherine II, Frederick II, Joseph II and Louis XVI). He expressed his ideas on the theatre in his Lettres à Eugénie sur les spectacles (1774, 2/1796). He himself wrote some 30 dramatic works, including masquerades performed in Brussels and comédies mêlées d'ariettes et de vaudevilles intended for society theatres (Colette et Lucas, 1779; Le désenchantement des compagnons d'Ulysse, 1796; La noce interrompue, 1796; Le sultan du Congo, ou Mangogoul, 1796). During the 1770s he was involved in the financial and artistic management of the Théâtre de la Monnaie in Brussels, which experienced a period of unprecedented brilliance at this time. His opéra comique in three acts, Céphalide, ou Les autres mariages samnites, was staged in 1777 with music by Ignaz Vitzthumb and Giovanni Cifolleli. Although Ligne does not seem to have had any musical training he was a well-informed music lover who, while retaining his admiration for Delalande and Rameau, recognized, and was a patron to, such composers as Grétry, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. A francophone Austrian and a close friend of Queen Marie-Antoinette, he played an outstanding part in Gluck's coming to Paris. He translated the libretto of Iphigénie en Aulide for the composer, and wrote him a comédie mêlée d'ariettes entitled Diane et Endymion, which Gluck was too ill to complete.

His son Charles-Antoine de Ligne (b Brussels, 25 Sept 1759; d Croix-au-Bois, Champagne, 14 Sept 1792) published three volumes entitled Recueil de 6 airs français pour le clavecin ou piano-forte (Vienna, n.d.).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Leuridant: 'Colette et Lucas': une comédie du prince de Ligne (Brussels, 1914)

M. Oulié: Le Prince de Ligne, un grand seigneur cosmopolite au XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1926)

C. van den Borren: 'Le prince de Ligne à la bibliothèque du conservatoire de Bruxelles', Annales prince de Ligne, xi (1930), 74–80

F. van den Bremt: 'Een verloren gewaand werk Céphalide ou Les autres mariages samnites van I. Vitzthumb, op tekst van prins Karel-Jozeph de Ligne', Miscellanea musicologica Floris van der Mueren (Ghent, 1950), 183–91

B. Guy: 'Le théâtre du prince de Ligne', Nouvelles annales prince de Ligne, iii (1988), 7–21

B. Guy: 'Ligne mélomane', Nouvelles annales prince de Ligne, vi (1991), 63–74
P. Mansel: Le charmeur de l'Europe: Charles-Joseph de Ligne (1735–1814) (Paris, 1992)
M. Couvreur: 'Un amateur de ballets longs et de jupons courts: le prince Charles-Joseph de Ligne', Le théâtre de la Monnaie au XVIIIe siècle, ed. M. Couvreur (Brussels, 1996), 197–239

MANUEL COUVREUR

Ligne postiche [supplémentaire] (Fr.). See LEGER LINE.

Ligniville, (Pierre) Eugène (François), Marquis of, Prince of Conca (b nr Nancy, 1730; d Florence, 10 Dec 1788). Italian composer and music organizer of French birth. From a noble family of Lorraine, he studied at the university of Pont-à-Mousson but lived most of his mature life in Italy. From 1757 he was at Mantua, going to Bologna in July 1758 for the examination to enter the Accademia Filarmonica (test piece in I-Bc). In 1761 he moved to Florence (where the House of Lorraine ruled the grand duchy of Tuscany) as a court chamberlain and postmaster general. In 1768 Grand Duke Pietro Leopoldo made him director of the court music and he was thus able to have important musical works performed, including cantatas and oratorios by Handel (according to a letter to Martini dated 30 May 1772). On 2 April 1770 he received Mozart at the grand-ducal palace; Leopold Mozart, in a letter dated 3 April, called him 'the best contrapuntist in all Italy' and reported that 'he presented Wolfgang with the most difficult fugues and themes, which Wolfgang played and worked out as easily as one eats a piece of bread'. Under the direct influence of Ligniville's Stabat mater (Florence, 1768) Mozart composed his own five-part Kyrie K89/73*k* and copied out nine of its 30 canonic movements (KA238/A17). Martini wrote to Ligniville about this work on behalf of the Accademia Filarmonica: 'Your excellency makes flourish again in this century that study that had somewhat declined, by spreading through your Stabat the most singular and artful canons, which have been practised by the most celebrated masters of centuries gone by'. Ligniville also published two canonic settings of the Salve regina (Bologna, *c*1760–62; Florence, *c*1770). A three-part madrigal by him is in the Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, and a Dixit for four voices and orchestra at the Bodleian Library, Oxford (Tenbury collection).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyFI; FétisB
E. Anderson, ed.: The Letters of Mozart and his Family (London, 1938, rev. 2/1966 by M. Carolan and A.H. King, rev. 3/1985 by S. Sadie and F. Smart)
A. Schnoebelen: Padre Martini's Collection of Letters in the Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale in Bologna: an annotated index (New York, 1979)
J.A. Rice: 'An early Handel revival in Florence', EMc, xviii (1990), 63–71

FERRUCCIO TAMMARO

Lilburn, Douglas (Gordon) (b Wanganui, 2 Nov 1915). New Zealand composer. He studied music under J.C. Bradshaw at Canterbury University College (1935–6). In 1936 Percy Grainger awarded him the Grainger Prize for his tone poem Forest, which committed him to music rather than literature, for which he had decided gifts. At the RCM, London (1937–40), his teacher Vaughan Williams made a lifelong impression, through both his personality and his music. In 1940 he returned to New Zealand to discover he had won three out of four prizes awarded as part of the centennial celebrations with his Drysdale Overture (1937), Festival Overture (1939) and Prodigal Country (1939) for baritone, chorus and orchestra. From 1941 to 1947 he worked as a freelance composer and teacher in Christchurch and was composer-in-residence at the Cambridge Summer Music Schools (1946–9, 1951). Frederick Page invited him in 1947 to become part-time tutor in the newly formed music department at Victoria University of Wellington. Appointed lecturer in 1949, associate professor in 1963 and professor with a personal chair in music in 1970, he also founded the university's electronic music studio which he directed from 1966 to 1979. He trained a generation of young composers, some of whom have won international recognition. The University of Otago awarded him an honorary doctorate in 1969 and a Festschrift was published to commemorate his retirement from Victoria University. Other honours include the CANZ (Composers Association of New Zealand) citation for services to New Zealand music (1978) and the Order of New Zealand (1983).

Lilburn is a New Zealand composer with an authentic voice, an individual utterance and the power to evoke both a real and visionary landscape. He overcame the, at times, formidable difficulties of working on an outer fringe of European musical culture and forged from unpromising material (a negligible folk inheritance, a pastiche English church and pastoral tradition) a highly articulate, unmistakable personal style that has undergone metamorphosis through three principal periods. The first, rhapsodic and astringently Romantic, absorbed influences of Sibelius and Vaughan Williams and culminated in the Second Symphony (1951). The second traversed Bartók, Stravinsky, the Second Viennese School and contemporary Americans to end in the Third Symphony (1961). The third phase was devoted to electro-acoustic music.

Lilburn's early works include the Phantasy String Quartet, which won the Cobbett Prize (1939), and the overture Aotearoa (1940), first performed by Warwick Braithwaite at a New Zealand centenary matinée concert at His Majesty's Theatre, London. (Aotearoa, 'Land of the Long White Cloud', is the Maori name for New Zealand; the title was given by Braithwaite.) This work projects a shimmering impression of a sea-spumed coast with the pure light that floods Katherine Mansfield's short stories when she writes of the sea. Lilburn's gift for the nuances and character of landscape found further telling expression in Landfall in Unknown Seas (1942), for speaker and strings, a musical framework to Allen Curnow's poem, composed as a tercentenary celebration of Tasman's discovery of New Zealand.

Sensitive to the visual world as much as to words and music, Lilburn responded to the work of a group of young poets and painters active in Christchurch after his return to New Zealand. They included the poet Denis Glover and the artists Leo Bensemann and Rita Angus. Thenceforth a number of compositions were to have their origin in poems and paintings, and he gradually transmuted early influences into his own lyrical and tersely energetic style. Quick to appreciate individual performers' abilities and to improvise where a sparse musical context provided few opportunities, he wrote effective chamber works, such as the Chaconne for piano (1946) and the Violin Sonata (1950). Diversions (1947) was written for the visit of the Boyd Neel String Orchestra. His fine song cycle Elegy (1951), to poems of Alistair Campbell, portrays the harsh, dramatic Clutha Valley of central Otago, a region with which he has a particular sympathy. The South Island back country permeates another cycle, Sings Harry (1953), in which Glover celebrated a solitary, idiosyncratic New Zealand character. Lilburn's work in the traditional media virtually came to an end in his Symphony no.3 (1961), a beautifully crafted, epigrammatic work in a single movement; the long melodic sweep has yielded to an explosive, disturbingly spiky style in a work of the utmost cohesion and unity.

Always a practical composer, Lilburn had a strong dramatic sense when writing for film and theatre, owing much in this respect to Ngaio Marsh and other producers. A sense of occasion is also to be found in his electro-acoustic works, which include music for the ballet, theatre and television, all fresh explorations of the sound sources of a uniquely Pacific world. In The Return (1965), for instance, he used Campbell's haunting poem, a merging of classical and Polynesian imagery. Behind Three Inscapes (1972) lie those same insights that throughout his career enabled him to project an essence of the New Zealand landscape.

Lilburn's forceful, generous personality made him an important advocate of composers' rights, as when, almost singlehandedly, he led a successful campaign in 1959 against the government's proposed regressive copyright legislation. Composition in New Zealand has a continuity, commitment and purpose it would signally have lacked but for him.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Forest, ov., 1936; Drysdale Ov., 1937; Festival Ov., 1939; Aotearoa, ov., 1940; Allegro, str, 1942; Song of Islands, 1946; Diversions, str, 1947; Sym. no.1, 1949; Sym. no.2, 1951; Suite, 1955; A Birthday Offering, 1956; Sym. no.3, 1961

Vocal: Prodigal Country (A. Curnow, R. Hyde, W. Whitman), chorus, orch, 1939; Landfall in Unknown Seas (Curnow), spkr, str orch, 1942; Elegy, in memoriam Noel Newson (trad., R. Herrick, W. Blake, W. Shakespeare), 2vv, str, 1945; Elegy (A. Campbell), song cycle, 1v, pf, 1951; Sings Harry (D. Glover), song cycle, 1v, pf, 1953; 3 Poems of the Sea (trad.), nar, str, 1958; 3 Songs, Bar, va, 1958

Chbr: Phantasy Str Qt, 1939; Str Trio, 1945; Str Qt, e, 1946; Sonatina, cl, pf, 1948; Sonata, vn, pf, 1950; Duo, 2 vn, 1954; Brass Qt, 1957; Wind Qnt, 1957; 17 Pieces, gui, 1970

Pf: Chaconne, 1946; Sonatina no.1, 1946; Sonata, 1949; Sonatina no.2, 1962; 9 Short Pieces, 1966

El-ac: The Return (Campbell), 1965; Poem in Time of War, 1967; Summer Voices, 1969; 3 Inscapes, 1972; Carousel, 1976; Winterset, 1976; Of Time and Nostalgia, 1977; Triptych, 1977; Soundscape with Lake and River, 1979

Material in SOUNZ (New Zealand Music Centre)

WRITINGS

A Search for Tradition (Wellington, 1984) [talk given at the first Cambridge Summer School of Music, Jan 1946]

A Search for a Language (Wellington, 1985) [open lecture at the University of Otago, March 1969]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Harris and P. Norman, eds.: Douglas Lilburn: a Festschrift for Douglas Lilburn on his Retirement from the Victoria University of Wellington (Wellington, 2/1980) [orig. pubd as Canzona, i/3 (1980)]

P. Norman: The Beginnings and Development of a New Zealand Music: the Life and Work of Douglas Lilburn (1940–65) (diss., U. of Canterbury, Christchurch, 1983)

D.R. Harvey, ed.: A Bibliography of Writings about New Zealand Music, Published to the End of 1983 (Wellington, 1985)

J.M. Thomson: Biographical Dictionary of New Zealand Composers (Wellington, 1990), 85–90

R. Tremain: 'Douglas Lilburn's Third Symphony', Music in New Zealand, no.11 (1990–91), 14–23

J.M. Thomson: Oxford History of New Zealand Music (Auckland, 1991), 222–45

L. Futschek: 'Lilburn and the Symphony', Canzona, xv/36 (1993), 5–22

C. Bourke: 'Douglas Lilburn: an Interview', Music in New Zealand, no.26 (1995–6), 30–37

J.M. THOMSON

Lilien, Ignace (b Lemberg [now L'viv], 29 May 1897; d The Hague, 10 May 1964). Dutch composer and pianist. In 1914 he was forced by the outbreak of World War I to move to the Netherlands, where he settled in The Hague. He trained as an engineer at the Technical University in Delft, thereafter devoting his life both to his work as a chemical engineer and to music. He studied the piano with Theodor Pollak, counterpoint with Heinrich Ehrlich and orchestration with E. Suk. His second opera, Great Catherine, was opposed by the Nazis at its première in Wiesbaden. However, his art seems to have culminated in his Expressionist song cycles, mostly to his own words: Fünf trunkene Lieder, Veronica (1920), Quatre chansons des mendiants (1923), Mietskaserne (1932).

From 1928 Lilien lived in the Bohemian town of Reichenberg (now Liberec), where in 1935 he completed the symphonic poem Là-bas (after Baudelaire) and his 'Modern Times' Sonata for violin and piano. Its last movement became so popular that it was published separately as the Rondo brésilien. He returned to the Netherlands in 1939 and composed 30 songs on Dutch words, including Maria Lecina.

After World War II Lilien toured in South America, and he incorporated elements of South American folk music in such works as the symphonic poem Les palmes dans le vent (1955). The school cantata A Negro Girl Goes to School, dealing with the racial problems in the USA, is noteworthy among his late compositions.

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Beatrys (3, H. Teirlinck), 1922, Antwerp, 24 March 1928; Great Catherine (comic op, 3, G.B. Shaw), Wiesbaden, 1932

Vocal-orch: Nyuk tsin (orat), 1961

Orch: 4 syms.; Là-bas (sym. poem, after Baudelaire), 1935; 5 nocturnes, pf, orch, 1937; Conc., vn, pf, orch, 1954; Les palmes dans le vent, sym. poem, 1955; Conc. da camera, fl, str, 1962, rev. 1963

Songs: 5 trunkene Lieder (Lilien), 1v, pf, 1920; Veronica (Lilien), 1920; 4 chansons des mendiants (Lilien), 1923; Mietskaserne (Lilien), 1932; Maria Lecina; many other songs, some to South Amer. texts

Inst: Sonata 'Modern Times', vn, pf, 1935; Sonatine apollinique, 10 wind insts, 1939; Voyage au printemps, wind qt, 1950–52; 24 hiéroglyphes, pf, 1956

Principal publisher: Donemus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Paap: 'De opera Beatrijs van Ignace Lilien', Mens en melodie, xi (1956), 392

W. Paap: 'Nyuk Tsin, dramatisch oratorium van Ignace Lilien', Mens en melodie, xix (1964), 124 only

W. Paap: Obituary, Mens en melodie, xix (1964), 174 only

F. van Ruth, ed.: Ignace Lilien 1897–1964: compendium (forthcoming)

FRANS VAN RUTH

Liliencron, Rochus Freiherr (Wilhelm Traugott) von (b Plön, Holstein, 8 Dec 1820; d Koblenz, 5 March 1912). German musicologist. He was educated at Plön and Lübeck before studying theology, law and philology at the universities of Kiel and Berlin, receiving the doctorate in 1846 for a dissertation entitled Über Neidharts höfische

Dorfpoesie. After a short period of Old Norse studies at Copenhagen and qualifying as a lecturer at the University of Bonn, he entered the diplomatic service during the first Schleswig-Holstein war (1848). He taught Old Norse language and literature at the University of Kiel in 1851 and philology from 1852 at Jena. From 1855 to 1858 he was at the court of the Duke Bernhard of Saxe-Meiningen, where he directed the court orchestra, supervised the library and was also privy-councillor. The newly founded historical commission of the Royal Bavarian Academy of Science commissioned him in 1858 to collect German folksongs of the Middle Ages. This work resulted in the publication of Die historischen Volkslieder der Deutschen (1865–9). Subsequently he settled in Munich as editor of the Allgemeine deutsche Biographie (with F.X. von Wegele), which was his life's work until 1907. He became prelate and prior of the monastery of the Order of St John in Schleswig in 1876 and continued his activity as a scholar and writer there before moving his family to Berlin in 1909 and Koblenz in 1911. His collection of folksongs arranged for male-voice choir, Volksliederbuch für Männerchor (1907), commissioned by Emperor Wilhelm II, was widely disseminated.

Liliencron was one of the pillars of German musicology. His importance rests mainly on his editorial, organizational and cultural-historical work. With his expertise in philology and literature and training in theology, he contributed much as editor of ADB (Leipzig, i–liii, 1875–1907). He was also president of the editorial commission of the Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst, 45 volumes of which appeared under his supervision (1901–11). He received many awards in recognition of his work, including membership of the Munich Academy of Science (1869) and an honorary doctorate from the University of Kiel (1890).

WRITINGS

with W. Stade: Lieder und Sprüche aus der letzten Zeit des Minnesangs (Weimar, 1854)
Die historischen Volkslieder der Deutschen vom 13. bis 16. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1865–9/R)
Deutsches Leben im Volkslied um 1530 (Berlin, 1885/R)
Die horazischen Metren in deutschen Kompositionen des XVI. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1887); also in VMw, iii (1887), 26–91
Liturgisch-musikalische Geschichte der evangelischen Gottesdienste von 1523 bis 1700 (Schleswig, 1893/R)
Die Aufgaben des Chorgesanges im heutigen evangelischen Gottesdienste (Oppeln, 1895)
Chorordnung für die Sonn- und Festtage des evangelischen Kirchenjarhres (Gütersloh, 1900)
Frohe Jugendtage, Lebenserinnerungen, Kindern und Enkeln erzählt (Leipzig, 1902)
ed.: Volksliederbuch für Männerchor(Leipzig, 1907)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NDB (H.J. Rieckenberg)
H. Kretzschmar, ed.: Festschrift zum 90. Geburtstage Sr. Exzellenz des Wirklichen geheimen Rates Rochus Freiherrn von Liliencron (Leipzig, 1910/R)
E. Schröder: 'Rochus Freiherr von Liliencron', Bettelheims Biographisches Jb und deutscher Nekrolog, xvii (1912), 185–91
A. Bettelheim: Leben und Wirken des Freiherrn Rochus von Liliencron (Berlin, 1917)
H.J. Moser: Das musikalische Denkmälerwesen in Deutschland (Kassel, 1952)
H.J. Moser: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik in Deutschland (Berlin, 1954)

GAYNOR G. JONES

Lili'uokalani, Queen of Hawaii [Kamaka'eha, Lydia Lili'u Loloku Walania; Kamaka'eha Pākī, Lydia; Dominis, Mrs John O.; Dominis, Lydia K.; Dominis, Lili'u K.] (b Honolulu, 2 Sept 1838; d Honolulu, 11 Nov 1917). Hawaiian composer. She sang, played the piano, organ and various plucked string instruments, and was a choir director at Kawaiaha'o Church. Lili'uokalani reigned from 1891 to 1893, but was deposed by a group of Hawaiian residents with American ties during an economic depression.

She began her musical training at the Chiefs' Children's School (1842–8), becoming a skilled sight-reader. In her autobiography she commented that she was the first Hawaiian to become proficient in writing with Western musical notation. Her first published work, in 1867, was the hymnlike He mele lāhui Hawai'i, used until 1876 as the Hawaiian national anthem. Her Nani nā pua Ko'olau ('The Flower of Ko'olau') was one of the first Hawaiian songs to have been published on the American mainland (1869). She continued publishing in the USA, where her songs became popular (in 1898 she claimed to have written hundreds of songs, about a quarter of them printed). She was familiar with both Hawaiian and western European music and made an effort to synthesize the two. A number of her songs are of the hīmeni type (secular texts with both melodic style and verse-chorus form indebted to Anglo-American hymnody), and are sophisticated in harmony and appealing in melody. Her poignant love song Aloha 'oe ('Farewell to thee', 1877/8) exemplifies these characteristics. She also wrote down and may have composed Hawaiian solo and dance chants.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveW (L.A. Wright) [incl. selective work-list with D. Gillett and further bibliography]
Lili'uokalani: Hawaii's Story by Hawaii's Queen (Boston, 1898)
Obituaries: New York Times (12 Nov 1917); Pacific Commercial Advertiser [Honolulu] (11–19 Nov 1917); Star-Bulletin [Honolulu] (12–17, 19 Nov 1917)
G.S. Kanahele, ed.: 'Aloha'oe', 'Lili'uokalani', Hawaiian Music and Musicians: an Illustrated History (Honolulu, 1979), 11–13, 227–32
A.L. Korn and B.B. Paterson: 'Liliuokalani', Notable Women of Hawaii, ed. B.B. Peterson (Honolulu, 1984)
A.K. Stillman: 'Published Hawaiian Songbooks', Notes, xiiv (1987–8), 221–39
B. Smith and D. Gillett: , eds.The Queen's Songbook, Her Majesty Queen Lili'uokalani (Honolulu, 1999)

□

Lilius [Gigli]. Family of musicians of Italian origin, active in Poland. Their family relationships with one another are mostly unknown.

(1) Wincenty [Vincentius] Lilius [Gigli, Vincenzo] (b Rome; d ?Warsaw, *c*1640). Composer. In the 1590s he was active at the archducal court at Graz, then in King Zygmunt III's chapel at Kraków and Warsaw from about 1600 until his death. He edited a collection of polychoral motets, Melodiae sacrae (Kraków, 1604[2]), containing works for five to eight and 12 voices by members of the royal chapel, among them a 12-part motet of his own,Congratulamini mihi omnes.

(2) Szymon [Simon] Lilius [Liliusz, Lilio, Lelia] (d ?Warsaw, after 1652). Organist and organ builder. He was connected with the court and active in Warsaw before 1622, when he settled at nearby Kazimierz Dolny. He built, among others, the famous organ in this town.

(3) Franciszek [Franciscus] Lilius (d ?Gromnik, nr Tarnów, Aug or Sept 1657). Composer, son of (1) Wincenty Lilius. He was for a time active as a musician and composer in King Zygmunt III's chapel in Warsaw.

In 1625 he was in Rome as a pupil of Frescobaldi, and from 1630 to 1657 he was director of music at Kraków Cathedral. About 1636 he took holy orders and in later years received a number of benefices. He left Kraków in 1655, when during the war with Sweden the enemy threatened the city: he went to Tarnów or, more probably, to Gromnik and died in one of these places. For 25 years he was the leading musician in Kraków. His output consists mainly of few-voiced concertatos and polychoral works for eight to 20 voices; most are known only from inventories. He also composed a number of a cappella works in the prima pratica style that were chiefly for male voices and thus intended for the Cappella Rorantistarum at Kraków Cathedral. The works in concerto style were very popular and, although not printed, were also performed in Wrocław, Gdańsk and as far afield as Lüneburg. All these works follow the style of the Roman school, but the polychoral music shows features characteristic of the Venetian school, for instance the occasional use of contrasted sections, passages for solo voice or a few voices and the participation of instruments.

WORKS

Thematic Catalogue: Franciszek Lilius Missa brevissima, ZHMP, xxxi (1989), xxv–lii

4 songs, 4vv, in Nabożne piésni [Religious songs], ed. B. Derej (Kraków, 1645/R)

14 masses (8 inc.), PL-Kk, GD, incl. Missa brevissima, ed. in ZHMP, xxxi (1989)

10 motets: Confitebor tibi, Domine, 4vv, Kk; Dextera Domini, formerly UA-Kan, extant only in pre-war transcr. by A. Chybiński: Domine rex Deus, 5vv, PL-Kk; Exaltabit cor meum, 3vv, bc, D-Bsb; Haec dies, 2vv, bc, formerly PL-GD, ed. Z.M. Szweykowski, Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie (Kraków, 1964); Jubilate Deo, 5vv, 2 vn, va, 2 trbn, bn, bc, formerly UA-Kan, ed. in WDMP, xl (2/1963); Laudate Dominum, 2vv, bc, D-Bsb, ed. in A. and Z. Szweykowski (1997) appx; Muteta super Nicolai Solemnia, 6vv, 3 vn, 3 trbn, bc, Bsb; Recordare Domine, 4vv, PL-Kk; Tua Jesu dilectio, 2vv, bc, formerly GD, ed. in WDMP, lvi (1965)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Chybiński: 'Muzycy włoscy w krakowskich kapelach katedralnych (1619–1657)' [Italian musicians at Kraków Cathedral (1619–57)], Przegląd muzyczny, iii/2–5, 7–8 (1927), [incl. list of works]

Z.M. Szweykowski: 'Franciszek Lilius i jego twórczość na tle wczesnego baroku w Polsce' [Franciszek Lilius and his music in the context of the early Baroque period in Poland], Muzyka, v/1 (1960), 78–94; vii/4 (1962), 51–67

T. Jasiński: 'De conceptione BVM Franciszka Liliusa: do problemów notacji i rytmiki wielogłosowości XVII wieku' [Franciszek Lilius's De conceptione BVM: problems of notation and rhythm in 17th-century polyphony], Roczniki teologiczno-kanoniczne, xxxiv (1987), 194–206

D. Popinignis: 'Dwie niekompletne msze Franciszka Liliusa zachowane w bibliotece gdańskiej PAN' [Two incomplete masses by Franciszek Lilius in the PAN library at Gdańsk],Muzyka, xxxvii/1 (1992), 59–66

A. and Z. Szweykowski: Włosi w kapeli królewskiej polskich Wazów [Italians in the royal chapel of the Polish Vasa Kings] (Kraków, 1997)

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI

Liljefors, Ingemar (Kristian) (b Göteborg, 13 Dec 1906; d Stockholm, 14 Oct 1981). Swedish composer and pianist, son of Ruben Liljefors. He studied at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music (1923–7, 1929–31) and in Munich (1927–9); in 1933 he passed the organists' examination. He taught the piano (1938–43) and then harmony at the Stockholm Musikhögskolan. In 1933 he participated in the founding of the Fylkingen concert society, which he chaired until 1946; from 1947 to 1963 he was chairman of the Society of Swedish Composers. He was assistant music critic of the Stockholms-tidningen (1941–54). His early compositions combined Swedish folk elements with Stravinskian rhythm; later Liljefors made moderate use of new techniques in music of meditative and lyrical expressiveness.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Suite, op.2, 1935; Rhapsody, op.5, pf, orch, 1936; Berget, op.6, tone poem, 1937; Pf Conc., op.11, 1940; Sym., op.15, 1943; Lyric Suite, op.18, small orch, 1942; 2 divertimentos, opp.21, 23, str, 1945, 1946; Pf Concertino, op.22, 1949; Vn Conc., 1956–7; Sinfonietta, op.30, 1961; 2 Intermezzos, str, 1965; Divertimento no.3, 1968

Inst: 2 pf trios, op.12, 1940, op.29, n.d.; Sonatine, C, pf, 1954; Sonatine, D, vn, pf, 1954; Trio, vn, va, pf, 1961; Str Qt, 1963; Sonatin no.2, pf, 1964; Sonatin no.3, 1965; Sonatin, vn, 1968

Vocal: En tijdh-spegel, chorus, orch, 1959; Till musiken (cant., B. Bergman), S, SATB, fl, gui, 2 vn, vc, db ad lib, 1965; songs

Principal publisher: Föreningen Svenska Tonsättare

WRITINGS

Harmonilärans grunder, med ackordanalys enligt funktionsteorin (Stockholm, 1937)

Harmonisk analys enligt funktionsteorin (Stockholm, 1951)

Romantisk harmonik ur pedagogisk synvinkel (Stockholm, 1967)

Harmonik och sats: Schubert till Ravel (Stockholm, 1976)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Å. Brandel: 'Kring trettitalisterna' [On the musicians of the 1930s], Musikrevy, xiv (1959), 267–71

ROLF HAGLUND

Liljefors, Ruben (Mattias) (b Uppsala, 30 Sept 1871; d Uppsala, 4 March 1936). Swedish composer and conductor. In the years 1895–6 and 1897–9 he studied composition with Jadassohn in Leipzig and with Draeseke and Reger in Dresden, and conducting with Kutzschbach. He was conductor of the Göteborgs Filharmoniska Sällskap (1902–11) and was then active principally in Gävle as a music teacher at the graduate school and conductor of the Gävleborgs Orkesterförening (1912–31). He was the editor of Upländsk folkmusik (Stockholm, 1929). His works reveal him to be a technically skilled composer rooted in the Scandinavian tradition (particularly Sjögren and Grieg) and in certain respects also influenced by Brahms and Reger; his choral works and solo songs were especially admired.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pf Conc., 1899; Sym., E♭, 1906; Concert Ov., 1908; Romans, vn, orch

Vocal: Blomsterfursten [The Flower King], chorus, orch, 1907; Bohuslän, cant., chorus, orch, 1908; pieces for male chorus, songs

Inst: Pf Sonata, f (1938); Vn Sonata, e

Principal publishers: Gehrman, Raabe & Plothow

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Håkanson: 'Ruben Liljefors', Ur nutidens musikliv, iii (1922), 65

AXEL HELMER

Lill, John (Richard) (b London, 17 March 1944). English pianist. He studied at the RCM (1955–64) and privately with Kempff at Positano. A respectable career, with débuts at the Royal Festival Hall (1963, in Beethoven's 'Emperor' Concerto) and at Carnegie Hall, New York, in 1969, was given considerable impetus after he was joint winner of the 1970 Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow; since then he has appeared with orchestras and in recital throughout the world, and on television. His commanding physical power and technique in the Chopin, Liszt, Rachmaninoff and Prokofiev works that form part of his large repertory are not always complemented by an equivalent care for atmosphere and tone-colour; however, particularly in Beethoven, the vigour and large scale of his playing are often greatly impressive. His recordings include the complete concertos and sonatas of Beethoven, the concertos of Brahms and the complete sonatas of Prokofiev. He is a frequent jury member for national and international competitions, and was made an OBE in 1978.

MAX LOPPERT/R

Lille. Town in northern France, formerly the capital of Flanders. The foundation charter of the collegiate church of St Pierre (1066) provided for the maintenance of a maître de chapelle and a school for choirboys. Several 13th-century manuscripts record the activities of the trouvères of Lille; they include songs by Pierre li Borgnes, Maroie de Dregnau, Jehan Fremaus and Li Tresoriers de Lille. In 1306 an organ was built in St Pierre. During the famous 'Feast of the Pheasant' in 1454, on the occasion of a projected crusade against the Turks, motets and songs by Du Fay and Binchois were performed. Four songs and a Missa 'O admirabilis' have preserved the names of two 15th-century composers: Francus de Insula (i.e. from Lille) and Simon de Insula. In the 16th century the choir school attached to the collegiate church was evidently held in high repute, for Emperor Charles V asked the chapter to send him choirboys for his own chapel (1543).

In 1667, Lille was conquered by Louis XIV, and operas and ballets began to be performed in the town. The composer Pascal Collasse was granted a privilege in 1690 to have an opera house built, but in 1696 it was burnt down after a performance of Charpentier's Médée. A new house was opened two years later; in a single year (1720) more than ten operas were performed (by Lully, Collasse, Charpentier, Destouches, Campra etc). At this time the company comprised six actors, four actresses, 12 singers and dancers of both sexes and an orchestra of 13 (the composer Mondonville was first violinist between 1734 and 1737). Grétry, staying in Lille in 1783, stated that the orchestra could compare favourably with that of the Théâtre Italien in Paris. In the same period several musical societies flourished: the Concerts d'Amateurs, Concerts de M.M. les Abonnés, Concerts Spirituels, etc. In 1787, the Lille-born architect Lequeux built a new opera house, which burnt down in 1903. In 1800 the Société du Concert (founded 1798) gave the first performance in France of Haydn's Creation. The following year a singing school was founded for 12 boys and 12 girls; in 1816 it became a music school, a branch of the Paris Conservatoire. The Lille public first heard Berlioz's Requiem in 1838, when Habeneck conducted a performance of the Lacrymosa. On 14 June 1846, under the direction of Berlioz, the orchestras of Lille, Douai and Valenciennes (150 performers) gave his Chant des chemins de fer, a cantata composed on the occasion of the inauguration of the Northern Railways. Composers born in Lille in the 19th century include Lalo, Emile Mathieu and Grovlez.

The best-known French operas of the later 19th century were performed in Lille soon after their Paris premières: Gounod's Faust (1860), Bizet's Carmen (1878) and Lalo's Le roi d'Ys (1889). In the 1880s Wagner extracts were played by the Société des Concerts Populaires; later, complete performances of Lohengrin (1892), Die fliegende Holländer (1893) and Tannhäuser (1897) were given. Among operatic premières in Lille have been Henri Büsser's Vénus d'Ille (1964), Eugène Bozza's La duchesse de Langeais (1967) and Tony Aubin's Goya (1974). In 1981 Opéra du Nord was formed, with its Grand Opéra based in Lille, but five years later the company closed down for financial reasons although the Atelier Lyrique at Tourcoing, founded by J.C. Malgloire, remained active.

The church of St Pierre was destroyed during the Revolution; the new cathedral, Notre Dame de la Treille, has a plainchant school. Organ recitals are given in the churches of St Maurice, St Etienne (a Romantic organ, enlarged by Cavaillé-Coll in 1887 and restored in 1995) and Sts Pierre et Paul (an organ built by Muller in 1958). The Théâtre de l'Opéra (opened 1919; cap. 1300) is used for recitals, concerts and opera, and the Théâtre Sébastopol (*c*1905; cap. 1250) for operetta and variety shows. The Orchestre National de Lille, founded by Jean-Claude Casadesus in 1976, has its own hall, the Auditorium du Nouveau Siècle (cap. 1940). Several chamber ensembles have originated at the Conservatoire National de Région, one of the most important provincial academies of music. A music and dance festival has taken place every autumn since 1971.

GEORGES DOTTIN

Lillo, Giuseppe (b Galatina, Lecce, 26 Feb 1814; d Naples, 4 Feb 1863). Italian composer. He was first taught by his father, the conductor Giosuè Lillo; he completed his studies at the Naples Conservatory, where his teachers included Furno (harmony and counterpoint), Francesco Lanza (piano) and Zingarelli (composition). He made a successful début with a mass for four voices and orchestra. In 1834 his first opera, La moglie per 24 ore, ossia L'ammalato di buona salute, was also a success. He then composed mainly for the theatre, winning much popularity with the Naples public; this first period culminated with L'osteria di Andujar (1840), his most celebrated work. Various failures followed, and he began teaching the piano. From about 1840 he was joint music director at the S Carlo with Giacomo Cordella. During a visit to Paris in 1847–8 he received support from Spontini. He held posts at the Naples Conservatory, including professor of harmony from 1859.

Lillo's theatrical works show him to be a product of Neapolitan opera buffa in the 1800s and a faithful follower of Rossini, with a rich melodic vein in which the vocal virtuosity is always subjected to expressive aims; his piano music, which seems outdated, is of less significance.

WORKS

OPERAS

first performed in Naples unless otherwise stated

oss – opera semiseria

La moglie per 24 ore, ossia L'ammalato di buona salute (ob, 2, A. Passaro), Real Collegio di Musica, carn. 1834
Il gioiello (oss, 2, L. Tarantini), Nuovo, aut. 1835
Odda di Bernaver (os, 2, G.E. Bidera), S Carlo, 28 Feb 1837
Rosmunda in Ravenna (tragedia lirica, 2, L.A. Paladini), Venice, Fenice, 26 Dec 1837
Alisa di Rieux (oss, 3, G. Rossi), Rome, Argentina, spr. 1838
La modista (oss, 2), Florence, Pergola, 9 May 1839
Il conte di Chalais (os, 2, S. Cammarano after Lockroy), S Carlo, Oct 1839
Le disgrazie di un bel giovane, ossia Il zio e il nipote (opera giocosa, 2, Tarantini), Florence, Pergola, spr. 1840
Le nozze campestri (dramma per musica, 1, G. Schmidt), Naples, S Carlo, 30 May 1840, I-Mc, collab. G. Cordella, G. Puzone and S. Sarmiento
L'osteria di Andujar (opera comica, 3, Tarantini), Fondo, 30 Sept 1840

Cristina di Svezia (tragedia lirica, 3, Cammarano), S Carlo, 21 Jan 1841
Lara (tragedia lirica, 2, Tarantini), S Carlo, carn. 1842
Il cavaliere di S Giorgio, ossia Il mulatto (oss, 2, J. Ferretti), Turin, Carignano, aut. 1846
Caterina Howard (opera tragica, 4, G. Giachetti), S Carlo, 26 Sept 1849
La Delfina (oss, 2, M. d'Arienzo), Nuovo, March 1850
La gioventù di Shakespeare, ossia Il sogno d'una notte estiva (commedia lirica, 3, G.S. Giannini), Nuovo, 29 Dec 1851
Ser Babbeo (oss, 3, L.E. Bardare), Nuovo, 8 May 1853
Il figlio della schiava (dramma lirico, 3, Giannini), Fondo, 9 July 1853

OTHER WORKS

Sacred choral works, incl. Mass, 4vv, orch (1834); syms., other orch works; Str Qt; Qt, pf, fl, vn, vc; Pf Trio; pf solo works, incl. variation sets on opera themes

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEUMM (F. Bussi); ES (G. Saponaro); FétisB; FlorimoN; RicordiE; SchmidlD
L.A. Villanis: L'arte del pianoforte in Italia da Clementi a Sgambati (Turin, 1907)
S. Martinotti: Ottocento strumentale italiano (Bologna, 1972)

FRANCESCO BUSSI

Lilly [Lillie], John (bap. Croydon, Cambs., 28 Jan 1612; d London, 25 Oct 1678). English theorbo and division viol player, music copyist and composer. Probably the son of Henry Lilly, vicar of Croydon, his early career was centred in Cambridge. He is perhaps the 'Mr Lilly' who assisted in the performance of William Johnson's 'Valetudinarium' at Queens' College on 6 February 1638. In 1645 and 1647 his two daughters were baptized at St Michael's in the city. His viol playing is praised in a poem 'To Mr Lilly, Musick-Master in Cambridge' in Nicholas Hookes's collection Amanda (1653). At the Restoration he joined the King's Private Musick as a theorbo player, and remained active in court service until his death. He was patronized by the North family and taught Roger North the theorbo. He was also a friend of the composer John Jenkins. He was active in the Westminster Corporation of Music from at least 1664, but lived in Baldwins Gardens, Holborn. 25 solos for lyra viol by Lilly are known, some published by John Playford (RISM 1651[6], 1652[7], 1661[4], 1669[6]), the others in manuscript (A-ETgoëss, GB-Cu, Lbl, Mp and Ob). Numerous manuscripts in his hand have been identified, among them sets of parts written for Christopher, 1st Baron Hatton, probably copied in the 1630s, and, in his later years, others for Edward Lowe, professor of music at Oxford and organist of the Chapel Royal.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, i, v, viii; BDECM; DoddI
P.J. Willetts: 'John Lilly, Musician and Music Copyist', Bodleian Library Record, vii/6 (1967), 307–11
D. Pinto: 'The Music of the Hattons', RMARC, no.23 (1990), 79–108
P.J. Willetts: 'John Lilly: a Redating', Chelys, xxi (1992), 27–38
J.P. Wainwright: 'The Christ Church Viol-Consort Manuscripts Reconsidered', John Jenkins and his Time: Studies in English Consort Music, ed. A. Ashbee and P. Holman (Oxford, 1996), 189–241
J.P. Wainwright: Musical Patronage in Seventeenth-Century England: Christopher, First Baron Hatton (1605–1670) (Aldershot, 1997)

ANDREW ASHBEE

Lilt. Originally a verb meaning to sing in a low clear voice and usually implying sweetness of tone and a light cheerful manner, or to sing a song without words. Scottish literary sources suggest that 'lilting' was a mostly feminine activity; in The Flowers of the Forest Scott wrote: 'I've heard them lilting at the ewes milking, Lasses a-lilting before dawn of day'; Robert Fergusson, in Poems, wrote: 'Nae mair . . . shepherds . . . wi' blytheness skip, Or lasses lilt and sing'. James Hogg, in The Jacobite Relics of Scotland, seemed to associate lilting with sadness ('A lilt o' dool and sorrow') though he may simply have been using the term in another sense, as a noun, to mean any wordless melody. This may be the sense in which the term is used in the Skene MS (GB-En Adv.5.2.15, *c*1630) where six short pieces for lute are labelled 'lilts'.

The term is equally applicable to the singing of dance melodies, and in Ireland lilting competitions frequently form part of Fleadh Cheoil (music festival) programmes, in which competitors sing dance tunes in as spirited and interesting a manner as possible, using vocables only. The Scottish equivalent, however, is termed 'diddling'.

15th- and 16th-century usage hinted at pastoral associations. Richard de Holand's Buke of the Howlat (1450) includes the 'lilt-pipe' in a list of musical instruments, perhaps suggesting a shepherd's pipe such as the stock-and-horn, cognate with the Dutch lullepijp, a bagpipe or shepherd's pipe. A. Hume (Hymns, 1594) writes more specifically in this respect: 'The beastes . . . which soberly they hameward drive, With pipe and lilting horn'.

In the Shetland Islands the term lilt is used as a noun to denote an important and desirable affective quality in the performance of dance tunes on the fiddle or other melody instrument. To perform a tune with a good lilt is to 'make one feel like dancing' by imparting a singing yet light and dancing rhythmic flow to a melody, a suitable degree of variation in the infra-rhythmic structure ('notes inégales') of the phrases being all important (see P. Cooke: The Fiddle Tradition of the Shetland Isles, Cambridge, 1986, p.98).

FRANCIS COLLINSON/PETER COOKE

Lim, Liza (b Perth, 30 Aug 1966). Australian composer. Despite her relative youth, Lim has one of the highest European profiles of any Australian composer. Her works have been given first performances by ensembles such as the Arditti Quartet, Ensemble Modern and Ensemble Intercontemporain. Born to Chinese parents, she received her early schooling mainly in Brunei, but has lived in Australia since 1978, studying at the Victorian College of the Arts and Melbourne University, and later in Amsterdam with Ton de Leeuw. She has received several Australian Council fellowships, as well as an inaugural Young Australian Creative Fellowship in 1996.

Her earliest works, many of which are now withdrawn, are clearly influenced by Ferneyhough's music of the late 1960s (e.g. his Sonatas for string quartet): rhythmically intricate and carefully crafted, they are essentially miniaturist, to the point of risking short-windedness. A confident grasp of broader formal design becomes evident in her first major work, Garden of Earthly Desire, and is reinforced in the ambitious chamber opera The Oresteia. This work, which Lim describes as a sequence of 'shamanistic possessions', rather than a conventional drama, provides the first major evidence of a lasting fascination with ritual, as well as a taste for abrasive sonorities, both vocal (rasping throat sounds) and instrumental (e.g. overblowing, multiphonics and high bow pressure). Coupled with a constant use of glissandos and microtonal ornamentation, a kind of theatre close to Xenakis is created, though there is also some affinity with Partch.

In the mid-1990s, two new preoccupations emerged. One is a fascination with ancient non-Western languages and meditative practices, as in the impressive choral Sri Vidya; and with non-Western instruments, notably the koto, the tablature of which she learned before writing Burning House. However, there is no sense of a return to Lim's Asian origins: the music remains emphatically Western, and the treatment of the instrument is by no means traditional. The other is her involvement in a series of site-specific multimedia works, the music of which is not, for the most part, notated. One example is Bar-do'i-thos-grol, which comprises seven two-hour performances spread over seven days.

WORKS

Op: The Oresteia (memory theatre, Lim, B. Kosky, Aeschylus, Sappho, T. Harrison), 1991–3

Inst: Pompes funèbres, str qt, 1988; Garden of Earthly Desire, fl + pic, ob, cl, mand, gui, hp, vn, vc, db, perc, 1988–9; Amulet, va, 1992; Diabolical Birds, pic, b cl, pf, vib, vn, vc, 1992; Hell, str qt, 1992; Koto, fl + pic, ob d'amore, flugelhorn, va, koto, 2 vc, perc, 1993; Cathedral, orch, 1994; Street of Crocodiles, fl, ob, a sax, a trbn, cimb + cymbal, str trio, str qt, 1995; Gothic, 8 str, 1995–6; The Alchemical Wedding, large chbr orch, 1996; INGUZ (fertility), cl, vc, 1996; The Heart's Ear, fl, cl, str qt, 1997; PERTH (initiation), fl, perc, 1997

Vocal: Voodoo Child (Sappho), S, pic, cl, trbn, perc, pf, vn, vc, 1989; Li Shang Yin (Li Shang Yin), S, chbr orch, 1993; Sri Vidya: Utterances of Adoration (Sanskrit), 48vv, orch, 1994–5; Burning House (Izumi Shikibu), 1v, koto (1 pfmr), 1995

Installations: Afterward: From a Tower (a translation), 4vv, 1994; Bar-do'i-thos-grol (Tibetan Book of the Dead), 3vv, 3 players, 1994–5; The Cauldron: Fusion of the 5 Elements, 6vv + insts, 1996

Principal publisher: Ricordi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Lim with B. Kosky and S. Lascica: 'The Oresteia', Sounds Australian, no.38 (1993), 19–23

A. Ford: 'No beginning and no end . . .', Composer to Composer (Sydney, 1993), 158–62

J. Jenkins and R. Linz: 'The Oresteia; Bar-do'i-thos-grol (Tibetan Book of the Dead)', Arias: Recent Australian Music Theatre (Melbourne, 1997), 135–7

C. Milliken: 'Liza Lim', MusikTexte, no.71 (1997), 39–40

RICHARD TOOP

Lima. Capital of Peru. Called 'City of the Kings', it was founded in 1535 by Francisco Pizarro, who laid the cornerstone of the cathedral. By 1540 he had employed at least six professional lay musicians and the same number of dancing-masters, who organized the dances for religious and secular celebrations. While Gonzalo Pizarro was in power (1546–8, during the civil wars) he founded a capilla de músicos whose members were considered excellent ('lindos oficiales') by the chronicler Garcilaso.

In Peru as in Mexico, the Amerindians took immediately to the music of the friars sent to evangelize them. Pedro de la Gasca (1492–1565), Peru's first lawgiver, summoned representatives of all three mendicant orders to Lima in 1549 and told them to learn Quechua, set up schools and teach the Amerindians such 'good things' as how to sing according to the rules of art and how to sol-fa ('dezir el sol, fa, mi, re'). A ruling of the Third Lima Council (1583) required systematic music instruction at every Amerindian mission. By 1622 Bernabé Cobo could cite the music of Santiago del Cercado, a settlement (founded 1571) of converted Amerindians annexed to the city and administered by the Jesuits, as equal to that heard in most Spanish cathedrals. In 1622 the parish church owned two organs, four sets of shawms, two trumpets, viols of various sizes and other instruments for feast-day use. Throughout the 17th century this orchestra was one of the most sought after in the city. Some of the city's most important instrumentalists were Amerindian musicians trained by the Jesuits. There were Amerindian instrument makers (violeros) and dancing-masters living outside the Cercado in 1613.

The first polyphony printed in the New World was a Quechua four-part chanzoneta in sprightly march time, Hanacpachap cussicuinin (Juan Pérez Bocanegra, Ritual formulario, Lima, 1631, pp.708–9; copies in the Biblioteca Nacional de Perú and US-Wc). The earliest extant New World opera was mounted in the vice-regal palace at Lima (19 October 1701): Tomás de Torrejón y Velasco's setting of Pedro Calderón de la Barca's La púrpura de la rosa.

Lima Cathedral, the seat of an archbishop from 1549, had a distinguished succession of maestros de capilla during the viceregal epoch (to 1821). Domingo Álvarez signed the first Lima Council constitutions (1552). The succentor Cristóbal de Molina (fl 1534–64), teacher of Pizarro's mestizo daughter Francisca, arrived in Peru already 'known in Italy and France'. The cathedral organist and maestro de capilla during the period 1612–14, Estacio de la Serna, had been royal chapel organist at Lisbon; he and his successors throughout the 17th and 18th centuries left music which is generally of excellent technical quality. As at Mexico City, the Lima maestro de capilla ran a cathedral choir school, directed singers and instrumentalists, maintained a choral library and composed new music for the chief annual festivals. There was also continuous musical activity at the vice-regal court, documented from the mid-16th century. Notable among the viceroys were the Conde de Lemos (1667–72), in whose retinue were Tomás de Torrejón y Velasco and Lucas Ruiz de Ribayaz, and the Marqués de Castell dos Rius (1707–10), with Roque Ceruti and a group of French instrumentalists in his service. The monasteries of nuns, in particular during the 17th century the Encarnación and Concepción monasteries, offered music of a high standard.

Lima exceeded even Mexico City in its lavish support of drama. The plays presented by contracted troupes from 1613, especially the Calderonian autos sacramentales (from 1670 to the turn of the century), nearly always included solo songs, vocal ensembles, instrumental music and accompanied dances. With Ceruti and Bartolomé Mazza (*c*1725–99) the Lima lyric stage began to be dominated by emigrant Italian composers; Mazza composed nearly all the extant Lima stage music for two decades. His company was famous and notorious for its singing actresses. The first documented public opera performance in Lima, called 'coliseo de comedias', was Las variedades de Proteo in 1762.

In the popular music of the colonial period diverse musical traditions co-existed, of Spanish, indigenous and African origin. African drum dances were noted by the authorities from 1549. Gathered in fraternities with Catholic names, the various African ethnic groups (naciones) organized dances for the procession in the week after Corpus Christi. By 1748 Africans brought to Lima from the coasts of Guinea and Senegal and from the Congo numbered some 10,000, and in 1791 their music formed the subject of an article in Mercurio Peruano (xlviii–xlix). Dances created in Lima spread by trading routes through what are now Peru, Bolivia, Chile and Argentina, notably the zamacueca (also called mozamala, cueca, zamba, chilena and marinera). The tradition of Limeña popular music has continued in the 20th century with the various kinds of music known as musica criolla.

The Peruvian national anthem, composed by the Lima native José Bernardo Alcedo, was first performed in the Lima Teatro on 24 September 1821. Alcedo, Manuel de la Cruz Panizo (1839–89) and several other contemporary local composers were of partly African descent. Among Peruvian composers active in Lima in the early republican period Pedro Abril Tirado (1780–1856) stands out. However, concert and operatic life continued to be controlled mainly by European emigrants including Francesco Paolo Francia (1834–1904), Anton Neumane [Neumann] (1818–71), Carlo Enrico Pasta (1817–98), Claudio Rebagliatti (1833–1909) and his brother Reynaldo. Claudio directed the most important of the numerous philharmonic societies established in the 19th century; active from 1866 to 1870, it presented his 28 de julio en Lima (1868), a programmatic work incorporating typical airs of the city. The present Sociedad Filarmónica, founded in 1907, provides annual concert seasons and maintains various orchestras and chamber groups.

Until 1850 when the Teatro Variedades was opened, a monopoly on theatre had been imposed since colonial times by the Hospital de S Andrés, which owned the old coliseum; then known as the Teatro Principal, it was rebuilt several times on the same site. A new building was opened in 1874 with Il trovatore, and destroyed by fire in 1883. The new Teatro Principal seating 1400 was inaugurated in 1889 with the zarzuela El hermano Baltasar; it was replaced by the Teatro Municipal, opened in 1909 (from 1929 called Teatro Segura). In 1878 the Teatro Politeama opened with Il trovatore and in 1886 the Teatro Olimpico (later called Teatro Forero, now the Municipal) with the operetta La mascotte. The first native of Lima to compose an opera on a national subject was José María Valle Riestra (1859–1925), whose Ollanta was repeated 12 times after its première at the Principal in 1900.

The Orquesta Sinfónica Nacional gave its first concert in 1938 with 70 members in the Teatro Municipal under Theo Buchwald. He was succeeded by Hans-Günther Mommer (1960–63), Armando Sánchez Málaga (1963–4), Luis Herrara de la Fuente (1964–6), José Belaúnde Moreyra (1966–9), Carmen Moral, Leopoldo la Rosa Urbani (1970–74), Luis A. Meza and José Carlos Santos. Two orchestras have been called Orquesta Filarmónica de Lima, one active from 1980 to 1984 and another conducted from 1994 by Miguel Hart-Bedoya. In 1961 the Coro Nacional was founded.

The Academia Nacional de Música Alzedo, founded in 1929, was renamed the Conservatorio Nacional de Música in 1946 and the Escuela Nacional de Música in 1972. In 1994 it restored the name Conservatorio Nacional de Música and became an autonomous institution. Its directors have included the composers Carlos Sánchez Málaga, José Malsio, Enrique Iturriaga, Celso Garrido-Lecca and Edgar Valcárcel. The director in 1995 was Nelly Suares de Velit.

The chief collection of pre-Hispanic Peruvian musical instruments is housed at the Museo de Antropología y Arqueología. The largest collection of colonial music manuscripts belongs to the Archivo Histórico Arzobispal. Since 1985 the Pontifícia Universidad Católica has housed the Archivio de Música Tradicional Andina which collects audiovisual material in music and dance. The Biblioteca Nacional and the conservatory have important collections of Peruvian music. S Marcos University, founded in 1551, is the oldest on the continent.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

StevensonRB
O. Mayer-Serra: Música y músicos de Latinoamérica (Mexico City, 1947), 3, 710–11, 765–72
R. Barbacci: 'Apuntes para un diccionario biográfico musical peruano', Fénix, no.6 (1949), 414–510
C. Vega: El origen de las danzas folklóricas (Buenos Aires, 1956)
C. Raygada: 'Guía musical del Perú', Fénix, no.12 (1956–7), 3–77; no.13 (1963), 1–82; no.14 (1964), 3–95
R. Stevenson: The Music of Peru: Aboriginal and Viceroyal Epochs (Washington DC, 1960)
A. Sas: 'La vida musical en la Catedral de Lima durante la colonia', RMC, nos.81–2 (1962), 8–53
A. Sas: La música en la Catedral de Lima durante el Virreinato (Lima, 1971–2)
R. Stevenson: Foundations of New World Opera, with a Transcription of the Earliest Extant American Opera, 1701 (Lima, 1973)
E. Pinilla: Informe sobre la música en el Perú (Lima, 1981)
J.A. Lorens: Música popular en Lima: criollos y andinos (Lima, 1982)
J.C. Estenssoro: 'Música y comportamiento festivo de la población negra en Lima colonial', Cuadernos hispanoamericanos, nos.451–2 (1988), 161–8
J.C. Estenssoro: Música y sociedad coloniales: Lima 1680–1830 (Lima, 1989)
J.C. Estenssoro: Música, discurso y poder en el régimen colonial (thesis, U. Católica del Perú, 1990)

ROBERT STEVENSON, J. CARLOS ESTENSSORO

Lima, Braz Francisco de [Bras Francisco de, Biaggio Francesco] (b Lisbon, ?3 May 1752; d Lisbon, 25 Sept 1813). Portuguese composer. On 15 January 1761 he entered the Conservatorio di S Onofrio a Capuana at Naples, along with his elder brother Jerónimo Francisco de Lima. He then distinguished himself in his studies at the Seminário da Patriarcal in Lisbon, and on 19 March 1785 his oratorio Il trionfo di Davidde was performed at the royal palace at Ajuda (score in P-La). From 1785 he also composed sacred works, some of which are in the Lisbon Cathedral archives. He eventually abandoned music in favour of a business career.

For bibliography see LIMA, JERÓNIMO FRANCISCO DE.

ROBERT STEVENSON

Lima, Cândido de (Oliveira) (b Vila de Punhe, nr Viana do Castelo, 22 Aug 1939). Portuguese composer. He studied music at the conservatories of Braga, Lisbon (piano, 1967) and Oporto (composition, 1970), and philosophy in Braga (1968–73). He attended summer courses in Darmstadt (1970–72) and international music courses in various European cities. He studied at the University of Paris, obtaining the master's degree (1976), the Diploma of Further Studies (1978) and a doctorate (1983), the last two under the supervision of Xenakis. He also studied with Xenakis at the Institute of Aesthetics and Science of the Arts of the Sorbonne, took a doctorate in aesthetics at the Sorbonne and periodically attended the IRCAM and CEMAMu (Paris).

In 1970 he was appointed professor of composition at Oporto University, a position he held until 1986, when he became professor of composition and musical aesthetics at the Escola Superior de Música in Oporto. He has had an important role in the development of courses, seminars, conferences and radio and television production, and as a critic and essayist. In 1973 he founded the Grupo Música Nova, which he directs and in which he plays the piano. With them he has given many premières of works by both Portuguese and foreign composers, at home and abroad. Lima is above all a thinker. His music is of a distinctly experimental nature, dominated, in his own words, by the desire to express 'the ephemeral and the eternal, the gods' gift of translating everything into music'. He is the author of books on the subjects of aesthetics and musical education.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: A morte de um caixeiro viajante (incid music, A. Miller), 1973–4; Polígnos em som e azul (op without words, V. da Silva), 2 fl, ob, 2 cl, bn, vib, gui, str qt, 3 pf, tape, 1988–9

Vocal: Dança do vento (A.L. Vieira), 5 equal vv, pf, org, 1962; 4 poemas impressionistas (S. da Gama, F. Pessoa), 1v, pf, 1963–4; Desfraldando (Pessoa), 1v, pf, 1965; Magnificat (Pessoa, A. de Campos), 1v, wind insts, perc, 1965; Começar a haver meia-noite (Pessoa), 1v, pf, 1965; Impressões do crepúsculo (Pauis) (Pessoa), 1v, vn, pf, 1967; 15 canções para a juventude (popular, A. Portela and others), 1v, pf, 1967; Mare-a-mare, 1v, fl, cl, hn, bn, va, vc, pf, tape, 1978–80; Sol-oeils (Pessoa and others), 12/24vv, 1978–9

Orch: 7 canções estáticas, vn, orch, 1966–71; Epitáfio, 1970–71; Oceanos cósmicos, orch, tape, 1975–9; Toiles I, str, 1977–8; É-toiles, 1977–8 [arr. of Toiles I]; A-mèr-es, orch, tape, 1978–9; Momentos-memórias II, Portuguese gui, gui, hpd, str, 1985; Homena, 1989

Chbr: 3 estudos para jovens, pf, pf 4 hands, 1960–64; Momentos-memórias I, pf, perc, 1964–85; Canzoni liriche, vn/fl, pf, 1968; Miniaturas (fl, ob, vn)/(vn, gui), 1969; Projecções, mime, spkr, hmn, pf, lighting, 1969–79; Enigma I e II, perc, 1974; Oscillations, chbr ens, 1975–6; Sang-ge, 3 bn, 1976; Coros e danças medievais, band, perc, 1978; Autómatos da Areia, tape, pf, perc, 1978–85; Ryt(hm)os, 14 insts, 1982–3; Improvisações, 1982–9; Cantica I, cl, sax, perc, 1984; Nô, chbr ens, 1986–7; Canções de Ur, chbr ens, tape, 1987; Cantica–cantica, 2 insts, tape, 1987; Octophonon, 4 cl, 1989; Para dois poemas: impromptu, vn, pf, tape, 1989; Nanghe, fl, vn, vc, pf, tape, 1990; Il tempo dell'acqua, b cl, db, 1991; Bleu-rouge (Regards), chbr ens, multimedia, tape, 1992; Tapisserie I (Croquis), chbr ens, 1992; Tapisserie II (Masques), chbr ens, 1993; Momentos-memórias III, chbr ens, 1994; Vozes à luz (à memória), str qt, 1996

Solo inst: 5 estudos, pf, 1960–64; 4 estudos rítmicos, pf, 1963–4; Esboços, gui, 1969; Projecções II, pf, tape, 1969–79; Meteoritos, pf/(pf, tape), 1973–4; Sang-ge, bn, 1976; Iliam, pf, 1980–81; Galets, pf, tape, 1982–3; Cori memori, org, 1985; Aquiris [iri-nube-inoutecer], pf, 1993; Blink, pf, 1993; Poisson–miroir, hpd, 1994; Juego del sol, pf, 1995; Ncàâncôa, cl, 1995

Elec: Oceanos, tape, 1978–80; Músicas da Terra, tape, 1982; Toiles II, cptr, tape, 1978–80; Toiles IV, cptr, 1978–80; Toiles III, cptr, tape, 1978–81; Músicas da Terra, tape, 1982; Lendas de Neptuno, tape, 1987; Músicas dos objectos e do acaso: resíduos (Tapiès), multimedia, 1991

Principal recordings: Portugalsom, Numérica

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Panorama da música de câmara do século XX (Oporto, 1996) [concert programme]

ADRIANA LATINO

Lima, Jerónimo Francisco de (b Lisbon, 30 Sept 1743; d Lisbon, 19 Feb 1822). Portuguese composer. He studied at the Seminário da Patriarcal in Lisbon, and from 1761 to 1767 at the Conservatorio di S Onofrio a Capuana in Naples, together with João de Sousa Carvalho. On his return to Lisbon he was appointed organist and mestre at the Seminário da Patriarcal and began to write in a variety of genres, including serenatas and drammi per musica da cantarsi written for court or private performance. Among them was Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe, given in 1785 at the Spanish Ambassador's palace in Lisbon to celebrate a double wedding between the Spanish and Portuguese royal families. In 1787 he was in the service of the English writer William Beckford during the latter's stay in Sintra, near Lisbon, and his music is favourably mentioned by Beckford, who, however, was not pleased with the £200 bill that Lima presented on his departure. He was also composing much sacred music and replaced Carvalho as primeiro mestre de capela of the Seminário in 1798. Lima's two three-act drammi giocosi were first performed during Carnival at the court's winter palace at Salvaterra de Magos: Lo spirito di contradizione in 1772, and La vera costanza in 1785. Lo spirito di contradizione, which was revived at the Teatro de S Carlos in Lisbon in 1985, reveals in its accompanied recitatives and rich orchestration the possible influence of Jommelli, the favourite composer of the Lisbon court.

WORKS
all in MS in P-La, unless otherwise indicated

Lo spirito di contradizione (dg, 3, G. Martinelli), Lisbon, Salvaterra, carn. 1772

Gli orti esperidi (serenata, P. Metastasio), Lisbon, Ajuda Palace, 5 April 1779

Enea in Tracia (dramma per musica, 1, Martinelli), Lisbon, Ajuda Palace, 17 Dec 1781

Teseo (dramma per musica da cantarsi, 1, Martinelli), Lisbon, Queluz Palace, 21 Aug 1783

O hymeneo (pequeno drama para se cantar, M.J. Dias Azedo and A. da Silva Morais), 1783, only lib extant

La vera costanza (dg, 3), Lisbon, Salvaterra, carn. 1785

Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe (dramma per musica da cantarsi, 2), Lisbon, residence of Count F. Nuñez, 13 April 1785

O templo da gloria, 1802, only lib extant

La Galatea (cant.), 5vv, insts

Dixit Dominus, 8vv, P-EVc

Magnificat, 4vv, bc, VV

Numerous sacred works, Lf (see Pereira Leal)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DBP

J. Mazza: Dicionário biográfico de músicos portugueses(Lisbon, 1944–5)

B. Alexander, ed.: The Journal of William Beckford in Portugal and Spain, 1787–1788(London, 1954)

L. Pereira Leal: Introduction to PM, ser. B, xxiii (1973)

M.C. de Brito: Opera in Portugal in the Eighteenth Century (Cambridge, 1989)

MANUEL CARLOS DE BRITO

Lima, João de Souza. See SOUZA LIMA, JOÃO DE.

Lima, Paulo Costa (b Salvador, 26 Sept 1954). Brazilian composer, teacher and writer. From 1969 to 1973 he took his undergraduate studies in composition, theory and analysis, and cello at the school of music of the Federal University of Bahia (UFBa). He then studied composition at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (BA 1977), where his main teachers were Herber Brün and Ben Johnston. At the same institution he received his MSc in music education (1978), studying with Charles Leonard and Richard Cowell. In 1995 he began to study for a doctoral degree in education at UFBa and a doctorate in arts at the University of São Paulo. Since 1979 he has been teaching theory and composition at the UFBa School of Music. He was director of the school of music of UFBa (1988–92) and vice-rector for continuing education at UFBa (1996–8).

Lima is considered one of the most talented composers of his generation. Between 1976 and 1997 he produced 53 compositions, mostly for solo instruments and various chamber combinations, and also a few choral and orchestral works, and two electronic pieces, all in eclectic styles in which local folk and popular inspiration are combined (at times in a humorous fashion) with modern, experimental techniques. His music has been widely performed in Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela, Europe and the USA. He has received numerous commissions and fellowships, and won various composition prizes. He has also written prolifically on analytical issues, the compositional process, and music and psychoanalysis.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Béhague: Sonidos de las Américas Festival (New York, 1996) [American Composers' Orchestra; programme book]

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Limbe. Mongolian side-blown flute. The limbe is traditionally played by males in Eastern Mongol groups (see MONGOL MUSIC), including Central Khalkhas in Mongolia, using the technique of circular breathing (bitüü am'sgal). An older regional name for side- and end-blown flutes is bishgüür. The limbe (classical Mongolian lingbu, Tibetan gling-bu) consists of a tube with a stopped upper end which may have from six to twelve holes cut into its side. In the latter case, these comprise a mouth-hole, a hole covered by a thin membrane to increase carrying power, six finger-holes (nüh) and four sound exit holes (two on the upper side and two in a parallel position below), which may be covered by any suitable material to give the instrument a deeper pitch. It is traditionally made from either reed or metal; contemporary instruments may be made from plastic. Ligatures hold the two halves of reed instruments firmly together.

Eastern Mongols distinguish 'male' (er) and 'female' (em) limbe: the male is wide-bored, short and blown hard; the female narrower, longer and blown softly. Traditionally the instrument is used while herding, to encourage mother camels to accept their calves and, along with the morin HUUR ('horse-head fiddle'), to accompany urtyn duu ('long-song'). During the communist period (1921–92) a tuner (höglögch), facilitating a European scale when twisted, was added between the body and the endpiece. In contemporary Mongolia, the limbe is played by males and is used in folk music ensembles.

The limbe is imitated by passing air through the nose, called hamraar limbedeh ('to play limbe by the nose'), or vocally, called amaar limbedeh ('to play limbe by the mouth').

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

J. van Oost: 'La musique chez les mongols des Urdus', Anthropos, x–xi (1915–16), 358–96

E. Emsheimer: 'Preliminary Remarks on Mongolian Music and Instruments', The Music of the Mongols, i: Eastern Mongolia, (Stockholm, 1943), 66–100

Chants mongols et bouriates, Vogue LDM 30138 (1973) [notes by R. Hamayon]

D. Nalsalmaa: 'Óyuny Soyol 4: Ardyn, duu, högjim' ['Spiritual culture 4: folksong, music'], BNMAY-yn Ugsaatny Züi [Traditions of the BNMAY], I: Halhyn Ugsaatny Züi: XIX–XX Zuuny Zaag Üe [Khalkha traditions in the late 19th and early 20th centuries] (Ulaanbaatar, 1987), 358–78

C.A. Pegg: Mongolian Music, Dance and Oral Narrative: Performing Diverse Identities (Seattle, forthcoming) [with CD]

CAROLE PEGG

Limbrick, Simon (b London, 8 Feb 1958). English percussionist and composer. He studied at the RCM with Michael Skinner, Janos Keszic and Alan Cumberland (1976–9), and subsequently studied the tabla with Latif Ahmed Khan. In 1990 he completed his MA in electroacoustic composition at City University in London. Limbrick performs regularly as solo percussionist with the Nash Ensemble. He was a founder member of the cult systems orchestra The Lost Jockey, collaborated with the choreographer Rosemary Lee on a large-scale community dance work at Fort Dunlop, Birmingham, and together with the Dutch composer Harry de Wit has written several film scores. He has also composed for Mary Wiegold's Songbook, Roger Heaton and Ensemble Bash, and was composer-in-residence at London's Blackheath Concert Halls between 1995 and 1996. Various compositions have been written especially for Limbrick, including works by Javier Alvarez, Brian Elias, Vic Hoyland and Andrew Poppy. He has also given the world premières of Frederic Rzewski's Lost and Found, Claude Vivier's Cinq Chansons and James Dillon's Ti-Re-Ti-Ke-Dha. Many of his own compositions have been influenced strongly by Indian and African music.

JAMES HOLLAND

Limenius (fl 128 BCE). Athenian composer of paeans and prosodia. An inscription found at Delphi which can be dated precisely to 128 BCE contains a lengthy composition, embodying both of these forms, provided with instrumental notation. A separate but related inscription testifies that it was performed in the same year. Two introductory lines identify it as a 'paean and prosodion to the god [Apollo] which was composed and provided with kithara accompaniment by Limenius of Athens, son of Thoenus'. A second inscription, perhaps made ten years earlier, contains a paean and hyporcheme (huporchēma) to Apollo in vocal notation. The name of the composer is effaced and only the ostensible adjective 'Athenian' remains. It has, however, recently been proposed (see Bélis) that this second inscription was composed by a certain Athenaeus and that the two paeans are contemporary. In any event, the two works are now commonly known as the Delphic Hymns.

A separate inscription from Delphi identifies Limenius as a performer on the kithara. As a professional musician taking part in the Pythaïs (the theōria, or liturgical embassy, to the cult centre of Pythian Apollo at Delphi), he was required to belong to one of the guilds of the Artists of Dionysus. Limenius's membership was based on his professional status as a kitharist, and he himself wrote of the sacred 'swarm of artists' ('hesmos ... technitōn') in his paean (20f), which gives an unusually detailed impression of the place of music in the liturgy. A similar phrase occurs in the companion piece (16f).

Limenius's paean and prosodion were composed in honour of the Artists of Dionysus (see TECHNITAI), who performed it at the Pythian Festival of 128 BCE. Elpinikos and Cleon, already encountered as leaders of the boys' choir at the games of 138 BCE, are named in the festival decree, as is a certain Philion. The paean itself extends to 33 lines of cretic and paeonic rhythm, after which the prosodion begins a new rhythmic pattern. The three large sections of the paean – providing an invocation, a narrative of several deeds of Apollo, and a final prayer to Apollo, Artemis and Leto – are subdivided into smaller sections that modulate back and forth between Lydian and Hypolydian tonoi. The tone of the text is elevated, as would be expected of a paean, and musical allusions abound. At one point (if the reconstruction of the text is correct), the images employed for the aulos and the kithara in the previous paean are reversed: now it is the kithara that provides the 'coiling mele', while the aulos produces a honeyed song with a sweet voice. The final section of the paean tells of the slaying of Tityus by Apollo and the unsuccessful attack on Delphi by the Gauls, both of which recall the very end of the first Delphic hymn. The prosodion provides a closing prayer, in which the Greek gods Apollo, Artemis and Leto are appropriated for the protection of the Roman Empire. The correspondence between accentual and melodic pitch in this paean – as in some other late Greek musical compositions – probably reflects an archaicizing tradition.

See also HYMN, §I.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Reinach: Les hymnes delphiques à Apollon avec notes musicales (Paris, 1912)
M.G. Colin: 'L'auteur du deuxième hymne musical de Delphes', Comptes rendus des séances de l'Académie des inscriptions et belles-lettres (1913), 529–32
P. Moens: De twee delphische hymnen met musieknoten (Purmerend, 1930)
R.P. Winnington-Ingram: Mode in Ancient Greek Music (Cambridge, 1936/R), 32ff, 45
E. Pöhlmann, ed.: Denkmäler altgriechischer Musik (Nuremberg, 1970), 58ff
A. Bélis: 'A proposito degli "Inni delfici"', La musica in Grecia: Urbino 1985, 205–18
M.L. West: Ancient Greek Music (Oxford, 1992), 288–308, 317–18
T.J. Mathiesen: Apollo's Lyre: Greek Music and Music Theory in Antiquity and the Middle Ages (Lincoln, NE, 1999), 44–56

For recordings see GREECE, §I (bibliography).

WARREN ANDERSON/THOMAS J. MATHIESEN

Limma [leimma] (Gk.: 'remainder'). In ancient Greek music theory the interval that remains when two whole-tone intervals are subtracted from a perfect 4th. The whole tone is the difference between a perfect 5th and a perfect 4th. The limma is also the difference between three octaves and five perfect 5ths, in other words, the diatonic semitone. Several ancient writers defined the limma, among them Ptolemy (Harmonics, i.10), Theon of Smyrna (On Mathematics Useful for the Understanding of Plato, ed. E. Hiller, Leipzig, 1878/R, 66–70), who relied on Adrastus, Gaudentius (Harmonic Introduction, ed. C. von Jan, Musici scriptores graeci, Leipzig, 1895/R, 342.7ff) and Boethius (De institutione musica, ii.28). Another, generic name for the limma in ancient Greek music was diesis ('passing through'), although it was used to refer to a variety of smaller intervals as well (see DIESIS (ii)).

In the Pythagorean theory of ratios and proportions the limma is represented by 256:243, the difference between a perfect 4th (4:3) and two whole tones (9:8 + 9:8 = 81:64). By referring to the excess of a 4th over two whole tones as a remainder and not as a semitone, the term 'limma' reveals its Pythagorean as opposed to its Aristoxenian nature. Aristoxenian music theory divides the octave into exactly six whole tones, the 5th equalling three and a half whole tones and the 4th two and a half. 'Limma' may also indicate the Greek musico-theoretical procedure of continuous subtraction (antanairēsis): an octave (2:1) minus a 5th (3:2) produces a 4th; a 5th minus a 4th produces a whole tone (an interval that Nichomachus also called a limma: Manual of Harmonics, ed. Jan, op. cit., 250.11); a 4th minus two whole tones produces the limma; the whole tone minus the limma produces the apotomē ('cutting off') or large semitone (2187:2048); the apotomē minus the limma produces the Pythagorean comma (531,441:524,288), the interval by which six whole tones exceed an octave (the whole tone minus two limmas also produces the comma, as Boethius noted in De institutione musica, iii.6–7).

Aristides Quintilianus (On Music, i.18) also defined the shortest rest as one limma.

ANDRÉ BARBERA

Limonaire. French family of mechanical organ makers. Coming originally from the Basque region, Antoine Limonaire started making pianos in Paris in 1840. His sons, Eugène and Camille, made fairground attractions in Paris until around 1880 when they began making mechanical organs. They concentrated on small- to medium-sized, well-voiced, prompt-acting organs for the fairground and the dance hall (see FAIRGROUND ORGAN), calling their largest models 'Orchestrophones'. Their organs became renowned for their characteristically 'Parisian' sound. For a short while (1898–9) they operated a factory in London. Limonaire-Frères bought the GAVIOLI business in 1912, including the Waldkirch factory where Gavioli were making organs for the German market. The brothers ceased to make fairground and dancehall organs in 1918, but continued the production of automatic café pianos until the business finally shut in 1930.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.V. Cockayne: The Fairground Organ (Newton Abbot, 1970)
J. van Dinteren: 'More Light on Limonaire', Music Box, vii (1975–6), 281–4
A.W.J.G. Ord-Hume: Barrel Organ (London, 1978)

ARTHUR W.J.G. ORD-HUME

Lin, Cho-Liang (b Hsin-Chu, Taiwan, 29 Jan 1960). American violinist of Chinese extraction. He played in his first concert at the age of seven and in 1972 won the Taiwan National Youth Competition, enabling him to study with Robert Pikler at the Sydney Conservatorium until 1975. He was a pupil of Dorothy DeLay at the Juilliard School, New York (1975–8), and in 1977 won first prize in the Queen Sophia International Competition in Madrid. He made his US début in 1979 at the Mostly Mozart Festival and in 1981, through the influence of Isaac Stern, undertook an extensive tour of mainland China and East Asia. He has since achieved an international reputation as a soloist and chamber musician (in a trio with the pianist Yefim Bronfman and the cellist Gary Hoffman) and is also on the faculty of the Juilliard School. Outstanding among his many recordings are the violin concertos of Sibelius, Stravinsky and Prokofiev. His elegant playing is based on perfect intonation, an impeccable technique and a strong feeling for the architecture of the music. He plays a Guarneri del Gesù violin 'The Duke of Camposelice', dated 1734.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Sand: 'Youthful Authority', The Strad, xcviii (1987), 298–302
K. Smith: 'From East to West and Back', The Strad, cvi (1995), 896–903

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Linarol, Francesco [Francesco Lirer; Francesco de Machettis; Franciscus Bergomensis] (b ?Bergamo, *c*1520; d Venice, 1577). Italian viol maker. Little is known about his life. He made the earliest extant Venetian viol, a tenor dating from about 1540 (now in the Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna). In 1576 he was mentioned on the death certificate of a daughter. He was one of the most important figures in the Venetian school of viol making of the 16th century. His son Ventura (b 1539/40) built a number of viols and violins to a high level of craftsmanship and is known to have been an occasional player of violin and violone at S Marco between 1586 and 1607. Ventura's son Giovanni (*fl c*1620) continued the family instrument-making business.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.C. Witten: 'Apollo, Orpheus and David', JAMIS, i (1975), 5–55
M. Edmunds: 'Venetian Viols of the Sixteenth Century', GSJ, xxxiii (1980), 74–91

GIULIO ONGARO

Linceo. See COLONNA, FABIO.

Lincer, William (b Brooklyn, 6 April 1907; d New York City, 31 July 1997). American violinist and viola player. He began his violin studies at the age of five and two years later he gave his first recital in Aeolian Hall in New York City. He continued his studies at the Institute of Musical Art, where his teachers included Leopold Lichtenberg, Samuel Gardner, and Erica Morini. Upon graduation, he formed the Lincer Quartet, pursued postgraduate courses at Harvard University, and gave numerous lectures on music appreciation throughout the country. For seven years, as viola player with the Jacques Gordon String Quartet, he toured extensively throughout the USA and Canada. In 1938, on the occasion of this ensemble's première of a string quartet by Frank Bridge, he was awarded the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Individual Gold Medal for Chamber Music. In 1942, Lincer became principal viola with the Cleveland Orchestra, and a year later principal viola of the New York PO, a position he retained until his retirement at the end of the 1972 season. With the orchestra he gave the US or New York premières of many works, including viola concertos by Bloch, Hohvaness, Klenner, Rivier and Starer. Although Lincer began to teach the viola in 1927, he did not become associated with a music school until 1960, teaching first at the Manhattan Schools of Music (1960–69) and then at the Juilliard School, where he served as professor of viola and chamber music until shortly before his death. When he was a teenager, Lincer suffered a severe hand injury and was told his performing days were at an end. He did not accept this verdict and was able to retain his hand through knowledge gained from extensive research in physiology. In later years he put this knowledge to work in his unique style of viola pedagogy. The William Lincer Foundation, established in 1999, sponsors an annual composer competition designed to enlarge the repertory for the viola.

AMEDEE DARYL WILLIAMS

Linck, Johannes (b Züllichau [now Sulechów], Silesia, 1561; d Görlitz, 20 July 1603). Silesian Kantor and poet. He succeeded Wolfgang Rauch as Kantor at the Lutheran school and church in Linz, upper Austria, on 8 July 1586, and although repeatedly censured for bad behaviour towards the students, he retained this post until 1600, when Leonhard Prenner became his successor. On 12 September 1602 Linck left Linz for Görlitz, where he taught from 24 October 1602 until his death. He was crowned poeta laureatus in 1602. He is known for his collection of spring poems Eacina sive carminum vernorum praecidanea (Görlitz, 1603) and for many Latin poems either on music or on composers or persons connected with music. The Deliciae poetarum germanorum huius superiorisque aevi illustrium, iii (Frankfurt, 1612, 1092ff) contains two poems by him entitled De musica (1 ed. in Wessely, MF, 1954). In addition he wrote an elegy on the death of the Silesian poet Georg Calaminus (1547–95), a poem in praise of the composer Valentin Haussmann for the latter's Neue Teutsche Weltliche Lieder (Nuremberg, 1592) and another praising the composer Andreas Raselius for his Teutsche Sprüche auss den Sontäglichen Evangeliis (Nuremberg, 1594).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Wessely: 'Linz und die Musik', Jb der Stadt Linz 1950 (1951), 96–197, esp. 122
O. Wessely: 'Die Pflege der Musik an der evangelischen Landschaftsschule in Linz', Festschrift zum 400jährigen Jubiläum des humanistischen Gymnasiums in Linz (Linz, 1952), 52–63
J. Schmidt: 'Lateinisches Linz', Mitteilungen des Instituts für österreichische Geschichtsforschung, lx (1952), 206–19
O. Wessely: 'Neue Beiträge zur Pflege der Musik an der evangelischen Lanschaftsschule und Landhauskirche zu Linz', Mitteilungen des Oberösterreichischen Landesarchivs, iii (Linz, 1954), 300–36
O. Wessely: 'Tubingensia', Mf, vii (1954), 397–402
H. Schardinger: 'Studien zur Geschichte des Linzer Gymnasiums aus der Zeit der Landschaftsschule', Historisches Jb der Stadt Linz (Linz, 1957)

OTHMAR WESSELY/WALTER KREYSZIG

Lincke, Joseph (b Trachenburgh, 8 June 1783; d Vienna, 26 March 1837). Silesian cellist and composer. He was taught the violin by his father and the cello by Oswald. Orphaned at the age of ten, he supported himself by copying music until he was appointed violinist in the Dominican monastery at Breslau at the age of 12. There he continued to study the cello, and eventually became first cellist at the theatre at Breslau, where Weber was then Kapellmeister. In 1808 he went to Vienna and was invited by Ignaz Schuppanzigh to join Count Razumovsky's private string quartet (1808–16, reformed 1823); he consequently played many of Beethoven's works under the direct guidance of the composer, including the two cello sonatas op.102, which were written for him, and the Piano Trio op.97. Lincke seems to have been particularly successful in interpreting Beethoven's music and was on intimate terms with the composer. He also took part in Schuppanzigh's public concerts and in 1816 became chamber musician to Countess Erdödy at Pancovecz, near Zagreb. In 1818 he returned to Vienna as solo cellist at the Theater an der Wien, and he became solo cellist at the Kärntnertortheater; from 1831 he played in the Hofoper orchestra. Although Lincke's tone was considered weak in large ensembles, his expressive playing was much loved by Viennese audiences. His compositions included a concerto, variations and caprices, but no copies are known to survive.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Frimmel: Beethoven-Handbuch (Leipzig, 1926/R), i
J. Herrmann: 'E.A. Förster, Joseph Lincke: zwei schlesische Musiker in Lebenskreis Beethovens', Schlesien, xi (1966)
V. Walden: An Investigation and Comparison of the French and Austro-German Schools of Violoncello Bowing Techniques: 1785–1839 (diss., U. of Auckland, 1994)

C.F. POHL/SUZANNE WIJSMAN

Lincke, (Carl Emil) Paul (b Berlin, 7 Nov 1866; d Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Harz, 3 Sept 1946). German composer and conductor. He studied with Rudolf Kleinow in Wittenberge (1880–84) and learnt to play the bassoon, horn and percussion. He played in dance orchestras in Berlin and was occasional conductor and house composer at variety theatres. He enjoyed success with popular songs including Wenn die Blätter leise rauschen, Ach Schaffner, lieber Schaffner and Die Gigerlkönigin, and from 1893 to 1897 was conductor and resident composer at the main variety theatre in Berlin, the Apollo. After a period as conductor at the Folies-Bergère, Paris (1897–9), his revue-operetta Frau Luna made his name and also his fortune through his own publishing company, Apollo-Verlag. It was followed by further stage scores and orchestral pieces. Orchestral items such as the 'Glühwürmchen-Idyll' from Lysistrata (1902) achieved wide international popularity, while songs such as the march from Berliner Luft (1904) established him as a symbol of Berlin as Offenbach was of Paris or Johann Strauss of Vienna.

In the 1920s and 30s Frau Luna, Im Reiche des Indra and Lysistrata, originally written as items on variety programmes, were revised and expanded to incorporate hit numbers from Berliner Luft and other shows. Particularly through Frau Luna in this extended form, Lincke's music retained its local popularity, in due course being exploited by the Nazis. Lincke was made a freeman of Berlin in 1941 and named professor in 1942. Though his music seeks to achieve no great dramatic characterization, it is skilfully constructed and full of lilting, often rousing melodies.

WORKS
(selective list)

OPERETTAS
librettos by H. Bolten-Baeckers and performed in Berlin at the Apollo unless otherwise stated published in vocal score in Berlin at time of first production

Venus auf Erden (1), 6 June 1897; Frau Luna (1), 1 May 1899, rev. version (2), Döbeln, Stadt, 1929; Im Reiche des Indra (1), 18 Dec 1899; Fräulein Loreley (1), 1 April 1900; Lysistrata (1), 1 April 1902; Nakiris Hochzeit (2), 6 Nov 1902; Berliner Luft (2), 28 April 1904; Grigri (2, with J. Chancel), Cologne, Metropol, 25 March 1911; Casanova (3, J. Glück, W. Sternberg, after Lebrun), Chemnitz, Stadt, 5 Nov 1913; Ein Liebestraum (3, A.O. Erler and Neumann), Berlin Radio, 20 July 1940, Hamburg, Reeperbahn, 1940; over 20 other short operettas and revues

OTHER WORKS

Orch: Folies-Bergère Marsch, Geburtstagsständchen, other light pieces

Many popular songs, choruses and light orch music, pubd Berlin

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Gänz/EMT
E. Nick: Paul Lincke (Hamburg, 1953)
O. Schneidereit: Operette von Abraham bis Ziehrer (Berlin, 1966)
O. Schneidereit: Paul Lincke und die Entstehung der Berliner Operette (Berlin, 1974)

ANDREW LAMB

Lincoln, Harry B(arnard) (b Fergus Falls, MN, 6 March 1922). American musicologist. He graduated from Macalester College in 1946 and took the PhD at Northwestern University in 1951 with a dissertation on Annibale Zoilo. He was on the faculty at SUNY, Binghamton until his retirement in 1992. Lincoln has edited and written about Italian secular music of the 16th and early 17th centuries. His edition of the madrigal collection L'amorosa Ero makes available in a practical modern transcription a group of pieces by some of the major madrigal composers of the late 16th century; since all of these pieces used the same text and mode they provide an interesting comparison of the ways in which different composers approached text setting in madrigals. Lincoln is also one of the principal exponents of the application of computer technology to musical research, particularly to thematic indexing.

WRITINGS

Annibale Zoilo: the Life and Works of a Sixteenth-Century Italian Composer (diss., Northwestern U., 1951)
'I manoscritti chigiani di musica organo-cembalistica della Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana', L'organo, v (1964–7), 63–82
ed.: Directory of Music Faculties in American Colleges and Universities, U.S. and Canada (Binghamton, NY, 1967, 3/1970)
'Musicology and the Computer: the Thematic Index', Computers in Humanistic Research, ed. E.A. Bowles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1967), 184–93
'Some Criteria and Techniques for Developing Computerized Thematic Indices', Elektronische Datenverarbeitung in der Musikwissenschaft, ed. H. Heckmann (Regensburg, 1967), 57–62
'The Thematic Index: a Computer Application to Musicology', Computers and the Humanities, ii (1967–8), 215–20
'A Computer Application in Musicology: the Thematic Index', Information Processing: Edinburgh 1968, ed. A.J.H. Morrell (Amsterdam, 1969), 957–61
ed.: The Computer and Music (Ithaca, NY, 1970)
'The Current State of Music Research and the Computer', Computers and the Humanities, v (1970–71), 29–36
Index to Graduate Degrees in Music, U.S. and Canada (Binghamton, NY, 1971)
'Uses of the Computer in Music Composition and Research', Advances in Computers, xii (1972), 73–114
'Preliminary Studies of Melody as Wave Form', Informatique et musique: Orsay 1981, 43–54
'Some Observations on Madrigal Settings of Petrarch's I' vo piangendo', Mediaevalia, xii (1986), 339–49
The Italian Madrigal and Related Repertories: Indexes to Printed Collections, 1500–1600 (New Haven, CT, 1988)
The Latin Motet: Indexes to Printed Collections, 1500–1600 (Ottawa, 1993)

EDITIONS

The Madrigal Collection 'L'amorosa Ero' (Brescia, 1588) (Albany, NY, 1968)
Seventeenth-Century Keyboard Music in the Chigi Manuscripts of the Vatican Library, CEKM, xxxii (1968) with S. Bonta: Study Scores of Historical Styles (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1986–7)

PAULA MORGAN

Lincoln, Henry Cephas (b ?1789; d ?1864). English organ builder. He joined his father John Lincoln (fl 1789–1820) about 1810 following an apprenticeship with Flight & Robson. For much of his career H.C. Lincoln's 'manufactory' was at 196 High Holborn, London; he did little significant work after 1845, though he was still working on the Buckingham Palace Ballroom organ in 1855.

Lincoln's published lists (*c*1824 and 1843) indicate a considerable output of new organs throughout Britain and abroad. He held the royal warrant from about 1819, probably as a result of building 'a very superb organ' of 28 stops for the Brighton Pavilion (1818). His work included new organs for fashionable churches in London and Brighton, and during the early 1840s he made his contribution to the new 'German system', working with H.J. GAUNTLETT on at least four organs, including the vast instrument for St Olave, Tooley Street, Southwark (1844), with its 27-stop Great based on a 32′ bourdon. It proved to be beyond Lincoln's resources and was completed by Hill in 1846.

Lincoln's best work dates from the final phase of the English long-compass organ. His three-manual instrument, built originally for St John's Chapel, Bedford Row, London (1821), survives at Thaxted, Essex. The fine Regency case contains an instrument which (despite its dilapidated condition) gives a fair impression of Lincoln's work, with its clear-toned (metal) flutes, imitative reeds and gentle diapasons.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Maskell: 'Organs by Lincoln', Musical Standard (30 March 1867), 203 only

J. Boeringer: 'The Organs of the Lincolns', JBIOS, i (1977), 11–17

N.J. Thistlethwaite: The Making of the Victorian Organ (Cambridge, 1990)

NICHOLAS THISTLETHWAITE

Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts. New York arts complex opened during the 1960s. See NEW YORK, §3.

Lincolniensis. See GROSSETESTE, ROBERT.

Lincoln's Inn. One of the London Inns of Court. See LONDON (i), §III.

Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre. London theatre opened in 1661. See LONDON (i), §V, 1.

Lind [Lind-Goldschmidt], Jenny [Johanna Maria] (b Stockholm, 6 Oct 1820; d Wynds Point, Herefordshire, 2 Nov 1887). Swedish soprano. She was nicknamed 'the Swedish nightingale'. In 1830 she was enrolled at the Royal Opera School, Stockholm. She made her début in 1838 as Agathe in Der Freischütz; later that year she sang Pamina and Euryanthe. She appeared in La vestale, Robert le diable (1839), Don Giovanni (as Donna Anna), Lucia di Lammermoor (1840) and La straniera, and as Norma, which she sang for the first time in 1841. Her voice began to show signs of fatigue, the middle register being particularly worn, and she went to Paris to consult the younger Manuel Garcia, who imposed a period of rest before taking her as a pupil. When she returned to Stockholm, appearing in Norma in October 1842, an improvement in her voice and technique was immediately apparent. The middle register remained veiled in tone and relatively weak for the rest of her career, but the notes from c'' to a'' had become marvellously strong and flexible, and her range extended to g'''.

Lind's new roles included Valentine (Les Huguenots), Ninetta (La gazza ladra), Countess Almaviva, and Amina (La sonnambula), which she sang for the first time in 1843. During the next season she added Il turco in Italia, Gluck's Armide and Anna Bolena to her repertory. In 1844 she went to Germany, making her début in Berlin in Norma and in 1845 singing Vielka in Meyerbeer's Ein Feldlager in Schlesien, written for her but created by Leopoldine Tuczek-Ehrenburg. Returning to Stockholm, she sang Marie (La fille du régiment) for the first time.

Lind made her Viennese début at the Theater an der Wien in April 1846 as Norma. She then toured extensively in Germany, taking part, with Mendelssohn, in the Lower Rhine Festival at Aachen during May and June, when she sang in Haydn's Creation and Handel's Alexander's Feast. She also appeared at Munich, Stuttgart, Karlsruhe, Mannheim and Nuremberg. Returning in January 1847 to Vienna, she scored an immense success as Marie. Her triumphant London début was at Her Majesty's in May of the same year, when she sang (in Italian) Alice in Robert le diable before Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, followed by La sonnambula (see illustration) and La fille du régiment with even greater success. She also created Amalia in I masnadieri (22 July) and sang Susanna. Having decided to give up the theatre, she sang in Sweden during the winter, making her last Stockholm appearance as Norma in April 1848. She then sang for a second season at Her Majesty's followed by an extensive tour of Great Britain. In December she sang Mendelssohn's Elijah at the Exeter Hall, London. Persuaded to give six extra farewell performances at Her Majesty's, she made her final stage appearance there as Alice on 10 May 1849. In 1850 she embarked on an eight-month concert tour throughout the USA, visiting 93 cities. She continued to sing in concerts and oratorios, both in Germany and in England, where she lived from 1858 until her death. In 1883, the year of her last public performance, she became professor of singing at the RCM.

Jenny Lind as Amina in Bellini's 'La sonnambula', Act 1 scene i Lind's stage reputation was based largely on four operas, La sonnambula, Robert le diable, La fille du régiment and Norma. Her interpretation of Norma failed because of her temperamental inability to realize the character fully; thus Amina, Alice and Marie were probably her most satisfying operatic achievements (though her own preference was for Julia in La vestale).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Lumley: Reminiscences of the Opera (London, 1864/R)

H.S. Holland and W.S.Rockstro: Memoir of Madame Jenny Lind-Goldschmidt: her Early Art-Life and Dramatic Career, 1820–1851 (London, 1891/R)

J.M.C. Maude: The Life of Jenny Lind (London, 1926/R)

J. Bulman: Jenny Lind: a Biography (London, 1956)

G. Denny: Jenny Lind, the Swedish Nightingale (New York, 1962)

W.P. Ware and T.C.Lockard, eds.: The Lost Letters of Jenny Lind (London, 1966)

A.F. Block: 'Two Virtuoso Performers in Boston: Jenny Lind and Camilla Urso', New Perspectives on Music: Essays in Honor of Eileen Southern, ed. J. Wright and S.A. Floyd (Warren, MI, 1992), 355–72

ELIZABETH FORBES

Lindberg, Armas. See LAUNIS, ARMAS.

Lindberg, Christian (b Danderyd, 15 Feb 1958). Swedish trombonist. His training was at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in Stockholm, with Sven-Erik Eriksson (1976–84), at the RCM, London, with John Iveson (1979–80) and with Ralph Sauer and Roger Bobo in Los Angeles (1983). He played with the Stockholm Opera Orchestra for the 1977–8 season and since then has pursued a spectacular career exclusively as a soloist, with over 100 concerts a year in major venues. He made his début in 1984 playing the Tomasi Trombone Concerto with the Swedish RSO under Jukka-Pekka Saraste. He has given the premières of over 50 works for trombone and orchestra, including de Frumerie's Trombone Concerto (1986), Sandström's Motor Bike Concerto (1989), Xenakis's Troorkh and Hillborg's Trombone Concerto (1993), Takemitsu's Fantasma/Cantos II and Sandström's Don Quijote (1994), and Pärt's An den Wassern and Muldowney's Trombone Concerto (1996). He has also collaborated with Berio on a Trombone Concerto, of which he gave the première in the Zürich Tonhalle and at the Sydney Opera House in 1999. He nevertheless does not eschew the traditional concertos by Michael Haydn, Leopold Mozart, Albrechtsberger and David, all of which he has edited for Edition Tarrodi. His playing is characterized by perfectly centred attacks in all registers at all dynamics and a charismatic intensity of delivery, as can be heard in over 30 recordings. Lindberg was given the honorary title of Prince Consort Professor by the RCM in 1994, and was appointed a professor at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1996.

EDWARD H. TARR

Lindberg, (Johan) Jakob (b Djursholm, 16 Oct 1952). Swedish lutenist and guitarist. He studied the guitar and the lute with Jörgen Rörby from 1967 to 1971, before reading music at Stockholm University. From 1972 to 1976 he attended the RCM in London, studying with Diana Poulton (whom he succeeded as professor of lute in 1979) and the guitarist Carlos Bonnell. He made his solo début at the Wigmore Hall in 1978. A leading exponent of both Renaissance and Baroque music, Lindberg feels a special affinity with the works of Dowland and Weiss. He is noted as a song accompanist and as a soloist and continuo player with leading Baroque orchestras. In 1985 he formed the Dowland Consort, specializing in music of the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods. His recordings include the complete music for lute and strings of Vivaldi and Haydn, and the complete solo lute works of Bach and Dowland. He is the dedicatee of Richard Popplewell's Variations on Brigg Fair for solo lute (1988). He owns one of the few surviving lutes by Sixtus Rauwolf (Augsburg, *c*1595).

STEPHEN HAYNES

Lindberg, Magnus (b Helsinki, 27 June 1958). Finnish composer. He studied composition with Rautavaara and Heininen at the Sibelius Academy (1977–81), and during the same period worked at the Stockholm electronic music studio and attended Donatoni's courses in Siena, and in 1980 and 1982 those of Lachenmann and Ferneyhough in Darmstadt. He has studied with Globokar and in Paris has worked with Grisey, and on several occasions in IRCAM. In Finland in 1977 he was, with Kaija Saariaho, Esa-Pekka Salonen and others, one of the founding members of the society Korvat auki (Ears Open), devoted to the study and performance of contemporary music neglected by established institutions.

Lindberg is a freelance composer, working to commissions and under the auspices of a state scholarship. He has taught composition at summer courses such as those arranged by the chamber orchestra Avanti! in Porvoo, Finland, since 1987, and courses at the Centre Acanthes in Avignon (1992), Darmstadt (1996), at the IRCAM Summer Academy in Paris (1997), in Santiago de Compostela (1997) and at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm, where he was Acting Professor (1996–7). He has planned programmes for the Helsinki Biennale, the Meltdown Festival in London and the Helsinki Festival. In 1997 he was the principal featured composer at both the Ars Musica festival in Brussels and the Musica festival in Strasbourg. In Strasbourg he also performed as a pianist and conducted the Finnish Radio SO. He has also conducted the Avanti!, Ictus and ASKO ensembles, and has performed in the experimental Toimii (It Works) ensemble of Helsinki since 1980. Commissions have come from varied ensembles and institutions, including the London Sinfonietta, the Tapiola Choir, radio stations of a number of countries, IRCAM, the Svenska Rikskonserter, the Los Angeles PO and the Orchestre de Paris. His concertante work Kraft won the 1986 UNESCO Rostrum of Composers, the 1987 Nordic Council and the 1988 Koussevitzky International Critics Award.

At the outset Lindberg was captivated by serialism and other organizational methods he discovered in the music of Stockhausen, Babbitt and others, and his early works, before Zona (1983, rev. 1990), were often based on complex formal schemes which controlled rhythm, pitch and register. He has since widened his horizons to include such different worlds as those of Berio, Zimmermann, Varèse, Stravinsky, Sibelius, Purcell, French spectral music, elements of minimalism, free jazz, progressive rock and ethnic music of East Asia. He takes care, however, to meld these different ingredients into a highly individual unity of style and expression that avoids any sense of postmodern stylistic shifting.

While works like Kraft (1985) and UR (1986) were concerned above all with rhythm and rough sonority, abrupt contrasts and weighty sound masses, subsequent works such as Twine (1988) for piano and the orchestral trilogy made up of Kinetics (1989), Marea (1990) and Joy (1990) were based on harmonic considerations, combining the similarity relationships of pitch class set theory and the principles of SPECTRAL MUSIC. Corrente (1992) marks a shifting of interest from gestural writing to a more goal-oriented formal thinking. Characteristic of Lindberg's music, from especially this piece onwards, is a sense of continuity and direction, an ultimate end, that controls a work's development from beginning to end according to a carefully designed plan, as his orchestral works Aura (1994), Arena (1995) and Feria (1997) elegantly bear witness. At the same time, contrapuntal considerations became more important and reached their peak in Engine (1996), composed using a rule-based computational environment ('Patchwork', developed by Mikael Laurson). Lindberg is one of the few contemporary composers who writes genuinely fast music; this property and its consequence, instrumental virtuosity, greatly contribute to make his music exciting and easily accessible.

He has also been interested in a kind of instrumental musique concrète (Action-Situation-Signification, 1982), an experiment necessary for the conception of Kraft, and he often integrates live electronics in his pieces (e.g. UR, Joy and Related Rocks, 1997). One field he has left almost completely untouched is vocal music, but he has pointed out that his growing interest in counterpoint may be an attempt to come closer to vocal writing. Lindberg's style, in which melody and harmony are very well balanced without losing any of their innate richness, approaches a kind of classicism, as critics have remarked. This may be one of the reasons behind Lindberg's great success and growing reputation as 'the most exciting composer of his generation' (Financial Times, 1997).

WORKS

ORCHESTRAL

Donor, 1975; Drama, 1981; Sculpture II, 1981; Tendenza, 21 players, 1982; Ritratto, 18 players, 1983; Kraft, cl, perc, pf, solo vc, elecs, orch, 1985; Kinetics, 1989; Joy, 23 players, elecs, 1990; Marea, 1990; Pf Conc., 1991, rev. 1994; Corrente, 16 players, 1992; Corrente II, 1992; Coyote Blues, 14 players, 1993; Aura, 1994; Away, cl, perc, pf, str, 1994; Zungenstimmen, large brass ens, 1994; Arena, 1995; Arena 2, 16 players, 1996; Engine, 16 players, Feria, 1997; Fresco, 1998; Cantigas, 1999; Vc Conc., 1999; Gran Duo, 2000

CHAMBER, VOCAL, TAPE

Music for 2 Pianos, 1976; 3 Pieces, h, vn, va, vc, 1976; Etwas zarter, tape, 1977; Klavierstück, pf, 1977; Arabesques, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1978; Espressione I, vc, 1978 [arr. 2 vc by A. Karttunen, 1997]; Jag vill breda vingar ut (G. Björling), Mez, pf, 1978; Ohne Ausdruck, tape, 1978; Untitled, vocalise, 20vv mixed chorus, 1978; 3 Short Pieces, pf, 1978; Layers, unspecified, 1979; Play I, 2 pf, 1979; Quintetto dell'estate, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1979; Sonatas, vn, pf, 1979; Espressione II, vn, 1980; ... de Tartuffe, je crois, pf, str qt, 1981; Linea d'ombra, fl, a sax/cl, gui, perc, 1981; Action-Situation-Signification, cl, pf, perc, vc, tape, 1982; Ablauf, cl, bass drums, 1983, rev. 1988; Ground, hpd, 1983; Zona, vc, a fl, b cl, perc, hp, vn, db, 1983; rev. 1990; Metal Work, accdn, perc, 1984; Projekt Faust, nar, cl, 2 bass drums, vc, 1984; Stroke, vc, 1984; Faust (J. Siltanen), tape, 1986; UR, cl, pf, vn, vc, db, elecs, 1986; Twine, pf, 1988; Jeux d'anches, accdn, 1990; Moto, vc, pf, 1990; Steamboat Bill Jr., cl, vc, 1990; Decorrente, cl, gui, vib, pf, vc, 1992; Cl Qnt, cl, str qt, 1992; Duo concertante, cl, vc, ens, 1990, rev. 1992; Songs from North and South (e.e. cummings, trad. Indian), children's chorus, 1993; Kiri, cl, vc, gui, perc, elecs, 1993; Related Rocks, 2 pf, 2 perc, elecs, 1997

Principal publishers: Boosey & Hawkes, Chester, Hansen

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Nieminen: 'Focus on the Composer Magnus Lindberg', Finnish Music Quarterly, ii/3 (1986), 31–41
F. Spangemacher: 'Punk und Muttermilch: ein Gespräch mit dem finnischen Komponisten Magnus Lindberg', NZM, Jg.152, no.1 (1991), 25–8
J. Anderson: 'The Spectre Sounds of Magnus Lindberg', MT, cxxxiii (1992), 565–7
Cahiers de l'IRCAM: compositeurs d'aujourd'hui, no.3, ed. R. Nieminen (1993) [Lindberg issue]; Eng. trans. as Magnus Lindberg (Helsinki, 1996)
M. Heiniö: 'Magnus Lindberg', Suomalaisia säveltäjiä [Finnish composers], ed. E. Salmenhaara (Keuruu, 1994)
K. Korhonen: Finnish Composers since the 1960s (Jyväskylä, 1995)
M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [A history of Finnish music], iv (Porvoo, 1995)
K. Aho and others: Finnish Music (Keuruu, 1996)
P. Szersnovicz: 'Les horizons de Magnus Lindberg', Le monde de la musique, no.213 (1997), 58–62
A. Häyrynen: 'Musique et modernité en Finlande', Musica: festival international des musiques d'aujourd'hui Strasbourg (Strasbourg, 1997), 33–40

ILKKA ORAMO

Lindberg, Oskar (Fredrik) (b Gagnef, Dalarna, 23 Feb 1887; d Stockholm, 10 April 1955). Swedish composer, church musician and teacher. He served as organist in Gagnef from the age of 14 and studied at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music, where he graduated as a church musician (1906) and a music teacher (1908), and where he studied composition with Ellberg and Hallén. Subsequently he conducted at Sondershausen and made other journeys abroad. He was organist at the Trefaldighetskyrka, Stockholm (1906–14), and at the Engelbrektskyrka (1914–55). At the same time he taught music in Stockholm high schools and harmony at the conservatory (from 1919, as professor from 1936). In 1926 he was made a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music, of which he was a board member (1937–9 and 1945–55).

Lindberg came from a family with deep roots in Dalarna: several of his ancestors had been peasant violinists, and he himself was steeped in folk music, from which he took many of his themes. He became prominent in the Young Swedes group (*c*1910–20; other members were Rangström and Atterberg) and developed a rich late Romantic orchestral style, where the influences of Rachmaninoff and Sibelius were balanced with those of folk music, most successfully in his slightly impressionist nature scenes. The compilation of the 1939 hymnbook was largely his work and it contained 14 hymns of his own composition.

WORKS

(selective list)

Opera: Fredlös, 1936–42; Stockholm, 1943
Orch: Sym., F, op.16, 1909; Ov., E♭, 1909; Ov., b, 1911; Från de stora skogarna, sym. poem, 1918; Vår, ov., D, 1924; Per spelman, han spelte, op.32, rhapsody, 1930; 4 other sym. poems, 5 suites
Choral: Requiem, op.21, 1920–22; 5 large choral orch works and 11 cantatas
Org: Sonata, op.23, 1924; several chorale preludes
Other works: songs with orch/pf/org, chbr music, pf pieces

Principal publisher: Nordiska Musikförlaget

HANS ÅSTRAND

Lindblad, Adolf Fredrik (b Skenninge, 1 Feb 1801; d Löfvingsborg, nr Linköping, 23 Aug 1878). Swedish composer. He was adopted as a child by a merchant who gave him his name and tried to teach him his trade; however he showed an early interest in music, played the flute and piano and composed. In Hamburg (1818–19) he came into contact with the contemporary German culture led by Goethe, Jean Paul, Tieck and Beethoven, who became his idol. Through his future wife he met P.D.A. Atterbom, the leading Swedish Romantic poet and teacher at Uppsala University, in 1822. While studying music at Uppsala (1823–5) he was welcomed into the group of older artists and humanists including the professor and composer Erik Gustaf Geijer. From 1825 to 1827 he travelled in Germany and went to Paris. He studied for a time with Zelter in Berlin, where he became a close friend of Zelter's young pupil, Mendelssohn (their correspondence, 1825–47, is in the Mendelssohn archives of D-Bsb; other letters in S-Sk).

Back in Sweden, Lindblad directed a music and piano school from 1827 to 1861 using the Logier method. His pupils included Crown Prince Oscar I and his son Prince Gustaf, Ludvig Norman and other Swedish composers. His opera Frondörerna ('The Rebels'), performed in 1835, was less successful than Lindblad had expected, but his Symphony in C met with great acclaim at a Leipzig Gewandhaus concert in 1839. The symphony and other instrumental works as well as several volumes of his songs were printed by German publishers. Jenny Lind, who had lived with Lindblad's family when young and can be considered his pupil, sang his songs all over the world. Lindblad's strong attachment to her was expressed in his 1845 collection of songs, which gave rise to a controversy in the press. He was criticized for the harmonic boldness of the songs, an element foreign to Swedish taste at the time. The battle ended with a laudatory article by Ludwig Spohr in Kassel, but wounded by this publicity and the poor reception of his instrumental works, Lindblad withdrew into a small, close-knit circle of fellow musicians and writers for the rest of his life, and wrote only chamber music and the kind of song that appealed to contemporary Swedish taste. He was elected a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1831.

Lindblad's chief historical significance lies in his 215 songs (a complete edition was published in nine volumes by Hirsch, Stockholm, between 1878 and 1890), which began a new tradition in Swedish lieder; he also wrote the texts for about a third of them. He had published Der Nordensaal, a collection of 12 folksong arrangements, in Berlin as early as 1826. His own songs were often modelled on Swedish folk melodies, especially his simple and concentrated settings of the poems of his friend, Atterbom. Genuine folk ballads and later pastiches of these also inspired two dramatic songs, Bröllopsfärden ('The Wedding Journey', *c*1830) and Den skeppsbrutna ('Shipwrecked', *c*1840). In a number of colourful narrative songs, such as Sotargossen ('The Chimney-sweep'), Krigsinvaliden ('The War Veteran') and the popular Skjutsgossen på hemväg ('The Driver on his way home'), he painted a realistic and humorous picture of daily life in town and country. The songs are often strophic or built on a pattern of two contrasting stanzas which return more or less varied. A good example of strophic variations is the self-revealing Nattviolen ('The Night Violet', *c*1860), in which the recitative develops into ecstatic melody. The finest of all are his nature songs, including En sommardag ('A Summer's Day'), Aftonen ('Evening'), I dalen ('In the Valley'), Måntro, jo jo ('Perhaps, oh yes!') or Nära ('Nearby'); a few have German texts: Am Aarensee, Der schlummernde Amor (Claudius) and eight Heine songs (*c*1860), among them Morgens steh ich auf und frage and Still ist die Nacht. The opera Frondörerna and the Symphony in C show an uncommon talent for orchestration. Among his other works, mostly in manuscript (S-Skma), are a Symphony in D, two string quintets, seven string quartets, a trio for piano, violin and viola, a sonata and short pieces for piano, and two works for soloists, chorus and piano, Om vinterkväll ('In the Winter Evening') and Drömmarne ('The Dreams', which was also orchestrated).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.R. Nyblom: Adolf Fredrik Lindblad: minnesteckning [Lindblad: reminiscences] (Stockholm, 1881); repr. in Författarnas estetiska studier (Uppsala, 1884), 1–102

L. Norman: 'Adolf Fredrik Lindblad som instrumentalkompositör', Svensk musiktidning, iii (1883), 178

'Adolf Fredrik Lindblads kompositioner', Svensk musiktidning, xxi (1901), 34–6

L. Dahlgren, ed.: Brev till Adolf Fredrik Lindblad fran Mendelssohn (Stockholm, 1913) [letters from Mendelssohn and others]

A. Ringström: 'Adolf Fredrik Lindblad som ung', Vår sang, i (1928), 47–9, 99–102, 127–9, 163–5

F.H. Törnblom: 'Adolf Fredrik Lindblad som operakompositör', STMf, xvii (1935), 108–24

F.H. Törnblom: 'Adolf Fredrik Lindblad och Jenny Lind', STMf, xxiii (1941), 43–55

K. Linder: Den unge Adolf Fredrik Lindblad (1801–27) (diss., U. of Uppsala, 1973)

M. Tegen: 'Adolf Fredrik Lindblad', Musiken i Sverige, iii, ed. L. Jonsson and M. Tegen (Stockholm, 1992), 329–40

KERSTIN LINDER

Lindblad, Otto Jonas (b Karlstorp, Småland, 31 March 1809; d Norra Mellby, Skåne, 26 Jan 1864). Swedish composer, choral director and violinist. During his ten years as a pupil at Växjö Cathedral School he devoted much time to playing the violin and singing in male-voice trios and quartets. In 1829 he entered Lund University, where he studied humanities while earning a living as a private teacher. He received his essential musical training from Mathias Lundholm, Ole Bull's teacher, who lived in Lund from 1832 to 1836. In 1836 Lindblad played in the orchestra of the Heuser opera company and toured with part of it as orchestra leader. He also directed the Lund University Male Chorus (founded 1831) for more than ten years, soon making it famous abroad and stimulating the organization of similar choruses in Copenhagen and Christiania. In 1841 Lindblad took part in the music festival in Hamburg as an honorary guest. There he also had a few composition lessons from K.-A. Krebs. In 1846 he made a long tour through Sweden with his male quartet, which was received with great enthusiasm. His musical activities and long illnesses had prolonged his studies, but in 1844 he eventually graduated as filosofie magister. He received some money from the university for his work with the student chorus and earned more through musical soirées at which he and his friends gave a small concert and then played for dancing. But his economic situation was so bad that he became a parish clerk in Norra Mellby, 40 miles north of Lund. From 1847 to his death he was leader of the congregational singing in the two parish churches, both without an organ, and he was one of the first in the country to organize a parish church choir. He was elected a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in Stockholm in 1857. Monuments to him have been erected in Lund and in Sösdala near Norra Mellby.

Lindblad's compositions are nearly all vocal. His solo songs with piano accompaniment do not attain the level of his many male-voice a cappella songs; one of these, Ur svenska hjärtans djup ('From the depths of Swedish hearts'), to a text by C.W.A. Strandberg, is the hymn for the King of Sweden. The lyrical Orfeus sjöng (C.A. Hagberg's translation of Shakespeare's 'Orpheus with his lute') and Till skogs en liten fågel flög ('A small bird flew towards the forest'), on a theme resembling that of the second movement of Beethoven's Piano Sonata op.13, are also often sung. Lindblad's setting of Sätherberg's Vintern rasat ut ('Winter raged out') is among the best-known Swedish spring songs, while Ångbåtssång ('Steamship song'), to Lindblad's own words, is a memory of the close contacts between the universities of Lund and Copenhagen. The Lund University library has a collection of Lindblad's manuscripts and printed compositions as well as his autobiography and letters.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SBL (F. Bohlin) [incl. list of works]

G.A. Feuk: Otto Lindblad och hans sångare 1840–1846 [Otto Lindblad and his singers] (Lund, 1882)

T. Nerman: Otto Lindblad: ett sångaröde (Uppsala, 1930)

B. Möller: Lundensisk studentsång under ett sekel [A century of student singing at Lund] (Lund, 1931)

L. Jonsson: Ljusets riddarvakt: 1800 talets studentsang utövad som offentlig samhällskonst [The knightly guard of light: student songs of the 1800s as official communal art form] (diss., U. of Uppsala, 1990)

FOLKE BOHLIN

Linde, (Anders) Bo (Leif) (b Gävle, 1 Jan 1933; d Gävle, 2 Oct 1970). Swedish composer. After theory lessons with Bengtsson he studied composition with Larsson and the piano with Wibergh at the Stockholm Academy of Music (1948–52). In 1953–4 he studied conducting in Vienna and travelled in Italy and Spain. He taught music theory at the Stockholm Borgarskola (1957–60) and then lived in Gävle as a composer and music critic. Linde was associated with a group of young composers characterized as '50-talisterna' ('belonging to the 1950s'), a group which looked back to the 1930s, particularly to Larsson, and to composers such as Britten and Shostakovich. He wrote with great facility and technical skill, notably in the vocal pieces.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sinfonia fantastica, op.1, 1951; Preludio e finale, op.16, str, 1955; Vn Conc., op.18, 1957; Sinfonia, op.23, 1960; Conc. for Orch, 1962; Vc Conc., op.29, 1965

Chbr: Str Qt, op.9, 1953; Vn Sonata, op.10, 1953; Divertimento, op.25, fl, vc, pf, 1962; Str Trio, op.37, 1968; Sonata a 3, op.38, pf trio, 1968

Choral: Symfoni i ord, op.33, 1966

Songs: 4 ballader, op.6; 2 naiva sånger, op.20; Sånger om våren, op.40; 4 allvarliga sånger

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Jacobsson: 'Bo Linde', Tonfallet (1983), no.12, 5–16
K. Wedin: 'Tankar om Bo Linde', Musikrevy, xxxviii (1983), 8–10

HANS ÅSTRAND

Linde, Hans-Martin (b Werne, nr Dortmund, 24 May 1930). Swiss recorder player, flautist, conductor and composer of German birth. He studied the flute with Gustav Scheck and conducting with Konrad Lechner at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Freiburg (1947–51), then became solo flautist of the Cappella Coloniensis of WDR at Cologne. A chance meeting with August Wenzinger in Cologne led to his appointment to the Schola Cantorum at Basle in 1957 and his joining the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis. He directs the vocal ensemble and in 1971 became joint director of the concert group. His high international reputation as a recorder player and flautist (he plays modern and Baroque flutes), is founded on an impeccable virtuoso technique and a scholarly sense of style. Linde tours widely and his extensive and important recordings include flute concertos by Leclair, Mozart, Stamitz and Dittersdorf, and recorder concertos by Sammartini, Vivaldi and Naudot. With his own Linde-Consort, augmented as required, he has recorded works ranging from early English consort music to Baroque orchestral and choral works. He has appeared as a guest conductor with several orchestras in Europe and the USA, and has conducted a number of 18th-century operas, including Keiser's Tomyris (1988, Ludwigshafen) and Vivaldi's Griselda (1989, Lugwigshafen). His compositions include a concerto for recorder and strings (1993), and he has written Kleine Anleitung zum Verzieren alter Musik (1958), and Handbuch des Blockflötenspiels (1962/R; Eng. trans. 1981). (J.M. Thomson: Recorder Profiles (London, 1972), 43–6)

J.M. THOMSON

Lindegren, Johan (b Ullared, 7 Jan 1842; d Stockholm, 8 June 1908). Swedish organist, teacher, composer and scholar. He attended the Swedish Royal Academy of Music from 1860 to 1865, studying composition with the elder Behrens, the piano with van Boom and the violin with Randel. From 1861 he was répétiteur of the Stockholm Opera as well as a singer with the opera chorus, and from 1876 he taught counterpoint at the conservatory; he became a music teacher at the Jacobshögskolan in 1881 and director of the choir of Stockholm Cathedral (Storkyrka) in 1884. In addition to his official duties he was increasingly active from the 1870s as a private teacher of counterpoint and composition. As a musicologist his chief interest was in church music; he edited the journal Tidning för kyrkomusik (1881–2), took part in the preparation of the music for the Swedish church handbook (1895) and published an edition (1905, 2/1906) and a study (1907) of Swedish chorales.

Lindegren was known during his lifetime mainly as a contrapuntist and teacher, and his pupils included a number of notable Swedish composers, among them Beckman, Alfvén, Melchers, Bäck, Håkanson and Wiklund. One of the best of his own compositions is the string quintet (*c*1870); in his piano works, such as the Fuga uti fri stil (1866) and the canon Stor sonat in B minor op.2 (1869), he combined his contrapuntal mastery with idiomatic, virtuoso writing for the instrument. In 1903 he was elected a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Blom: 'Johan Lindegrens lif och verksamhet', Kyrkomusik och skolsång, iv (1910), 111, 115
C.-A. Moberg: 'Johan Lindegren', Kyrkosångsförbundet, xvii (1942), 39
H. Alfvén: 'Min lärare Johan Lindegren', Musikmänniskor, ed. F.H. Törnblom (Uppsala, 1943), 121–31
H. Alfvén: 'Johan Lindegren', Första satsen: ungdomsminnen (Stockholm, 1946), 193–207

ROBERT LAYTON

Lindelheim, Joanna Maria ['The Baroness'] (d London, Dec 1724). German or Flemish soprano, active in England. According to Burney, she was trained in Italy and sang at many German courts before appearing in London concerts in 1703. She was a pupil of Haym, with whom she lived for some 20 years. She sang at the Queen's Theatre, Haymarket, in Jakob Greber's Gli amori d'Ergasto in 1705, and in 1706 at Drury Lane in Haym's arrangement of Giovanni Bononcini's Camilla as 'Mrs Joanna Maria'. Called 'The Baroness' in the Camilla score, she appeared under that title subsequently, in a Drury Lane revival of Camilla in 1707, and the pasticcios Love's Triumph and Tomiri and Haym's arrangement of Alessandro Scarlatti's Pirro e Demetrio at the Queen's Theatre in 1708. She became a singing teacher but continued to appear in concerts at least up to 1717.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH
L. Lindgren: 'The Accomplishments of the Learned and Ingenious Nicola Francesco Haym (1678–1729)', Studi musicali, xiv (1987), 247–380

WINTON DEAN

Lindeman. Norwegian family of musicians.

(1) Ole Andreas Lindeman (b Surnadal, 17 Jan 1769; d Trondheim, 26 Feb 1857). Organist, composer and teacher. He attended the cathedral school in Trondheim and in 1788 went to study law in Copenhagen. However, his prevailing interest was in music, and he studied with I.G. Wernicke, who had been schooled in the tradition of Bach by his teacher J.P. Kirnberger. In 1799 Lindeman was appointed organist at the Vår Frue Kirke (church of Our Lady) in Trondheim, a post he held for the rest of his life. He edited the first book of Norwegian chorales, which was published in 1835 and officially authorized in 1838. With this book and his work as a music teacher, he had considerable influence on Norwegian church music in the 19th century. He composed a number of small piano pieces, mainly dances in the galant style, and some songs. His son Fredrik Christian Lindeman (b Trondheim, 4 Dec 1803; d Trondheim, 29 July 1868) was organist at the Vår Frelsers Kirke while studying in Christiania (Oslo), and from 1857 to 1868 he was organist at the Vår Frue Kirke in Trondheim. Another son, Just Riddervold Lindeman (b Trondheim, 26 Sept 1822; d Trondheim, 21 Jan 1894), was organist of Trondheim Cathedral from 1858 until his death and composed organ works, piano pieces and songs.

(2) Ludvig Mathias Lindeman (b Trondheim, 28 Nov 1812; d Christiania, 23 May 1887). Organist, music scholar and composer, son of (1) Ole Andreas Lindeman. The most important musician of the family, he received his music education, largely within the tradition of Bach, from his father, for whom he deputized as organist from the age of 12. In 1833 he began studies of theology in Christiania, but he devoted himself to music from 1839, when he became organist of the Vår Frelsers Kirke, a position he retained for the rest of his life. His concert activity included a successful London journey in 1871, when he participated in the inauguration of the Albert Hall organ. He was very active as a collector of folksongs and editor of church music, and was also a cellist, playing from 1834 to 1840 in the theatre orchestra of Christiania; he held a teaching post at the theological seminary from 1849 to 1887. Also at Christiania, jointly with his son Peter Brynie, he founded an organ school in 1883, which grew to the status of conservatory by 1894.

The first product of Lindeman's interest in folk music, the Norske fjeldmelodier harmonisk bearbeidede, was published in 1841, but he only began to collect systematically when he received a public stipend in 1848. In the next several years he travelled extensively in the southern part of Norway, and between 1850 and 1885 he published several folksong collections, of which Aeldre og nyere norske fjeldmelodier in particular has been of fundamental and lasting importance for the study of Norwegian folk music. His most important achievement as a church musician was the chorale book, officially authorized by the Norwegian church in 1877 and used until its replacement in 1926. In addition to Lindeman's harmonizations of earlier melodies, the book includes a number of his own melodies, which have gradually found their way into Norwegian church singing. In the older tunes he made a number of rhythmic changes. Instead of going back to the old forms, he attempted to give new life to the melodies by such means as dotting certain accented notes, thereby strengthening the regular stress pattern. His other compositions, chiefly organ works, include two sets of chorale variations, three fugues on B–A–C–H and two collections of preludes, as well as church and ceremonial cantatas and piano pieces. Most of Lindeman's compositions reveal his admiration for the music of the Baroque era. They are stylistically quite different from the more Romantic works of his compatriots Halfdan Kjerulf and Edvard Grieg, who nevertheless were influenced by Lindeman's folk music collection.

EDITIONS

CHURCH MUSIC

Melodier til W.A. Wexels christelige psalmer (Christiania, 1840)
Martin Luthers aandelige sange (Christiania, 1859)
Norsk messebog (Christiania, 1870, 2/1885)
Melodier til Landstads Salmebog (Christiania, 3/1873)
Koralbog: indeholdende de i Landstads salmebog forekommende melodier (Christiania, 1878)

FOLK MUSIC

Norske fjeldmelodier harmonisk bearbeidede (Christiania, 1841)
Norske folkeviser udsatte for fire mandsstemmer (Christiania, 1850)
Aeldre og nyere norske fjeldmelodier: samlede og bearbeidede for pianoforte (Christiana, 1853–67/R)
Halvhundrede norske fjeldmelodier harmoniserede for mandsstemmer (Christiania, 1862)
30 norske kjaempevise-melodier harmoniserede for 3 lige stemmer (Christiania, 1863)
Norske kjaempevise-melodier harmoniserede for blandede stemmer (Christiania, 1885)
Kingo-Tona: fra Vang, Valdres, ed. O.M. Sandvik, Norsk musikkgranskning årbok 1939 (Oslo, 1940)

(3) Peter Brynie Lindeman (b Christiania, 1 Feb 1858; d Oslo, 1 Jan 1930). Organist and editor, son of (2) Ludvig Mathias Lindeman. He studied music with his father and at the Stockholm Conservatory, and for many years directed the Christiania Conservatory, which he and his father had founded in 1883. From 1880 to 1923 he was an organist in Christiania, and he edited the journal Musikbladet from 1908 to 1921. He composed an oratorio and other vocal church music, chamber music, piano and organ works. His brother Kristian Theodor Madsen Lindeman (b Christiania, 8 March 1870; d Trondheim, 5 Nov 1934) was cathedral organist in Trondheim from 1894 until his death, and was a prolific composer, especially of choral works.

(4) Trygve Henrik Lindeman (b Christiania, 30 Nov 1896; d Oslo, 24 Oct 1979). Music teacher, son of (3) Peter Brynie Lindeman. He studied in Christiania, Copenhagen and Rome and in 1926 succeeded his father as director of the Oslo Conservatory, holding this post until 1969. His editions include several textbooks.

PEDAGOGICAL WORKS

Laerebok i taktering for kordirigenter (Oslo, 1939)
Elementaer musikklaere (Oslo, 1943)
Tonetreffing og musikkdiktat (Oslo, 1951)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NBL (O.M. Sandvik)
T. Lindeman: Den trönderske familie Lindeman (Trondheim, 1924)
O.M. Sandvik: Kingo-Tona: Ludvig Mathias Lindemans optegnelser i Valdres 1848 (Oslo, 1941) [on Lindeman's transcrs. from Valdres]
O.M. Sandvik: Ludvig Mathias Lindeman og folkemelodien (Oslo, 1950)
A. Hernes: Ole Andreas Lindeman og hans tid (Oslo, 1956)
Ø. Gaukstad: 'Ludvig Mathias Lindemans komposisjoner: bibliografi I', Norsk musikkgranskning årbok 1959–61, 96–165
Ø. Gaukstad: 'Ludvig Mathias Lindeman: bibliografi II', Norsk musikkgranskning årbok 1962–71, 81–240
Ø. Gaukstad: 'Ludv. M. Lindeman på samlerferd i Gudbrandsdalen 1864', Norsk musikkgranskning årbok 1962–71
A. Roynstrand, ed.: Ludvig Mathias Lindeman: Samlerferd 1851: Oppskrifter og ei dagbok (Oslo, 1978)
E.R. Keyn: Ludvig M. Lindemans orgelkomposisjoner (thesis, U. of Oslo, 1984)
A.S. Bertelsen: 'Salmesangstriden i Norge på 1800-tallet: om musikalsk form og estetiske prinsipper', SMN, xvi (1990), 141–59
I. Karevold: Kontinentale impulser i en norsk musikerslekt før 1850 (Göteborg, 1996)

NILS GRINDE

Lindeman, Osmo (b Helsinki, 16 May 1929; d Helsinki, 15 Feb 1987). Finnish composer. He studied at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki with Fougstedt (diploma 1959) and in Munich with Orff. As a lecturer in theoretical subjects at the Sibelius Academy (1961–84) he worked to develop the institution's tuition in electronic and computer music. He began composing in a freely tonal style (Symphony no.1, 1958), then proceeded to dodecaphony and web-like textures (Piano Concerto no.1, 1963; Symphony no.2, 1964; Piano Concerto no.2, 1965) before moving to the use of aleatory techniques in the spirit of the Polish school (Concerto for chamber orchestra, 1967). A visit to Poland in 1968 led him to concentrate exclusively on electronic music and develop a studio at his home. In 1972 his Ritual won first prize in the Italian section of the ISCM. Kinetic Forms (1969) introduced stereophony into Finnish electronic music, and he used the same technical approach – a rapid digital sequencer – in his Mechanical Music for Stereophonic Tape and Tropicana. Although he did at times use concrete devices (such as the hum of voices in Spectacle, 1974), pure electronic sound and abstract constructions remained his ideal. His music for film won the Jussi award.

WORKS

Orch: Sym. no.1, 1959; Pf Conc. no.1, 1963; Sym. no.2 (Sinfonia inornata), 1964; Pf Conc. no.2, 1965; Variable, 1967; Huutokauppa [The Auction] (ballet, W. Chorell), 1967

Chbr: Str Trio, 1958; Partita per percussione, 1966; Music, chbr orch, 1966; Conc., chbr orch, 1965

El-ac: Kinetic Forms, 1969; Mechanical Music for Stereophonic Tape, 1969; Tropicana, 1970; Midas, 1970; Ritual, 1972; Spectacle, 1974

Film music: Punainen viiva [The Red Line], 1959; Kaasua, komisario Palmu [Step on it, Inspector Palmu], 1962

WRITINGS

Elektronisen musiikin teknologia [Electronic music technology] (Helsinki, 1974)

Johdatus musiikinteoriaan [An introduction to music theory] (Keuruu, 1976)

Elektroninen musiikki [Electronic music] (Keuruu, 1980)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Suomalaisia säveltäjiä [Finnish composers] (Helsinki, 1994)

M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [The history of Finnish music], iv (Helsinki, 1995)

K. Aho and others: Finnish Music (Helsinki, 1996)

MIKKO HEINIÖ

Lindemann, Johannes (b Gotha, ?1550–55; d Gotha, after 1633). German composer, music editor and teacher. He was related to Luther. He was educated at the famous grammar schools of Schulpforta and Gotha and in 1568 he enrolled at Jena University. For many years he was Kantor at Gotha. On 1 January 1598, probably referring to his work in this post, he described himself as being in his 27th year as an employee of Duke Johann Casimir of Saxony, whose service he must thus have entered in 1572, the year in which the regency of Gotha had been transferred to the duke from the house of Saxe-Coburg. He evidently played an active part in the musical life of Gotha. He communicated with a number of other musicians, among them Philipp Avenarius, Melchior Franck and Bartholomäus Helder. As late as 1634 he was a member of the town council. His work as a musician and teacher enhanced the social standing of music in the area, to the undoubted benefit of several of his younger contemporaries, especially Michael Altenburg. He also did much to foster in Thuringia an interest in recent Italian music. He may have studied in Italy; certainly he had contacts there, in particular with Gastoldi. His most important work is Amorum filii Dei decades duae … Zwantzig Weyhenachten Gesenglein … zum Theil unter … Madrigalia und Balletti (Erfurt, 1594, 1596 and 1598), a three-volume anthology of contrafacta of five-part Italian secular pieces. Eight are by Gastoldi, and the Latin title of the collection may perhaps be seen as recalling Gastoldi's pieces Amor, tu che congiungi and Filli vezzosa e lieta. Lindemann's uncle, Cyriak Lindemann, probably knew Georg Fabricius, one of the leading hymnologists of the Reformation period, who studied in Italy for four years. Johannes Lindemann's particular significance as one of the first to marry the Italian madrigal with the chorale tradition of central Germany and Thuringia is thus brought into focus. An illustration is afforded by his chorale In dir ist Freude, a contrafactum of Gastoldi's L'innamorate; it became one of the best-known Protestant chorales. Nearly all of Lindemann's music is lost, though there are isolated hymns in the Cantionale sacrum (Gotha, 1646–8) and in the other Thuringian collections.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.C.W. Lindemann: 'Magister Johannes Lindemann', MMg, x (1878), 73–9

G. Kraft: Die thüringische Musikkultur um 1600 (Würzburg, 1941), i

A. Fett: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Gotha von den Anfängen bis zum Tode G.H. Stölzels (1749): ein Beitrag zur Musikgeschichte Sachsen-Thüringens (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1952)

I. de Sutter: 'Een Kerklied in Renaissance-stijl', Adem, xviii (1982), 85–7

G. KRAFT/CLYTUS GOTTWALD

Linden, Albert vander. See VANDER LINDEN, ALBERT.

Linden, Jaap ter (b Rotterdam, 10 April 1947). Dutch Baroque cellist, viol player and conductor. While studying the cello at the Royal Conservatory in The Hague, ter Linden began to play the viol. However, before settling to a career in music, he also pursued studies in psychology. Together with Ton Koopman, ter Linden founded the Baroque quartet Musica da Camera in 1966. Later he joined Musica Antiqua Köln and the English Concert, and in 1979 was a founder member of Ton Koopman's Amsterdam Baroque Orchestra as principal cellist, a position he held until 1998, making many important recordings with the orchestra. Ter Linden has also made numerous CDs of chamber music, notably with Wilbert Hazelzet, Andrew Manze and Lars Ulrik Mortensen, and has recorded the Bach cello suites. He is widely respected by his colleagues for his inspiring and selfless musicianship. Ter Linden has worked as guest conductor of the Portland Baroque Orchestra, the European Union Baroque Orchestra and the Amsterdam Nieuw Sinfonietta. He is professor of the Baroque cello and the viol at the Royal Conservatory in The Hague.

LUCY ROBINSON

Linder, Alf (b Hammarö, 28 July 1907; d Stockholm, 21 Dec 1983). Swedish organist. He studied at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music (1925–33, organ with Otto Olsson), in Leipzig (1938–9, with Günther Ramin and Johann Nepomuk David) and in Berlin (1940–42, with Fritz Heitmann and Hermann Grabner). After his début in 1933 in the Gustav Vasa church in Stockholm, he was appointed organist at the Oscarskyrkan, with its famous Marcussen organ, in 1943, remaining in the post until his death. He also taught at the Swedish Royal Academy from 1938 (becoming professor in 1958), served as organist at the Konserthus (1940–54) and toured widely at home and abroad. Linder was one of the first virtuoso Swedish organists and the first to perform all Bach's organ music and made many recordings, including the complete Buxtehude organ works (in 1944). He gave model performances of Reger's organ music. He was made a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music in 1954.

HANS ÅSTRAND

Lindgren, (Karl) Adolf (b Trosa, 14 March 1846; d Stockholm, 8 Feb 1905). Swedish music critic and historian. He studied philosophy and music theory at Uppsala from 1863, graduating in 1873, and from 1874 until his death was music critic to the newspaper Aftonbladet. With Vult von Steijern he founded the Svensk musiktidning (1881–1913), which became the most important music journal in Sweden, and was its editor until 1884. He wrote articles for numerous Scandinavian journals and newspapers and was music correspondent for several music journals in Germany. Lindgren's writings on music, of which the most important are the sections on music in the first edition of the encyclopedia Nordisk familjebok (1875–99), are discerning and competent. They are regarded as one of the bases for the development of Swedish musicology.

WRITINGS

(selective list)

Musikens katekes (Stockholm, 1877) [trans. of J.C. Lobe: Katechismus der Musik, Leipzig, 1851]
Satser i svensk verslära (Uppsala, 1880)
Om Wagnerismen (Stockholm, 1881)
Svenske hofkapellmästare 1782–1882(Stockholm, 1882)
'Nunnans dröm (en 600årig folkvisa)', Nyare bidrag till kännedom om de svenska landsmålen ock svenskt folklif, vi (1888), 7
'August Södermans manuskriptsamling', Svensk musiktidning, viii–ix (1888–9)
'En tabulaturbok i Kalmar', Ny illustrerad tidning, xxix (1893), 400, 411, 417, 436
'Om polskemelodiernas härkomst', Nyare bidrag till kännedom om de svenska landsmålen och svenskt folklif, xii (1893), 5
'Till frågan om den nordiska folkvisans ursprung', Nordisk tidskrift för vetenskap, konst och industri, new ser., viii (1895), 551–63
Musikaliska studier (Stockholm, 1896)
Drei harmonische Studien (Leipzig, 1910)
'Ur svenska musikens hävder', in K. Valentin: Populär allmän musikhistoria (Stockholm, 1916)
Several opera librettos, texts of choral works, etc.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SBL (L. Stenkvist)
S. Söderman: 'Adolf Lindgren', Svensk musiktidning, xxv (1905), 21–3
Å. Davidsson: Bibliografi över svensk musiklitteratur 1800–1945 (Uppsala, 1948, 2/1980)
S. Dahlstedt: Fakta och förnuft (diss., U. of Uppsala, 1986)

KATHLEEN DALE/AXEL HELMER

Lindgren, Pär (Jörgen) (b Göteborg, 16 Jan 1952). Swedish composer. With a background in rock music, he first trained as a guitar teacher at the Framnäs School of Music (1970–74), then studied composition with Bucht and Bodin at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm (1975–9). In 1980 he began to teach in the field of electro-acoustic music at the college and in 1998 became professor of composition there.

Electro-acoustic music was his main concern from the late 1970s but more recently a sophisticated, versatile and finely structured instrumental music has become increasingly prominent. He is frequently inspired by non-European music, as in Oaijé (first prize at the International Rostrum for Composers in Paris, 1996), the peculiar sound and line play of which was influenced by Arabic patterns. Visual ideas of form are sometimes converted into billowing patterns, as in Fragments of a Circle, conceived after Leonardo da Vinci's drawings of the movements of water, or in Sea Cuts and Islands, where the abstracted patterns have been taken from nature. Via algorithms and computer programmes he consistently seeks to realize his visions as audible music. His dream is of a translucently clear and flickering complex music which stands in a new relationship with tradition.

WORKS

Orch: Brutet ackord [Broken Chord], variation no.2, 14 str, 1982; Bowijaw, str orch, 1984; Sånger av ljus [Songs of Light], S/bamboobow, chbr orch, 1985; Meander, 2 pf conc., orch, 1985–8; Fragments of a Circle, 1989–91; Oaijé, lines and figurations, 1992–3; Tutu, chbr orch, 1996; Wing, str orch, 1996; Islands, trbn conc., 1997
Chbr: Odypasse, wind qnt, 1976; Supermenageriet [The Super-Menagerie], fl, vn, vc, gui, tape, elecs, 1977; Arabesques of Decay, fl, ob, cl, gui, hp, perc, 1978; Mania, fl, vn, pf, 1978–9; Metamorphose, perc solo, 1985; Mimesis, 2 prep pf, tape, 1986–7; Stilla [Calm], variation on a popular Indian melody, vib, 1987; Guggi-Guggi, trbn, tape, 1990–91; Two for Three, perc, 1993; logå: minor inventions, fl, bn, 1993; Woodpecker's Chant, perc, 1994; Beep-Ooh, cl, perc, 1995; Sea Cuts, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 2 perc, 1995
Vocal: Apparatus (P. Lagerkvist), 1v, cl, 1977; Den förstenade [The Petrified] (textless), S, tape, 1982; Shadowes that in darknesse dwell, fantasy on a song by John Dowland (textless), S, chbr ens, 1982–3
El-ac and other media: Trait blanc, 1977; Supermenageriet, 1977; Storstaddjungel [City Jungle] (film score), 1977, collab. T. Zwedberg; Electric Music, 1978; Terra nova, (theatre music), 1979, collab. M. Edlund; Högspänning [Voltage], 1979–80; Hoppla vi lever [Houp la! We are Alive], (theatre music), 1980; Nattkorridor, 1980; Rummet [The Room], 1980; Det andra rummet [The Other Room], 1980; Brutet A [Broken A], variation no.1, 1981; Brutet ackord, variation no.3, 1981; Fas I [Phase I], 1981; Öppningar [Openings], elec music to a picture by Jörgen Lindgren, 1982; Den förstenade [The Petrified], 1982; Cirkusbågen [The Circus Bow], 1983; Sound Direction, 1983; Ikaros, variation no.1, 1983; Syntetics, 1984; Houdinism, 1984; Mimesis, 1986–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Jennefelt: 'Om den unge svenske elektronmusik', DMt, liii (1978–9), 260–62
J. Beckman: 'Tendenser i svensk elektronmusik', DMt, lviii (1983–4), 33–5
G. Bergendal: 'Förvandlingar på flera plan', Nutida musik, xxxiv/4 (1991), 12–15 [on Meander]
H.-G. Peterson: 'Hackspetten som guide till Pär Lindgrens labyrinter', Nutida musik, xxxviii/2 (1995), 37–46

ROLF HAGLUND

Lindlar, Heinrich (b Bergisch Gladbach, 6 Aug 1912). German musicologist and critic. He studied music in Cologne (1932–5) and musicology at the universities of Cologne, Bonn and Berlin with Schering and Bücken (1935–9). He took the doctorate at Cologne in 1939 with a dissertation on Pfitzner's songs with piano accompaniment. After war service and a period as a POW until 1949, he was a lecturer in the Cologne Tonkünstlerseminar (1949–57) and subsequently at the Cologne Musikhochschule (1957–87), where he specialized in new music. From 1949 he was also music critic for various daily newspapers and periodicals. In 1965 he was given an additional lectureship at the Musikhochschule in Freiburg, and in 1969 he was made head of the Rheinische Musikschule in Cologne, a position he held until 1976. Lindlar has consistently championed contemporary music, notably in his writings and in his work as editor of Kontrapunkte (1958–65) and the series Musik der Zeit (1952–60). He commissioned the first comprehensive studies of Webern, Fortner and Stockhausen. The Hungarian Academy of Arts and Sciences awarded him the Bartók medal in 1984.

WRITINGS

Hans Pfitzners Klavierlied (diss., U. of Cologne, 1939; Würzburg, 1940)

'Gian Francesco Malipiero: Aufriss einer Werkchronologie', Musica, xi (1957), 128–32
Igor Strawinskys sakraler Gesang: Geist und Form der christkultischen Kompositionen (Regensburg, 1957)
ed.: Meyers Handbuch über die Musik (Mannheim, 1961, 5/1978–9 as Rororo Musikhandbuch)
Robert Vorberg Musikverlag 1862–1962 (Bad Godesberg, 1962)
77 Premieren: ein Opera-Journal (Rodenkirchen, 1965) [collected opera reviews 1958–64]
ed.: Herman Reutter: Werk und Wirken: Festschrift (Mainz, 1965) [incl. 'Randnoten zu Reutters Liedschaffen', 18–25]
Hundert Jahre Edition Peters (Frankfurt, 1968)
'Spätstil? Zu Schostakowitschs Sinfonien Nr.13, 14, 15', SMz, cxiii (1973), 340–45
ed.: 130 Jahre Rheinische Musikschule Köln (Cologne, 1975) [incl. 'Zur Geschichte des Musikschulwesens in Köln seit 1815']
Lübbes Strawinsky-Lexikon (Bergisch Gladbach, 1982/R)
Lübbes Bartók-Lexikon (Bergisch Gladbach, 1984/R)
'Musikalische Zitate: Diakritisches zu Schostakowitsch und Strawinsky', Dmitri Schostakowitsch: Cologne 1985, 345–54
150 Jahre Bote & Bock Musikverlag (Berlin, 1988)
Wörterbuch der Musik (Frankfurt, 1989)
Igor Strawinsky: Lebenwege/Bühnenwerke (Zürich, 1994)
Igor Strawinsky: Liederwelten und geistliche Werke (Zürich, 1997)
Loreley-Report: Heine im Wandel der Rheinliedromantik (Cologne, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Lindlar: 'Lindlar, Heinrich', Rheinische Musiker, vii, ed. D. Kämper (Cologne, 1972), 74–7 [incl. list of pubns]
Heinrich Lindlar: Leben mit Musik: Aufsätze und Vorträge, Köln 1960–1992: Festgabe (Berlin, 1993) [incl. list of writings]

HANSPETER KRELLMANN/DIETRICH KAEMPER

Lindley, Robert (b Rotherham, 4 March 1776; d London, 13 June 1855). English cellist. His father, a respected amateur, started teaching him the violin when he was five, and the cello four years later. By the time he was 16, he had made such progress that the younger Cervetto, hearing him play, undertook to give him free tuition. Almost immediately, Lindley was summoned to the Brighton Theatre to deputize for a soloist; his performance apparently caused a sensation and he was engaged by the theatre, where he frequently played before the Prince Regent. In 1794 Lindley succeeded John Sperati as principal cello at the Italian Opera in London and at all the major concerts. Dragonetti joined the Opera the same year and he and Lindley became working companions, sharing a desk at the Opera, the Philharmonic, the Ancient Concerts and provincial festivals for many years. At the Opera they were particularly well known for their accompaniments of recitativo secco, at a time (up to *c*1837) when keyboard instruments were absent from the continuo group. Rockstro recorded that 'the general style of their accompaniment was exceedingly simple, consisting only of plain chords, played arpeggiando; but occasionally the two old friends would launch out into passages as those shown in the following example; Dragonetti playing the large notes, and Lindley the small ones' (ex.1).

Lindley and Dragonetti also became famous in the 1820s and 30s for their exciting performances of Corelli's violin and trio sonatas in arrangements for cello(s) and double bass. In 1823 Lindley was appointed professor at the newly opened RAM; Charles Lucas was possibly his most distinguished pupil. From 1836 to 1839 Lindley and Nicolas Mori gave Classical Chamber Concerts at Willis's Rooms, in competition with Blagrove's Quartett Concerts. Lindley retired in 1851.

Lindley's technique appears to have been outstanding, and his tone remarkable for its fine quality and volume. B.H. Romberg, hearing him in London, told Salomon 'He is the devil', and departed for Germany; that he left in jealous rage is probably apocryphal. Edmund van der Straeten, however, quoted Vidal's comment: '[Lindley's] playing was cold, and in technique and style he remained far behind Romberg, Lamarre, Bohrer and Servais'. Lindley played an Italian cello long attributed to Giovanni Grancino; in 1884, however, the label was removed, and the original label, still in good condition underneath, assigns the instrument to Carlo Giuseppe Testore, 1690. Lindley's compositions, many of which were written for didactic purposes, are unremarkable; they include four cello concertos, duos for two cellos and for cello and violin, solos, a cello tutor and a piano piece, Caprice bohème.

His son William (b London, 18 Oct 1801; d Manchester, 12 Aug 1869) was also a cellist. A pupil of his father, he played in the orchestras at the King's Theatre, the Concerts of Ancient Music and the Philharmonic Society in the 1820s, sometimes appearing with Robert Lindley and Dragonetti in trio sonatas. He showed great promise, but his delicate health and extreme nervousness prevented him from gaining prominence as a soloist, and he eventually withdrew from public performance. Another son, Charles (d 1842), played the cello; Robert Lindley's daughter Eliza (1814–99) married the composer John Barnett.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Brown-StrattonBMB; DNB (J.A. Fuller Maitland); Grove2('Recitative'; W.S. Rockstro)
H. Phillips: Musical and Personal Recollections During Half a Century (London, 1864)
E. van der Straeten: The History of the Violoncello (London, 1915/R)
P.A. Scholes: The Mirror of Music, 1844–1944: a Century of Musical Life in Britain as Reflected in the Pages of the 'Musical Times' (London, 1947)
F.M. Palmer: Domenico Dragonetti in England (1794–1846): the Career of a Double Bass Virtuoso (Oxford, 1997), 99–103, 114–18, 127–34

LYNDA MACGREGOR/CHRISTINA BASHFORD

Lindner, Friedrich (b Legnica, *c*1542; d Nuremberg, bur. 15 Sept 1597). German music editor, copyist, composer and writer on music. He became a choirboy at the Saxon electoral court at Dresden. On 29 September 1558, after his voice had broken, he entered the Schulpforta Gymnasium near Naumburg an der Saale, with a scholarship from the Elector of Saxony, and he later studied at the University of Leipzig. When Jacob Meiland was building up the musical establishment at the Ansbach court in 1564–5, he engaged Lindner, whom he knew from Dresden and Leipzig, as a tenor. Over the next few years Lindner was kept busy as a copyist, sending hymnals and Passions that he had copied to various courts and cities: for example, he sent a Passion by Meiland to Eger (now Cheb) and took part in the performance of it at St Niklas there in Holy Week 1571. He succeeded Meiland as vice-Kapellmeister at Ansbach in 1573. The temporary dissolution of the musical establishment at Ansbach led him in the late autumn of 1574 to take up the post of Kantor at the church and grammar school of the Egidienkirche, Nuremberg, and he held it until his death.

On 29 June 1575 Lindner directed the music at the dedication of the University of Altdorf, for which he himself had written a five-part setting of the antiphon Veni, Sancte Spiritus (see below). In 1576 he sent to the Emperor Rudolf II a Mantuan choirbook and received 40 gulden for it. At about this time he also came into contact with the Hassler family; it is not improbable that he was one of Hans Leo Hassler's teachers and that he encouraged him to make his journey to Venice. When in 1588 twelve leading Nuremberg citizens founded a new Musicalische Krentzleins-Gesellschaft, a private musical society, they engaged Lindner as one of their four professional musicians, and he retained this appointment too until his death.

During a period of over 20 years – from 1573, just before he was appointed at Nuremberg, until about 1595 – Lindner wrote out some 25 large folio choirbooks, each of about 20 folios; 16 of them survived in Nuremberg libraries (ten in D-Nla and six in Ngm). They contain 426 works (see Rubsamen), predominantly in five and six parts and entirely in Latin. This comprehensive Lutheran repertory is unparalleled in the other south German sources of the period. Lassus is particularly well represented, with 118 works, and it is clear, as Sandberger (1927) pointed out, that Lindner was one of his principal champions and was responsible in no small measure for his popularity at the time in southern Germany. Other well-represented composers include Teodore Riccio (with 26 works), Blasius Ammon (21 works) and Giovanni Contino (19 works).

In 1585, as a result of his long-standing connections with Italy, Lindner began editing a series of nine collective volumes, dominated by Italian music, both sacred and secular, and printed at Nuremberg by Catharina Gerlach; the series ended with the printer's death in 1591 and the transfer of her business to the Kauffmann family. The volumes are: Sacrae cantiones (RISM 1585[1]), Continuatio cantionum sacrarum (1588[2]), Gemma musicalis (1588[21]), Liber secundus Gemmae musicalis (1589[8]), Missae quinque quinis vocibus (1590[1]), Corollarium cantionum sacrarum (1590[5]), Tertius Gemmae musicalis liber (1590[20]), Magnificat (1591[1]) and Bicinia sacra ... in usum iuventutis scholasticae collecta (1591[27]). The first eight of these anthologies are almost wholly devoted to works by Italian composers, many of whom, according to one preface (1590[20]), had themselves sent their works to Lindner. Nuremberg thus became one of the earliest and most important gateways through which Italian music of the prima pratica, and to some extent of the seconda pratica, passed into Germany. In the Continuatio cantionum sacrarum Lindner included two motets by Hassler, his first published works. The last volume (1591[27]) stands apart from the other eight. Intended for singing and playing in school and in the home, its contents comprise 12 textless 'ricercari sive fantasiae' (no doubt solfeggi or instrumental exercises) and 68 texted pieces, 32 of them by Lassus, which together with other Dutch and German compositions considerably outnumber those by Italians. The upper partbook also contained a short music primer and introduction to singing, but this book is missing from the only known copy (in GB-Lbl).

The above-mentioned Veni, Sancte Spiritus (in D-Ngm) is Lindner's only extant complete work. It is a cantus firmus structure, with the melody placed in even notes in the bass and the other parts weaving essentially non-imitative, flowing counterpoint above it. The five-part motet Hodie Christus natus est (formerly in D-Bsb) is lost; another motet (in H-BA) survives incomplete.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (F. Krautwurst)

A. Sandberger: 'Bemerkungen zur Biographie Hans Leo Hasslers und seiner Brüder sowie zur Musikgeschichte der Städte Nürnberg und Augsburg im 16. und zu Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts': introduction to DTB, viii, Jg.v/1 (1904/R)

A. Sandberger: Introduction to Orlando di Lasso: Sämmtliche Werke, xxi (Leipzig, 1927)

G. Schmidt: Die Musik am Hofe der Markgrafen von Brandenburg-Ansbach (Kassel, 1956)

W.H. Rubsamen: 'The International "Catholic" Repertoire of a Lutheran Church in Nürnberg (1574–1597)', AnnM, v (1957), 229–327

FRANZ KRAUTWURST

Lindner Choirbooks. See SOURCES, MS, §IX, 21(iv).

Lindpaintner, Peter Josef von (b Koblenz, 8/9 Dec 1791; d Nonnenhorn, Lake Constance, 21 Aug 1856). German conductor and composer. As a small child, Lindpaintner, whose father was a tenor at the court of the Bishop-Elector of Trier, accompanied the court into exile in Augsburg after the French secularization of Trier. In 1806 the elector arranged for him to study composition with Peter Winter in Munich. Though Winter was an ineffective teacher, Lindpaintner made progress in composition, and his first opera, Demophoon, was successfully performed in Munich in 1811. The following year he became music director at the Isartortheater, and over the next six years produced another eight operas, of which the most successful were Der blinde Gärtner (?1813), Die Sternkönigin (1815), Pervonte (1816) and Die Rosenmädchen (1818). Schilling relates that he became complacent about his abilities during this period but that, having been convinced by an old friend that he had much more to learn, he resumed the study of composition, with the contrapuntist Joseph Graetz.

In 1819 Lindpaintner took up the post of Kapellmeister at Stuttgart, where he remained for the rest of his life. Here he established his reputation as one of the finest German conductors and continued to compose assiduously for the stage. A number of his operas were enthusiastically received, though few held the stage for long. Der Bergkönig (1825) and Der Vampyr (1828), which appeared in the same year as Marschner's more striking opera of the same name, responded to the burgeoning enthusiasm for supernatural subjects treated in the manner of Spohr and Weber, though they did not achieve equal popularity. Schilling observed in 1837: 'Unfortunately their texts are mostly of too little dramatic worth to allow his operas to obtain the recognition by the wider musical public that their musical worth deserves'. His comic opera Die Macht des Liedes (1836) and his later grand operas Die sicilianische Vesper (1843) and Lichtenstein (1846) gained moderate acclaim. Some of his ballet music (Aglaja, Zephyr und Rose and Zeila) and incidental music, to works such as Schiller's Der Lied von der Glocke, achieved a more lasting success.

Lindpaintner also enjoyed a reputation as a composer of lieder, sacred music and instrumental works. His songs, particularly Die Fahenwacht and Roland, were widely popular; among his sacred music, which included cantatas, masses and psalms, the oratorio Der Jüngling von Nain held a high place. His concertos and concertinos were notably successful, especially the two concertante symphonies for five wind instruments and orchestra. Lindpaintner's mastery of instrumentation was widely acknowledged, and his reorchestration of Handel's Judas Maccabeus was seen as one of his finest works. Lindpaintner's achievements were acknowledged by the bestowal of the aristocratic 'von' in 1844, but in his later years his reputation as a composer declined. In 1854 Hans von Bülow castigated 'the supreme impropriety of the pretensions with which Kapellmeister Lindpaintner now represents himself as the old master of the departing epoch, forgetting that Spohr alone can bear this honour'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Some of Lindpaintner's letters are in D-Bsb, and his Thematisches Verzeichnis meiner sämtlichen Werke, which includes biographical information, is in CH-S

SchillingE; StiegerO

W. Neumann: Peter von Lindpaintner (Kassel, 1856)

R. Krauss: Das Stuttgarter Hoftheater von den ältesten Zeiten bis zur Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1908)

R. Hänsler: Peter Lindpaintner als Opernkomponist (Stuttgart, 1928)

E. Schenk: 'Robert Schumann und Peter Lindpaintner in Wien', Festschrift Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. D. Weise (Bonn, 1957), 267–82

S. Johns: Das szenische Liederspiel zwischen 1800 und 1830 (Frankfurt, 1988)

R. Nägele: Peter Joseph von Lindpaintner: sein Leben, sein Werk (Tutzing, 1993)

CLIVE BROWN

Lindroth, Scott (Allen) (b Cincinnati, 16 Jan 1958). American composer. After graduating from the Eastman School (BMus 1980), he studied at Yale University (MM 1982). In 1990 he was appointed to a teaching position at Duke University. He has received a Revson/New York PO Fellowship, the Prix de Rome (1985) and a Guggenheim Fellowship (1988). A meticulous craftsman, Lindroth often employs 'detailed rhythmic structures which operate at both … local and structural levels' (Lindroth). This rhythmic organization reflects the influence of Boulez, Messiaen, Nancarrow and Reich, also recalling Cage in its use of telephone numbers and chance processes to determine rhythmic patterns. Lindroth's melodic gestures reflect the influences of jazz, minimalism and postwar European modernism.

Lindroth's works from the late 1980s combine rigorous rhythmic structures with an increased expressivity. Treatise on Tailors' Dummies (1988) incorporates references to Brahms and Wagner, as well as to the 1930s popular song Temptation. Subsequent compositions borrow from Sousa marches (Clash and Glitter, 1989) and the string figurations of Corelli and Vivaldi (Duo for Violins, 1990). Characteristically, works begin with a diatonic cell, usually a jazzy motif, that alternately expands into a long, lyrical melody and explodes into a polyrhythmic mass. In Stomp (1988) the result is a cheerful miniature. Big Band (1994), written for the Chicago SO, combines the orchestral clatter of Messiaen with the jazz style of Stan Kenton's band. The opening triadic material of Light (1991, rev. 1993), while reminiscent of Górecki and Pärt, is followed by a polyrhythmic explosion that lies outside the expressive range of those composers' works.

WORKS

Orch: A Fire's Bright Song, 1981, rev. 1987; 2 Part Invention, 1986; Clash and Glitter, 1989; January Music, 1993; Big Band, 1994

Chbr and solo inst: 2 Pieces, a sax, ens, 1979; Chasing the Trane Out of Darmstadt, 1982; Pieces of Pf, 1982; Syntax, synclavier, 1985; Relations to Rigor I, 15 pfmrs, 1986; Stomp, fl, ob, cl, hn, trbn, pf, hp, vn, va, vc, 1988; Vn Duo, 1990; Whistle Stop, ob, 1990; Pf Duo, 1992; … mid the steep sky's commotion, brass qnt, 1993; 2 Qts, a sax, mar, perc, pf: no.1, 1993, no.2, 1994; Glide, fl, cl, bn, hn, vn, va, vc, perc, hp, 1996; Mar Duo, 1997; Str Qt, 1997

Vocal: Treatise on Tailors' Dummies, S, fl, t sax, b cl, bn, accdn, pf, perc, 1988; In the Middle of the Road, A, a fl, pf, 1989; Light, Mez, cl + b cl, vn, vc, xyl + glock, pf + cel, 1991, rev. 1993; The Dolphins, S, pf, 1995

El-ac: Relations to Rigor II, fl, b cl, vn, vc, mar, pf, tape, 1987; Terza Rima, ob, live elecs, 1995

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal publishers: Dorn, Davidge

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Wheeler: 'Beyond the Flat Surface: Foam and Rhetoric in Machover, Hyla and Lindroth', CMR, x (1994), 75–100

SCOTT WHEELER

Lindsay, Alex (b Invercargill, NZ, 28 May 1919; d Wellington, 5 Dec 1974). New Zealand violinist. He studied in London with W.H. Reed in the late 1930s and after two years' naval service returned to New Zealand and joined the New Zealand SO. He resigned during controversy over the orchestra's musical direction and in 1947 formed his own string orchestra, modelled on the Boyd Neel Orchestra. The orchestra continued for some 20 years and played a leading role in the country's music. Lindsay was in London again as a member of the LPO and LSO between 1963 and 1967, then returned to New Zealand and became leader of the New Zealand SO. His playing was much admired for its cantabile tone of great beauty.

FREDERICK PAGE/R

Lindsay Quartet. English string quartet. It was formed at the RAM in 1966 by Peter Cropper, Michael Adamson, Roger Bigley and Bernard Gregor-Smith, under the tutelage of Sidney Griller. Having won all the RAM prizes for quartet playing, in 1967 the ensemble was given a Leverhulme scholarship to Keele University, where it took the name of the founder, Lord Lindsay, and worked with Alexandre Moskowsky, formerly of the Hungarian Quartet. Research into Bartók's music continued with Vilmos Tátrai, Sándor Végh and Rudolf Kolisch; the players also studied the Classical and Romantic repertory with members of the Amadeus Quartet. In 1969 the group was a prizewinner at the international competition in Liège. In 1972 Ronald Birks took over from Adamson as second violinist. In 1974 a residency was taken up at Sheffield University and in 1979 at Manchester University. In 1981 the ensemble made the first of a number of tours of the USA and Canada. In 1984 it began yearly festivals in Sheffield and in 1987 started to bring some of those programmes to London. Meanwhile in 1986 Bigley left, to be replaced as viola player by Robin Ireland. Since then the Lindsay Quartet has consolidated its position at the top of the profession in Britain. When it is on form, it is musically at least the equal of any ensemble in the world. Its performances of late Beethoven quartets or the Schubert C major Quintet (with Douglas Cummings as guest), both in the concert hall and in the recording studio, have confirmed Peter Cropper as the most idealistic quartet leader since Adolf Busch. Even its most fervent admirers, however, have to admit that on a bad day the group can seem overwhelmed by technical matters (especially problems of intonation) which lesser musicians take in their stride. In a restless search for spiritual refreshment, 'the Lindsays' have tackled a vast repertory when others might have settled for perfecting a smaller corpus of work. It follows that their huge range of recordings runs the gamut from the sublime (including much of their Beethoven cycle) to the mediocre. Apart from the Viennese Classics, they have given illuminating performances of Czech and Hungarian music; and they have given the premières of many works, notably Tippett's fourth and fifth quartets – the latter commissioned by them – and Jean Françaix's Clarinet Quintet. Their probing interpretations of all the Tippett quartets have been recorded. In the Mozart string quintets they have collaborated with Patrick Ireland (their viola player's father) and Louise Williams. The clarinettist Janet Hilton has also been a frequent guest, in concert and on record. They play on two Stradivarius violins, a Mori Costa viola and a Ruggieri cello.

TULLY POTTER

Lindy [lindy hop]. A lively and often acrobatic social dance of American origin that originated in the Savoy and other Harlem ballrooms and private clubs during the 1920s. Its association with the successful transatlantic flight of Charles Lindberg (1927) further increased its popularity. It became progressively more athletic in the late 1930s and 1940s when it was performed to the music of the swing bands; during this period the dance was also called the JITTERBUG. The exhibitionist nature of the dance was characterized by 'breakaway' sections, in which the dancers improvised their own steps; it was known for its 'air' steps (athletic stunts and movements performed in the air) and the 'geechie walk' (a strutting step performed with a shimmy). Examples of compositions that were suitable for lindy dancing include Stomping at the Savoy, by Benny Goodman, Edgar Sampson, and Chick Webb (performed by Chick Webb's Savoy Orchestra on a recording of 1934), Sing, Sing, Sing by Louis Prima (recorded by Benny Goodman and his orchestra in 1937), and Count Basie's One O'clock Jump (1937) and Jumpin' at the Woodside (1938). In the 1950s, the lindy served as the basis for some of the dances associated with rock and roll.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. and J. Stearns: Jazz Dance: the Story of American Vernacular Dance (New York, 1968)

L.F. Emery: Black Dance in the United States from 1619 to 1970 (Palo Alto, CA, 1970)

R.P. Crease: 'Divine Frivolity: Hollywood Representations of the Lindy Hop, 1937–1942', Representing Jazz, ed. K. Gabbard (Durham, NC, 1995), 207–28

PAULINE NORTON

Linea d'aiuto (It.). See LEGER LINE.

Linear. Characterized by conjunct motion in a given part; thus one of the chief characteristics of the musical texture commonly called 'contrapuntal'. The expression 'linear counterpoint', a literal translation of a term introduced by Ernst Kurth in his Grundlagen des linearen Kontrapunkts (Berne, 1917), is strictly speaking a tautology; however, it remains useful as a means of emphasizing the melodic or 'horizontal' aspect of counterpoint as opposed to the harmonic or 'vertical'.

JULIAN RUSHTON

Linear progression. See ZUG (i).

Linecke. See LINIKE family.

Lineff, Eugenie. See LINYOVA, YEVGENIYA.

Ling, Jan Nils (b Örebro, 12 April 1934). Swedish musicologist. He studied the piano at the Swedish Royal Academy of Music (1955–8), and musicology at Uppsala University with Moberg, Bengtsson and Emsheimer (1958–67), taking the doctorate at Uppsala in 1967 with a dissertation on the nyckelharpa. Concurrently he worked in Stockholm as a cataloguer in the Swedish Broadcasting Company's sound archive (1959–60), an assistant at the Swedish Centre for Folksong and Folk Music Research (1959–67), lecturer at the Museum of Music History (1961–7) and lecturer in ethnomusicology and organology at Uppsala University (1961–7). He also held posts as a lecturer in form and music history at the Örebro Institute for Music Education (1966–9) and at the Göteborg Conservatory (1967–70). He was head of the department of musicology at Göteborg University (1970–92), appointed lecturer in 1970 and professor in 1977; he later became the vice-chancellor of the university (1992–7). His main areas of research are music history, ethnomusicology and the sociology of music; his publications include articles on various aspects of these subjects (particularly in connection with Swedish music) and a book on Swedish folk music. In 1975 he became a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music, and in 1984 the Festschrift Tvärspel: festskrift till Jan Ling [Cross-play: Festschrift for Jan Ling], ed. Å. Blomström and others (Göteborg, 1984), was published to mark his 50th birthday.

WRITINGS

Svensk folkmusik (Stockholm, 1964)

with M. Jersild: 'A Method of Cataloguing Vocal Folk Music', Arv, xxi (1965), 103–14

Levin Christian Wiedes vissamling: en studie i 1800-talets folkliga vissång (Uppsala, 1965)

Nyckelharpan: studier i ett folkligt musikinstrument(diss., U. of Uppsala, 1967; Stockholm, 1967)

with B. Erdmann: Musiklivet på en industriort (1970)

Musiksociologiska projekt i Göteborg (Göteborg, 1970); Eng. trans., IRASM, ii (1971), 119–30

'Från Marseillaisen till Internationalen', Ord och bild, lxxxiii (1974), 272–88

'Försök till en musikalisk dialektik', Kultur och klasskamp, ed J.N. Ling and others (Stockholm, 1974), 103–33

'Musiklivet i Skaraborg: preliminar undersökningsplan för en musiksociologisk studie', STMf, lvii/1 (1975), 69–75

ed.: Musik i Staraborg (Vara, 1978)

'Adornos Bedeutung für die Musik und Musikwissenschaft in Schweden', Adorno und die Musik, ed. O. Kolleritsch (Graz, 1979), 83–93

Folkmusik: en Brygd (Göteborg, 1979)

ed.: Folkmusikboken (Stockholm, 1980)

Europas musikhistoria II: folkmusiken 1730–1980(Solna, 1989; Eng. trans., 1997) with E. Kjellberg: Klingande Sverige: musikens vägar genom historien (Göteborg, 1991)

'Joint Field Research in the Cultural Dialogue: Musicology and Music Society in Sweden', Music in the Dialogue of Cultures, ed. M.P. Baumann (Wilhelmshaven, 1991), 185–98
'Hugo Alfvén und die Idee der absoluten Musik', Weltgeltung und Regionalität, ed. R. Bohn and M. Engelbrecht (Frankfurt, 1992), 241–52, 308–13 with A.-M. Nilsson: 'The Medieval Music of the Monastery, the Cathedral and the Pauper's Dwelling', Medieval Studies: Skara 1988, 37–56
'From 'Empfindsamer' Style to Down-Home Village Nostalgia', Analisi musicale II: Trent 1991, 321–40
ed., with S. Gustavasson and L. Tegborg: The Multicultural Baltic Region, ii: Language, Music and Religion (Uppsala, 1994/R)
'Volks- und kunstmusik um die Jahrhundertwende: ihre Stellung bei Hugo Alfvén', Ethnomusikologie und historische Musikwissenschaft: gemeinsame Ziele, gleiche Methoden?: Erich Stockmann zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. C.-H. Mahling and S. Münch (Tutzing, 1997), 245–56 [also congress report, 1991 Mainz]

VESLEMÖY HEINTZ

Linger, Carl (b Berlin, March 1810; d Adelaide, 16 Feb 1862). Australian composer and conductor of German birth. The son of an engraver and amateur musician, he is said to have taught the piano at the age of 12, before studying composition with Karl Reissiger and Bernard Klein at Berlin University and the Institute for Church Music. He then studied in Venice and Milan before returning to Berlin, where his compositions first attracted attention. He left Hamburg on 23 March 1849 bound for South Australia; unable at first to find musical employment he bought 80 acres of farming land at Smithfield. Subsequent hardship forced him to seek employment in Adelaide in 1851 as a pianist and music teacher, but his career was more assured with his appointment in 1854 as leader of the orchestra of the choral society (founded in 1843), which he developed into a proficient group able to perform the first complete Messiah in Adelaide (1859). He founded the Adelaide Liedertafel in 1857, and was widely acclaimed at his death for his contributions to colonial cultural growth.

Linger's compositions dating from the Berlin years include sacred songs, two operas, two symphonies, lieder, motets and incidental music: some of these remain in manuscript. The works composed in Adelaide include three masses, settings of hymns and psalms and a concert overture (1856). But he is remembered only as the composer of the Song of Australia (C. Carleton) which won the Gawler Institute National Song competition (December 1859) and which, despite contenders from other states, has retained a lasting and affectionate place in South Australian music.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Divall: 'Carl Linger: a Brief Biography', Musica Australis Archives (Sydney, 1970) [incl. list of works]

ELIZABETH WOOD

Lingke, Georg Friedrich (b 1697; d in or nr Weissenfels, 1777). German musical amateur and music theorist. His place in music history rests in his authorship of treatises largely concerned with questions of harmonic practice. A nobleman with an estate, Nöbeditz, near Weissenfels, he held the position of councillor of mines for the Kingdom of Poland-Saxony. According to J.A. Hiller, author of the preface to Lingke's Kurze Musiklehre, he was one of those 'musical dilettantes who pondered musical truths and familiarized themselves with [music] theory, without being especially strong in musical performance'. Hiller said that Lingke played both lute and harpsichord. He knew the trumpet virtuoso J.E. Altenburg, whom he consulted on matters of musical practice. In 1742 he was elected the eighth member of Mizler's Societät der Musikalischen Wissenschaften, a corresponding society of music theorists and composers, including J.S. Bach, Handel and Telemann. Lingke was one of the few non-professional musicians permitted entry into that rather exclusive group.

Most of Lingke's work concerns elementary concepts of music theory, such as major and minor scales, their origins, and their relationships in a tonal hierarchy. Among his treatises, the Uibungs-Wahrheiten (*c*1750) remains the most informative. In addition to elementary theory, and a brief discussion of thoroughbass, Lingke made a number of interesting statements of importance to Baroque musical aesthetics concerning a theory of affections based on intervals and scales. Another part of the work discusses whether melody or harmony takes precedence in composition, a question popularized in the works of Rameau (on the side of harmony) and Mattheson (for melody); Lingke believed that neither harmony nor melody comes first, but rather both arise simultaneously in the act of composing. This simple, rational and practical viewpoint had apparently not occurred to any of his contemporaries.

THEORETICAL WORKS

Einige zum allgemeinen Nutzen deutlicher gemachte musikalische Erwegungs- und andere leichter eingerichtete Uibungs-Wahrheiten (Leipzig, *c*1750, 2/1760)
Vertheidigungsschreiben an den Herrn Verfasser der sieben Gespräche zwischen der Weisheit und Musik [J. Mattheson, 1751] (Frankfurt and Leipzig, 1753)
Die Sitze der musicalischen Haupt-Sätze in einer harten und weichen Tonart (Leipzig, 1766)
Kurze Musiklehre in welcher nicht allein die Verwandtschaft aller Tonleitern, sondern auch die jeder zukommenden harmonischen Sätze gezeigt, und mit praktischen Beyspielen erläutert werden (Leipzig, 1779)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.F.A. and O.F.J. Lingke: Chronologie der Familie Lingke (Köthen, 1909)
F. Wöhlke: Lorenz Christoph Mizler: ein Beitrag zur musikalischen Gelehrtengeschichte des 18. Jahrhunderts (Würzburg, 1940)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Linguaphone. A term sometimes applied to any idiophone whose primary sounding agents consist of tongues or slats of metal or vegetable material attached at one end. See LAMELLOPHONE.

Liniensystem (Ger.). See STAFF.

Linike [Lienike, Linecke, Linicke, Linigke, Lünicke]. German family of musicians. They were active during the early 18th century, but their relationships remain obscure.

(1) Ephraim Linike (b 1665; d Berlin, bur. 24 Dec 1726). Violinist. He was appointed to the electoral chapel in Berlin in 1690. From 1701 to 1704 he served as royal chamber musician in Berlin, then in a similar capacity in the court at Schwedt. He returned to Berlin in 1711 and remained there until his death.

(2) Christian Bernhard Linike (b 3 June 1673; d Cöthen, bur. 3 Jan 1751). Cellist and chamber musician in Berlin until the dissolution of the court chapel in 1713. He was employed by Margrave Christian Ludwig of Brandenburg until 1716 when he joined the chapel of Prince Leopold at Cöthen. He remained active there for the rest of his life, part of this time in company with J.S. Bach and the gamba player Christian Ferdinand Abel. C.B. Linike is reported to have written some small keyboard works (formerly in D-Bsb) and ten sonatas.

(3) Johann Georg Linike (*b c*1680; d Hamburg, after 1737). Composer and violinist. The most prolific and best-known member of the Linike family, according to Mattheson he was a student of Johann Theile in Berlin. He was active as a violinist as early as 1705, and was second violinist in the court chapel at Berlin by 1710. After that group was dissolved in 1713 he moved to the court of Weissenfels as director of music; it was from there that he maintained the correspondence with Mattheson printed in Critica musica. He visited London in 1721 and remained at least until winter 1724–5. After 1725 he became the first violinist in the opera orchestra at Hamburg under the direction of Reinhard Keiser. Linike's works show relatively conservative Baroque traits in the prevalence of imitative entries at the beginning of movements, a pervasive two-part texture, and a tendency towards consistent motivic extension within individual movements.

WORKS

Quando sperasti, cant., S, str, D-Bsb
Ov., 2 ob, 2 vn, va, vc, b, S-Uu
Moratorium, tpt, ob, fl, vn, b, 12 April 1737, D-SWl
Conc., hpd, vn, str, ROu
3 concs., fl, vn, va, bc, ?SWl

Sonatas: 5 for vn, ob, bc, Dl; 4 for 2 fl, bc, ROu (2 inc.); 5 for 2 fl, bc, SWl [2 ovs., 2 suites, 1 trio]; 1 for hpd, vn obbl, DS; 1 for fl/ob, bc, ROu; 2 for vn, bc, SWl; 2 for vn/ob, bc, SWl; 4 for fl, bc, SWl

Lost works: 6 symphonies; Wettstreit der Poesie, Musik und Malerei, ?cant., Hamburg, 1725: cited in Ledebur; Symphony; Ho una pena intorno al cor, cant., 1v, str: cited in Fétis; Sonata, fl, vn, bc; Trio, ob, vn, bc; Lungi da me pensier, cant., 1v, str; Crudo amore, cant., 1v, str: cited in Breitkopf catalogues; 2 prol, recits for G.F. Handel, Giulio Cesare, Hamburg, 1725

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB; EitnerQ; FétisB; LedeburTLB; SchillingE
J. Mattheson: Critica musica, ii (Hamburg, 1725/R), 250–54
W. Kleefeld: 'Das Orchester der Hamburger Oper 1678–1738', SIMG, i (1899–1900), 219–89

DOUGLAS A. LEE

Lining out. A method of performing a (metrical) psalm or hymn within Protestant nonconformist churches, in which the minister, elder or precentor reads or chants each line, or pair of lines, and the congregation responds by singing the same words. The congregational melody is not necessarily identical with that sung by the leader. The custom began in England about 1745 as an aid for the illiterate (see PSALMS, METRICAL, §III, 1(iv)) and was first laid down in the Directory for the Publique Worship of God, prepared by the Westminster Assembly of Divines in 1744 (which came into force the following January). Lining out had disappeared in England by 1800 but it is practised today by Gaelic-speaking congregations in the Highlands and Western Isles of Scotland, by urban congregations of Gaels in Glasgow and Edinburgh, and in some Baptist churches in the rural south-eastern USA. See OLD WAY OF SINGING.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Temperley: 'The Old Way of Singing: its Origins and Development', JAMS, xxxiv (1981), 512–44
T.E. Miller: 'Oral Tradition Psalmody Surviving in England and Scotland', The Hymn, xxxv (1984), 15–22
N. Temperley: 'Lining Out and Psalm Singing', The Hymn, xxxv (1984), 170–73

SALLY DRAGE

Linjama, Jouko (Sakari) (b Kirvu, 4 Feb 1934). Finnish composer and organist. He studied the organ with Enzio Forsblom and composition with Aarre Merikanto and Joonas Kokkonen at the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki (1954–60), and then with Gottfried Michael Koenig and Bernd Alois Zimmermann at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Cologne. In 1963 he attended Stockhausen's new music courses in Cologne. He taught theory at the Sibelius Academy (1964–8) and in 1964 began working as a composer and organist in Tuusula, a suburb of Helsinki. He won first prizes in the Finnish Broadcasting Company competitions for choral compositions (1969, with Missa de angelis) and for songs (1973) as well as the Church music prize in 1977. Linjama is primarily a composer of church music: organ works and vocal music on religious texts form the major part of his output. Song and partsong cycles on secular texts also feature strongly, but instrumental music other than for organ is of less interest to him. Characteristic of his style are contrapuntal textures, triadic harmony, and melody influenced by plainchant, although some 12-note writing, cluster harmony and pitch fields also occur.

WORKS

CHORAL
(selective list)

With insts: Missa de angelis, op.12, chorus, eng hn, cl, bn, hn, trbn, 1969; Kunnianosoitus Aleksis Kivelle [Homage to Aleksis Kivi] (orat), nar, Bar, chorus, orch, 1971; Formulae colloquiorum (anon.), op.29, 3 solo vv, male vv, 2 cl, 2 bn, 1975; Scola morum floruit, op.54, T, 2 choruses, wind, 1983; Mailman Algusta ia Loomisesta [On the Beginning of the World and the Creation] (orat, Bible, trans. M. Agricola), op.55, S, Bar, SATB, orch, 1983; Suomalainen Requiem [Finnish Requiem], S, A, SATB, org, 1999
Unacc.: 7 Songs (A. Kivi), op.16, male vv, 1968–71; Min dag min kväll min natt [My Day, my Evening, my Night] (G. Björling), op.30, male vv, 1975; La sapienza (orat, L. da Vinci), op.40, 2 SATB, 1980; Partita (H. Maskulainen), op.42, SATB, 1979; Kirkkauden tiellä [On the Road to Splendour] (T. Pekkanen), op.44, T, SATB, 1980; Kalevala-sarja [Kalevala Suite], op.49, SATB, 1981; Cantate, annuntiate, op.61, SATB, 1984; 7 Nocturnos (Vuorela), op.69, male vv, 1986; Nijn quin Omenapw (motet, Bible, trans. Agricola), S, T, SATB, 1991

SOLO VOCAL

Canticum gradum, op.1, S, org, 1959; Gaude virgo gloriosa (L. Heikkilä), op.4, S, org, 1961; Millaista on [How it is] (orat, S. Beckett, trans. J. Mannerkorpi), op.7, Bar, 6 male vv, orch, 3 tape recorders, 1964, rev. 1968; Terra mariana (Heikkilä), op.10, S, org, 1968; 5 saamelaislaulua [5 Sami Songs] (A. Guttorm), op.18, S, a fl, pf, 1971; Maan ääri siintää loitto [The Margin of Earth, Distant, Fading] (Vuorela), op.32, S, pf, 1972–6; Vedet virtaavat vuorilla [The Waters are Flowing on the Mountains] (Vuorela), op.19, Bar, pf, 1972; Och mellan rymd och hav [And Midst Space and Sea] (Björling), op.35, S, pf, 1976–7; Linnut, ruohot, taivaat ja maa [Birds, Grasses, Heavens and Earth] (A.-M. Raittila), op.68, S, orch/cl, pf, 1986; Sinusta kaukana [Far from You] (Chinese poems, trans. P. Nieminen), T, pf, 1995; 7 Songs (Meri), T, pf, 1995; Luther-triptyykki [A Luther Triptych], T, wind qt, str qt, 1997

INSTRUMENTAL

Org: Sonatina supra b–a–c–h, op.3, 1961; Veni creator spiritus, sonata, op.9, 1968; Magnificat, op.13, 1970; Conc., op.15, 1970; Triptychon, op.17, 2 org, 1971; Partita, op.23, 1973; Pies cantiones (1582) per organo piccolo, op.33, 1976; Missa cum jubilo, op.31, 1977; Consolation, op.37, 1978; Toccatina, danza e contradanza per organo piccolo, op.50b, 1981; Organum supra b–a–c–h, op.52, 1982; Toccata in D, op.63, 1985; 3 liturgista lasimaalausta [3 Liturgical Stained Glasses], 1993
Other inst: 5 Metamorphosen für 5 Instrumente über 5 Canons op.15 von Anton Webern, op.5, vib, gui, cel, hpd, pf, 1963; La migration d'oiseaux sauvages, op.36, orch, 1977; Str Qt no.1, op.39, 1978; Str Qt no.2, op.41, 1979; Conc., op.50a, org, mar, vib, 2 wind qts, 1981; Echo I, op.89, ob, org, 1991; Echo II, vc, pf, 1992; 9 minimuunnelmaa [9 Minivariations], fl, ob, cl, pf, 1993

Principal publisher: Finnish Broadcasting Co., Fazer, Sulasol

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Gräsbeck: 'Jouko Linjaman Missa de angelis', Musiikki, i/2 (1971), 43–50

M. Heiniö: 'Jouko Linjama', Suomalaisia säveltäjiä [Finnish composers], ed. E. Salmenhaara (Helsinki, 1994), 253–6

M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [A history of Finnish music], iv (Porvoo, 1995)

Jyrki Linjama: 'Jouko Linjaman säveltäjäprofiilista' [Composer profile], Sävellys ja musiikinteoria, vi/1 (1996), 20–32

ILKKA ORAMO

Linjama, Jyrki (b Jyväskylä, 23 April 1962). Finnish composer. He studied composition at the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki, with Rautavaara and Heininen (1979–89) and pursued further studies in The Hague (1987–8), in Budapest with Zolt Durkó (1989–91) and at the Hochschule der Künste in Berlin (1991–2), where his teacher was Szalonek. In 1992 he became lecturer in music theory at the University of Turku.

The post-serial approach of some of Linjama's early works soon took a more expressive direction. Elegia for strings (1987) and the First Violin Concerto (1989), built on a series of variations with a dominating virtuoso solo part, are neo-Expressionist in character, suggesting the spirit of Alban Berg. In recent works, such as pas de deux (1994), he has moved further away from serial techniques without renouncing the density of language characterized by dissonant harmony, short melodic phrases, complex rhythm and an ear for timbral variations. Fragile lyricism combined with violent outburst tends to create great tension in his orchestral works, whereas most of his chamber and vocal music is more sparse in character.

WORKS

Orch: Elegia, str, 1987; 2 vn concs., 1989, 1991; pas de deux, 1994

Chbr and solo inst: 5 bagatellia [5 Bagatelles], pf, 1981; Aufschwung, vc, pf, 1983, rev. 1991; Music for Fl and Hpd, 1984; 2 chansons, va, pf, 1984, rev. 1991; Metamorphoses, hpd, 1986; Hymni, accdn, cl, vn, 1990; Omaggio, vn, 1992; Sonatina, pf, 1995; Taivas on sininen ja valkoinen [Blue and White is the Sky above], vn, pf, 1996; Partita, gui, str qt, 1996; Consolation (Omaggio a Rilke), accdn, 1997; Johdanto, muunnelmia ja kehtolaulu [Introduction, Variations and Lullaby], kantele, 1997; Sonata, gui, 1997; Hildegardiana, org, 1998

Vocal: 3 varhaista laulua [3 Early Songs] (A.-M. Raittila), S, pf, 1982, rev. 1991; Legenda (trad. Indian, in Ger.), S, fl, 1986; Venetsialainen yölaulu [Venetian Night Song] (L. Nummi, It. folk poem), SATB, 1988; Kyrie, SSAA, 1989; Konsa kosijat (Kanteletar), SSA, 1994; Pääsiäismotetti [Easter Motet], SATB, org, 1995; Iltalaulu [Evening Song] (Kalevala), SSA, 1996; In hoc natali gaudio, 4 Piae Cantiones Motets, SATB, 1996; Juhlakantaatti [Festive Cant.] (Bible, in Finnish), 2S, SATB, org, 1997; 2 madrigaalia [2 madrigals], S, pf, 1998

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Linjama: Amadeus ja pianokonserton säveltämisen taide [Amadeus and the art of composing a piano concerto] (Helsinki, 1991)

K. Korhonen: 'Buffeted by the Winds of Change: Young Composers of the 1990s', Finnish Music Quarterly, xi/2 (1995), 16–18

K. Korhonen: Finnish Composers since the 1960s (Jyväskylä, 1995)

M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [History of Finnish music], iv (Porvoo, 1995)

ILKKA ORAMO

Linke, Norbert (b Steinau, Silesia, 5 March 1933). German composer and musicologist. He studied composition at the Hamburg Musikhochschule with Klussmann, and German studies and musicology at Hamburg University (DPhil 1959). He taught at the Darmstadt Training College and became professor of music at the University-Polytechnic, Duisburg in 1976. He has also served as music critic for Die Welt (1964–72), as a member of the board of directors of GEMA (1972–6), and as chair of the Silesian music study group at the Institute for German Music in the East (from 1995). His awards include the Johann Wenzel Stamitz prize, Stuttgart (1977).

Linke first received recognition as a composer when his Konkretionen II for string quartet was performed at Darmstadt during the 1963 summer courses. In the work, he aimed to suspend the perception of time by means of a 'renunciation of any striving towards a goal or sense of direction', thus attaining a 'wider mobility' that 'makes possible a direct interaction between presentation in time and placing in space' (Dibelius). Later compositions added parodistic elements in the form of quasi-quotations. His stylistic versatility has ranged from strictly serial works (Benn-Epitaph), to more accessible creations (Organ Pops, 1970). Many of his works, such as Steinauer Messe (1972), Diri Dana (1974), Retro (1974–5) and Jugendzeit (1984), refer to his native Silesia and its neighbours, Poland and the Czech Republic. He has also made arrangements of Silesian folksongs.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Strati, 1965–8; Divisioni, 1967; Pf Conc., 1971; Striccio, 1976–7

Choral: Canticum I '... und nahm Gestalt an' (E. Lasker-Schüler), 1962; Das Verlorene (J. Böhme), chorus, insts, 1964; Canticum II 'was sterblich war ... ' (N. Lenau), 1968; Steinauer Messe, 1972; Canticum III '... bedecke mit deinem Fittich' (F.G. Klopstock, Linke), 1973; Diri Dana, chorus, pf, insts, 1974; Denn ihr werdet Gott schauen, 1978

Solo vocal: Lyrical Sym. S, orch, 1961–8; Benn-Epitaph, Bar, 5 insts, 1966; Kontakt für Geeske, female v, 1972; Tschechische Lieder, 1975–6; ... und hätte der Liebe nicht, 1978; An die Mächtigen, 1979; Dort in anderm Lande, 1986–92

Chbr: Coloratura, 3 fl, 1963–4; Konkretionen II, str qt, 1963; Varim I, pf 4 hands, 1963; Konkretionen IV, brass trio, 1967; Profit tout clair, 9 insts/chbr orch; Fresco, hp, vc, 1970; Zeitplan, elecs (5 pfmrs), tape, 1972; Metamorphosen, pf qt, 1975; Pf Qt 'Metamorphosen über ein tschechisches Landarbeiter-Lied', 1975; Louika, capriccio, vn, pf, 1976; Jugendzeit, cl qnt, 1982; Balkanesca, 1984; Geist der Schwachheit/Geist der Stärke, 1991; Konkordanza, va, org, 1992; Str Qnt 'Einige Auskünfte über die Rätsel dieser Welt', 1993

Solo inst (for org, unless otherwise stated): Polyrhythmika 1–3, pf, 1961–8; Fantasia und Zortzico, cl, 1965; Rital, 1969; Piccotelli, pf, 1970; Choral suite, 1972; Zug-Stücke, pf, 1977; Hommage à . . . , 1981; Stücke, 1981; Beethoven-Studien, 1982; Elegien, 1982; Meditationen, 1982; Hommage à Schostakowitsch, 1984; Bach-Fragmente, 1985; Luther-Fragmente, 1985; Veni creator spiritus, 1988

Other works: Organ Pops; 1970; Retro (polnisches Liederspiel), 1974–5

Principal publishers: Breitkopf & Härtel, Bote & Bock, Gravis, Möseler

WRITINGS

Die Orchesterfuge in Spätromantik und Moderne (diss., U. of Hamburg, 1959)

Musik zwischen Konsum und Kult (Wiesbaden, 1973)

Zur Bewertung von Musik (Wiesbaden, 1974)

Philosophie der Musik (Regensburg, 1976)

Heilung durch Musik (Wilhelmshaven, 1977)

Johann Strauss/Sohn (Reinbeck, 1982/R)

Kein schöner Land (Niedernhausen, 1983/R)

Musik erobert die Welt (Vienna, 1987)

Es musste einem was einfallen (Tutzing, 1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Lück, ed.: Das Komponistenportrait (Cologne, 1972) [incl. complete work-list]

E.-M. Houben: 'Silesia cantat: Errinnerungen an die schlesische Heimat in Kompositionen von Norbert Linke', Oberschlesisches Jb (1991), 149

RUDOLF LÜCK/LOTHAR HOFFMANN-ERBRECHT

Linko, Ernst (b Tampere, 17 July 1889; d Helsinki, 28 Jan 1960). Finnish pianist and composer. He studied the piano at the Helsinki Music School with Sigrid Schnéevoigt and Karl Ekman (1909–11), and continued his studies in Berlin with Martin Krause, in St Petersburg with Leonid Nikolayev and in Paris with J. Battalla. He also studied composition with W. Klatte in Berlin. After his début in Helsinki in 1913 he performed in many European countries and the USA. From 1916 to 1959 he taught music at the Helsinki Music School (which became in 1924 the Helsinki Conservatory and in 1939 the Sibelius Academy); from 1936 he was its principal and he was a professor there for the last 20 years of his teaching career. He composed mainly for the piano, but also wrote some songs (both his wife and daughter were sopranos). His music was grounded in Romanticism, and he imitated Baroque and Classical styles but without the distance that would justify the term neo-classical.

WORKS
(selective list)

Pf concs.: d, 1916; E, 1920–22; A, 1931; D, 1957
Other orch: Symphonie chévaleresque, 1949
Chbr: Nocturne, vc, pf, 1919; Pf Trio, 1921; Str Qt, E♭, 1930
Pf: Sarja vanhaan tyyliin [Suite in Old Style], 1912; Suite miniature, 1915; Pf Sonata, 1916; 24 preludes, 1917; Prelude and Fugue, 1918; Variazioni & fuga all'antica sulla tema di Haendel, 1922; Hommage à Domenico Scarlatti, 1924; Pieni sarja vanhaan tyyliin [Little Suite in Old Style], 1925; Pieni kuvitelma [Little Fancy], 1925; 3 bagatelles, 1926; 3 danze moderne, 1926; Pf Sonata, f♯, 1927, Fantasy, f, 1930; Pf Sonata, G, 1930; 2 sonatinas, B, f♯, 1935
*c*45 songs, 1v, pf

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Sajakorpi: Taiteilijaprofiili Ernst Linko (Tampere, 1989)
E. Salmenhaara: Uuden musiikin kynnyksellä [At the threshold of new music], Suomen musiikin historia [A history of Finnish music], iii (Porvoo, 1996)

ILKKA ORAMO

Linkola, Jukka (Tapio) (b Helsinki, 21 July 1955). Finnish pianist, composer and conductor. He studied the piano and music theory at the Sibelius Academy, Helsinki; he also played jazz, made arrangements and made his first forays into composing. From 1974 he worked as a rehearsal pianist and conductor for the Helsinki City Theatre. In 1976 he founded the Jukka Linkola Octet, which became one of the pillars of Finnish jazz, and in 1991 was appointed conductor of the big band UMO. He has conducted several other jazz ensembles.

He initially composed music for his octet and for big band, then widened his scope towards classical music, into which he incorporated jazz elements. Characteristic is Crossings (1983) for tenor saxophone and orchestra, in which the soloist's fluid improvisations meet massive orchestral soundscapes. After this period of fusion, which lasted until the late 1980s, he adopted a quasi neo-classical idiom, characterized by freely tonal melody, capricious rhythms, smoothly dissonant, often bitonal or parallel, harmony and attention to instrumental colour. His first large-scale stage work, the ballet Ronja ryövärintytär ('Ronia the Robber's Daughter', 1988), showed the influence of the ballet scores of Stravinsky, Prokofiev and Bartók; the style of his operas is more austere. He has received awards (such as the Jussi Award in 1987 and 1989 for two of his film scores), and has won first prize in competitions, including the Paris Opera Screen competition in 1993 (for the surrealistic TV opera Angelika, which also received the Cannes Midem Award in 1994), and the Concours International de Composition of Le Havre in 1994 (for Structures).

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Peter Pan (musical), 1985; Max and Moritz (musical), 1987; Ronja ryövärintytär [Ronia the Robber's Daughter] (ballet, 2, A. Lindgren), 1989; Angelika (TV op, I. Tiihonen), 1990; Elina (op, 3, P. Saaritsa), 1992; Antti Puuhaara (musical), 1994; Täyttyneiden toiveden maa [The Land of Fulfilled Hopes] (op, Linkola), 1998
Film: Lumikuningatar [The Snow Queen], 1986; Ihmiselon ihanuus ja kurjuus [The Glory and Misery of Human Life], 1988; Kaikki pelissä, 1994; Vita lögner [White Lies], 1994
Orch: Crossings, conc., t sax, orch, 1983; Suite from The Snow Queen, 1987; Tpt Conc. no.1, 1988; Suite from Ronia the Robber's Daughter, 1989; Land of the Four Winds, pf, orch, 1990; Panda, 1992; Tuba Conc., 1992; Tpt Conc. no.2, 1993; Suite from White Lies, 1994; Circles, 2 pf, orch, 1996; Euphonium Conc., 1996; Fl Conc., 1996; Conc., sax, sym. band, 1998
Chbr: Suite, brass qnt, 1985; Between Two Stages, Mez, vc, pf, 1988; Suite, perc ens, 1988; 3 Bagatelles, brass septet, 1989; Chalumeaux Suite, cl ens, 1990; Qnt, fl, 2 vn, va, vc, 1990; 2 Miniatures, pf trio, 1991; Short Stories, conc., brass ens, 1992; Canzonetta, va/tpt, pf, 1993; Autumn Conc., str qnt, brass qnt, 1996
Vocal: Just nu [Just Now] (L. Salmén), 1988; Främlingen [The Stranger] (Salmén), Mez, 2 Bar, chorus, 2 pf, 1989; Silta [The Bridge] (N. Rauhala), 1992; Voimakkaille [To the Strong Ones] (E. Södergran), 1992; Muisti [The Memory] (I. Tiihonen), 1993; Evoe!, male chorus, 2 pf, 1993
Jazz: Grand Mystery, 1985; Structures, 1987, rev. 1993; other pieces for big band and jazz ens

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Suomalaisia säveltäjiä [Finnish composers] (Keuruu, 1994)
K. Korhonen: Finnish Composers since the 1960s (Jyväskylä, 1995)
M. Heiniö: Aikamme musiikki [Contemporary music], Suomen musiikin historia [History of Finnish music], iv (Porvoo, 1995)
K. Aho and others: Finnish Music (Keuruu, 1996)

ILKKA ORAMO

Linley. English family of musicians.

(1) Thomas Linley (i) (b Badminton, Gloucs., 17 Jan 1733; d London, 19 Nov 1795). Composer and concert director. His father, William, was a carpenter who moved to Bath in the late 1740s. Linley showed a marked gift for music when young and studied with Thomas Chilcot, organist of Bath Abbey. Later he studied in London with William Boyce, and also perhaps with the Italian harpsichordist Paradies, who lived in England from 1746 until about 1770. Linley directed concerts in Bath from the mid-1750s to about 1774, and also appeared in London as a solo performer. His capacities as a singing teacher were amply proved by the extraordinary abilities of his own children, several of whom were precocious soloists. He had 12 children by his wife Mary Johnson, whom he married in 1752 and who was later wardrobe mistress at Drury Lane (1776–*c*1800). All but three of his children predeceased him, and this naturally saddened his final years. Besides those noted below, three were connected with the musical or theatrical professions: Samuel (1760–78), an oboist; Maria (1763–84), an oratorio singer at Drury Lane from 1776 to 1783; and Jane Nash (1768–1806), an amateur singer who married Charles Ward, secretary of Drury Lane Theatre.

Linley's first London success was with the opera The Royal Merchant in 1767, and his growing reputation in

1. Thomas Linley (i): portrait by Thomas Gainsborough, late 1760s (Dulwich Picture Gallery, London)

Bath led to his appointment at Drury Lane in 1774, where he became joint director of the oratorios with John Stanley until 1786, and after that with Samuel Arnold. He made his permanent home in London in 1776 when he became one of the four joint proprietors of Drury Lane Theatre with his son-in-law Sheridan.

From 1775, when The Duenna was produced, until his death, Linley arranged and composed music for over 30 plays, pantomimes and other entertainments. Sometimes only a song or two was required; at other times he composed, orchestrated or compiled a complete score (fig.2). His harmonization of the continuo score to The Beggar's Opera (1777) proved very successful. As director of music, he also arranged the oratorios performed at the theatre each Wednesday and Friday during Lent, and he composed numerous songs, glees, elegies and cantatas. In general, Linley excelled in the simple melody of great pathos as in 'No flower that blows' from Selima and Azor (1776). His music modulates more freely than those of his peers, and his work after the mid-1780s shows the influence of Haydn. In the last decade he made greater use of material from his earlier work and from other composers, although, because of time constraints, about half the music in The Duenna (1775) is also borrowed.

Linley was elected a member of the Royal Society of Musicians in 1777. He was buried in Wells Cathedral, where his son William erected a memorial tablet to him (now in the cloister). A tribute to Linley's achievements in The Gentleman's Magazine (1795, p.973) aptly summed up his life's work. The article was published anonymously, but its author may well have been Linley's

The Strangers at Home,
A
COMIC OPERA
performed with universal applause at the Theatre Royal Drury Lane
Selected & Composed by THO.s LINLEY.
Enter'd at Stationers Hall.
Price 10.6

2. Title-page of the vocal score of Thomas Linley (i)'s 'The Strangers at Home' (London, 1786)

old friend and colleague, William Jackson of Exeter. It said that:

His works are not distinguished by any striking marks of original genius, but they uniformly manifest taste, feeling, and a full knowledge of his art. The publick are indebted to him for many beautiful airs; he has harmonised with great judgement the melodies of former writers; and, if it was not in his power to astonish by sublime effects, his compositions always soothe and charm by delicacy, simplicity and tenderness.

WORKS

STAGE

vocal scores published soon after first performance, unless otherwise stated

LCG – London, Covent Garden
LDL – London, Drury Lane

The Royal Merchant (op, 3, T. Hull, after J. Beaumont and P. Massinger: The Beggar's Bush), LCG, 14 Dec 1767
The Duenna, or The Double Elopement (comic op, R.B. Sheridan), LCG, 21 Nov 1775; see (3) Thomas Linley (ii)
New Brooms! (prelude, G. Colman (i), LDL, 21 Sept 1776; vs unpubd
Macbeth (tragedy, 5, W. Shakespeare), LDL, 25 Nov 1776, addl choruses and accs. to Leveridge's music; vs unpubd
Selima and Azor (comic op, 3, G. Collier, after J.F. Marmontel), LDL, 5 Dec 1776
The Beggar's Opera (ballad op, 3, J. Gay), LDL, 29 Jan 1777, new orch accs.; 1 song pubd in W. Shield: Introduction to Harmony (London, 1800)
The Camp (musical entertainment, 2, Sheridan and R. Tickell), LDL, 15 Oct 1778
A Monody on the Death of Garrick (musical interlude, Sheridan), LDL, 11 March 1779; text pubd as Verses to the Memory of Garrick, fs unpubd
Fortunatus (pantomime, H. Woodward and Sheridan), LDL, 3 Jan 1780
Pastoral interlude in The Generous Imposter (comedy, 5, T.L. O' Beirne, after P.N. Destouches: Le dissipateur), LDL, 22 Nov 1780
The Gentle Shepherd (pastoral op, Tickell, after A. Ramsey), LDL, 29 Oct 1781, 1 song, ov. and orch accs.
Robinson Crusoe, or Harlequin Friday (pantomime, Sheridan), LDL, 29 Jan 1781 [some music attrib. by Watkins (1817) to (2) E.A. Linley]
The Carnival of Venice (comic op, 3, Tickell), LDL, 13 Dec 1781, only song texts pubd
The Triumph of Mirth, or Harlequin's Wedding (pantomime, T. King), LDL, 26 Dec 1782
The Spanish Rivals (musical farce, 2, M. Lonsdale), LDL, 4 Nov 1784
Arthur and Emmeline (musical entertainment, 2, ? J.P. Kemble, after D. Garrick's alteration of J. Dryden: King Arthur), LDL, 22 Nov 1784, ? incl. music by H. Purcell; vs unpubd
The Strangers at Home (comic op, 3, J. Cobb), LDL, 8 Dec 1785; rev. as The Algerine Slave, LDL, 17 March 1792
Hurly-Burly, or The Fairy of the Well (pantomime, Cobb and King), LDL, 26 Dec 1785; vs unpubd
Richard Coeur de Lion (comic op, 2, J. Burgoyne, after M. Sedaine), LDL, 24 Oct 1786, mostly Grétry's original music
Love in the East, or Adventures of Twelve Hours (comic op, 3, Cobb), LDL, 25 Feb 1788
Funeral Dirge in Romeo and Juliet (tragedy, 5, Garrick, after Shakespeare), LDL, 17 Nov 1788

Individual songs in: The School for Scandal (comedy, 5, Sheridan), LDL, 8 May 1777; The Quaker (comic op, 2, C. Dibdin), LDL, 7 Oct 1777; Zoraida (tragedy, 5, W. Hodson), LDL, 13 Dec 1779; Dissipation (comedy, 5, M. Andrews, after Garrick: Bon Ton), LDL, 10 March 1781; The Fair Circassian (tragedy, 5, S. Pratt), LDL, 27 Nov 1781; The Heiress (comedy, 5, Burgoyne, after C. Lennox: The Sister and D. Diderot: Le père de famille), LDL, 14 Jan 1786; The School for Greybeards (comedy, 5, H. Cowley, after A. Behn: The Lucky Chance), LDL, 25 Nov 1786; The New Peerage, or Our Eyes May Deceive us (comedy, 5, H. Lee), LDL, 10 Nov 1787; Cymon (dramatic romance, 5, Garrick, after Dryden), LDL, 31 Dec 1791; The Glorious First of June (musical entertainment, 2, Sheridan and Cobb), LDL, 2 July 1794 [attrib. by Watkins (1817) to (2) E.A. Linley]

OTHER WORKS

6 Elegies, S, T, B, hpd, vc (London, 1770)
12 Ballads, S, pf (London, 1780)
At least 19 pieces in The Posthumous Vocal Works of Mr. Linley and Mr. T. Linley (London, *c*1798)
Other songs pubd separately or in collections; some vocal pieces in GB-BA, Lbl, Lcm; several pieces, hpd

(2) Elizabeth Ann Linley (b Bath, 7 Sept 1754; d Bristol, 28 June 1792). Soprano, daughter of (1) Thomas Linley (i). She was taught by her father and made early appearances in concerts at Bath and Bristol. She made her London début at Covent Garden in 1767, with her brother (3) Thomas Linley (ii), in Thomas Hull's masque The Fairy Favour, and made regular appearances in the London oratorio seasons, 1769–73, and at the Three Choirs Festival from 1770 to 1773, often with her sisters Mary and Maria. After a broken engagement to Thomas Matthews, which inspired Samuel Foote's comedy The Maid of Bath (Haymarket Theatre, 26 June 1771), she eloped to France with Richard Brinsley Sheridan in 1772 and married him in April 1773. The incident may have inspired her husband's libretto The Duenna (1775). She then withdrew from public life, but continued to sing at benefits and to give private concerts at her home, where she was sometimes accompanied at the keyboard by the music historian Charles Burney. Some of the music she supposedly composed appears in her father's theatre works, and she wrote lyrics for at least one of her brother Thomas's cantatas. She also wrote poetry and moving elegies on her brother's death, and kept the accounts at Drury Lane.

Many tributes to her vocal talent were published in her lifetime and afterwards. She was considered by many to be the finest English soprano of her time. Of the approximately 50 portraits of her, several were painted by both Reynolds and Gainsborough (fig.3).

3. 'The Linley Sisters' (Elizabeth Ann, left, and Mary): portrait by Thomas Gainsborough, c1772 (Dulwich Picture Gallery, London)

(3) Thomas Linley (ii) (b Bath, 7 May 1756; d Grimsthorpe, Lincs., 5 Aug 1778). Composer and violinist, son of (1) Thomas Linley (i). He was one of the most precocious composers and performers that have been known in England. He gave evidence of exceptional musical ability at a very early age and was soon studying music with his father. He played a concerto at a concert in Bristol on 29 July 1763, when aged just 7, and from 1763 to 1768 he studied music with Boyce. With his sister (2) Elizabeth Ann Linley he first appeared in London in The Fairy Favour in 1767 singing, dancing a hornpipe and playing the violin. In 1768 he went to Italy and studied the violin with Nardini in Florence for about three years. He met Mozart there in April 1770 and Burney in September of the same year. He returned to England in 1771 and became a regular performer in concerts in Bath and London. He was leader at Drury Lane from 1773 to 1778 and often played concertos between the acts of oratorios.

Only a fairly small proportion of Linley's music survives, but these few works are enough to reveal his fluent and congenial melody, his contrapuntal facility and his imaginative orchestration. The anthem Let God arise (Worcester Festival, 1773) exhibits great mastery of solo, choral and instrumental forces, and his later, large-scale works show how rapidly his skills matured. The music for The Duenna was written in 1775 in collaboration with his father, and in great haste, but Linley's songs intensify Sheridan's characterizations and save the comic opera from shallowness. He composed a quarter of the music and arranged, in a unifying galant style, the tunes selected by Sheridan and Elizabeth Ann, which make up about half the score.

4. Thomas Linley (ii): portrait by Thomas Gainsborough, c1773 (Dulwich Picture Gallery, London)

The Lyric Ode (1776), set to a text by his fellow-Bathonian French Laurence, shows great variety in mood, ranging from majestic Handelian fugues to lightsome fairy music for oboe and to the wild romanticism of music for spectres. Linley's musical heritage is acknowledged through the echoes of Purcell, Handel, J.C. Bach and especially Arne. Linley's tragic early death in a boating accident while on holiday with his family at Grimsthorpe Castle was one of the greatest losses that English music has suffered.

Gainsborough painted Linley's portrait three times. One portrait (*c*1773) is in the Dulwich Picture Gallery (fig.4), and another in Greenwich, Connecticut. The third, a double portrait with his sister Elizabeth, is in Williamstown, Massachusetts.

WORKS

STAGE

LCG – London, Covent Garden
LDL – London, Drury Lane

The Duenna (comic op, R.B. Sheridan), LCG, 21 Nov 1775, ov., songs, ensembles; GB-Lgc (part autograph), Lbl, vs (London, 1776), ov. pubd in parts

The Tempest (comedy, 5, Sheridan, after W. Shakespeare), LDL, 4 Jan 1777, storm chorus, etc; Lbl, Lcm

The Cady of Bagdad (comic op, 3, A. Portal), LDL, 19 Feb 1778, Lbl

Ov. to The Triumph of Mirth, or Harlequin's Wedding (pantomime, T. King), LDL, 26 Dec 1782; see (1) Thomas Linley (i)

OTHER VOCAL

Let God arise (anthem, Ps 68), S, S, T, B, chorus, orch, Worcester Festival, 8 Sept 1773; ed. in RRMCE, vii (1977)

A Lyric Ode (2, F. Laurence), S, S, S, T, B, chorus and orch, LDL, 20 March 1776; US-Ws, GB-Lbl; lib pubd as A Lyric Ode on the Fairies, Aerial Beings, and Witches of Shakespeare; ed. as The Shakespeare Ode in MB, xxx (1970, 2/1985)

The Song of Moses (ode, J. Hoadly, after Exodus), LDL, 12 March 1777; Lbl

13 or more songs, madrigals, cants. and elegies in The Posthumous Vocal Works of Mr. Linley and Mr. T. Linley (London, *c*1798)

Other songs, madrigals, Lbl

INSTRUMENTAL

6 vn sonatas, 1768; La settima sonata, 1769: only one, A, survives, Lbl

At least 20 vn concs. by 1775: only one, F, survives complete, Lbl; the third movt of his father's ov., The Gentle Shepherd, D, 1781, was adapted from one of the younger Linley's concs.

(4) Mary [Polly] Linley (b Bath, 4 Jan 1758; d Clifton, Bristol, 27 July 1787). Soprano, daughter of (1) Thomas Linley (i). She was taught by her father and frequently sang with her sister Elizabeth Ann at concerts, festivals and in the oratorio seasons. In 1769, at the age of 11, she performed at Covent Garden in Colman's Man and Wife or The Shakespeare Jubilee and in Thomas Hull's The Spanish Lady; these were probably her first London appearances. She was a precocious performer and had many early opportunities to display her gifts. She appeared at the Three Choirs Festival 1771–6, and sang regularly in London until her marriage on 26 July 1780 to the amateur dramatist Richard Tickell (1751–93), who wrote librettos for her father. Both Gainsborough and Richard Cosway painted her portrait.

(5) Ozias Thurston Linley (b Bath, bap. 22 Aug 1765; d London, 6 March 1831). Organist and clergyman, son of (1) Thomas Linley (i). He studied music with his father and with the astronomer and musician William Herschel. He took his degree at Oxford in 1789 and then entered the church as a minor canon at Norwich; in May 1816 he went to Dulwich College as Organist Fellow and remained there until his death. Some of the anthems and chants he wrote for Dulwich and for St Margaret's Chapel, Bath, survive in manuscript at the Royal College of Music in London. He was renowned for his wit and eccentricity.

(6) William Linley (b Bath, 27 Jan 1771; d London, 6 May 1835). Composer and director of theatre music, son of (1) Thomas Linley (i). The youngest of the Linley children, he was educated at Harrow and St Paul's School, and studied music with his father and with the composer and viol player C.F. Abel. He had a fine singing voice that inspired Coleridge to write a sonnet about him. He was a civil servant in India, 1790–96 and 1801–06. In the late 1790s he took over his father's post as composer to Drury Lane and wrote musical works of mostly limited success, often supplying his own librettos. He also provided the incidental music to the famous Shakespeare forgery Vortigern (1796). He settled in London in 1807 and wrote several sets of songs, elegies, glees and some sacred music, and in 1816 issued a two-volume anthology of settings of Shakespearean lyrics by various composers. He was a member of many clubs and won a Glee Club prize in 1821 for his glee At the dread hour.

WORKS

STAGE

all first performed at Drury Lane, London

Harlequin Captive, or The Magic Fire (pantomime, W. Linley or C. Powel), 18 January 1796, GB-Lgc
Vortigern (tragedy, 5, W. Ireland [as W. Shakespeare]), 2 April 1796; 2 songs (London, 1796)
The Honey Moon (comic op, 3, W. Linley), 7 Jan 1797, vs (London, 1797); 1 song arr. as rondo, pf, by J. Monro (London, ?1805)
A Trip to the Nore (musical entertainment, A. Franklin), 9 Nov 1797; 2 songs (London, *c*1797)
The Pavilion (musical entertainment, 2, Linley), 16 Nov 1799, Lbl; rev. as The Ring, or Love me for myself, 21 Jan 1800
Merchant of Bruges (tragicomedy, 5, D. Kinnaird, after R. Brome: The Beggar's Bush), 14 Dec 1815; opening glee and chorus (London, ?1816)
Flights of Fancy, 'fairy' glees, 4vv (London, 1799)
6 Canzonetts, pf/hp (London, 1800)
8 Songs (O. Goldsmith, T. Moore, W. Bowles), T/S, pf (London, 1809)
ed.: Shakspeare's Dramatic Songs (London, 1816) [partly original, partly selected]
8 Pastoral Canzonetts, S, S, pf (London, ?1816)
Requiem II (W. Linley) in A Requiem to the Memory of the Late Samuel Webbe, ed. J. Fane, Earl of Westmoreland (London, ?1820)
8 Glees (London, ?1832)
Other glees, elegies pubd individually and in collections
Sacred music, 1789–1816; songs, 1800–12; hymns, 1817; glees; elegies: Lbl (some autograph)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDA; FiskeETM; SainsburyD
A Monody (after the manner of Milton's Lycidas) on the Death of Mr Linley (London, 1778)
M. Cooke: A Short Account of the Late Mr. Thomas Linley, Junior (MS, 1812, GB-Lbl)
J. Watkins: Memoirs of the Public and Private Life of the Right Honourable Richard Brinsley Sheridan(London, 1817)
[?W. Ayrton:] 'Memoir of Thomas Linley', The Harmonicon, iii (1825), 215–21
J. Sinclair: Sketches of Old Times and Distant Places (London, 1875), 147–64
E. Green: Thomas Linley: his Connection with Bath (Bath, 1903)
E. Green: Thomas Linley, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, and Thomas Matthews: their Connection with Bath (Bath, 1903)
E. Green: Richard Brinsley Sheridan and Thomas Linley: their Residences at Bath (Bath, 1904)
T.S. Cotterell: Some Notes on the Life in Bath of Elizabeth Anne Linley (London, 1929)
C. Black: The Linleys of Bath (London, 1911, 2/1926/R)
R. Fiske: 'A Score for The Duenna', ML, xlii (1961), 132–41
M. Bor and L.Clelland: Still the Lark: a Biography of Elizabeth Linley (London, 1962)
C. Camden: 'Songs and Choruses in The Tempest', Philological Quarterly, lxi (1962), 114–22
G. Beechey: Thomas Linley, Junior: his Life, Work and Times (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1965)
C. Price, ed.: The Letters of Richard Brinsley Sheridan (Oxford, 1966)
G. Beechey: 'Thomas Linley, Junior, 1756–1778', MQ, liv (1968), 74–82
C. Price, ed.: The Dramatic Works of Richard Brinsley Sheridan (Oxford, 1973)
R. Fiske: 'The Duenna', MT, cxvii (1976), 217–19
I. Woodfield: The Celebrated Quarrel between Thomas Linley (Senior) and William Herschel: an Episode in the Musical Life of 18th-Century Bath (Bath, 1977)
G. Beechey: 'Thomas Linley, 1756–78, and His Vocal Music', MT, cxix (1978), 669–71
L. Troost: 'The Characterizing Power of Song in Sheridan's The Duenna', Eighteenth-Century Studies, xx (1986–7), 153–72
H.D. Johnstone and R. Fiske, eds.: Music in Britain: the Eighteenth Century (Oxford, 1990)
J. McVeagh: 'Robinson Crusoe's Stage Debut: the Sheridan Pantomime of 1781', Journal of Popular Culture, xxiv (1990), 137–52

GWILYM BEECHEY/LINDA TROOST

Linley, Francis (b Doncaster, 1771; d Doncaster, 13 Sept 1800). English composer, organist and music dealer. As far as is known he was no relation of the Linley family of Bath. He was blind from birth. He studied the organ with Edward Miller, organist of Doncaster parish church from 1756 to 1807. In the early 1790s Linley went to London to become organist of St James's Chapel, Pentonville, and married a blind lady of considerable fortune. Together they purchased Bland's music-selling business in Holborn in 1797, but this venture soon failed, and after his wife had deserted him Linley went to America. In 1799 he returned to England and settled again in Doncaster. An obituary notice in the Doncaster, Nottingham and Lincoln Gazette of 19 September 1800 says that Linley was 29 at the time of his death and that he was a freemason. Linley's compositions include songs, keyboard pieces, an organ tutor (*c*1800), and some solos and duets for flutes. A Prelude in G is in Old English Organ Music for Manuals, ii (ed. C.H. Trevor, London, 1966).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (L.M. Middleton); Humphries-SmithMP
J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography (Birmingham, 1897/R)
H.C.R. Landon, ed.: The Collected Correspondence and London Notebooks of Joseph Haydn (London, 1959)

GWILYM BEECHEY

Linley, George (b Leeds, 1798; d London, 10 Sept 1865). English author and composer. As a young man he amused himself with writing satirical literature directed against the magnates of Leeds. He moved to London, where he did literary work of various kinds and wrote the words or the music – frequently both – of some of the most popular songs of his day, including Ever of thee, I cannot mind my wheel, mother and Thou art gone from my gaze. His operas include Francesca Doria (1849), The Toymaker (1861, an adaptation of Adam's La poupée de Nuremberg) and Law versus Love (1862). He also wrote the librettos of a number of operas including Balfe's Catherine Grey (1837), the first 19th-century English opera without spoken dialogue. His smaller vocal compositions include partsongs, hymns, and nursery rhyme settings, as well as editions and arrangements of folksong melodies. His Musical Cynics of London (London, 1862) is a satirical poem ridiculing H.F. Chorley, the music critic for The Athenaeum. It attacks not only Chorley's musical criticism but also his books, plays, librettos, translations, appearance, voice and dinner parties. Linley also wrote the text to Edouard Silas's Joash, a sacred drama presented at the Norwich Triennial Festival in 1863. The text was censured as 'unlyrical' and 'undignified' by Chorley in his Athenaeum review.

FRANK KIDSON/ROBERT BLEDSOE

Lin Minyi. See LAM MANYEE.

Linnet, Anne (b Århus, 30 July 1953). Danish composer and rock musician. She made her début as a rock singer and composer in 1971 with the jazz- and soul-inspired band Tears. In 1974 she formed an all-woman band, Shit og Chanel, which issued five recordings. She studied with Per Nørgård and Hans Abrahamsen at the conservatory in Århus (1976–85), graduating first in music education and then in composition, and was the first woman to complete the composition course at a Danish conservatory. In 1977 she made a solo recording, Kvindesind, in which she set poems by the Danish writer, Tove Ditlevsen. During the 1980s she wrote much theatre music and, with her bands, issued further recordings, including Anne Linnet Band (1981) and Marquis de Sade (1983). Her 1988 record of simple love songs, Jer er jo lige her ('I'm Right Here'), sold 400,000 copies, making it the best-selling Danish album ever. Linnet composed the songs' lyrics as well as the music. Simplicity and a sense for the musical declamation of the Danish language characterize Linnet's popular music; her singing voice is distinctive rather then melodious. The more serious compositions have not enjoyed the same success, but Linnet does not consider that these two kinds of music exist in separate spheres, since both aim for a direct and intense personal expression and make equal use of her technical abilities.

WORKS
(selective list)

Inst: For symfoniorkester, orch, 1978; Quatuor brutale, str qt, 1978; Tivoli, perc, 1980; Spring Capricious, orch, 1985; Metal Blue Explo, 4 perc; Seul I, II, III, vn

Vocal: Sang til hjertet, 1v, hp, db, 1978; Hosiana, chorus, 1979

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Kjeldsen: Anne Linnet og Marquis de Sade (diss., U. of Copenhagen, 1992)

J. Levinsen: 'Det' så udansk', DMt, lxvii (1992–3), 122–5

INGE BRULAND

Lin Shicheng (b Nanhui county, Shanghai, March 1922). Chinese pipa player. Lin's musical training began with his father, himself a talented multi-instrumentalist. He also trained as a doctor of (Chinese) medicine, graduating in 1941. In 1942 Lin began pipa lessons under the tutelage of Shen Haochu (1899–1953), a leading player in the Pudong school of performance. After working for some years in Shanghai, Lin was appointed in 1956 to the Central Conservatory of Music in Beijing. Lin has been influential as recitalist, as teacher and as an editor of pipa scores and methods.

WRITINGS

Pipa yanzoufa [Pipa performance technique] (Beijing, 1958)

Pipa sanshi ke [30 lessons for pipa] (Beijing, 1984)

Pipa jiaoxuefa [Pipa study method] (Shanghai, 1989)

Lin Shicheng pipa qu xuan [Selection of pipa pieces by Lin Shicheng] (Hong Kong, 1990)

BIBLIOGRAPHY
AND OTHER RESOURCES

Fei Yun: 'Yongnian Huapu cheng meimiao de qinsheng: ji pipa yanzoujia, yinyue jiaoyujia Lin Shicheng' [Using the old Hua score to make splendid sounds: a record of pipa musician and music educator Lin Shicheng], Youmei de xuanlü piaoxiang de ge – Jiangsu lidai yinyuejia, ed. Yi Ren (Nanjing, 1992), 283–6

J. Myers: The Way of Pipa: Structure and Imagery in Chinese Lute Music (Kent, OH, 1992), 30–31

Zhongguo yinyue cidian xubian [Dictionary of Chinese music, supplementary vol.] (Beijing, 1992), 114

Chine: l'art du pipa, Ocora C 680 046 (1993)

JONATHAN P.J. STOCK

Linterculus (Lat.). See KIT.

Linus. This Greek name or term appears first in Homer: a lyre-playing youth 'sings of Linus', or 'sings a Linus song' (Iliad, xviii.569–72). The scene, a vintage festival, contains no suggestion of mourning; but HESIOD (Evelyn-White, frag.1) spoke of Linus whom 'all bards and kithara players bewail (thrēneusin; the thrēnos was a ritual lament)'. Three centuries later, Herodotus (ii.79.2–3) offered a similar description, and the tragic poets (Aeschylus, Agamemnon, 121; Sophocles, Ajax, 627; Euripides, Helen, 172, Orestes, 1395) used ailinon as a lyric cry of grief. Usually it has been translated 'alas for Linus!' but it is often equated with the Phoenician ai lanu, 'woe to us!'. The contradiction can be resolved only by accepting the hypothesis that the Linus song of the Iliad was a form of lament for the vintage, imagined as undergoing a kind of death.

Genealogies of Linus, who emerged as a mythological figure at a comparatively late stage in Greek history, likewise display two quite different orientations. The more persistent and developed of these, a tradition of the central mainland and especially Thebes (a city with a brilliant musical culture), singled out Apollo and one or another of the Muses as his parents. He came increasingly to be given musical attributes: in a wide variety of sources he appears, for example, as Heracles' teacher and the rival of Apollo, as a master singer or kithara player and a composer of thrēnoi, and as the discoverer of several technical innovations and ultimately of music itself. Whether this elaborate and occasionally fantastic development began with the personification of a vintage song remains uncertain. The legends of Linus's death are also varied: in one he is killed by his father Apollo for presuming to be equal to the god as a musician (Pausanias, Description of Greece, ix.29.6; cf Diogenes Laertius, Lives, i.4); in another he is killed by his pupil Heracles for reprimanding his awkwardness in playing the lyre (Apollodorus, ii.4.9).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.G. Evelyn-White, ed. and trans.: Hesiod, the Homeric Hymns and Homerica (London and Cambridge, MA, 1914, 2/1936/R)

H. Abert: 'Linos (1)', Paulys Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, xiii/1 (Stuttgart, 1926), 715–17

W.F. Otto: Die Musen und der göttliche Ursprung des Singens und Sagens (Düsseldorf, 1955, 2/1956), 40–45

WARREN ANDERSON/THOMAS J. MATHIESEN

Linyova, Yevgeniya (Ėduardovna) [Lineff, Eugenie] (b Brest-Litovsk [now Brest, Belarus], 28 Dec 1853/9 Jan 1854; d Moscow, 24 Jan 1919). Russian polyphonic folksong collector. After receiving professional training as a singer, she performed in operatic productions in Vienna, Budapest, London, Paris and Moscow (1882–3, Bol′shoy). She also worked clandestinely for an illegal revolutionary publishing organization, translating the works of Marx and Engels (1882–4). At the end of the 1880s she ceased both her career as a professional singer and her revolutionary work, and made her first folksong recordings, which are no longer extant. After her marriage she and her husband were émigrés in the UK (1891–2) and USA (1892–6). There she founded and directed a choir, whose performances of Russian folksongs in New York and Philadelphia, and at the Chicago World Trade Fair (1893), were received enthusiastically and earned money to support an émigré press.

Upon her return to Russia, Linyova began to record Russian folksongs using the phonograph, to which she had been introduced in the USA. From 1897 to 1901 she undertook expeditions to the provinces of Voronezh, Tambov, Nizhegorod, Vladimir, Kostroma, Novgorod and Vologda, and published a small proportion of the songs she collected in her celebrated two-volume selection of Great Russian folksongs. She was awarded a gold medal for her research publications in 1905. From 1903 to 1913 she undertook further fieldwork in Ukraine, Slovakia and Serbia, and made a special study of the Dukhobors and Molokans in the Caucasus. She also participated in international musicological conferences in Vienna (1909) and London (1911). She conducted her research in association with the Moscow Music-Ethnography Commission and centred her educational activities meanwhile on the People's Conservatory, which was founded in 1906 on her own initiative to provide free training in choral singing for those of modest means.

Although Linyova was not the first to record folksong in Russia, it is her name that is associated with the advent of phonographic recording in Russian ethnological musicology and her transcriptions of choral songs that are considered to be the closest to the originals. She identified the basic principle of Russian polyphonic folksong as being the singing of several variations of a song melody simultaneously with the voices always coming to a unison close. Her theories, which support the ideas of Yu.N. Mel'gunov, influenced Adler's conception of heterophony. Although subsequent to her research several types of Russian polyphonic folksongs have been distinguished, her work retains its validity and continues to have a widespread impact on Russian musicology. Many of her recordings are still preserved and are held, together with some of her manuscripts, at the Institute of Russian Literature, St Petersburg; the remainder of her manuscripts are held at the State Central Museum of Musical Culture in Moscow.

WRITINGS

'O poyezdke Ye.Ė. Linyovoy s tsel'yu zapisïvaniya narodnïkh pesen pri pomoshchi grafofona' [Linyova's journey to record folksongs with the aid of a phonograph], Ėtnograficheskoye obozreniye, xxxiv (1897), 222–4

'Yu.N. Mel'gunov kak issledovatel' russkoy narodnoy pesni' [Mel'gunov as a researcher of Russian folksong], Russkaya musïkal'naya gazeta, nos.23–4 (1903)

'Über neue Methoden des Folklores in Russland', IMusSCR III: Vienna 1909, 233–44

'Psalms and Religious Songs of Russian Sectarians in the Caucasus', IMusSCR IV: London 1911, 187–201 [Eng. summary, pp.63–4]

'Poyezdka v Kraynu letom 1913 g.' [Expedition to Krayna, summer 1913], Russkiy fol'klor, iii (1958), 313

FOLKSONG COLLECTIONS

Russian Folk-Songs as Sung by the People and Peasant Wedding Ceremonies Customary in Northern and Central Russia (Chicago, 1893) [incl. preface by H.E. Krehbiel]

Velikorusskiye pesni v narodnoy garmonizatsii (St Petersburg, 1904–9; Eng. trans., 1905–12 as The Peasant Songs of Great Russia as they are in the Folk's Harmonization: Collected and Transcribed from Phonograms by Eugenie Lineff)

'Opït zapisi fonografom ukrainskikh narodnïkh pesen: iz muzïkal'no-ėtnograficheskoy poyezdki v Poltavskuyu guberniyu v 1903' [An attempt to record Ukrainian folksongs: from the ethnomusicological visit to the Poltava government in 1903], Trudï muzïkal'no-ėtnograficheskoy kommissii, i (Moscow, 1906), 221–66; Eng. trans. as Folk Songs of the Ukraine (Godfrey, IL, 1958)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Ye. Kann-Novikova: Sobiratel'nitsa russkikh narodnïkh pesen Yevgeniya Linyova [The collector of Russian folksongs] (Moscow, 1952)

J. Arbatski: Ėtyudï po russkoy muzïki [Studies in Russian music] (New York, 1981), 81–121

I.I. Shevchenko: 'Iz perepiski Ye.Ė. Linyovoy i V.V. Stasova' [From the correspondence of Linyova and Stasov], Iz istorii russkoy fol'kloristiki, iii, ed. A.A. Gorelov (Leningrad, 1990), 104–16

M.A. LOBANOV

Linz. City in Austria on the Danube. Its musical history can be traced back to the mid-14th century. Masses were sung at the Deutschordenskirche (from 1348), at the parish church (from 1355) and at the church of the Minorite convent (from 1397), where the pupils of the parish school performed under their teacher, the choirmaster. There were no important figures among either the choirmasters (from 1355) or the organists (from the mid-16th century). From about 1550 there are records of town musicians whose tasks included sounding calls from the tower (Turmblasen), playing at weddings, funerals and dances, and assisting in the parish church as well as, briefly, in the Lutheran Landhauskirche. The town's first organ builder was Hans Lar (1485). When the household of Emperor Friedrich III was in Linz (1485–93) it brought with it its own court orchestra, imperial trumpeters and pipers and the celebrated lutenist Albrecht Morhanns. In 1490 Paul Hofhaimer was in Linz under the auspices of Maximilian I; a longer visit by the emperor in 1501 brought a performance of Ludus Dianae by Conradus Celtis to the town, complete with four-part odes by an anonymous composer. Musicians from Linz such as Johann Pruelmair and Asmus von Linz were members of Maximilian's household; Matthias Serna and Christoph Hoffmaister were employed by Ferdinand I. Ferdinand's court Kapellmeister, Arnold von Bruck, lived in Linz from 1548 until his death.

The affinity of urban populations for Lutheranism meant that the Lutheran Landschaftsschule and Landhauskirche became important centres of musical culture in the second half of the 16th century, and such composers as Nicolaus Rosthius, Wolfgang Rauch, Daniel Scheuchmair, Johannes Brassicanus and Martin Zeiller held positions there. Johannes Kepler, a teacher at the Landschaftsschule, wrote his Harmonices mundi libri V (Linz, 1619); this work and a contemporary composition by Elias Ursinus mark the beginnings of music printing in Linz. The repertory of chorales of the Lutheran community in Linz was published by the senior minister and music theorist Daniel Hitzler, in exile in Strasbourg (1634).

With the closing-down of the Lutheran school and church as a consequence of the early Counter-Reformation (1624) the Jesuits, with their college (founded in 1610) and seminary (founded in 1628), became particularly important in the musical life of the town. Their pupils assumed responsibility for church music in the Jesuit church, in that of the Ursulines (from 1680) and at sacred performances organized by religious fraternities. The composers Romanus Weichlein, Franz Weichlein, Joseph Riepel and J.B. Lasser were pupils of the Jesuits in Linz. At the theatre of the Jesuit school 343 Latin dramas were performed between 1608 and 1764; the music for 15 of these was provided by F.T. Richter, Andreas Rochner, J.B. Staudt, J.M. Kämpfl and Georg Butz. Linz's first opera production took place on 7 January 1677 with Antonio Draghi's Ercole acquistatore dell'immortalità in the presence of Leopold I. During the next 100 years such performances remained isolated events, associated with great occasions at the court, but regular opera performances began in the 1760s. Mozart visited Linz in 1783 and wrote his Linz Symphony K425 for a concert at the theatre.

The 19th century began with the formation of new musical organizations, one of which, the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde (later Linzer Musikverein) arranged the town's musical activities for 100 years. The music academy that it established in 1822 later became the Bruckner-Konservatorium. Towards the middle of the century, the town's first choral unions were founded. The oldest of these, the Liedertafel Frohsinn (1845), of which Anton Bruckner was twice choirmaster (1860–61 and 1868), later became the Sängerbund Frohsinn. During the next 60 years other choral societies were founded, the most important of which are the Männergesangverein Sängerbund (1857), the Oberösterreichischer und Salzburgischer Sängerbund (1865), the Arbeitersängerbund (1880), and the Christlich-Deutscher Gesangverein (1905). The Neue Ständische Theater was built in 1803 after a fire had destroyed its predecessor in 1800. The theatre, in which plays, operas, operettas and ballets were performed, has always laid particular emphasis on new productions. Since 1870 many young singers have begun their careers there before moving to the Vienna Opera.

Although one active organization, the Konzertverein, was founded in 1919, the theatre in particular was affected by the world economic crisis in the post-World War I period. Of the musical institutions planned after the Nazis occupied Austria in 1938 (an opera house, a symphony orchestra etc.), only the academy of music survived the end of World War II. The theatre has been rebuilt twice, and since about 1920 it has been known as the Landestheater. In 1958 Clemens Holzmeister designed a new theatre complex comprising a small Kammerspiele (cap. 421) and the new Landestheater (cap. 756). This has, however, proved too small and acoustically problematic. The Landestheater also maintains a tradition of premières, in particular of works by Upper Austrian composers as well as rare works (Wagner's Rienzi, Krenek). A municipal music council, now the Linzer Veranstaltungsgesellschaft, organizes orchestral and chamber concerts, solo recitals, youth concerts and industrial concerts. There are also public and private concerts given by Catholic and Lutheran church choirs, amateur music-making and student concerts.

Since the 1970s the musical life of Linz has flourished. 1974 saw the opening of the Brucknerhaus on the banks of the Danube, a fine complex of concert and congress halls designed by the Finnish architect Heikki Siren (Brucknersaal, cap. 1520, Stiftersaal, cap. 392, Keplersaal, cap. 168). The excellent organ in the large Brucknersaal was built by Flentrop; the Anton Bruckner organ competition takes place there every four years. The Internationale Brucknerfest Linz, founded in 1974, is held annually in September and October. At the Linzer Klangwolke, an open-air festival for up to 200,000 people held since 1979 on the banks of the Danube during the Bruckner Festival, music by Bruckner, Mahler and even Pink Floyd is broadcast widely by high-tech sound. The idea of music outside the confines of the concert hall is regarded as the new trademark of Linz. Ars Electronica, a festival 'between art, technology and society', is held annually in June.

The Anton Bruckner-Institut Linz, founded by Franz Grasberger, has been accommodated in the Brucknerhaus since 1978. Its publications include a series of Dokumente und Studien and reports on symposia at the institute. The Oberösterreichisches Landesmuseum contains a good collection of historical musical instruments of the 16th to 19th centuries. Since 1985 the Posthof has been a centre for rock, pop, dance and cabaret.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Preiss: 'Die Musikpflege in Linz um die Wende des 18. Jahrhunderts', Jb der Stadt Linz 1935 (1936), 104 only
O. Wessely: 'Linz und die Musik: von den Anfängen bis zum Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts', Jb der Stadt Linz 1950 (1951), 96–197
O. Wessely: 'Das Linzer Musikleben in der ersten Hälfte des 19. Jahrhunderts', Jb der Stadt Linz 1953 (1954), 283–442
O. Wessely: 'Anton Bruckner und Linz', Jb der Stadt Linz 1954 (1955), 201–82
W. Formann: 'Richard Tauber: unsterbliche Stimme aus Linz, Oberösterreicher', Lebensbilder zur Geschichte Oberösterreichs, ii (Linz, 1962), 192–207
O. Wessely: 'Musik und Theater in Linz zu Bruckners Zeit', Anton Bruckner und Linz, Landhaus, 20 June – 11 Oct 1964 (Vienna, 1964), 35–40
O. Wessely: 'Von Mozart bis Bruckner: Wandlungen des Linzer Musiklebens 1770 bis 1870', ÖMz, xxv (1970), 151–8
H. Kreczi: Das Bruckner-Stift St. Florian und das Linzer Reichs-Bruckner-Orchester 1942–1945(Graz, 1986)
H. Leopoldseder: Linzer Klangwolke: Kunsterlebnis zwischen Himmel und Erde: die Geschichte eines Markenzeichens (Vienna, 1988)
K. Gerbel and H. Leopoldseder, eds.: Die Ars Electronica: Kunst im Zeitsprung (Linz, 1989)
E. Schmutz: 'Studien zur Linzer Musikgeschichte vor und nach 1945', Historisches Jb der Stadt Linz (1989), 103–249
R. Kannonier: 'Musik nach 1945 in Österreichs Bundesländern: Oberösterreich', ÖMz, xlvi (1991), 115–18
Musikstadt Linz, Musikland Oberösterreich: Linz 1990
H. Kreczi: 'Bruckner-Orchester Linz und Brucknerhaus', Anton Bruckner-Dokumente und Studien, ix (Vienna, 1992), 308 only
U. Otter and R. Schollum: 'Die Jahre 1913–1959: organisatorisches und pädagogisches Wirken', Historisches Jb der Stadt Linz (1993), 59–321

OTHMAR WESSELY/HARALD GOERTZ

Lioncourt, Guy de (b Caen, 1 Dec 1885; d Paris, 24 Dec 1961). French composer and teacher. In 1904 he entered the Schola Cantorum, where his first teachers included Gastoué (Gregorian chant) and Roussel (counterpoint). He was accepted into d'Indy's composition class in 1905, and appointed secrétaire-inspecteur des cours (1912) and professor of counterpoint (1914). After taking his composition diploma in 1916, he remained at the Schola, teaching and editing its monthly publication Tablettes. In 1931, on d'Indy's death, he was made sub-director of the institution and professor of composition. Following disagreements that shook the Schola in 1935, he was one of those who left to found the Ecole César Franck, which he directed. His music is that of a stalwart of the Schola; in particular, he placed a high value on plainsong and produced a large body of liturgical works. He edited the fourth (and final) volume of d'Indy's Cours de composition musicale (Paris, 1951). He published a volume of memoirs, Un témoignage sur la musique et sur la vie au XXme siècle (Paris, 1956), a valuable record of the Schola under d'Indy by one who was devoted to the 'Maître'; it contains a list of his works.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Jan de la lune (drama, prol, 3, R. de Pampelonne, after F. Boissin), op.58, 1915–21; Le mystère de l'Emmanuel (liturgical drama, L. David), op.62, 1924; Le mystère de l'Alleluia (liturgical drama, David), op.65, 1925–6; Le mystère de l'Esprit (liturgical drama, David), op.96, 1939–40; incid music

Choral orch: Hyalis, le petit faune aux yeux bleus (after A. Samain), op.35, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1909–11; La belle au bois dormant (after C. Perrault), op.48, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1912–15; Les dix lépreux (R. des Granges), op.52, 1v, female chorus, orch, 1918–19; Le reniement de St Pierre, op.74, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1928; Le dict de Mme Saincte Barbe (Comte de Lapparent, after old Fr.), op.86, solo vv, chorus, str, hp, 1937; Le navrement de Notre-Dame (L. Chancerel), op.100, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1943

Liturgical: 3 masses, b, op.47, 4vv, 1914–22, A, op.99, 3vv, org, 1942, d, op.106, 2vv, org, 1948; many motets etc; org pieces

Inst: Pf Qnt, op.27, 1908; 3 mélodies grégoriennes, op.60, sax, org, 1923; Pf Qt, e, op.63, 1925; Str Qt, a, op.83, 1933; pf pieces, etc

Numerous songs, some with orch; secular choral pieces

Principal publishers: Durand, Fortin, Schola Cantorum

PAUL GRIFFITHS

Lionel (Power). See POWER, LEONEL.

Lionnet, Jean (b Versailles, 1 May 1935; d Viroflay, 13 Oct 1998). French musicologist. He studied at the Institut des Hautes Etudes Cinématographiques in Paris, where he obtained the diploma in sound engineering in 1959. From 1962 to 1976 he worked in the cinema industry. After moving to Rome in 1965, he began research in 1976 for RISM with the responsibility for cataloguing musical manuscripts in Italy. In 1990 he returned to France and became a researcher at the Centre de Musique Baroque at Versailles. His principal subjects of research were music in Rome, especially performing practice and the papal chapel, French music of the 17th century and the circulation of music in the Baroque period.

WRITINGS

'Les activités musicales de Flavio Chigi, cardinal, neveu d'Alexandre VII', Studi musicali, ix (1980), 287–301

'La "Salve" de Sainte-Marie Majeure: la musique de la chapelle Borghese au 17ème siècle', Studi musicali, xii (1983), 97–120

'Una svolta nella storia del collegio dei cantori pontifici: il decreto del 22 guigno 1665 contro Orazio Benevolo, origine e conseguenze', NRMI, xvii (1983), 72–103

'André Maugars: riposta data a un curioso sul sentimento della musica d'Italia', NRMI, xix (1985), 681–707

'La Cappella Pontificia e il regno di Napoli durante il Seicento', La musica a Napoli durante il Seicento: Naples 1985, 541–54

'Un musicista dimenticato: Dionigio Fregiotti', Händel e gli Scarlatti a Roma: Rome 1985, 285–96

La musique à Saint-Louis des Français de Rome au XVIIe siècle (Venice, 1985)

'La musique à "Santa Maria della Consolazione" au 17ème siècle', NA, new ser., iv (1986), 153–202

'Palestrina e la Cappella Pontificia', Studi palestriniani II: Palestrina 1986, 125–37

'Une partition inconnue d'Alessandro Scarlatti', Studi musicali, xv (1986), 183–212

'L'évolution du répertoire de la Chapelle Pontificale au cours du 17ème siècle', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, ii, 272–9

'Performance Practice in the Papal Chapel during the 17th Century', EMc, xv (1987), 3–15

'Une "mode française" à Rome au XVIIe siècle', RdM, lxxvii (1991), 279–90

'La "Sapienza" e la musica nel Seicento', Roma e lo studium urbis: spazio urbano e cultura dal Quattro al Seicento: Rome 1989, ed. P. Cherubini (Rome, 1992), 376–85

'La diffusion des manuscrits musicaux en Europe au XVIIe siècle', Les samedis musicaux du château de Versailles, 9 May–5 Sept (Versailles, 1992), 67–85 [programme book]

'La musique à San Giacomo degli Spagnoli au XVIIème siècle et les archives de la Congrégation des Espagnols de Rome', La musica a Roma attraverso le fonti d'archivio: Rome 1992, 479–505

'The Borghese Family and Music during the First Half of the Seventeenth Century', ML, lxxiv (1993), 519–29

'Le répertoire des vêpres papales', Collectanea II: Studien zur Geschichte der päpstlichen Kapelle, ed. B. Janz (Rome, 1994), 225–48

'Les événements musicaux de la légation du cardinal Flavio Chigi en France, été 1664', Studi musicali, xxv (1996), 127–54

EDITIONS

H. du Mont: Dialogus de anima, Patrimoine musical français, Monumentales, ii/1 (Versailles, 1992); Cantica sacra, ibid., ii/3/i (Versailles, 1996)

M.-A. Charpentier: Canticum pro pace, Patrimoine musical français, Monumentales, i/3/i (Versailles, 1994)

La Cappella Giulia, i: I vespri nel XVIII secolo (Rome, 1995) [incl. works of P.P. Bencini, Paolo Lorenzani, Francesco Grassi and Girolamo Galavotti]

JEAN GRIBENSKI

Lion's roar. See STRING DRUM.

Lipatti, Dinu [Constantin] (b Bucharest, 19 March 1917; d Geneva, 2 Dec 1950). Romanian pianist and composer. The name Dinu was a diminutive of his baptismal name. He came from a musical family: his father had studied the violin with Sarasate and Carl Flesch, his mother was a good pianist, while Enescu was his godfather and a major influence on his career. His first serious studies were at the Bucharest Conservatory with Mihail Jora and Floria Musicescu, with whom he maintained lifelong ties. At the conservatory, where he remained from 1928 to 1932, his self-discipline and striving for perfection were already evident. Lipatti was awarded only second prize in the 1934 Vienna International Piano Competition, causing Cortot to resign from the jury, and subsequently invite the young pianist to study with him in Paris. There Lipatti also took lessons with Yvonne Lefébure (Cortot's assistant at the time) and studied composition with Dukas and Nadia Boulanger, whom he called his 'musical guide and spiritual mother'. In 1934 he played Liszt's First Concerto with the orchestra of the Ecole Normale conducted by Cortot, and in 1935 gave the first Paris performance of Enescu's F♯ minor Sonata. Lipatti gave his first major Paris recital at the Salle Pleyel in 1939, but when war intervened he returned to Bucharest to perform, teach, compose and write music criticism. In 1943 the first signs of lymphogranulomatosis, a rare form of cancer, were diagnosed, and although he took up a professorship at the Geneva Conservatory in 1949, and played and recorded the Schumann Concerto with the Philharmonia under Karajan in London, he drastically reduced the number of his European appearances and cancelled projected tours of Australia and the Americas. In 1946 he had signed an exclusive contract with Columbia and, temporarily revived by the new drug cortisone, was able to make recordings at his home in Geneva under the supervision of Walter Legge. Lipatti's final recital, which was recorded, was given in September 1950 in Besançon where, despite extreme illness, he gave incomparable performances of Bach's First Partita, Mozart's A minor Sonata, two Schubert impromptus and the complete Chopin waltzes, except no.2, which he was too exhausted to play, offering Myra Hess's transcription of Bach's 'Jesu, joy of man's desiring' as a last-minute substitute.

A tireless searcher for musical truth and a musician of rare sensibility and delicacy, Lipatti needed four years of preparation on Beethoven's 'Emperor' Concerto and three years on Tchaikovsky's First Concerto if his exacting standards were to be met. His recorded legacy is small but beyond price, and includes major works by Bach, Mozart, Schumann, Chopin and others. His account of Ravel's Alborada del gracioso is unmatched in its blend of startling brilliance and poetry. Tributes to Lipatti were unstinting. For Yehudi Menuhin he was 'a manifestation of a spirit realm, resistant to all pain and suffering', while for Cortot his playing was, quite simply, 'perfection'. Boulanger was as haunted by 'that serene face with its dark velvet eyes' as by the musical force and clarity that emanated from him; and for Poulenc he was 'an artist of divine spirituality'. Lipatti's own compositions include works for one and two pianos with orchestral accompaniment, and a Sonatina for the left hand which was recorded by his pupil, Béla Siki, and which shows, in relatively gentle vein, the influence of Bartók.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Legge: 'Dinu Lipatti', Gramophone, xxviii (1950–51), 193–5; repr. in The Gramophone Jubilee Book, ed. R. Wimbush (London, 1973), 202ff
M. Lipatti: Hommage à Dinu Lipatti (Geneva, 1952)
A. Lipatti: La vie du pianiste Dinu Lipatti, écrite par sa mère (Paris, 1954)
B. Siki: 'Dinu Lipatti', Recorded Sound, no.15 (1964), 232–7
D. Tănăsescu: Lipatti (Bucharest, 1965) [with discography and list of works]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR/BRYCE MORRISON

Lipavský, Josef [Lipawsky, Joseph] (b Vysoké Mýto, Bohemia, 22 Feb 1772; d Vienna, 7 Jan 1810). Czech composer and pianist. After studying the organ with Ignác Haas at Hradec Králové and philosophy at Prague, he went to Vienna to read law. There he completed his musical training in piano and composition with Georg Pasterwiz, Johann Baptist Vanhal and possibly Mozart, to whom he dedicated his variations op.1 (1791). He soon made a reputation as a composer and pianist. After teaching music to the daughters of Count Adam Teleki for two years, he was appointed, at the count's recommendation, as exchequer to the imperial Privy Chamber Treasury in Vienna.

Although Lipavský wrote some chamber and orchestral works, as well as songs and Singspiele, most of his works are for solo piano. The piano works have early Romantic elements, such as the emphatic melodic nature of the middle voices (with passing notes in parallel 6ths), block chords with expressive harmonic suspensions and Schubertian shifts between major and minor. They demand only modest performing abilities, but their fluent technique and clear texture won them a favourable critical reception.

WORKS

printed works published at Vienna unless otherwise stated

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 12 minuets, first perf. Vienna, Redouten-Saal, 24 Nov 1799, A-Wn; sym., str, D-Mbs, doubtful
Chbr: Grande sonate, pf, vn, op.9 (*c*1800–02); Grande sonate, pf, vn, vc, op.10 (*c*1800–02); Grande sonate, E♭, pf, vn, vc, op.11 (1802); Sonata, G, pf, fl, oeuvre dernier (n.d.)
Hpd/pf: La chasse, characteristic sonata, op.18 (1803); 3 romances ou andante, op.19 (1803); [2] Sonate non difficile, op.21 (1803); Grande sonate pathétique, f, op.27 (Leipzig, 1805); Grande sonate, E, op.32 (*c*1808); more than 15 sets of variations, on themes by Cherubini, Dalayrac, Haydn, Kozeluch, Méhul and others, some pubd, 1 set ed. in MVH, xv (1966); over 20 other works, incl. rondos, minuets, polonaises, fugues
6 fugues, org/pf, op.29 (1806)

VOCAL

Singspiele, lost: Die Nymphe der Silberquelle (3), Vienna, Wiedner, 24 Sept 1794; Bernardon; Der gebesserte Hausteufel (2)
Other works: motet, D, S/T, fl, orch, CZ-Bm, Pnm; Lasset uns fröhlich des Lebens geniessen, tercet, B♭, Pnm; Minna, song, 1v, pf, op.15 (1803); Lieder österreichischer Wehrmänner (n.d.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DlabacžKL; GerberNL; MGG1 (A. Van der Linden); WurzbachL
Musikalische Korrespondenz der teutschen Filarmonischen Gesellschaft (Speyer, 1791), 370
J.F. von Schönfeld, ed.: Jb der Tonkunst von Wien und Prag (Vienna, 1796/R), 40, 82
AMZ, v (1802–3); vi (1803–4); vii (1804–5); viii (1805–6); xix (1817)
J.G. Meusel: Teutsches Künstlerlexikon (Lemgo, 2/1808–14/R) [incl. list of works]

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Lipiński, Karol Józef (b Radzyń, 30 Oct 1790; d Urłów, nr Lemberg, 16 Dec 1861). Polish violinist, conductor, composer and teacher. He learnt the violin and rudiments of music from his father Feliks (1765–1847), conductor of the orchestra of the Potocki family. In 1799 Feliks Lipiński was appointed conductor of the Count Starzeński Orchestra in Lemberg, of which young Karol became a member. Under the influence of his friend the cellist F. Kremes, Lipiński studied the cello for a certain time but soon returned to the violin, developing the beautiful, strong and deep tone which was to become characteristic of his playing. In 1810 he became first violinist and later conductor of a theatre orchestra in Lemberg, where three operas by him were performed (1813–14). In 1814 he went to Vienna and met Spohr, who encouraged him to study the violin further. On his return to Lemberg he resigned from the theatre and concentrated on practising and composing. After reading in the newspapers about Paganini, he decided to hear him and in 1817 left for Italy, giving concerts on his way in Hungary and Croatia. He met Paganini in April 1818 in Padua and played with him twice (17 April and 24 May 1818) in Piacenza. Between 1819 and 1828 he played in many Polish, German and Russian towns. He met Paganini for the second time in 1829 in Warsaw, during the coronation of Nicholas I of Russia as King of Poland, and their playing initiated a press controversy as to who was the greater. When he returned to Lemberg he gave up public performance so as to perfect his technique. In 1835 he toured western Europe and after spending some time in Germany, he played in Paris (3 March 1836) and then in London and Manchester. After his return to Poland, he performed in Vienna, Prague and several Russian towns, including Kiev, Moscow and St Petersburg. In 1839 he was appointed Konzertmeister by the Saxon king in Dresden. From that time on, all his activities centred on Dresden, where apart from the royal orchestra he formed his own string quartet and taught, among others, Wieniawski and Joachim. In 1861 he retired to his estate at Urłów.

One of the best violinists in the first half of the 19th century, Lipiński represented the orthodox Classical school of Viotti and Spohr, with an emphasis on good tone quality. Lipiński's mastery of all the other elements of technique made his style unique. His compositions include three symphonies (op.2), capriccios, concertos, rondos alla polacca, fantasies and variations on themes from popular operas, many dances and occasional pieces. They were published in Germany, France and Poland, but since they are unoriginal in technique and invention, they were soon forgotten. His brother Feliks (?1815–69), violinist and composer, was one of his pupils. Feliks played in Kraków, Warsaw, Lemberg and, in 1840, in Germany, Russia and France. His few compositions (which include an Allegro de concert dedicated to Liszt) are of little value.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Powroźniak: Karol Lipiński (Kraków, 1970; Eng. trans., 1986)
V. Grigor'ev: Karol Lipiński (Moscow, 1977)
Karol Lipiński: Wrocław 1988 [incl. F. German: 'Karol Lipiński i Fryderyk Chopin', 69–77; H. John: 'Dzialalnosc Karola Lipińskiego w latach 1839–1849 w Dreznie: dokumentacja na podstawie zródel archiwalnych' [The activities of Karol Lipiński during the years 1839–1849 in Dresden: based on original archival documents], 34–46; P. Swierc: 'Spotkania Karola Lipińskiego z innymi skrzypkami-wirtuozami' [Karol Lipiński's encounters with violin virtuosos], 47–58]
M. Zduniak and M. Passella, eds.: Karol Lipiński: zycie, działność, epoka [Lipiński: life, career, epoch] (Wrocław, 1990)

JÓZEF POWROŹNIAK/ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Lipkin, Malcolm (Leyland) (b Liverpool, 2 May 1932). English composer. He studied the piano with Green (1944–8) and composition with Stevens at the RCM (1949–53) and privately with Seiber (1954–7). During the 1950s his Fourth Piano Sonata (1955), Piano Concerto (1957) and the widely performed First Violin Sonata (1957) established his name. Lipkin's compositions are meticulously crafted. His early works show the influence of Bartók and Stravinsky and are marked by extended melodies, motor-rhythms and clear tonal frameworks, as in the Second Violin Concerto (1960–62). However, from the Sinfonia di Roma (Symphony no.1) (1958–65) onwards, his style changed, with pithy, fragmented ideas and rhythmic cells becoming the basis of composition. His idiom became austere, dissonant, with the tonality obscured and an emphasis on spare textures and sinewy counterpoint as in his second and third symphonies The Pursuit (1975–9) and Sun (1979–86). The Wind Quintet (1985), Piano Sonata no.5 (1986) and Piano Trio (1988) are all characterized by periods of forceful energy created by driving ostinatos. In the Variations on a Theme of Bartók (1989), more pronounced tonal centres and overt lyricism are reintroduced, although still combined with a rigorous exploitation of cellular thematic ideas. Lipkin's music often springs from extra-musical associations. Clifford's Tower (1977) and the Oboe Concerto (1988–9) are responses to man's inhumanity to man; Sinfonia di Roma arose from environmental concerns; and The Pursuit and Sun take as their genesis quotations from 17th-century poets reflecting the transience of human life.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Movt, str, 1956–7, rev. 1960; Pf Conc., 1957; Sinfonia di Roma (Sym. no.1), 1958–65; Vn Conc. no.2, 1960–62; Pastorale, hn, str, 1963; Mosaics, chbr orch, 1966, rev. 1969; Conc., fl, str, 1974; The Pursuit (Sym. no.2), 1975–9; Sun (Sym. no.3), 1979–86; Conc., ob, chbr orch, 1988–9; From across La manche, str, 1998

Choral: Ps xcvi, SATB, chbr orch, 1969; Ps cxvii, SATB, 1969; The White Crane, young vv, orch, 1972; 2 Ps (xcii, cxxi), SATB, 1972–3; The Knight of the Grail (anon.), A, SSA, pf, 1993

Vocal: 4 Departures (R. Herrick), 1v, vn, 1972; 5 Songs (P.B. Shelley), S, pf, 1978

Inst: Pf Sonata no.3, 1951, rev. 1979; Pf Sonata no.4, 1955, rev. 1987; Bagatelles, pf, 1955; Sonata no.1, vn, pf, 1957; Suite, fl, vc, 1961; Str Trio, 1963–4; Metamorphosis, hpd, 1974; Interplay, rec, b viol, hpd, perc, 1975; Interplay, fl, vc, pf, 1975; Recollections, perc, 1976; Clifford's Tower, wind qnt, str trio, 1977; Trio, fl, va, hp, 1982; Naboth's Vineyard, recs, vc, hpd, 1982; Wind Qnt, 1985; Pf Sonata no.5, 1986; Prelude & Dance, vc, pf, 1987; Pf Trio, 1988; Variations on a Theme of Bartók, str qt, 1989; Dance Fantasy, vn, 1991; 5 Bagatelles, ob, pf, 1993; Duo, vn, vc, 1994; Sonata no.2, vn, pf, 1997; Pierrot Dancer, va, pf, 1998

MSS in GB-Lbl
Principal publisher: Chester

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Good: 'The Music of Malcolm Lipkin', MT, cx (1969), 1237–40
A. Burn: 'Malcolm Lipkin's Pursuit', MT, cxxiv (1983), 25–7
C. Headington: 'Malcolm Lipkin and his Recent Music', Tempo, no.169 (1989), 28–33
M. Miller: 'Lipkin's Oboe Concerto', Tempo, no.176 (1991), 65–6
M. Miller: 'Malcolm Lipkin', MO, cxv (1992), 187 only

ANDREW BURN

Lipkin, Seymour (b Detroit, 14 May 1927). American pianist, conductor and teacher. He received his musical training at the Curtis Institute as a piano pupil of Saperton (1938–41), Serkin and Horszowski (1941–7). Essentially self-taught as a conductor, he worked with Koussevitzky at the Berkshire Music Center for three summers (1946, 1948 and 1949) and served as apprentice conductor to Szell with the Cleveland Orchestra (1947–8). Lipkin made his conducting début with the Cleveland Little SO in 1948, the year that he won the Rachmaninoff Piano Competition. He made his New York piano début as soloist with the New York PO under Munch (1949), and subsequently performed with most of the major American orchestras. After more than two decades of concert activities limited to conducting, Lipkin resumed his piano career with a New York recital in 1981. Since then he has performed almost all of Beethoven's major works for piano, including complete cycles of the sonatas and concertos. A faculty member of the Curtis Institute (from 1969) and the Juilliard School (from 1986), Lipkin is artistic director of the Kneisel Hall Chamber Music Festival in Blue Hill, Maine (since 1987). Between 1988 and 1992 he served as artistic director of the University of Maryland International Piano Festival and William Kapell Competition.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Lipkin: 'Master Class: Performing Beethoven's Slow Movements', Piano Today, xvii/1 (1996), 51–3

MINA F. MILLER

Lipkowska [née Marschner], Lydia (Yakovlevna) [Lipkovskaya, Lidiya] (b Babino, 25 May/6 June 1882; d Beirut, 22 March 1958). Russian soprano. She studied at the St Petersburg Conservatory, and sang in St Petersburg at the Imperial Opera (1906–8 and 1911–13) and in private opera companies (1913–15). In 1909 she sang in Paris and then in the USA, appearing with the companies of Boston (1909) and Chicago (1910), and singing with the Metropolitan Opera (1909–11). She made her Covent Garden début as Mimì in 1911, later appearing as Wolf-Ferrari's Susanna, Gilda and Violetta. At Monte Carlo in 1914 she took part in the first performances of Ponchielli's I Mori di Valenza with Georgy Baklanov and Giovanni Martinelli. After emigrating to France in 1919, she appeared with different émigré opera troupes in western Europe, toured the USSR (1928–9) and later lived and taught in Romania; among her students was the soprano Virginia Zeani. Her repertory included Lakmé, Lucia, Rimsky-Korsakov's Marfa (The Tsar's Bride), the Snow Maiden and Ol′ga (Ivan the Terrible), and Tchaikovsky's Tat′yana and Iolanta. According to contemporary critics she was a good actress with an attractive presence and a pure voice capable of expressing uncomplicated emotions. She made 29 recordings between 1911 and 1914 which reveal her refinement of tone.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.Yu. Levik: Zapiski opernogo pevtsa [Notes of an opera singer] (Moscow, 1955, 2/1962; Eng. trans., 1995, as The Levik Memoirs)

M. Scott: The Record of Singing, i (London, 1977), 25–7

HAROLD BARNES/ALAN BLYTH

Lipman, Samuel (b Los Gatos, CA, 7 June 1934). American music critic and pianist. He studied piano with Lev Shorr, Alexander Libermann and Rosina Lhévinne, attended San Francisco State College (BA 1956) and did graduate work in political science at the University of California, Berkeley (MA 1958); he then taught political science at Berkeley (1957–8). He was appointed to the faculty of the Aspen Music School in 1971 and to that of the Waterloo Music Festival, New Jersey, in 1976; he was named artistic director of the festival in 1985. He became music critic of Commentary in 1976, publisher of the New Criterion in 1982 and in the same year was appointed to the National Council on the Arts. He won the Deems Taylor Award in 1977 and 1980 for criticism and again in 1980 for his collection of essays Music after Modernism (1979). His other writings include The House of Music: Art in an Era of Institutions (1982). As a pianist, he has appeared in the USA and abroad; he gave the first New York performance of Elliott Carter's Piano Concerto in 1975.

Lipman's critical writings are uncompromisingly rigorous, demanding of composer, performer and management alike the highest standard of artistic excellence. He deals both with the works themselves and with the philosophical meaning of music, and comments with acerbity on the place of serious music in a media-orientated, middlebrow culture. Lipman is closely allied with the group of neo-conservative thinkers that includes Norman Podhoretz and Hilton Kramer.

PATRICK J. SMITH

Lipovšek, Marijan (b Ljubljana, 26 Jan 1910; d Ljubljana, 25 Dec 1995). Slovenian pianist and composer. He graduated from the Ljubljana Conservatory in 1932 where he was a composition pupil of Osterc and a piano pupil of Ravnik; his studies were continued in the Prague Conservatory masterclasses given by Suk, Hába and Kurz (1933), in Rome with Casella (1939–40) and in Salzburg with Marx (1944). From 1933 to 1939 he taught at the Ljubljana Conservatory, and then at the academy of music, of which he was rector between 1968 and 1970; he also lectured on theoretical musical subjects at the university (1962–83). He was director of the Slovenian Philharmonic (1956–64), editor-in-chief of the Slovenska glasbena revija (1951–60) and editor of the music publications of the Association of Slovenian Composers (until 1970). Lipovšek was active as a pianist, accompanist, chamber musician and writer on music. He composed in neo-Baroque and neo-classical styles until the 1960s, then in a freely Expressionist idiom.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Suite no.1, str, 1939; Sym., 1939, rev. 1949, 1970; Domovina [Homeland], sym. poem, 1950; Suite no.2, str, 1951; Rhapsodie no.1, vn, orch, 1955; Toccata quasi apertura, 1956; Suite no.3, str, 1959; Rhapsodie no.2, vn, orch, 1962; Tpt Conc., 1969; Antichaos, sym. sketch, 1978

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vn, pf, 1941; Balada, vc, pf, 1944; Dvajset mladinskih pesmi [20 Youth Melodies], pf, 1944; Trije impromptuji, pf, 1953; Voznica, variations on a folk poem, pf, 1956; Štiri sporočila [4 Messages], str qt, 1973; Sonata, vn, pf, 1974; Trio brevis, str trio, 1982; Sonata, vn, 1983

Vocal: 16 samospevov [16 Songs], high v, pf, 1946; Orglar [Organist] (cant.), 4 vv, chorus, orch, 1949; Sončece sij! [Shine, little Sun!], song cycle, S, pf, 1955, arr. S, orch; Verzi, 6 songs, 1965; Pesmi iz mlina [Songs from the Mill], 6 songs, Mez, pf, 1980, arr. Mez, orch, 1988

Other songs, choruses, film scores

Principal publisher: Edicije DSS

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Kartin-Duh: 'Oblikovni koncept rapsodij M. Lipovška' [Compositional Concepts in Lipovšek's Rhapsodies], MZ, xiii (1977), 68–76 [with Eng. summary]

F. Križnar and T. Pinter: Sodobni slovenski skladatelji/Contemporary Slovenian Composers, ed. I. Bizjak (Ljubljana, 1997), 140–43, 296

ANDREJ RIJAVEC/IVAN KLEMENČIČ

Lipovšek, Marjana (b Ljubljana, 3 Dec 1946). Slovenian mezzo-soprano. She studied at Graz and in Vienna, joining the Staatsoper in 1979 and then singing at Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfurt and Madrid. In 1986 she created Rosa Sacchi in Die schwarze Maske at Salzburg, where she has subsequently sung the Nurse (Die Frau ohne Schatten), Octavia (L'incoronazione di Poppea), Mistress Quickly, Marina (Boris Godunov), Clytemnestra and Countess Geschwitz (Lulu). Her repertory also includes Dorabella, Carmen, Ulrica (Un ballo in maschera), Azucena, Amneris, Brangäne, Marfa (Khovanshchina), the Composer, Octavian and Delilah. In 1990 Lipovšek made her Covent Garden début as Clytemnestra and her Metropolitan début as Fricka, a role she has also sung in Munich, Barcelona, Chicago and at La Scala. In 1994 she sang Judith (Bluebeard's Castle) in Florence and in 1995 her first Kundry in Munich. Her operatic recordings include Marfa, Brangäne, Waltraute, Marina, Mistress Quickly and the Sphinx in Enescu's Oedipe; all display her rich, vibrant, warm-toned voice, with its notably strong middle and lower registers, and her vivid gifts of characterization. Lipovšek also has a flourishing career as a concert singer, and has made admired recordings of works ranging from Bach's Passions to Das Lied von der Erde and Oedipus rex.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Lipowsky, Felix Joseph (b Wiesensteig, 25 Jan 1764; d Munich, 21 March 1842). German historian and music lexicographer, son of THADDÄUS FERDINAND LIPOWSKY. He studied the piano with Aemilian Vogt, attended the Gymnasium in Amberg and studied jurisprudence at the University of Ingolstadt. From 1791 to 1817 he was active in important Bavarian governmental and diplomatic positions. Among his many writings on Bavarian history, the Baierisches Musik-Lexikon is of particular importance to music, as it describes many musicians not otherwise traceable, though the biographical dates are frequently incorrect. Of his compositions (including four ballets for the Munich court theatre, 1787–97), only one Mass in G minor of 1789 survives (in D-Mbs). Writings on music are also found in Winter's Portraite der berühmtesten Componisten der Tonkunst (Munich, n.d.), the National-Garde Almanach (1814–15), and in some of his other non-musical works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F.J. Lipowsky: Baierisches Musik-Lexicon (Munich, 1811/R) [corrections in AMZ, xiii (1811), 343, 697]
A. von Schaden: Gelehrtes München im Jahr 1834 (Munich, 1834) [incl. list of writings]
J. Gerstner: 'Züge aus dem Leben des . . . Joseph Felix Lipowsky . . . nach dessen . . . Selbstbiographie', Oberbayerisches Archiv für vaterländische Geschichte, xii (1851), 84–112

ROBERT MÜNSTER

Lipowsky, Thaddäus Ferdinand (b St Martin, Upper Austria, 28 Dec 1738; d Wiesensteig, 18 May 1767). German composer, father of FELIX JOSEPH LIPOWSKY. He studied in Salzburg, where in 1759 he was evidently one of Leopold Mozart's best pupils in theory and the violin. After 1763 he was clerk of the court in the then Bavarian electoral enclave of Wiesensteig. After playing for the Bavarian Elector Maximilian III Joseph (1766) he was called to Munich as Hofkammerrat, but died just before taking up this post. Of his works, which include one Latin school comedy (Salzburg, 1759), church music, concertos, quartets and keyboard trios, only two oratorios survive (in A-Ssp) and a Te Deum (in D-Po). A Symphonia a 4, which is ascribed to 'Giuseppe Lipaphzki' (in D-Mbs) and cannot be the work of Joseph Lipavsky, may also be by him.

For bibliography see LIPOWSKY, FELIX JOSEPH.

ROBERT MÜNSTER

Lipp, Franz Ignaz (b Eggenfelden, Lower Bavaria, 1 Feb 1718; d Salzburg, 15 Aug 1798). Austrian composer and organist. He went to Salzburg as a 14-year-old choirboy and was appointed court and cathedral organist in 1754. At first his duties were restricted largely to performance at the cathedral; only after the death of Adlgasser in 1777 did Lipp become active as an accompanist at court. Less than a year later, Leopold Mozart wrote to his son: 'You can easily imagine how beastly things are now that ... Lipp accompanies at court. Whenever Ceccarelli sings, he complains loudly and publicly'. It is probably no coincidence that on his return to Salzburg in 1779, Mozart took over Lipp's court duties.

Lipp was a prolific composer of church music; manuscripts of his works dating from 1745 to 1796 survive in numerous libraries in and around Salzburg. Of his secular music only two string trios survive. Lipp's works are written in a conservative style and despite his long composing career he made few compositional advances. Leopold Mozart at first thought favourably of Lipp; in 1757 he wrote that Lipp 'also plays the violin, sings with a beautiful tenor voice, and composes not badly'. W.A. Mozart, however, considered Lipp to be a model of inadequacy, fit for ridicule; in 1778 he wrote ironically of one of his own performances: 'I preluded in the manner of Fischietti, played off a galanterie sonata in the style, and with the fire, spirit and precision, of Haydn, and then played fugues with all the skill of a Lipp, Hülber and Aman'.

WORKS

5 masses, A-LA, Sd, Ssp, CH-E, D-WS; 9 offs, A-Sd, CH-E, D-WS; 3 Vespers, A-Sn, Ssp; 2 Nona (per Hepdomadam and per Domenica), Ssp; 4 lits, Sd, Wn, D-PO, TEI
Other sacred: 15 Salve regina, A-LA, Sn, D-BGD, FW; 10 Stella coeli extirpavit, A-Sn (3 for SATB, 2 vn, bc, ed. K. Ruhland, Altötting, 1993); 5 Tantum ergo, Sd; 2 Miserere, Ssp; Alma redemptoris, Sn; 13 sacred arias, Ssp, D-PO; hymn, Ssp; Passion according to St Matthew, D-LFN; 4 pss, A-Ssp
Inst: 2 trios, 2 vn, b, A-Ssp

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Kellner: Musikgeschichte des Stiftes Kremsmünster (Kassel, 1956)
T. Aigner: 'Der Eggenfeldener Lehrersohn Franz Ignaz Lipp (1718–1798)', Heimat an Rott und Inn: Heimatbuch für die Landkreise des Rottals (1969), 1–5
E. Hintermaier: Die Salzburger Hofkapelle von 1700 bis 1806: Organisation und Personal (diss., U. of Salzburg, 1972), 223–6
T. Aigner: 'Wenn Mozart mit aller Kunst des Lipp fugierte', Wiener Figaro, xlv/Dec (1978), 3–10
H. Schuler: Mozarts Salzburger Freunde und Bekannte: Biographien und Kommentar (Wilhelmshaven, 1996), 144–6

CLIFF EISEN

Lipp, Wilma (b Vienna, 26 April 1925). Austrian soprano. She studied in Vienna with Anna Bahr-Mildenburg and Alfred Jerger, and made her début there as Rosina in 1943, joining the Staatsoper two years later. As the Queen of Night in 1948, she won wider fame; this was also the role of her débuts at La Scala (1950, under Klemperer) and Paris (during the 1953 Staatsoper visit). At Covent Garden she played Gilda (1951) and Violetta (1955); at Glyndebourne, Konstanze (1957); and at San Francisco, Nannetta (the role in which she made her American début in 1962). Her career, which began in soubrette and coloratura roles, later progressed to more lyrical ones, including Ilia (Idomeneo), a notable Pamina, Countess Almaviva, Alice Ford and Eva. Lipp's pure, sweet tone and accurate coloratura are displayed in her recordings of the Queen of Night under Karajan and Böhm.

ALAN BLYTH

Lipparino [Lipparini], Guglielmo (b Bologna; fl 1600–37). Italian composer. He studied with Tiburtio Massaino and became an Augustinian monk at S Giacomo Maggiore, Bologna. His principal employment was at Como Cathedral, where he directed the music from after 1609 until 1633. Later he lived in Bologna. His surviving output consists largely of sacred music, though his first two publications are of secular canzonets, and there is also a collection of instrumental canzonas; all his madrigals are lost. The church music includes masses, psalms, litanies and motets for both large and small resources. Whereas the first book of motets of 1609 is written for quite large forces, by the 1620s Lipparino was also writing in the popular small-scale concertato style, even for litanies. His harmonic style could be unadventurous, although the five-part Alma Redemptoris in the first set of Sacri concerti is well varied both harmonically and rhythmically. The 1637 psalms are still in the double-choir style, though the second choir functions more like an optional ripieno, added to and contrasting with concertato passages for the first choir.

WORKS

all published in Venice except anthologies

Il primo libro delle canzonette, 3vv (1600)
Il secondo libro delle canzonette, 3vv, ed. L.F. Scappi (1605)
Il primo libro de motetti, 7–8vv, e uno, 15vv (1609)
Canzoni a 2, 4, 8 (1619)
Messe, 8–9vv, con il Te Deum, 8vv, bc (1623)
Letanie della Beata Vergine, 1–3vv, bc (org) (1623)
Sacri concerti, 5vv, bc (org), libro I, op.11 (1629) [repr.]
Sacri concerti, 4–6, 8, 10vv, bc, libro II (1627)
Le sacre laudi che si cantano nella Santa Casa di Loreto, 3–5, 8vv, op.12 (1634)
Sacri concerti, 1–4vv, con le Letanie della BVM et alcune sonate a 2, 3, bc, op.13 (1635)
Salmi concertati, 8vv, bc, op.14 (1637)
2 motets, 1611[1], 1613[2]
Madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1614), according to FétisB; 2 other sets pubd by 1619; a volume of pieces a 2; Messe da morti, 5vv: lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB

G. Gaspari: 'Dei musicisti bolognesi al XVII secolo e delle loro opere a stampa: ragguagli biografici e bibliografici', Atti e memorie delle RR. Deputazioni di storia patria per le provincie dell'Emilia, new ser., v/2 (1880), 37–44

S.L. Astengo: Musici agostiniani anteriori al secolo XIX (Florence, 1929), 27ff

J. Roche: North Italian Church Music in the Age of Monteverdi (Oxford, 1984)

JEROME ROCHE

Lipphardt, Walther (b Wiescherhöfen, nr Hamm, 14 Oct 1906; d Frankfurt, 17 Jan 1981). German musicologist. He began his musicological studies in 1925 with Moser at Heidelberg University, continued under Gurlitt in Freiburg and returned under Besseler to Heidelberg, where he also studied German philology and history; later he studied medieval Latin with O. Schumann in Frankfurt. He took the doctorate at Heidelberg in 1931 with a dissertation on old German Marian lamentations. A schoolteacher from 1934, he was also lecturer in music history and church music at the Hochschule für Musik in Frankfurt from 1946. He retired from his various postitions between 1968 and 1970. In 1973 he was made an honorary Doctor of Theology at Graz University.

Aside from an early interest in the folksongs of ethnic Germans, Lipphardt's main work was in hymnology, particularly the history of the chorale and the sacred song. He produced a series of fascimile editions of Catholic songbooks from the 16th century. His collection for mixed choir, Gesellige Zeit (Kassel, 1933–5), became particularly well known. Lipphardt was a member of the editorial board of the series Das Deutsche Kirchenlied and edited works by Leonhard Lechner for the collected edition. As part of his research into medieval liturgical drama he made a complete edition of the Easter plays.

WRITINGS

Die altdeutschen Marienklagen (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1931)

'Studien zu den Marienklagen', Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen Sprache und Literatur, lviii (1934), 390–444

'Die lothringische Volksliedlandschaft', Zeitschrift für Hausmusik, v (1936), 172–86

'Die Sudetendeutschen und ihr Lied', Deutsche Musikkultur, iii (1938), 205–13

'Das Volkslied der deutschen Ostmark', Zeitschrift für Hausmusik, vii (1938), 157–70

'Die Volkslieder der Gottschee', Zeitschrift für Hausmusik, viii (1939), 127–35

'Neue Wege zur Erforschung der linienlosen Neumen', Mf, i (1948), 121–39

Die Weisen der lateinischen Osterspiele des 12. und 13. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1948); see also 'Einige unbekannte Weisen zu den Carmina Burana aus der zweiten Hälfte des 12. Jahrhunderts', Festschrift Heinrich Besseler, ed. E. Klemm (Leipzig, 1961), 101–26

Die Geschichte des mehrstimmigen Proprium Missae (Heidelberg, 1950)

'Studien zur Rhythmik der Antiphonen', Mf, iii (1950), 47–60, 224–36

'Das Herodesspiel von Le Mans nach der Handschriften Madrid Bibl. Mac.288 und 289 (11. und 12. Jhd.)', Organicae voces: Festschrift Joseph Smits von Waesberghe (Ansterdam, 1963), 107–22

'Der gegenwärtige Stand der Gregorianik-Forschung', IMSCR IX: Salzburg 1964, ii, 156–66

ed.: Der karolingische Tonar von Metz (Münster, 1965)

'Adam Reissners hanschriftliches Gesangbuch von 1554 als Quelle deutscher Volksliedweisen des 16. Jahrhunderts', Jb für Volksliedforschung, xii (1967), 42–79

'Das erste in Böhmen gedruckte katholische Gesangbuch Prag 1581 und sein Verfasser Christoph Hecyrus aus Budweis', Musica bohemica et europaea: Brno V 1970, 33–45

'Das Generalbassbegleitete deutsche geistliche Lied in Böhmen 1650–1750', Musica cameralis: Brno VI 1971, 115–26

'Studien zur Musikpflege in den mittelalterlichen Augustiner-Chorherrenstiften des deutschen Sprachgebietes', Jb des Stiftes Klosterneuburg, vii (1971), 7–102

'Die liturgische Funktion deutscher Kirchenlieder in den Klöstern niedersächsischer Zisterzienserinnen des Mittelalters', Zeitschrift für katholische Theologie, xciv (1972), 158–98

'Niederdeutsche Reimgedichte und Lieder des 14. Jahrhunderts in den mittelalterlichen Orationalien der Zisterzienserinnen von Medingen und Wienhausen', Niederdeutsches Jb, xcv (1972), 66–130

'Die Visitatio sepulchri (III. Stufe) von Gernrode', Daphnis, i (1972), 1–14

'Die Visitatio sepulchri in den Zisterzienserinnenklöstern der Lüneburger Heide', Daphnis, i (1972), 119–28

'Frankfurter Gesangbuch-Drucke vor 1569', Jb der Hessischen kirchengeschichtlichen Vereinigung, xxiii (1973), 3–9

'Hanauer Gesangbuchdrucke von 1605–1800', Hanauer Geschichtsblätter, xxiv (1973), 101–40

'Aufgaben und Wege der Hymnologie als theologische Wissenschaft', Grazer Universitätsreden, xiii (1974), 84–98

Gesangbuchdrucke in Frankfurt am Main vor 1569 (Frankfurt, 1974)

'Hymnologische Quellen der Steiermark und ihre Erforschung', Grazer Universitätsreden, xiii (1974)

'Das katholische deutsche Kirchenlied in den böhmischen Landern wärhrend des 16. Jahrhunderts', De musica disputationes pragenses, ii (1974), 20–55

Mittelalterliche Musikhandschriften aus dem Kloster Medingen (Uelzen, 1974)

ed., with K. Ameln and M. Jenny: Das deutsche Kirchenlied: Verzeichnis der Drucke von den Anfängen bis 1800, i, RISM, B/ VIII/1 (1975)

'Lateinische Osterspiele im Alpenraumes und ihr Zusammenhang', 'Musik in den spätmittelalterlichen Passionsspielen und Osterspielen von Bozen, Sterzing und Brixen', Tiroler Volksschauspiel: Beiträge zur Theatergeschichte des Alpenraums, ed. E. Kühebacker (Bolzano, 1976), 110–26, 127–66

'Musik in den osterreichischen Klostern der Babenbergerzeit', Musicologica austriaca, ii (1979), 48–68

EDITIONS

Leonhard Lechner: Werke, iv: Sanctissimae virginis Mariae Canticum (Kassel, 1960); viii: Liber missarum sex et quinque vocum (Kassel, 1964); xiii: Newe geistliche und weltliche teutsche Gesang (Kassel, 1973); x: Sieben Psalmi poenitentiales 6 vocibus compositi 1587 (Kassel, 1988)

Lateinische Osterfeiern und Osterspiele (Berlin, 1975–)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Heine: 'Walther Lipphardt 65 Jahre alt', Mitteilungen der Arbeitsgemeinschaft für mittelrheinische Musikgeschichte, no.23 (1971), 269–73 [incl. complete list of pubns from 1959]

Obituaries: Hymn, xxxii (1981), 111–12; Musica, xxxv (1981), 198–9; Musik und Gottesdienst, xxxv (1981), 69–70; Musik und Kirche, li (1981), 106–7

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT/PAMELA M. POTTER

Lippius, Johannes (b Strasbourg, 24 June 1585; d Speyer, 24 Sept 1612). Alsatian theologian and music theorist. The few details of Lippius's life may be found in the introduction to his Synopsis musicae novae. He was educated by his father in the rudiments of music and attended the Strasbourg Gymnasium. After graduating he travelled extensively in Germany, attending the universities at Jena, Leipzig and Wittenberg. He received a master's degree at Wittenberg and studied music for some time with the distinguished Kantor of the Thomasschule in Leipzig, Sethus Calvisius. According to J.G. Walther, Lippius received a doctor's degree from the University of Giessen in 1612 and immediately accepted a position as professor of theology at Strasbourg. Before he could reach there, however, he died at Speyer.

Lippius's theoretical works include six disputations prepared for presentation at the universities of Wittenberg and Jena, and one work of more general philosophical content. But as a music theorist his fame rests on a further work, the Synopsis musicae novae, which is largely a republication of the earlier Disputatio musica secunda and tertia. Although music remained for Lippius, as for most 16th-century theorists, a part of the Quadrivium, he shared the 17th-century German composer's view that it does have a direct moral influence on the human spirit: 'Music is a mathematical science ... involving the artful and prudent composition of a harmonic cantilena in order especially to move man moderately to the glory of God'.

The primary thrust of the Synopsis musicae, contributing an important Baroque keystone to 17th-century German theory, replaced Renaissance contrapuntal theory with a method of four-part composition over the bass. The most important component of this theory was the triad, the trias harmonica, rooted in theological symbolism as the musical equivalent of the Trinity. 'The simple harmonic triad is the true and three-in-one sounding root of all the most perfect and complete harmony found in the world ... and the image and shadow of that great divine mystery, which alone is to be adored, the Unitrinity.' Lippius was the first to use the term 'trias harmonica' and one of the first to recognize in theory the actual practice of the early 17th century, primarily in Italian music, in which the bass is the most important functional part of a texture of several voices. 'The fundamental melody which is the bass is put forth in the system, having determined the counterpoint in the region of the radical [upper] parts of the harmonic triad, where the bass occupies the lowest and first part.' The unmistakable reflection of this method is the basso continuo technique of the early 17th-century Italian monodists.

As had Burmeister a decade before him, Lippius raised composition to the level of a rhetorical art. The text is the determining factor in writing music, and each part composed on the bass must express the affections of the words. Compositions are either pure or ornate. In the latter the composer employs embellishments, figures and ornaments 'like the wise, artful orator, using them to polish his harmonic oration according to circumstances of person, time and place of the text to achieve his goals'. Lippius cited the music of Marenzio and Lassus as the best examples of this musical-oratorical art. Many theorists of the 17th as well as the early 18th century, including Baryphonus, Crüger, Printz, Werckmeister, J.G. Ahle and J.G. Walther, referred to and elaborated on his theoretical propositions.

WORKS

THEORETICAL WORKS

Disputatio musica prima (Wittenberg, 1609)
Disputatio musica secunda (Wittenberg, 1609) [see Synopsis ... below]
Disputatio musica tertia (Wittenberg, 1610) [see Synopsis ... below]
Themata musica ut multis forte paradoxa (Jena, 1610)
Breviculum errorum musicorum (Jena, 1610)
Themata fontem omnium errantium musicorum aperientia (Jena, 1610)
Synopsis musicae novae omino verae atque methodicae universae (Strasbourg, 1612) [largely a republication of 2nd and 3rd items above]; ed. and trans. B.V. Rivera (Colorado Springs, CO, 1977)
Philosophiae verae ac sincerae synopticae, i: Praeparatio per musicam diam; ii: Perfectio interior realis per metaphysicam (Erfurt, 1614)

OTHER WORKS

Fuga in unisono post tactus, 4, seu tempora duo, a 4, in M. Schnell: Ton philon sygcharistika (Strasbourg, 1605)
Fuga omogonos kai kykloeides post tempus unum cum dimidio, a 9, in J.L. Kress: Mele syncharestika (Strasbourg, 1605)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

WaltherML
B.V. Rivera: German Music Theory in the Early 17th Century: the Treatises of Johannes Lippius (Ann Arbor, 1979)
B. Rivera: 'The Seventeenth-Century Theory of Triadic Generation and Invertibility and its Application in Contemporaneous Rules of Composition', Music Theory Spectrum, vi (1984), 63–78
J.B. Howard: 'Form and Method in Johannes Lippius's Synopsis musicae novae', JAMS, xxxviii (1985), 524–50
J. Lester: Between Modes and Keys: German Theory 1592–1802 (Stuyvesant, NY, 1989)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Lippman, Edward A(rthur) (b New York, 24 May 1920). American musicologist. He was educated in New York, receiving the BS from the City College of New York, the MA from New York University, and the PhD in 1952 from Columbia University with a dissertation on music and space. He joined the faculty at Columbia in 1954 and was appointed professor in 1969; he retired in 1989. Lippman is one of the leading American writers on the philosophy and aesthetics of music. His book Musical Thought in Ancient Greece (1964) is an important exposition of Greek philosophy of music and one of the few compilations of this size and scope in English. Lippman has also written on 19th-century Romanticism, particularly the music and writings of Schumann and Wagner.

WRITINGS

Music and Space: a Study in the Philosophy of Music (diss., Columbia U., 1952)
'Symbolism in Music', MQ, xxxix (1953), 554–75
'Hellenic Conceptions of Harmony', JAMS, xvi (1963), 3–35
'The Sources and Development of the Ethical View of Music in Ancient Greece', MQ, xlix (1963), 188–209
'Spatial Perception and Physical Location as Factors of Music', AcM, xxxv (1963), 24–35
Musical Thought in Ancient Greece (New York, 1964)
'Theory and Practice in Schumann's Aesthetics', JAMS, xvii (1964), 310–45
'The Place of Music in the System of Liberal Arts', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966), 545–59
'The Problem of Musical Hermeneutics', Art and Philosophy: a Symposium, ed. S. Hook (New York, 1966), 307–35
'The Tonal Ideal of Romanticism', Festschrift für Walter Wiora, ed. L. Finscher and C.-H. Mahling (Kassel, 1967), 419–26
A Humanistic Philosophy of Music (New York, 1977)
'The Formation of Wagner's Style', Music and Civilization: Essays in Honor of Paul Henry Lang, ed. E. Strainchamps, M.R. Maniates and C. Hatch (New York, 1984), 102–16
'Progressive Temporality in Music', JM, iii (1984), 121–41
Musical Aesthetics: a Historical Reader (New York, 1986)
'Wagner's Conception of the Dream', JM, viii (1990), 54–81
A History of Western Musical Aesthetics (Lincoln, NE, 1992)
'The Place of Aesthetics in Theoretical Treatises on Music', Music Theory and the Exploration of the Past, ed. C. Hatch and D. Bernstein (Chicago, 1993), 217–32
'Reflections on the Aesthetics of Strophic Song', Festschrift Walter Wiora zum 90. Geburtstag, ed. C.-H. Mahling and R. Seiberts (Tutzing, 1997), 173–85

PAULA MORGAN

Lippmann, Friedrich (b Dessau, 25 July 1932). German musicologist. He studied musicology with Anna Amalie Abert, Adam Adrio and Blume, philosophy and German in Berlin at the Free University (1951–3) and Humboldt University (1953–6) and at the University of Kiel, where he took the doctorate in 1962 with a dissertation on the structure of early 19th-century Italian opera seria. After working as a research fellow at the Haydn Institute in Cologne (1962–4) he moved to Rome as director of the music history section of the German Historical Institute (1964–96). He became editor of Analecta musicologica in 1966, and of Concertus musicus in 1973. He retired in 1996. Lippmann is internationally recognized as a leading scholar of 18th- and early 19th-century Italian opera, and his studies on Bellini, Paisiello, Cimarosa, Mozart and Haydn trace in detail the stylistic developments in works by these composers. He has also written important articles on Donizetti, Wagner and Rossini. In 1993 he was honoured with a Festschrift for his contributions to opera scholarship (Napoli e il teatro musicale in Europa tra Sette e Ottocento: Studi in onore di Friedrich Lippmann, ed. B.M. Antolini and W. Witzenmann, Florence, 1993).

WRITINGS

Studien zu Libretto, Arienform und Melodik der italienischen Opera seria im Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Kiel, 1962; AnMc, no.6 (1969) as Vincento Bellini und die italienische Opera seria seiner Zeit)
'Die Melodien Donizettis', AnMc, no.3 (1966), 80–113
'Giovanni Pacini: Bemerkungen zum Stil seiner Opern', Chigiana, new ser., iv (1967), 111–24
'Per un'esegesi dello stile rossiniano', NRMI, ii (1968), 813–56
'Die Sinfonien-Manuskripte der Bibliothek Doria-Pamphilj in Rom', AnMc, no.5 (1968), 201–47; no.7 (1969), 120–44; no.9 (1970), 299–355
'Mozart-Aufführungen des frühen Ottocento in Neapel', AnMc, no.7 (1969), 164–79
'Rossinis Gedanken über die Musik', Mf, xxii (1969), 285–98
'Wagner und Italien', Verdi-Wagner: Rome 1969 [AnMc, no.11 (1972)], 200–47
'Su "La straniera" di Bellini', NRMI, v (1971), 565–605
'Der italienische Vers und der musikalische Rhythmus: zum Verhältnis von Vers und Musik in der italienischen Oper des 19. Jahrhunderts, mit einem Rückblick auf die 2. Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts', AnMc, no.12 (1973), 253–369; no.14 (1974), 324–410; no.15 (1975), 298–333
'Ein neuentdecktes Autograph Richard Wagners: Rezension der Königsberger "Norma"-Aufführung von 1837', Musicae scientiae collectanea: Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer, ed. H. Hüschen (Cologne, 1973), 373–9
ed.: Mozart und Italien: Rome 1974 [AnMc, no.18 (1978)] [incl. 'Mozart und der Vers', 107–37]
'Donizetti e Bellini: contributo all'interpretazione dello stile donizettiano', Studi donizettiani I: Bergamo 1975, 179–99
'Verdi und donizetti', Opernstudien: Anna Amalie Abert zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. K. Hortschansky (Tutzing, 1975), 153–73
'Musikhandschriften und -drucke in der Bibliothek des Fürstenhauses Massimo, Rom: Katalog', AnMc, no.17 (1976), 254–95; continued as 'Briefe Rossinis und Donizettis in der Bibliothek Massimo, Rom' no.19 (1979), 330–35
'Zur "italianità" der italienischen Oper im 19. Jahrhundert', Die Couleur locale in der Oper des 19. Jahrhunderts, ed. H. Becker (Regensburg, 1976), 229–56
'Belliniana', Il melodramma italiano dell'Ottocento: studi e ricerche per Massimo Mila, ed. G. Pestelli (Turin, 1977), 281–317
'Giovanni de Macque fra Roma e Napoli: nuovi documenti', RIM, xiii (1978), 243–79
'Volksharfen in Italien', AnMc, no.19 (1979), 380–92
ed.: Joseph Haydn und Ludwig van Beethoven: Bonn and Cologne 1980 [AnMc, no.22 (1984)] [incl. 'Motivische Arbeit bei Hasse', 197–208]
'Mozart und Cimarosa', HJbMw, v (1981), 187–202
'Rossini – und kein Ende', Studia musicologica, x (1981), 279–91
'Haydns "La fedeltà premiata" und Cimarosas "L'infedeltà fedele"', Haydn-Studien, v/4 (1982), 1–15
'Haydn und die Opera buffa: Vergleiche mit italienischen Werken gleichen Textes': Joseph Haydn: Cologne 1982, 113–40
'Un'opera per onorare le vittime della repressione borbonica del 1799 e per glorificare Napoleone: I pittagorici di Vicenzo Monti e Giovanni Paisiello', Musica e cultura a Napoli: Naples 1982, 281–302
ed.: Die stilistische Entwicklung der italienischen Musik zwischen 1770 und 1830: Rome 1978 [AnMc, no.21 (1982)] [incl. 'Über Cimarosas Opere serie', 21–60]
'"Die Feen" und "Die Liebesverbot", oder Die Wagnerieserung diverser Vorbilder', Wagnerliteratur – Wagnerforschung: Munich 1983, 14–46
'Sulle composizioni per cembalo di Gaetano Greco', La musica a Napoli durante il Seicento: Naples 1985, 285–306
'Eine unbekannte frühe Tokkate Händels? (Handschrift Neapel, Konservatorium, MS71, F.19v-23v)', AnMc, no.23 (1985), 67–74
'Zu Paers und Mayrs Vertonungen des "Leonoren"-Stoffes', Festschrift Martin Ruhnke zum 65. Geburtstag (Neuhausen-Stuttgart, 1986), 219–34
ed.: Johann Adolf Hasse und die Musik seiner Zeit: Siena 1983 [AnMc, no.25 (1987)] [incl. 'Hasses Arienstil und seine Interpretation durch Rudolf Gerber', 17–65]
ed.: Italien und Deutschland: Wechselbeziehungen in der Musik seit 1850: Rome 1988 [incl. 'Hanslick und die italienische Musik', 107–54]
'"Casta diva": la preghiera nell'opera italiana della prima metà dell'Ottocento', Riecercare, ii (1990), 173–209
'"Il mio ben quand verrà": Paisiello creatore di una nuova semplicità', Studi musicali, xix (1990), 385–405
'Die Entwicklung der "Aria marziale" in der italienischen und französischen Oper im zeitlichen Umkreis der Französischen Revolution', Musica senza aggettivi: studi per Fedele d'Amico, ed. A. Ziino (Florence, 1991) 253–96
'Mozart und Paisiello: zur stilistischen Position des "Lucio Silla"', Mozart Congress: Salzburg 1991 [MJb 1991], 580–93
'Il "grande finale" nell'opera buffa e nell'opera seria: Paisiello e Rossini', RIM, xxvii (1992), 225–55
'Tendenzen der italienischen Opera seria am Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts – und Mozart', Studi musicali, xxi (1992), 307–58
'Romani e Bellini: i fatti e i principi della collaborazione', Felice Romani: melodrammi, poesie, documenti, ed. A. Sommariva (Florence, 1996), 83–113
'Rossini 1815: "Elisabetta regina d'Inghilterra"', AnMc, no.30 (1997)
'Mozart und Paisiello in der Opera buffa', AnMc, no.31 (1998)

EDITIONS

Joseph Haydn: Messe Nr.12 'Harmoniemesse' 1802, Werke, xxiii/v (Munich, 1966)

□

Lipscomb, Mance (b Navasota, TX, 9 April 1895; d Navasota, 30 Jan 1976). American songster and guitarist. He taught himself to play guitar and accompanied his father, a rural fiddler. As a youth he assisted the Texas Ranger, Frank Hamer. Before being recorded at the age of 66, he was a sharecropper and farm labourer in Navasota. He had acquired an extensive reputation in Texas for his effortless playing of dance accompaniments, such as Buck Dance (1961, Rep.) and Sugar babe, it's all over now (1960, Arhoolie), and for his singing of old ballads like Ella Speed. From 1960 he was a popular performer at concerts and festivals, still playing fluently until forced by ill-health to retire in 1973. In 1971 he was the subject of a film, A Well-spent Life, directed by Les Blank. Because of his previous isolation, Lipscomb represented the songster tradition in its purest form. His recording of Freddie (1960, Arhoolie) is the only collected version of this ballad; he often drew on his earliest recollections, as in Take me Back (1964, Arhoolie) or Captain Captain (1961, Rep.), a memory of his life as a field hand on a Brazos River plantation. Like all songsters, however, he was catholic in his tastes, and could easily follow these pieces with a popular song like Shine on harvest moon or a spiritual such as Motherless Children (both 1964, Arhoolie). As a guitarist he must be numbered among the most gifted in the black folk idiom.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SouthernB
M. McCormick: Mance Lipscomb: Texas Sharecropper and Songster, Arhoolie F1001 (1960); reissued on Arhoolie CD–306 (1989) [disc notes]

P. Oliver: Conversation with the Blues (London, 1965/R)
P. Welding: Mance Lipscomb, Vol. 4, Arhoolie F1033 (1967); reissued on Arhoolie CD–465 (n.d.) [disc notes[
D. Garwood: 'Lipsomb's Guitar Technique', Blues Magazine, ii (1976), no.1, p.25; no.2, p.22 [incl. guitar tablature]
G. Alyn, ed.: I Say Me for a Parable: the Oral Autobiography of Mance Lipscomb, Texas Bluesman (New York, 1993)

PAUL OLIVER

Lipsius, Marie ['La Mara'] (b Leipzig, 30 Dec 1837; d Schmölen, nr Wurzen, Saxony, 2 March 1927). German writer on music. Her father was the rector of the Thomasschule in Leipzig, and her main teacher was Richard Müller, the founder of the Leipzig University Choral Society. She began to write musical articles under the pen name of 'La Mara' early in life. She saw Liszt for the first time in 1855, and joined his Weimar circle a year later. There she attended a number of soirées put on by Liszt and his companion Princess Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein in the Altenburg, and was struck by the animated conversations about music which seemed to her to be 'spun with threads of gold'. Liszt was still at the height of his powers as a pianist, and she left memorable desciptions of his playing. This encounter changed her life: although she wrote on a great variety of musical topics (publishing important studies of Mozart, Schubert, Chopin, Beethoven and others), the bulk of her literary work was connected with Liszt. La Mara was 56 years old when she began to publish Liszt's voluminous correspondence (a task that Liszt had already entrusted to her during his lifetime), and 81 when she finally put down her pen. 12 volumes of his correspondence, edited across a period of 25 years, were each dated by La Mara 'October 22' (Liszt's birthday), a remarkable gift to his memory.

As a critic La Mara had the advantage of knowing many of the composers about whom she wrote (there are also essays on Clara and Robert Schumann, Wagner and Berlioz). But that also worked against her. She did not hesitate to censor some of Liszt's correspondence in order to shield his private life, and modern scholars have critized her for that. Liszt's Briefe an eine Freundin (vol.3 of the collected letters) were badly mauled in an effort to protect the identity of the 'Freundin' (Agnes Street-Klindworth, an earlier love of Liszt's). Nevertheless, by editing 4000 of the composer's letters, collected with difficulty across a long period of time, La Mara placed herself in the forefront of Liszt studies. It may be possible to improve on her work, but not to replace it.

WRITINGS

Musikalische Studienköpfe (Leipzig, 1868, enlarged 2/1875–82) [many edns to 1913]
Musikerbriefe aus fünf Jahrhunderten(Leipzig, 1886)
ed.: Franz Liszt's Briefe(Leipzig, 1893–1905; Eng. trans. of vols.i–ii, 1894/R) ed.: Briefe hervorragender Zeitgenossen an Franz Liszt (Leipzig, 1895–1904)
ed.: Briefwechsel zwischen Franz Liszt und Hans von Bülow (Leipzig, 1898; Fr. trans., 1899 as Franz Liszt et Hans von Bülow: correspondance)
ed.: Briefe von Hector Berlioz an die Fürstin Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein (Leipzig, 1903)
ed.: Aus der Glanzzeit der Weimarer Altenburg: Bilder und Briefe aus dem Leben der Fürstin Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein (Leipzig, 1906)
Beethovens unsterbliche Geliebte: das Geheimnis der Gräfen Brunsvik und ihre Memoiren (Leipzig, 1909)
ed.: Briefwechsel zwischen Franz Liszt und Carl Alexander, Grossherzog von Sachsen (Leipzig, 1909)
Liszt und die Frauen (Leipzig, 1911, 2/1919)
Durch Musik und Leben im Dienste des Ideals, ii (Leipzig, 1917, 2/1925)
ed.: Franz Liszts Briefe an seine Mutter(Leipzig, 1918)
ed.: Beethoven und die Brunsviks: nach Familienpapiere aus Therese Brunsviks Nachlass (Leipzig, 1920)
An der Schwelle des Jenseits: letzte Erinnerungen an die Fürstin Carolyne Sayn-Wittgenstein (Leipzig, 1925)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, Wurzener Tageblatt (3 March 1927)
A. Walker: Franz Liszt, i (London and New York, 1983), 11–13; ii (1989), 210–11; iii (1996), 535–6

ALAN WALKER

Liquescent. A term for a feature of Western neumatic notation. Liquescence arises in singing diphthongs and certain consonants to provide for a semi-vocalization of that vowel or consonant as a passing note to the next pitch. It is indicated by special neume shapes in all the regional notations of Western chant. Mocquereau listed the following situations where liquescence occurs: on the consonants l, m, n, r, d, t and s, when these are succeeded by another consonant; on the double consonant gn; on i and j, when these follow another consonant; on m and g, when these have a vowel on either side; and on the diphthongs au, ei and eu. Liquescent neumes include the following, in which it is understood that the last note of each neume is semi-vocalized: the EPIPHONUS, two notes in ascending order, the liquescent podatus (see PES (ii)); the CEPHALICUS, two notes in descending order, the liquescent CLIVIS; and the ANCUS, three notes in descending order, the liquescent CLIMACUS. (For illustrations see NOTATION, Table 1; Bannister and Suñol contain illustrations of liquescent neumes in the notations of different regions.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Mocquereau: 'Neumes-accents liquescents ou semi-vocaux', Le répons-graduel Justus ut Palma, PalMus, 1st ser., ii (1891), 37–86
C. Vivell: 'Liqueszierende Choralnoten', Gregorianische Rundschau, iv (1905), 65
R. Baralli: 'Le figure dell'"Ancus" o "Climacus liquescens" nei manoscritti gregoriani, loro significato ed esecuzione', Rassegna gregoriana, vii (1908), cols.401–10, 481–98
H.M. Bannister: Monumenti vaticani di paleografia musicale latina (Leipzig, 1913/R)
G.M. Suñol: Introducció a la paleografia musical gregoriana (Montserrat, 1925; Fr. trans., rev., enlarged 2/1935)
H. Freistedt: Die liqueszierenden Noten des gregorianischen Chorals: ein Beitrag zur Notationskunde (Fribourg, 1929)
J.B. Göschl: Semiologische Untersuchungen zum Phänomen der gregorianischen Liqueszenz: der isolierte dreistufige Epiphonus praepunctis, ein Sonderproblem der Liqueszenzforschung (Vienna, 1980)
D. Hiley: 'The Plica and Liquescence', Gordon Athol Anderson, 1929–1981, in memoriam, ed. L.A. Dittmer (Henryville, PA, 1984), 379–92
A. Haug: 'Zur Interpretation der Liqueszenzneumen', AMw, l (1993), 85–100

□

Liquidation. See NEUTRALIZATION (ii).

Lira (i) [lyra]. A term used to refer to various string instruments. For the general use of the term, see LYRA (ii).

Lira (ii). Short-necked fiddle of Greece. In contemporary usage, the name 'lira' is applied to two structurally distinct instruments: a pyriform instrument, found principally on the Greek islands and in the northern mainland areas of Thraki and Makedonia; and a rectangular, bottle-shaped, three-string instrument of Turkish origin called the Podiaki lira (kemedzes), found primarily near the mainland Greek-Turkish border.

The pear-shaped lira is bipartite, with a back (kafki: 'skull'), neck (lemos) and pegdisc (kefali: 'head') carved out of a single block of hardwood and a belly, made of a separate piece of coniferous wood, which is typically flat and in which are carved two D-shaped soundholes (matia: 'eyes'). Usually made by the player in whatever size desired, lires in Crete have been produced in four sizes and styles, including the small liraki, the large vrodolira, the common, medium-size lira and the viololira, a waisted instrument similar in shape to the violin.

The three gut or wire strings are fastened at the upper end to sagittal posterior pegs (striftalia: 'turners') and at the lower to a projection of the soundbox (oura: 'tail'), to a tailpiece or to a string-holder (kteni: 'comb'). Traditionally, liras have no nut, but many have a small wooden string support (pano kavallaris: 'rider') which functions as a nut for the longer middle string. Tuning is in perfect 5ths (at relative, not absolute pitches); alla turca tuning, in perfect 4ths and 5ths, is sometimes used. A unique feature of the pear-shaped lira is the use of a soundpost (stilos: 'pillar', or psihi: 'soul') placed through the soundhole directly beneath the treble side of the bridge and wedged between the bridge and the back, which supports and lifts the treble side of the bridge slightly off the belly. The Greek and Dalmatian pyriform liras and the Bulgarian gadulka appear to be the only bowed string instruments that use this specific bridge–soundpost arrangement.

Lira (short-necked fiddle) player, Crete

Until about World War II, the bow of the lira had a convex camber, a rudimentary tightening mechanism and several small pellet-bells (yerakokoudouna) attached for rhythmic accompaniment. The bow is held palm-up and the strings are stopped from the side with the fingernails. Contemporary players commonly use violin bows. When seated, lira players may hold the instrument vertically upon the left thigh (see illustration) or between the legs; if standing, they support it against the chest or belt.

Used primarily as a melody instrument to perform dance-tunes, the lira is played with rapid, separate bow strokes, near the tip of the bow. Customarily played by men only, the lira may be played alone, in combination with Western European instruments, or with the daouli (drum), the laouto (lute) or the dahares (tambourine). In many areas of Greece, the lira tradition has been in decline and has been replaced by the violin. See GREECE, §IV.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Downie: 'The Modern Greek Lyra', JAMIS, v–vi (1979–80), 144–65

L. Liavas: 'Ē kataskeuē tēs achladoschemēs lyras sten Kriti kai sta Dodekanisa/The Construction of the Pear-Shaped Lyre in Crete and the Dodecanese', Ethnografia, iv–v (1983–5), 117–42

R.M. Brandl and D. Reinsch: Die Volksmusik der Insel Karpathos: die Lyramusik von Karpathos ... 1930–1981 (Göttingen, 1992)

Y. Bouhalakis: Pairēs methodos Kritikēs lyras/Complete Cretan Lyra Method (Athens, 1995)

MARGARET DOWNIE BANKS

Lira da braccio. One of the most important bowed string instruments of the Renaissance, used especially by courtly Italian poet-musicians of the 15th and 16th centuries to accompany their improvised recitations of lyric and narrative poetry. In its fully developed form, not documented before the late 15th century, the lira da braccio had a body shaped like a violin, but with a wide fingerboard, a relatively flat bridge and a leaf-shaped pegbox with frontal pegs (fig.1). It normally had seven strings, five on the fingerboard and two off-board drones. In 16th-century sources it is often called simply 'lira', or even 'viola'. Sometimes writers (for example, Ganassi in Regola rubertina, 1542) called it 'lira di sette corde' or 'lira moderna', to differentiate it from the antique lyre from which it was supposed (erroneously) to derive.

1. The instrument and its playing technique. 2. History.

1. THE INSTRUMENT AND ITS PLAYING TECHNIQUE. Lanfranco (in Scintille di musica, 1533) and writers after him gave the tuning for the seven-string lira da braccio as d/d′–g/g′–d′–a′–e″, that is, like a violin with a low d string and with the bottom two pairs of strings in octaves. Although Lanfranco called the two G strings 'bordoni', the Pesaro manuscript cited below makes clear that the D strings were in fact the off-board drones. Praetorius (2/1619) was the only theorist to depict the instrument with frets, and he gave the pitch of the top string as d″ not e″, a 4th and not a 5th above the second string.

The instrument was designed for chordal playing. The bows, therefore, were either very long or, if short, designed so that the hair and the stick were as far apart as possible, as pictorial sources attest. The many pictures reproduced by Winternitz and Witten show, too, that the instrument was supported against the left shoulder, but held with the pegbox considerably lower than the body of the instrument, although in some pictures smaller instruments are held horizontally or even with the pegbox slightly raised.

1. Lira da braccio and bow, with a shawm: detail from the 'Allegory of Hearing' by Jan Breughel I, from the 'Five Senses' series, 1617 (Museo del Prado, Madrid)

Disertori was the first to attempt to reconstruct the playing technique of the lira da braccio, by examining the possibility that the instrument was used to play late 15th- and early 16th-century frottolas; he drew attention to the fact that some pictures show players apparently stopping the off-board drones by means of a metal ring attached to the left thumb. A further reconstruction of playing technique for modern performers of the lira da braccio is provided by Jones who has analysed chord possibilities and fingerings for the instrument.

An idea of the chordal character of lira accompaniments can be gained from studying the fragments of 'recitative' (only the vocal part survives) sung as an invocation to Pan by Andrea dalla Viola accompanying himself on a lira da braccio at the first performance of Agostino Beccari's Il sacrificio in 1554 (the music is in Einstein, Solerti and Jones).

The most tangible evidence, though, of the way the lira da braccio was actually played comes from a late 16th-century manuscript in Pesaro's Biblioteca Oliveriana (1144, olim 1193), first studied by Rubsamen (JAMS, xxi, 1968, pp.286–99). The short section of the manuscript devoted to the lira includes several charts showing standard chord positions on the instrument, one complete setting of the romanesca for solo lira and a fragment of a passamezzo. The manuscript shows that the lira normally played triple and quadruple stops, but there are certain limitations to the chord positions available on the instrument. The notes of a chord always have to lie on adjacent strings, for example, since the bow cannot skip over middle strings. And the player can stop strings below an open one only occasionally because of the difficulty of the left-hand technique. Indeed, the Pesaro manuscript often indicates that one finger is required to stop all three middle strings (jeu barré).

Thus the instrument could not play all chords in all inversions; the C major triad, for example, lies most conveniently under the fingers in 6-4 position. The romanesca, the beginning of which appears in ex.1, consists largely of a melody accompanied by multiple-stopped triads, a feature that suggests that the top two or three strings were reserved for melodic writing or passage-work, and the lower ones for chords.

The range of the instrument and its playing technique indicate, too, that performers must customarily have sung in a range below that of their accompaniment. Ganassi (Lettione seconda, 1543) said as much when describing the technique as the 'prattica del dire i bassi accompagnado con il suon della Lyra' ('the practice of singing basses accompanied by the lira'). And Mersenne (1636–7), in writing about the lirone, explained that 'the bass voice is more suitable than the others for joining to this instrument so as to offset the roughness of the fourth, which ofttimes is met without the fifth below. But it produces a very good effect when the voice produces the fifth'. That is, the singer can supply the root of a 6-4 chord. And a sung bass line offsets nicely the soprano passage-work and the chords that can go below g only when the drones are called into play.

Ex.1 Romanesca for solo lira da braccio
I-PESo 1144, p.174

Only a few museums possess lire da braccio in a state approaching their original condition. The most beautiful by far is one by Giovanni d'Andrea da Verona, dated 1511, now in the instrument collection of the Kunsthistorisches Museum in Vienna (fig.2). The belly is shaped like a male torso and the front of the pegbox shows a grotesque male face; the back, on the other hand, is carved in the form of a female torso with a mask and acanthus leaves superimposed and with a female face on the back of the pegbox. The length of its body is 51·5 cm, thus longer than either of the other two most notable surviving instruments, the undated one by Giovanni Maria da Brescia in the Ashmolean Museum, Oxford (with a body length of 38·7 cm), and the undated anonymous one in the Brussels Conservatory (with a body length of 43·2 cm).

2. History. Although its tuning by 5ths resembles that of the Rebec, the lira da braccio is more closely related to the medieval Fiddle, and, indeed, it might best be regarded as a member of the fiddle family with especially well-defined characteristics. By the second half of the 13th century, Jerome of Moravia described some fiddles with drone strings, and drones are often to be seen in 14th-century pictures of fiddles with two to five strings. The characteristic violin-like shape of the lira, on the other hand, seems not to have evolved until the late 15th century. Winternitz (MGG1) described three principal stages in the development of the instrument's shape: a relatively long, thin body with a gently incurved waist without corners, and with either C-shaped, round, square or rhomboid soundholes (fig.3); a body divided into two parts, a relatively narrow upper and a shorter, broader lower section, almost invariably with C-holes (fig.4); and the fully developed violin-like shape with three bouts, corners and f-holes. However, iconographical sources from the end of the 15th century to the early 16th century show that all of these shapes existed simultaneously, thereby refuting the theory of development (see Jones).

2. Lira da braccio by Giovanni d'Andrea da Verona, 1511 (Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna)

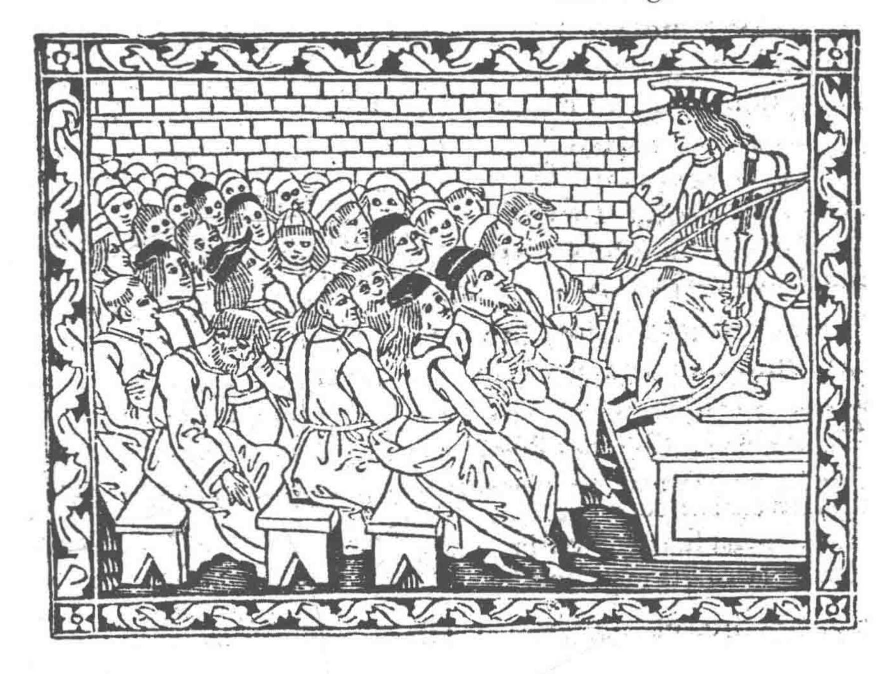
These three shapes appear in innumerable pictorial sources (many of them reproduced in the various studies by Winternitz and Witten) and especially Italian pictures, for the instrument was developed and cultivated chiefly in Italy during the 15th and 16th centuries, and appeared in other European countries only to the extent that Italian culture had an influence. In line with the instrument's supposed ancient lineage it is most often shown in the hands of mythological or allegorical characters, or sometimes as a member of angel consorts. Above all, the lira da braccio was associated with Orpheus (taming the animals, subduing the infernal spirits or leading Euridice out of hell) and Apollo (winning the contest with Marsyas or Pan, or leading the Muses), to judge from the quantity of pictorial evidence. But the instrument is also shown being played by Homer, King David, Musica, angels and various others.



The relationship of the instrument to ancient culture explains why it was taken up by those 15th-century Italian poet-improvisers, the Brandolini brothers, Leonardo Giustiniani in Venice, Pietrobono in Ferrara, Atalante,

3. Poet with a lira da braccio: woodcut from 'Epithome Plutarchi' (Ferrara, 1501)

4. Lira da braccio: detail from the 'Presentation of Christ in the Temple' by Vittore Carpaccio, 1510 (Gallerie dell'Accademia, Venice)

5. Recitation with lira da braccio accompaniment: woodcut from the epic 'Morgante maggiore' by Luigi Pulci, printed in Florence, c1500 (A-Wn Sign.Ink.5.G.9)

Benedetto Gareth in Naples, Serafino all' Aquila in the service of Ascanio Sforza in Rome, the philosopher Marsilio Ficino, the painters Raphael and Leonardo da Vinci and so on, who often sang their epic and narrative verses, their strambotti in ottava rima, their capitoli and other narratives in terza rima, odes, sonnets, ballate and other poetic forms, to the accompaniment of the lira da braccio.

It is not surprising, then, that Baccio Ugolino played the instrument as Orpheus in the Mantuan performance of Angelo Poliziano's Orfeo in 1471, and that it was associated with ancient gods and heroes in dramatic and quasi-dramatic entertainments in Italy throughout the 16th century. Among the greatest virtuosos of the 16th century was the composer Alessandro Striggio, whom Cosimo Bartoli (Ragionamenti, 1567) described as being able to play on the instrument four parts at once with such lightness and so musically that the listeners were astounded ('eccellentissimo nel sonar la viola e far sentir in essa quattro parti a un tratto con tanta leggiadria et con tanta musica che fa stupire gli ascoltanti').

The instrument played some part in 16th-century ensembles as well as accompanying solo singing, its chief role. Italian intermedio orchestras sometimes called for lire. As an ensemble instrument it may sometimes have played a single line in the soprano register, and it may sometimes have served as a proto-continuo instrument, taking advantage of its special qualities by adding chords beneath the given melodic line.

The LIRONE or lira da gamba, a bass counterpart to the lira da braccio, played between the knees like a viol, was developed in the 16th century, and seems to have gained more and more prominence as the century wore on. The lira da braccio disappeared from use early in the 17th century, and was never revived. A late mention of the lira occurs in the title of a violin piece by Biagio Marini published in 1626. His Capriccio per sonare il violino con tre corde à modo di lira was written at a time when the lira da braccio was already out of fashion, but its sounds were still remembered (the piece is reproduced in Jones).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EinsteinIM; MGG1 (E. Winternitz); SolertiMBD

A. Hajdecki: Die italienische Lira da Braccio (Mostar, 1892/R)

G.R. Hayes: Musical Instruments and their Music, 1500–1750, ii: The Viols and other Bowed Instruments (London, 1930)

B. Disertori: 'L'arciviolatalira in un quadro del seicento', RMI, xliv (1940), 199–211

B. Disertori: 'Pratica e tecnica della lira da braccio', RMI, xlv (1941), 150–75

E. Haraszti: 'La technique des improvisateurs de langue vulgaire et de latin au Quattrocento', RBM, ix (1955), 12–31

E. Winternitz: Musical Instruments and their Symbolism in Western Art (New York, 1967, 2/1979)

H.M. Brown: Sixteenth-Century Instrumentation: the Music for the Florentine Intermedii, MSD, xxx (1973), 223–25

L.C. Witten: 'Apollo, Orpheus, and David', JAMIS, i (1975), 5–55

E. Winternitz: Leonardo da Vinci as a Musician (New Haven, CT, and London, 1982)

V. Ivanoff: Das Pesaro-Manuskript (Tutzing, 1988)

S.S. Jones: The Lira da braccio (Bloomington, IN, 1995)

HOWARD MAYER BROWN/STERLING SCOTT JONES

Lira da gamba [lira doppia; lira grande]. See LIRONE.

Lira organizzata (It.; Fr. vielle organisée). A HURDY-GURDY with one or two ranks of organ pipes and bellows housed in its body. On some instruments a crank operates both the wheel that activates the strings and the bellows that makes the pipes sound; on others there is a separate mechanism for the bellows worked by the foot. On most instruments a mechanism permitted the player to engage either the strings or the pipes, or both together. Some instruments are guitar-shaped while others (for example, one in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London) are larger and in box shape.

The instrument seems already to have existed in the middle of the 18th century in France. It reached a peak of popularity about 1780, but its vogue did not last long. It was the favourite instrument of Ferdinand IV, King of Naples, who had learned to play it from Norbert Hadrava, the Austrian Legations Secretary. Hadrava, who had

Lira organizzata (shown from above, and in cross-section) from 'L'art du facteur d'orgues', iv (1778), by Bédos de Celles: AG is the wind-chest, F the organ pipes, P the stop-knob to disengage the pipes from the strings, and Q the knob for the tremulant stop (the remaining letters refer to the HURDY-GURDY) probably heard such instruments in Paris or Berlin, devised some improvements for it, and he and Ferdinand commissioned works for it from Adalbert Gyrowetz, Ignace Pleyel, Johann Sterkel and Haydn, who composed five concertos for two lire organizzate and orchestra (HVIIh:1–5), and eight Notturnos for two lire organizzate and other instruments (HII:25–32).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Ohmiya, ed.: Joseph Haydn Werke VI: Concerti mit Orgelleiern (Munich, 1976)
H. Czakler: 'Zum Problem der Lira organizzata', Joseph Haydn: Vienna 1982, 76–81
C. Flagel: 'La vielle organisée', Cahiers des Alpes-Maritimes, no.9 (1991), 28–35
J.A. Rice: 'Stein's "Favorite Instrument": a Vis-à-vis Piano – Harpsichord in Naples', JAMIS, xxi (1995), 30–64

HOWARD MAYER BROWN/R

Lireggiare (It.). A term used in F. Rognoni Taeggio's Selva de varii passaggi secondo l'uso moderno (Milan, 1620), to mean slurring several notes in one bowstroke on the violin. It is still defined in the same way in J.G. Walther's Musicalisches Lexicon (Leipzig, 1732). For a discussion of the term, see BoydenH.

See also BOW, §II, 2(iii–v).

Lirico spinto. See SPINTO.

Lirithier, Johannes. See LHÉRITIER, JEAN.

Lirone [lira da gamba, lira in gamba, lyra de gamba, gran lira, lira grande, lirone perfetto, lyra perfecta, lira doppia, arciviolata, arciviolatalira, arcivioladaslyras, lyrone, lyra, lira] (It.). A larger relative of the LIRA DA BRACCIO, in use from approximately 1500 to 1700, primarily in Italy. Both types of lira were bowed chordal instruments, their chief use being to accompany the voice, but the lirone was played between the knees rather than under the chin because of its size. It accommodated many more strings – as few as nine and as many as 20 – and was therefore capable of playing in a greater number of keys. Its repertory was more comprehensive than that of the lira da braccio, covering nearly all genres from the frottola to opera and oratorio (whereas the lira da braccio was more specifically associated with the accompaniment of the poetry and song of the Italian humanists).

1. Structure, tunings and playing techniques. 2. History in Venice, Florence and Rome. 3. Other Italian and European centres. 4. Associations with other instruments. 5. Surviving instruments and iconography. 6. Modern-day revival.

1. STRUCTURE, TUNINGS AND PLAYING TECHNIQUES. The following conclusions can be drawn about the lirone's structural characteristics from iconographical sources and surviving instruments: it had a body size between that of a tenor and a bass viol, shallow ribs (about half the width of the ribs of a viol or cello), a flat back, and a quasi-violin outline, often with pinched or squared-off corners. It had a short neck and fingerboard, it was fretted, and the pegbox was leaf-shaped with frontal pegs. The bridge was nearly flat (fig.1), and the instrument had serpentine soundholes and a rosette. All the surviving examples are listed in §5 below.

The main function of the lirone was to provide sustained chords for the accompaniment of the voice. Its ingenious tuning system (re-entrant throughout; see RE-ENTRANT TUNING) meant that from three to six strings, one or two of them usually open, could be bowed together, which lent extra resonance and gave a particularly ethereal sound. Five extant tunings are known, from Cerreto (1601), Praetorius (2/1619) and Mersenne (1636–7). All these systems (ex.1) make it possible to play a series of chords using the same fingering pattern across the entire fingerboard. Major chords are fingered on the second and third frets, minor ones on the first and third. Augmented, diminished, 7th and 9th chords are obtainable, as are common suspensions (4–3, 7–6, etc.). The system most generally used by modern players is a modified version of the Mersenne tuning (ex.2) which makes available a good balance of sharp and flat keys and thus works well for the most common keys. An exceptional feature of the lirone's tuning is that it affords pure 3rds in all keys: with flats on one side of the bridge and sharps on the other, it is possible to obtain, for example, pure 3rds in both E♭ and B major chords. One instrument also shows double frets, so that alternative chord fingerings can be played in tune as well. Some lironi have bourdon strings to the side of the bridge and pegbox; Cerreto, Praetorius and Mersenne included these in their tunings. Bourdons undoubtedly stem from the lira da braccio tradition; although useful for playing music that is harmonically unadventurous, they are less relevant to repertory such as the large-scale mid-17th-century lament with its kaleidoscopic key changes.

Some of the most valuable information about how the instrument was played comes from Agazzari (1607), who stated that 'the player of the lirone must bow with long, clear, sonorous strokes'. Given the tuning and simple left-hand technique, the player's main responsibility was evidently to provide shapely, sustained harmonies to support the vocal line. Agazzari also recommended the use of a long bow, and experience suggest this should have a flexible stick and black hair. The bow should not be held above the frog (as with later viol technique), but on the frog itself, to make available the maximum length of bow hair and to enable the player to produce deep strokes well into the string; the effect is thus more 'vocal' than instrumental. Agazzari also advised emphasizing the 3rds and 6ths of chords: this is an excellent way to 'centre' the sound, and also to obtain maximum projection. To assist resonance and produce a clear sound, Cerreto advised that only the upper strings of a given chord be stopped. For moving quickly from one harmony to another, the technique of jeu barré (using the index finger of the left hand as a temporary nut by placing it across a block of strings) is indispensable. Mersenne's examples demonstrate playing in higher positions on the fingerboard; the resulting sound is akin to that of the 'halo' effect produced by a choir of violins.

1. Lirone bridge: detail of a woodcut from Mersenne's 'Harmonie universelle' (1636–7)

The most common way of notating a lirone part was by means of a figured or unfigured bass. Both Mersenne and Cerreto included tablature examples, but tablature is impractical for such a consistent and simple fingering system on an instrument with so many strings. One seeming disadvantage of the lirone's tuning is that for half the keys, only root-position chords, and for the remaining keys, only second-inversion chords, are available, with consequent problems of octave displacement in the bass line and inner parts. Francesco Rognoni Taeggio (1620), however, dismissed these as minor annoyances and went on to praise the instrument's soul-lifting, harmonious legato. Practitioners of the 16th century were perhaps less concerned than modern-day musicians about imperfections of part-writing, as may be attested by the fact that both Giulio Caccini and Alessandro Striggio (i) were reported to have played the lirone without a supporting bass instrument. Whatever its imperfections, the lirone was a valued member of the continuo fraternity for nearly two centuries. Its distinct and unique sonority destined it for laments, incantations and invocations, and contemporary writers marvelled at its ability to inspire and elevate the spirit. The wonderful effect of sustained chords on a single string instrument may have originated in the Middle Ages, but it flowered in the Renaissance with the lira da braccio, and reached its full development with the lirone in the Baroque. Although the instrument fell out of use in the early 18th century, its haunting, other-worldly tone colour is echoed in the string accompagnato of Passion music.

2. History in Venice, Florence and Rome. The first written reference to a large lira is in a letter to Francesco Gonzaga in 1505 from the maker and player Atalante Migliorotti, who described a new type of lira that he was constructing: 'I shall add strings so that there are 12 . . . in pure and consummate harmony'. Presumably the instrument was first used for playing frottolas, laudi and other compositions with slow-moving harmonies. References to lironi appear in documents of Venetian religious confraternities from the 1530s until 1631, when a number of lirone players died, presumably in the Great Plague of that year. The continuo body listed in 1618 for the Scuola Grande di S Rocco (where the composers Giovanni Picchi and Giovanni Priuli both worked) included two small organs, three larger ones, two lironi, three theorbos and a violone.

2. 'Homer' by Pier Francesco Mola, mid-17th century (Gemäldegalerie Alte Meister, Dresden); the painting belonged to the Medici court collection in the 17th century

In Florence the lirone was used as early as 1560 to accompany singing for the services of the Compagnia dell'Arcangelo Raffaelo, and Caccini himself was known to have played the 'gran lira' while singing inside a false tomb at a religious feast in 1584. His early monody Angel' divin' (I-Fn Magl. XIX.66), with its slow-moving harmonic accompaniment, is a good example of likely repertory for the lirone at the end of the 16th century. In secular music, the 'arciviolatalira' (a peculiarly Florentine name for the instrument) had an important role in intermedio repertory (Alessandro Striggio's Fuggi, speme mia, dating from 1565, is one of the most beautiful examples), and in the basso continuo ensembles of early Florentine operas, such as Jacopo Peri's Euridice (1600) and Francesca Caccini's La liberazione di Ruggiero (1625). The last known reference to the playing of the instrument in Florence is dated 1669, but presumably the Medici court lirone player Pietro Salvetti (d 1697) continued to play to the end of his life.

Rome was another important centre for the lirone. The preface to Cavalieri's Rappresentatione di Anima, et di Corpo (1600) recommends the use of the lira doppia (which the composer may well have come across during his time at the Florentine court). Stefano Landi included a lira in the list of continuo instruments in the printed score of his sacred opera Il Sant'Alessio (1634). In 1639 André Maugars described the marvel of hearing the lirone in Roman villas and in oratories; he may well have heard any of the six oratorios attributed to Luigi Rossi, or others by Marco Marazzoli, Domenico Mazzocchi or Bernardo Pasquini, all of which include substantial and extremely beautiful laments written to be accompanied by the lirone.

3. Other Italian and European centres. Striggio, who was born in Mantua, was probably the Lirone's greatest musical ambassador. He worked mainly for the Medicis in Florence, but his extensive travels took him all around Italy, as well as to London, Flanders, Paris, Innsbruck, Vienna, Landshut, Munich, Augsburg and Brno. He played large and small lire for Maximilian II in Brno, Duke Albrecht V in Munich, and Duke Wilhelm in Landshut (the last of whom, in a letter of 3 August 1574, described Striggio's lirone in some detail). The Graz inventory of 1580 listed a 'lira in camba' on which the Bavarian coat of arms was embossed; the Baden-Baden Hofkapelle collection of 1582 included several lyre da gamba; and later, the Austrian emperors Ferdinand III and Leopold I included the lyra in their religious compositions. According to Mersenne, the lyra de gamba was used in France for the accompaniment of psalms; and a grande lire was included in the 1589 inventory of the French luthier Robert Denis (ii). In the south, Cerreto recorded a number of lirone players working in Naples around 1600, while various references to lire are found in 17th-century Sicilian church archives, and Spanish players' names appear in early biographical sources. Finally, the printed inventory (1666) of the Milanese nobleman Manfredo Settala includes one 11-string arciviola (which 'con arco longa rende melodia soavissima') and four other lironi.

4. Associations with other instruments. There are a few examples of lironi playing with trombone consorts, the most notable being Striggio's lament for the 1565 intermedii (in which the instruments are placed off-stage); here the gentle regal-like quality of the lirone binds the ensemble very effectively. The lirone also joins a viol consort in Francesca Caccini's Ruggiero. Although the organ and the lirone might be expected to cancel each other out – and the lirone was often used in place of the organ – the two actually blend surprisingly well, particularly if the organist avoids the middle register: a marvellous layered chordal effect can be achieved with the keyboard player's right hand covering the register above the lirone, the left hand playing the bass and the lirone in the middle of the texture. Numerous references to the lirone playing with plucked instruments, particularly the chitarrone, abound, but Luigi Rossi went further to combine it with the harpsichord in his oratorios (albeit it with a supporting bowed bass). A combination of a bowed bass instrument (bass violin, violone etc.) and lirone is very effective; the bass instrument should probably play at 8′ pitch.

5. Surviving instruments and iconography. There are seven surviving examples, only some of which were originally lironi. The earliest, by L. Morella (1530 or 1550) is now housed in the Conservatório Nacional, Lisbon; a similar instrument, but more crudely designed and executed, is the anonymous example of about 1550 in the Musée des instruments de musique, Brussels. There are three in the Musikinstrumenten-Museum, University of Leipzig: two may originally have been viols (by Antonio Brensio and Gasparo or Francesco da Salò), while the third is in fragments (pegbox, neck, tailpiece and end block). Before World War II this last instrument was part of the Kraus Collection in Florence, and it is depicted (not always accurately) in a number of 17th-century paintings. The lirone by Wendelin Tieffenbrucker (*c*1590), now in the Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna, is perhaps the most elegant and eye-catching with its festooned body shape, but it may have been cut down from a cello. More recently, an anonymous figure-of-eight example has been discovered in a private collection in Burg Sternberg, Germany (see David).

Besides woodcuts, prints and drawings, there are a number of important and reasonably accurate 17th-century paintings of lironi, including Pier Francesco Mola's Homer (Gemäldegalerie Alte Meister, Dresden; fig.2), Ferdinand Bol's Dame mit lira da gamba (Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna), an anonymous Apollo with lira da gamba (source unknown, mid-17th century; see Disertori), Jan Roos's Orphée charmant les animaux (private collection, Gênes; and A.D. Gabbiani's Ferdinando de' and his musicians Medici (Palazzo Pitti, Florence); the last portrays Pietro Salvetti holding his cello and bow, with his lirone propped next to him.

6. Modern-day revival. Since the early 1980s the lirone has enjoyed a successful revival, beginning with Erin Headley's research, performances and recordings, and has once more been restored to its rightful place in the continuo ensemble. It is no longer a rare event to hear the instrument in Baroque opera, oratorio or vocal chamber music. The lirone has been taken up professionally by other players, most notably Imke David, Paulina van Laarhoven and Hildegard Perl, while distinguished makers include Henner Harders, Peter Hütmannsberger, Günter Mark and John Pringle. In 1997 the Lira-Forum was founded by Igor Pomykalo in Vienna for the exchange of information about lire da braccio, lironi, lyra viols and related instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MersenneHU; PraetoriusSM, ii; PraetoriusTI
S. di Ganassi dal Fontego: Regola rubertina (Venice, 1542); ed. W. Eggers (Kassel, 1974); Eng. trans., JVdGSA, xviii (1981), 13–66
L. Zacconi: Prattica di musica (Venice, 1592/R)
S. Cerreto: Della prattica musica vocale et strumentale (Naples, 1601/R, 2/1611)
A. Agazzari: Del sonare sopra 'l basso (Siena, 1607, 2/1608); Eng. trans. in Strunk SR1
A. Banchieri: Conclusioni nel suono dell'organo (Bologna, 1609/R, 2/1626 as Armoniche conclusioni nel suono dell'organo; Eng. trans., 1982)
P. Cerone: El melopeo (Naples, 1613/R)
F. Rognoni Taeggio: Selva di varii passaggi (Milan, 1620/R)
A. Maugars: Response faite à un curieux sur le sentiment de la musique d'Italie, escrite à Rome le premier octobre 1639 (Paris, *c*1640, copies in F-Pn and Pm); ed. J. Heuillon (Paris, 1991, 2/1992); ed. H.W. Hitchcock with Eng. trans. (Geneva, 1993)
A. Kircher: Musurgia universalis (Rome, 1650/R)
B. Disertori: 'L'arciviolatalira in un quadro del seicento', RMI, xliv (1940), 199–211
D. Arnold: 'Music at the Scuola di San Rocco', ML, xl (1959), 229–41
D. Arnold: 'Music at a Venetian Confraternity in the Renaissance', AcM, xxxvii (1965), 62–72
H.M. Brown: 'Psyche's Lament: some Music for the Medici Wedding in 1565', Words and Music: the Scholar's View . . . in Honor of Tillman Merritt, ed. L. Berman (Cambridge, MA, 1972), 1–28
H.M. Brown: Sixteenth-Century Instrumentation: the Music for the Florentine Intermedii, MSD, xxx (1973)
C.A. Miller: The Writings of Jerome Cardan on Music, MSD, xxxii (1973)
H.E. Smither: A History of the Oratorio, i (Chapel Hill, 1977)
J.W. Hill: 'Oratory Music in Florence, I: Recitar cantando, 1583–1655', AcM, li (1979), 108–36
J.W. Hill: 'Oratory Music in Florence, II: at San Firenze in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries', AcM, li (1979), 246–67
W.F. Prizer: 'Isabella d'Este and Lorenzo da Pavia, "Master Instrument-Maker"', EMH, ii (1982), 87–127
C.A. Elias: 'Musical Performance in 16th-Century Italian Literature: Straparola's Le piacevoli notti', EMc, xvii (1989), 161–73
D. Butchart: 'The Letters of Alessandro Striggio: an Edition with Translation and Commentary', RMARC, xxiii (1990), 1–78
I. David: Della lira da gamba (thesis, Schola Cantorum Basiliensis, 1995)

ERIN HEADLEY

Lisbon (Port. Lisboa). Capital city of Portugal.

1. To 1870. 2. From 1870.

1. To 1870. In 1147 Afonso Henriques regained Lisbon from the Moors and made it his capital. Gilbert of Hastings (Bishop of Lisbon 1147–66) introduced features of Sarum Use, which prevailed locally until 1536, and started the building of Lisbon Cathedral in 1149. Diniz, who ruled from 1261 to 1325, founded the royal chapel in the Alcáçova Palace in 1299. Afonso IV (1325–57) increased to ten the number of chaplains obliged to sing Mass daily in the royal chapel. In his Leal Conselheiro, a collection of moral essays finished about 1438, King Duarte records that three-part singing was then normal in the royal chapel (alto, tenor and contratenor), and classifies the music sung as either composed (canto feito) or improvised (descanto); six was the minimum number of singing boys, and it was the duty of the mestre de capela to rehearse the vocal music, choosing music appropriate to the church year. Duarte's mestre de capela Gil Lourenço came from Aragon, as did Tristão da Silva, who served under Duarte's son Afonso V (1432–81).

Still influenced by Sarum Use, Afonso V sent his mestre de capela Alvaro Afonso to England about 1454 to obtain a copy of the regulations used in Henry VI's chapel; the superb manuscript supplied by Dean William Say survives (P-EVp, CV/1–36d). Alvaro Afonso also composed the Vesperae, matutinum, & laudes cum antiphonis, & figuris musicis to celebrate Afonso's victory over the Moors at Arzila in 1471; this is lost, however, as are the works of his successors João de Lisboa (fl 1476), Matheus de Fonte (1516), Fernão Rodrigues (1521), João de Vilhacastim (1548) and Bartholomeu Trosylho (1551). The native mestres da Capela Real before 1700 whose works survive are António Carreira, Filipe de Magalhães, Filipe da Cruz and António Marques Lésbio. New royal chapel statutes of 1592 increased the ensemble to 24 adult singers, 22 boys (four of whom sang polyphony), two baixões (curtals), a cornettist and two organists in addition to the mestre de capela.

During the reign of Manuel I (1495–1521) Lisbon city waits were contracted in Flanders; their number was fixed at five (a shawm quartet and a sackbut) in 1628. A century later blacks had so pre-empted processional music that an ordinance was passed in 1717 restricting their number among municipal musicians.

By 1649 the royal music library, which was lost in the earthquake of 1755, was considered the best at any European court. Through a papal bull of 1716 the royal chapel was raised to a patriarchal chapel, and from 1719 to 1728 Domenico Scarlatti was associated with the chapel. In 1754, a year before the disastrous earthquake, the personnel included four organists and 74 singers of whom 34 were well-paid Italians, the highest paid being the castratos; the first four violinists were also Italians. The large number of singers was partly a result of the unification of the patriarchate and archbishopric in 1740 (which continued until the restoration of the archbishopric in 1834). Marcos Portugal became both royal mestre de capela and maestro of the Teatro de S Carlos in 1800. With the Napoleonic wars and the departure of the royal family for Rio de Janeiro in 1808 (whither Marcos Portugal followed them in 1810) three rich centuries of court musical life came to a close.

The three most prolific directors of Lisbon Cathedral's music in the 17th century were Duarte Lobo (1594–1643), João Álvares Frouvo (1647–82) and Francisco da Costa e Silva. Of the three 19th-century mestres, João Jordani (1793–1860), born in Lisbon of Italian parents, Joaquim Casimiro Júnior and Domingos Benavente (1825–76), only Casimiro brought distinction to the post (1860–62). The first cathedral organist known by name is António Fernandes (1540); João de Burgumão (d 1571) was engaged as organist of the royal chapel in 1544. The parish church of S Nicolau had an organ as early as 1374, played by an organist named Garcia. Philip II complained that Lisbon lacked any organist to equal Hernando de Cabezón in 1581; as a result the Spanish organists Estacio de la Serna, S. Martínez Verdugo and Diego de Alvarado were imported to Lisbon during his reign. However, the only Lisbon organist to publish his collected works during the Spanish regime (1580–1640) was Manuel Rodrigues Coelho, whose Flores de musica was published in 1620 by Pedro Craesbeeck, who emigrated from Antwerp to Lisbon in 1592. The Catalan immigrant Jayme de la Tê y Sagau ran a Lisbon printing establishment and during the 1720s published 77 of his solo cantatas with continuo and 12 Cantadas humanas a solo by Emanuele d'Astorga (1726). More significant for Portuguese music were the modinhas (popular songs) published between 1792 and 1795 by P.A. Maréchal and François Milcent in the Jornal de modinhas.

The Conservatório Nacional, created by a royal decree of 5 May 1835, absorbed the faculty of the Seminário da Patriarcal founded by João V in 1713. It was directed from 1835 to 1842 by J.D. Bomtempo, founder of the Sociedade Filarmónica (1822), which organized the first Portuguese public concert series. The conservatory counted among its more notable teachers in the later 19th century the bassoonist Augusto Neuparth (1862–87) and the cellist Ernesto Wagner (1878–99).

The Portuguese court developed a passion for opera during the reigns of João V (1706–50) and José I (1750–77). Castratos took the women's parts. The first operas by a Portuguese composer were F.A. de Almeida's La pazienza di Socrate and La Spinalba (for carnivals of

Ruins of the Casa da Opera after the earthquake of 1 November 1755: etching by Jacques-Philippe Le Bas, 1757 1733 and 1739 respectively), and both were mounted in the Royal Palace Theatre. Operas given at the Academia da Trindade, a public theatre opened in 1735, and its successor, the Teatro de Rua dos Condes, included works by Schiassi and Leo. The Casa da Opera, which opened on 31 March 1755 with David Perez's Alessandro nell'Indie, was destroyed by the earthquake of 1 November of the same year (see illustration). Luisa Todi began her meteoric career at the Teatro do Bairro Alto in 1771 and after touring Europe spent the last 24 years of her life in Lisbon (from 1796). Marcos Portugal's early stage works were presented at the newly opened Teatro do Salitre between 1785 and 1792 and between 1800 and 1807 he composed 13 opere serie for S Carlos, a new theatre inaugurated on 30 June 1793 with Cimarosa's La ballerina amante.

The Irmandade de S Cecília dos Músicos de Lisboa, the first Portuguese musicians' protective and benevolent association, was founded at Lisbon in 1603, with Pedro Thalesio as a prime mover. Twice reorganized (in 1755 by P.A. Avondano and in 1838 by J.A.R. Costa), it continued to collect dues for the relief of indigent members or for the souls of the departed, examined postulants for membership and acted as a restrictive union to prevent non-members from obtaining paid musical engagements. At its height (during the reign of João V) it sponsored important annual St Cecilia celebrations; the librettos of the villancicos sung between 1719 and 1723 show that these festivals then bordered on opera.

2. From 1870. The new impetus in concert life in the last decades of the 19th century is particularly associated with institutions such as the Orquestra 24 de Junho (1870), conducted by, among others, Francisco Barbieri, Edouard Colonne and Ruddorf; the Sociedade de Concertos de Lisboa (1875); and the Real Academia dos Amadores de Música (1884), whose orchestra was directed by the German conductor Victor Hussla, and whose music school offered an alternative to the Conservatório Nacional. While the Recreios Wyttoyne (1875), the Real Coliseu de Lisboa (1887) and the Avenida (1888) theatres specialized in comic operas and zarzuelas, the Coliseu dos Recreios, built in 1890, presented both symphonic concerts and opera performances at reduced prices. Well-known orchestras visited Lisbon, including the Berlin PO under Nikisch in 1901 and again under Richard Strauss in 1908, the Colonne Orchestra in 1903 and the Lamoureux Orchestra in 1905. In 1917 the pianist José Vianna da Motta became director of the Conservatório Nacional. In the early 20th century several orchestras were founded, some of which were short-lived, such as the Portuguese SO (Orquestra Sinfónica Portuguesa), under Pedro Blanch (1911–28), the Lisbon SO (Orquestra Sinfónica de Lisboa), under David de Sousa and later José Vianna da Motta (1913), the Filarmonia de Lisboa, under Francisco de Lacerda (1923), the Orquestra dos Concertos Sinfónicos de Lisboa, under Pedro de Freitas Branco (1928–31), the Portuguese RSO (Orquestra Sinfónica da Emissora Nacional, 1934) and the Orquestra Filarmónica de Lisboa (1937). Choral societies were also created, such as the Sociedade Coral Duarte Lobo, directed by Ivo Cruz (1931) and the Sociedade Coral de Lisboa, directed by Frederico de Freitas (1940). Concert societies founded in the first half of the 20th century included the Sociedade de Concertos (1917), the Sociedade Nacional de Música de Câmara (1919), Divulgação Musical (1925), the Círculo de Cultura Musical (1934), 'Sonata' (1942) and the Juventude Musical Portuguesa (1948). The Círculo de Cultura Musical, in particular, introduced to Lisbon composers such as Prokofiev, Casella, Poulenc, Honegger and Hindemith.

The Teatro de S Carlos, which had been closed since 1927, reopened in 1940 as part of the celebrations commemorating 800 years of Portuguese independence. After 1946 it was directly managed by the state. During the 1950s and 60s many international stars appeared at the theatre, although its repertory remained largely conservative. In 1963 the Fundação Nacional para a Alegria no Trabalho created a Portuguese opera company based at the Teatro da Trindade. This company was disbanded in 1975 and most of its singers were integrated in the Teatro de S Carlos. In the early 1980s the theatre had its own permanent orchestra and the nucleus of a resident opera company, but by the mid-1990s only the chorus survived.

Created in 1956, the Gulbenkian foundation brought significant changes to the musical life of Lisbon. In 1962 the Gulbenkian Chamber Orchestra was established (renamed the Gulbenkian Orchestra in 1971), followed in 1964 by the Gulbenkian Choir and in 1965 the Ballet Gulbenkian. Since 1977 the foundation has organized the annual Encontros Gulbenkian de Música Contemporânea, featuring the music of major foreign and national contemporary composers, and since 1980 it has promoted the annual early music festival, Jornadas de Música Antiga. It also continues to promote regular concerts in its own auditoriums and elsewhere in Lisbon.

The central role of Lisbon in the music life of Portugal was, if anything, reinforced during the 20th century. Most of the country's leading composers lived and worked in the capital, including Luís de Freitas Branco, Armando José Fernandes, Frederico de Freitas, Fernando Lopes Graça and Joly Braga Santos, Constança Capdeville and Jorge Peixinho. In recent decades new orchestras have been created (Nova Filarmonia Portuguesa, Orquestra Metropolitana de Lisboa in 1992), and new concert halls have been built, such as those at the Centro Cultural de Belém. Independent music groups in the city include the Grupo de Música Contemporânea de Lisboa, founded in 1970 by Jorge Peixinho, and the early music group Segréis de Lisboa. In 1980 a musicology department was created at the Universidade Nova de Lisboa, and in 1983 an Escola Superior de Música was opened in the city.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. da Fonseca Benevides: O Real Theatro de São Carlos (Lisbon, 1883/R)

F. da Fonseca Benavides: O Real Theatro de S. Carlos de Lisboa: memorias, 1883–1902 (Lisbon,1902/R)

F.M. de Sousa Viterbo: 'Os mestres da capella real nos reinados de D. João III e D. Sebastião',Archivo historico portuguez, iv (1906), 461–73; v (1907), 43–59

F.M. de Sousa Viterbo: 'Mestres da capela real desde o dominio filipino (inclusivé) até D. José I', Archivo historico portuguez, v (1907), 426–31, 452–61

J.J. Marques: Cronologia da ópera em Portugal (Lisbon, 1947)

M.A. Machado Santos, ed.: Biblioteca da Ajuda: Catálogo de música manuscrita (Lisbon, 1958–68)

A. Sibertin-Blanc: 'The Newly Installed Organ in Lisbon Cathedral', The Organ, xlvi (1966–7), 119–22

C.P. Leça: 'História dum Festival (o Festival Gulbenkian de Música, de 1957 a 1970)', Colóquio-Artes, vii (1972), 40–51

R. Stevenson: 'Liszt at Madrid and Lisbon: 1844–45', MQ, lxv (1979), 493–512

M.I. Cruz: O Teatro Nacional de S. Carlos (Oporto, 1992)

M.V. Carvalho: Pensar é morrer, ou O Teatro de São Carlos: na mundança de sistemas sociocomunicativos desde fins do séc. XVIII aos nossos dias (Lisbon, 1993)

M.J. de La Fuente: 'João Domingos Bomtempo e o Conservatório de Lisboa', João Domingos Bomtempo, 1775–1842, Instituto da Biblioteca Nacional e do Livro, 1993 (Lisbon, 1993), 11–55 [exhibition catalogue]

For further bibliography see PORTUGAL.

ROBERT STEVENSON/MANUEL CARLOS DE BRITO (1), MANUEL CARLOS DE BRITO (2)

Lïsenko, Nikolay Vital'yevich. See LYSENKO, MYKOLA VYTALIYOVYCH.

Lisinski, Vatroslav [Fuchs, Ignacije] (b Zagreb, bap. 8 July 1819; d Zagreb, 31 May 1854). Croatian composer. Lisinski was the leading composer of early Romanticism in Croatia. Having left school in 1837, after also studying music privately with J. Sojka and J.K. Wisner von Morgenstern, he graduated in arts and law and began work as an unpaid clerk. His first compositions were enthusiastically received, and he rapidly progressed from minor works to an opera, Ljubav i zloba ('Love and Malice', 1845). This was the first opera in modern Croatian and South Slavonic music, and its performance was recognized as a significant event by the Revue et gazette musicale (19 April 1846) and the Wiener allgemeine Theaterzeitung (8 May 1846). Lisinski now decided to concentrate wholly on music, and left for Prague to study at the conservatory; but finding that he was over the age limit, he was obliged to take private lessons with J.B. Kittl and K.F. Pitsch. The music of this period (solo songs, an overture Bellona, part of his second opera Porin) testifies to his rapid development.

With his return to Zagreb, the most difficult phase of his life began. Legalizing his name as Vatroslav Lisinski, he set about, in the exceptionally hard circumstances of the years after 1848, making his way as a professional musician, working as teacher, composer and conductor. Having failed to live by giving piano lessons and on occasional donations, and being at same time subjected to political oppression, he was forced by 1853 to abandon music and, disillusioned, to accept a post as a clerk. He wrote his own funeral march, Jeder Mensch muss sterben (lost) shortly before his death from dropsy at the age of 34.

Lisinski may be described as a typical early Romantic. Born into the musical life of Croatia at the time of the national revival of the years before 1848, he expertly reflected the enthusiasm and sense of energy of those days as well as their lyrical overtones. In 11 years of activity between 1841 and 1852, he wrote 145 original works. To a large extent, these follow the general characteristics of early Romanticism; but in some of them, he was the first to draw on Czech and Croatian folk melody, and should thus be considered not only the founder of nationalistic Croatian music but a predecessor in this respect of Smetana and Dvořák. Parts of Porin also show that he tried to make use of broader Slavonic characteristics (as for instance, in Sveslav's Act 4 aria 'Strogi oče na nebesi': 'Our father', which suggests an awareness of Glinka). In his use of leitmotif for Porin himself, he seems to be on the threshold of music-drama. By his advanced harmonic sense and his sensitive use of the orchestra (both as Romantic full orchestra in Bellona and as chamber ensemble in Der Abend), Lisinski was able to create several works that are in no way inferior to similar achievements in the rest of Europe. Dominating his contemporaries so completely as he did, Lisinski did not at first effectively influence the general development of Croatian music; since World War I, however, he has been recognized as the founder of modern Croatian and South Slavonic music.

WORKS

Edition: V. Lisinski: Izabrana djela [Selected works], ed. L. Županović (Zagreb, 1969) [Z]

STAGE

Ljubav i zloba [Love and Malice] (op, 2, D. Demeter), 1845, Zagreb, 28 March 1846, Z vi

Porin (knightly op, 5, Demeter), 1848–51, Zagreb, 2 Oct 1897, Z vii

ORCHESTRAL

5 works in Z iv

7 overtures, incl. no.4 'Jugoslavenka', E♭, 1848; no.5 'Bellona', D, 1849; no.6, D, 1851

Several other works, incl. Der Abend, idyll, 1850

OTHER WORKS

28 choral pieces, 20 in Z ii, incl. Putnik [The Traveller]; Tam gdje stoji gradić bijeli [Where the White Town Stands]; Prelja [The Spinning Woman]: all 1844; Dobrou noc [Good Night]; Na Krkonošich [On Krkonoše]: both 1849; Moja ladja [My Barge]; Laku noć [Good Night]: both 1850; Pogrebnica [Funeral March], 1851; Cum invocarem, 1852

69 songs, 1v, pf, 30 in Z i, incl. Miruj, miruj, srce moje [Quiet, Quiet, oh my Heart]; Prosjak [The Beggar]; Der Zufluchtsort: all 1846; Máj [May]; Vojenska píseň [Soldier's Song]; Co blaho mé? [What Enchants me?]; Jinochovo přání [The Lad's Wish]; Po boji [After the Battle]; Vltava; Slavíček a starost [Nightingale and Worry]; An die Tanne: all 1849; Osamljen [Solitary]; Ribar [The Fisherman]; Tuga [Sorrow]: all 1850; Život [Life]; Růže [Roses]: both 1852

30 pf pieces, mostly dances and marches, incl. Mazur, a, 1849, in Z iii

Collections of folk tunes, Z v

WRITINGS

Theorie der Tonsetzkunst [after lectures of K.F. Pitsch] (MS, Hrvatski Glazbeni Zavod, Zagreb)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Vranyczany-Dobrinović: 'V. Lisinski – životopisni nacrt' [V. Lisinski – a sketch of his life], Narodne novine, xxii (1856), 467, 471, 473, 477, 481, 485, 489

F.K. Kuhač: Vatroslav Lisinski i njegovo doba [Lisinski and his time] (Zagreb, 1887, 2/1904)

A. Kassowitz-Cvijić: Vatroslav Lisinski u kolu Ilira [Lisinski in the Society of the Illyrians] (Zagreb, 1919)

V. Klaić: Vatroslav Lisinski, 1819–1854 i prve dvije hrvatske opere [Lisinski and the first two Croatian operas] (Zagreb, 1919)

V. Novak: Vatroslav Lisinski (Belgrade, 1925)

L. Županović: Vatroslav Lisinski (1819–1854), život, djelo, značenje [His life, his work, his significance] (Zagreb, 1969)

J. Andreis: Music in Croatia (Zagreb, 1974, 2/1982)

L. Županović: Stoljeća hrratske glazbe (Zagreb, 1980), 166–92; Eng. trans. Centuries of Croation Music, ii (Zagreb, 1989), 59–104

LOVRO ŽUPANOVIĆ

Lisitsian, Pavel [Pogos] Gerasim (b Vladikavkaz, 24 Oct/6 Nov 1911). Armenian baritone. He studied in Leningrad, and made his début there in 1935. He first sang with the Bol'shoy Opera in 1940 and was for many years the company's leading baritone. He appeared at the Metropolitan as Amonasro in 1960, when he undertook a concert tour of the USA. He was a notable Yevgeny Onegin, Yeletsky, Escamillo, Napoleon (War and Peace) and Janusz (Halka), and also sang in the standard Italian and Russian repertories. He was, in addition, acknowledged as an authoritative interpreter of Russian song. Lisitsian had one of the century's most beautiful baritone voices allied to considerable artistry, as can be heard on his many recordings; he was also a fine actor.

ALAN BLYTH

L'isle, Alain de. See ALAIN DE LILLE.

Lisle, Claude-Joseph Rouget de. See ROUGET DE LISLE, CLAUDE-JOSEPH.

Lissa, Zofia (b Lwów, 19 Sept 1908; d Warsaw, 26 March 1980). Polish musicologist. She completed her musical education (piano and organ) at the Lwów Conservatory in 1924 and then studied musicology with Adolf Chybiński, philosophy, psychology and art history at Lwów University (1925–9). She graduated in musicology in 1929 and took the doctorate in 1930 with a dissertation on Skryabin's harmony. In 1947 she completed the Habilitation at Poznań with a work on musical humour and in 1954 she took the doctorate in historical sciences at the University of Poznań with a work on musical aesthetics. After ten years teaching theoretical subjects at the Lwów Conservatory (1931–41) she spent a year in the Uzbek Republic and then worked in Moscow (1943–6), where from 1944 she was a cultural attaché of the Polish Embassy. She was appointed successively reader (1948–51), professor (1951–7) and director (1957) of the musicology institute at Warsaw University. As an administrator she was active in many Polish and foreign institutions including the Union of Polish Composers, the Committee for History and Theory of Art of the Polish Academy of Sciences, the Council of Culture of the Ministry of Culture and Art, and the IMS directorate.

Lissa's scholarly interests were extensive but focussed chiefly on the problems of the aesthetics of music, the methodology of the history and theory of music, and the history of recent Polish music. She wrote the first Polish book on film music, and was the first to carry out large-scale investigations of musical aesthetics. Her work was founded on Marxist method.

WRITINGS

O harmonice Aleksandra Skriabina (diss., U. of Lwów, 1930; KM, no.8, 1930, pp.320–53)
'Politonalność i atonalność w świetle najnowszych badań' [Polytonality and atonality in the light of the most recent research], KM, nos.6–7 (1930), 192–237
Zarys nauki o muzyce [A short music textbook] (Lwów, 1934, enlarged 4/1966)
'Geschichtliche Vorform der Zwölftontechnik', AcM, xvii (1935), 15–21
O istocie komizmu muzycznego [The essence of musical humour] (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Poznań, 1947; Kraków, 1938)
'Uwagi o metodzie marksistowskiej w muzykologii' [Questions of Marxist methods in musicology], Księga pamiątkowa ku czci Prof. Adolfa Chybińskiego w 70-lecie urodzin (Kraków, 1950), 50–119
Muzykologia polska na przełomie [A turning-point in Polish musicology] (Kraków, 1952) [articles 1947–51] with J.M. Chomiński: Muzyka polskiego Odrodzenia (Warsaw, 1953, 2/1954 rev. in Odrodzenie w Polsce, ed. B. Leśnodorski, v, Warsaw, 1958, pp.7–112; Eng. trans., 1955, as Music of the Polish Renaissance)
'La formation du style national dans la musique instrumentale polonaise de la Renaissance', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris 1954, 149–61
'O obiektywności praw w historii i teorii muzyki' [Objective laws in the history and theory of music], Studia muzykologiczne, iii (1954), 7–112; pubd separately (Kraków, 1954)
Podstawy estetyki muzycznej [Questions of music aesthetics] (diss., U. of Poznań, 1954; Warsaw, 1953; Ger. trans., 1954) [articles 1950–53; one chapter, 'O specyfice muzyki' [On the specific qualities of music], pubd separately (Warsaw, 1953; Ger. trans., 1957)]
Historia muzyki rosyjskiej [History of Russian music] (Kraków, 1955)
'Prawa dialektyki w muzyce' [Laws of musical dialectics], Studia muzykologiczne, iv (1955), 75–104
'"Koncert na orkiestrę" Witolda Lutosławskiego' [Lutosławski's Concerto for Orchestra], Studia muzykologiczne, v (1956), 196–299
'Trzecia symfonia Bolesława Szabelskiego' [Szabelski's Third Symphony], Muzyka, i/1 (1956), 34–72
'"Wozzek" Albana Berga', Muzyka, i/3 (1956), 107–34
'O historycznej zmienności percepcji muzycznej' [The historical change in the perception of music], Przegląd humanistyczny, iii/4 (1959), 43–56; Ger. trans. in Festschrift Heinrich Besseler, ed. E. Klemm (Leipzig, 1961), 475–88; Eng. trans. in Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, xxiv (1965), 273–86
'Rozważania o stylu narodowym w muzyce na materiale twórczości Karola Szymanowskiego' [A consideration of national style in music in Szymanowski's creative work], Z życia i twórczości Karola Szymanowskiego, ed. J.M. Chomiński (Kraków, 1960), 7–72
'Über die Verbindungen zwischen der Harmonik von A.N. Skrjabin und der Harmonik von F. Chopin', The works of Frederick Chopin: Warsaw 1960, 335–40
'Zagadnienie czasu muzycznego w estetyce Augusta Wilhelma Schlegla' [Consideration of musical time in Schlegel's aesthetics], Estetyka, i (1960), 291–316
Estetyka muzyki filmowej (Kraków, 1964; Ger. trans., 1965)
Szkice z estetyki muzycznej [A sketch of music aesthetics] (Kraków, 1965; Ger. trans., 1969) [10 papers from Pol. and foreign periodicals, 1938–64]
'Folk Elements in Polish Music from the Middle Ages up to the 18th Century', Musica antiqua Europae orientalis: Bydgoszcz and Toruń 1966, 354–82
'Ost-West-Probleme in der modernen Musikgeschichtsschreibung', ibid., 19–41
'Uwagi o Ingardenowskiej teorii dzieła muzycznego' [Reflections on Ingarden's theory of a musical work], Studia estetyczne, iii (1966), 95–113; Ger. trans., Studia filozoficzne (1970), no.4, pp.331–50
'Hegel und das Problem der Formintegration in der Musik', Festschrift für Walter Wiora, ed. L. Finscher and C.-H. Mahling (Kassel, 1967), 112–19
'O istocie dzieła muzycznego' [The essence of a musical work], Muzyka, xiii/1 (1968), 3–30; Ger. trans. in Mf, xxi (1968), 157–82
Polonica Beethovenowskie (Kraków, 1970)
Studia nad twórczością Fryderyka Chopina [Studies of Chopin's works] (Kraków, 1970) [9 papers from Pol. and foreign periodicals, 1955–67, in orig. languages]
'Faktura fortepianowa Beethovena i Chopina', Muzyka, xv/4 (1970), 42–66; Ger. trans. as 'Beethovens Einfluss auf den Klaviersatz Chopins', Beethoven Symposium: Vienna 1970, 175–98
'Z zagadnień współczesnej periodyzacji historii kultur muzycznych świata' [Questions of modern periodization in the history of world musical culture], Musica antiqua III: Bydgoszcz 1972, 7–29 [with Eng. summary]; Eng. trans. in Polish Musicological Studies, i (1977), 216–36
'Die Rolle der Tradition in der Musik Volkspolens (1945–1970)', Studien zur Tradition in der Musik: Kurt von Fischer zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. H.H. Eggebrecht and M. Lütolf (Munich, 1973), 201–15
'Klavierpolonaise und -mazurka im 19. Jahrhundert', Gattungen der Musik in Einzeldarstellungen Gedenkschrift Leo Schrade, ed. W. Arlt and others (Berne and Munich, 1973), 813–39
'Zur Theorie der musikalischen Rezeption', AMw, xxxi (1974), 157–69

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Rudziński: 'Zofia Lissa, laureat nagrody Związku Kompozytorów Polskich' [Zofia Lissa, prizewinner of the Polish Composers' Union], Muzyka, iii/1–2 (1952), 57–9
E. Dzięboswka, ed.: Studia musicologica aesthetica, theoretica, historica: Zofia Lissa w 70. roku urodzin (Kraków, 1979) [incl. list of writings]
Z. Helman: 'Zofia Lissa 1908–1980', Zeitschrift für Musikpädagogik, xviii (1982), 27–9; Eng. trans. in Polish Musicological Studies, ii (1986), 7–24

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI

List [Fleissig], Emanuel (b Vienna, 22 March 1888; d Vienna, 21 June 1967). Austrian bass. He was a chorister at the Theater an der Wien, then emigrated to the USA, where he sang in vaudeville and then studied with Josiah Zuro. Returning to Vienna in 1920, he made his début at the Volksoper in 1922 as Méphistophélès. The next year he went to the Charlottenburg opera, Berlin, and from 1925 to 1933 was a member of the Staatsoper. He made his Covent Garden début in 1925 as Pogner and returned (1934–6) as Hunding, Hagen, King Mark, Ramfis and Ochs, his most famous role. He sang at the Metropolitan (where he made his début as the Landgrave in Tannhäuser) from 1933 to 1950 and at San Francisco, Chicago and Buenos Aires. At Salzburg between 1931 and 1935 he sang Osmin, the Commendatore, Rocco and King Mark, and at the 1933 Bayreuth Festival, Fafner, Hunding and Hagen. Forced to leave Germany, he became a naturalized American and did not return to Berlin until 1950. List had a deep, rich bass which, with his imposing presence, admirably fitted him for the Wagner villains he so tellingly portrayed. He recorded several of his Wagner roles, including Hunding on Bruno Walter's famous 1935 recording of Die Walküre, Act 1.

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/R

List, Eugene (b Philadelphia, 6 July 1918; d New York, 1 March 1985). American pianist. He made his début with the Los Angeles PO at the age of 12, and the following year returned to Philadelphia to study with Olga Samaroff. At 16, as winner of a Philadelphia Orchestra competition, he gave the American première of Shostakovich's First Concerto. In 1942 he gave the American première of Chávez's Piano Concerto with the New York PO under Mitropoulos. He spent the next four years in the army and gave a notable concert in Potsdam in 1945 at the meeting of Truman, Churchill and Stalin. From 1946 he toured with his wife, the violinist Carroll Glenn; in 1952 they were the soloists in Paris for the first performance of Manuel Rosenthal's Aesopi convivium, under the composer's direction. A spirited performer, List was an enthusiastic champion of music outside the standard repertory: he performed works by Viotti, Domenico Puccini and MacDowell; he played an important part in restoring Gottschalk's music to the repertory, resurrecting a number of pieces that were thought to be lost and commissioning arrangements of several others. He was also involved in discovering Liszt's Duo Sonata for violin and piano (see A. Walker: 'Liszt's Duo Sonata', MT, cxvi, 1975, p.620), and edited the complete works of Stephen Foster. From 1964 to 1975 he taught at the Eastman School, Rochester, and then at New York University.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Bloch: 'Eugene List: a Tribute', Journal of the American Liszt Society, no.17 (1985), 156–7

H.C. Schonberg: Obituary, New York Times (2 March 1985)

GEORGE GELLES/BETH E. LEVY

List, Garrett (b Phoenix, AZ, 10 Sept 1943). American trombonist. He attended California State University, Long Beach, where he studied with Bertram McGarrity, and the Juilliard School (BM 1968, MM 1969); he also studied privately with Hall Overton. As a performer of new music and an organizer of contemporary music concerts, he participated in the first performances of works by a wide range of composers including Berio, Maderna, Cage and his associates, Coleman, Braxton and other jazz musicians. He was an original member of The Ensemble, the performing group for the 'New and Newer Music' series at Lincoln Center, New York, and served as the ensemble's co-conductor with Dennis Russell Davies during the 1973–4 season. He was also music director of The Kitchen from 1975 to 1977. From 1971, through his association with Musica Elettronica Viva, a group devoted to live electronic music and improvisation, he came into contact with Dave Holland, Karl Berger and Bob Moses. He has received commissions from the St Paul Chamber Orchestra for conventionally conceived compositions, and founded, with Bayard Lancaster and others the A-1 Band to perform and record his jazz-fusion works. In 1975 List accompanied the Creative Associates of SUNY, Buffalo, on a tour of Eastern Europe; in 1980 he took up a teaching position at the Liège Conservatoire, Belgium.

In his music List combines elements of jazz with ethnic idioms and more conservative aspects of contemporary art music. Because of his closeness to jazz and other popular forms, he has been notably successful in composing a 'music of the people'. In such works as Standard Existence (1977), which includes a setting of a passage of Studs Terkel's Working, List's use of music as a political force is apparent. He is included in W. Zimmermann:Desert Plants: Conversations with 23 American Musicians (Vancouver, 1976).

WORKS

Large ens: Orch Etudes, 12 pieces, 1972–9; 9 Sets of 7, chbr orch, 1975; Songs, chbr orch, 1975; I am Electric, jazz band, 1976; The Girls (S. Terkel), nar, small orch, 1977; Escape Story (E. Friedman), soloists, orch, 1979; Fear and Understanding, jazz band, 1981

Chbr and solo inst: 2 Wind Studies, 9–16 wind, 1971; Songs, 7–12 insts, 1972; Your own Self, any inst(s), 1972; Elegy: to the People of Chile, any inst(s), 1973; Requiem for Helen Lopez, pf, 4–6 insts, 1981; Flesh and Steel, pf, gui(s), inst(s), 1982; Baudelaire, inst(s), 1983; Hôtel des étrangers, 5–21 insts (incl. 1v), 1983; pieces for solo trbn

Vocal: American Images (cant., found texts), 1v, inst(s), 1972; Standard Existence (S. Terkel, J. Apple, List), 1v, inst(s), 1977; over 30 songs, incl. Now and How (List), 1972, Fly Hollywood (E. Friedman), 1v, chbr ens, 1974, Fire and Ice (R. Frost), 1979, My Mother's Belly (B. Cendrars, trans. A. Levitt), 1979, You are more Beautiful than the Sky and the Sea (Cendrars, trans. Levitt), 1979

Other: The Man Ray Cycles (4 film scores), 1983; Time and Desire (dance score), tape, trbn, 1984–5

Principal publisher: Serious Music

JOAN LA BARBARA

List, George (Harold) (b Tucson, AZ, 9 Feb 1911). American ethnomusicologist. He was educated at the Juilliard School of Music, receiving a diploma in flute performance in 1933. He continued with graduate studies at Juilliard before obtaining the BS (1941) and the MA (1945) from Columbia University. He obtained the PhD with a dissertation on tonality in Mozart (1954) from Indiana University, where his principal teacher was George Herzog. He has received numerous grants including fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Indiana Historical Society, American Philosophical Society and a Fulbright research award. He began teaching at Colorado College before moving to Miami University, Ohio (1946–53). In 1954 he joined the faculty of Indiana University, becoming professor of folklore in 1969 and professor emeritus when he retired in 1976. While at Indiana he served as the director of the Archives of Traditional Music (1954–76) and the Inter-American Programme in Ethnomusicology (1966–76) and was editor of The Folklore and Folk Music Archivist (1958–68). His principal fields of interest include ethnomusicology and folklore, Latin American folk music, North American folk music and music of the Hopi Indians.

WRITINGS

An Analysis of the Relationship of Non-Stepwise Melodic Movement to Tonality in Selected Works of W.A. Mozart (diss., Indiana U., 1954)
'Speech Melody and Song Melody in Central Thailand', EthM, v (1960), 16–32
'Archiving Sound Recordings', Phonetica, vi (1961), 18–31
'The Boundaries of Speech and Song', EthM, vii (1963), 1–16
'Acculturation and Musical Tradition', IFMC, xvi (1964), 15–21
'The Reliability of Transcription', EthM, xviii (1974), 353–77
'Ethnomusicology: a Discipline Defined', EthM, xxiii (1979), 1–4
'African Influences in the Rhythmic and Metric Organization of Colombian Costeno Folksong and Folk Music', LAMR, i (1980), 6–17
Music and Poetry in a Colombian Village: a Tri-Cultural Heritage (Bloomington, IN, 1983)
'Hopi Melodic Concepts', JAMS, xxxviii (1985), 143–52
'Two Flutes and a Rattle: the Evolution of an Ensemble', MQ, lxxv (1991), 50–58
Singing About It: Folksong in Southern Indiana (Indianapolis, 1991)
Stability and Variation in the Hopi Song (Philadelphia, 1993)
'The HopiKachina Dance Song, Concepts and Context', EthM, xli/3 (1997), 413–32

GREGORY F. BARZ

Liste, Anton Heinrich (b Hildesheim, 14 April 1772; d Zürich, 31 July 1832). German composer. His father, the cathedral organist in Hildesheim, was his first teacher. In 1789 he went to Vienna to study with J.G. Albrechtsberger; reports that he also studied with Mozart are unconfirmed. He was music teacher to the children of Count Clemens August of Westphalia from 1793, then in 1804 settled in Zürich, where he was orchestra director from 1804 to 1807. He also established himself there as a teacher and founded a choir, with which he performed large-scale works by Haydn, Handel and others, as well as operas by Mozart and Rossini. Several of his works were published by H.G. Nägeli. Liste was an active freemason, and composed a cantata for the reopening of the Zürich lodge in 1811.

Liste's style betrays the influence of Beethoven and shows a fondness for experiment. His G major Piano Sonata is cast in one movement, while the Sonata for Piano Duet op.2 ends with a fugue. In the central section of the slow movement of his Bassoon Sonata op.3, he dispenses with bar-lines altogether. Liste's music was highly regarded in his day, receiving frequent favourable reviews in the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung.

WORKS
(selective list)

MSS in CH-Zz, D-Bsb

Vocal: 12 Maurergesänge, TB, op.9; Cant. (H. Lavater), TTBB, pf, op.5 (Zürich, 1811/2); Miriam und Deborah (Passion music), S, S, orch, op.44, 1818; 6 songs, 1v, pf, op.17 (Bonn, 1828); Sehnsucht nach dem Righi, 1v, pf (Munich, 1825); 6 Kriegslieder (J. Usteri), TTBB; Das Lied vom Zeitgeiste (J.C. Bär), TTBB, pf ad lib
Orch: Pf Conc., *c*1812, lost; Sinfonie quasi fantasia mit Fuge, *c*1818, lost; Pf Conc., op.13 (Leipzig, *c*1822)
Other inst: 2 Pf Sonatas, G, E♭ (Zürich, 1804); Sonata, bn, pf, op.3, 1807, ed. W. Waterhouse (Vienna, 1994); Sonata, pf duet, op.2 (Leipzig, *c*1808); Pf Sonata, op.6 (Leipzig, 1815); 3 characteristic pieces, op.10 (Leipzig, 1823)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberNL
G. Bürkli: Biographie von Anton Liste (Zürich, 1847)

CHRIS WALTON

Listenius, Nikolaus (b Hamburg, *c*1510). German theorist. He studied at Wittenberg University from 1529, gaining the Master of Arts degree in 1531. The university register states that he came from Salzwedel in Brandenburg. About 1536 he taught at the Lateinschule there and led the sacred music. At that time Elector Joachim II of Brandenburg admonished him for attempting to substitute the Lutheran liturgy for the Catholic without permission. In 1533 Listenius's treatise Rudimenta musicae was published by Rhau with a preface by the north German reformer, Johannes Bugenhagen. Listenius published a corrected version called Musica (1537/R; ed. and trans. A. Seay, Colorado Springs, CO, 1975) which became very popular as a school primer in Germany and Austria, and had appeared in more than 40 editions before 1583. The treatise was primarily for teaching singing and is arranged in a novel manner. Each subject is treated in a series of short, simple rules copiously illustrated with music examples. In the section on mensural music Listenius used the canon (still called fuga) for his examples. For the first time, in addition to the traditional terms 'musica theoretica' and 'musica practica', he introduced the term 'musica poetica', by which he meant instruction in composition. With 'musica poetica', after the work is completed something written remains; for instance a doctrine or a composition. The aim is to produce a self-contained and complete work ('opus consummatum et effectum'), so that after the death of the author a perfect and independent work ('opus perfectum et absolutum') is left behind. The term remained in general use in Germany for over a century.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.W. Niemöller: Untersuchungen zu Musikpflege und Musikunterricht an den deutschen Lateinschulen vom ausgehenden Mittelalter bis um 1600 (Regensburg, 1969)
P. Cahn: 'Ars poetica und musica poetica: Quintilian und Horaz in der Musiktheorie und Kompositionslehre des 15. und 16. Jahrhunderts', Ainigma: Festschrift für Helmut Rahn, ed. F.R. Varwig (Heidelberg, 1987), 23–34
P. Cahn: 'Zur Vorgeschichte des "Opus perfectum et absolutum" in der Musikauffassung um 1500', Zeichen und Struktur in der Renaissance: Münster 1987, 11–18
W. Seidel: Werk und Werkbegriff in der Musikgeschichte (Darmstadt, 1987), 3–4
W. Braun: Deutsche Musiktheorie des 15. bis 17. Jahrhunderts, ii: Von Calvisius bis Mattheson (Darmstadt, 1994)
H. von Loesch: '"Musica" und "opus musicum": zur Frühgeschichte des musikalischen Werkbegriffs', Festschrift für Helga de la Motte-Haber, ed. R. Kopiez (Würzberg, 1998), 337–42

KLAUS WOLFGANG NIEMÖLLER/EGBERT HILLER

L'istesso tempo. See ISTESSO TEMPO, L'.

Liszt, Franz [Ferenc] (b Raiding, (Doborján), 22 Oct 1811; d Bayreuth, 31 July 1886). Hungarian composer, pianist and teacher. He was one of the leaders of the Romantic movement in music. In his compositions he developed new methods, both imaginative and technical, which left their mark upon his forward-looking contemporaries and anticipated some 20th-century ideas and procedures; he also evolved the method of 'transformation of themes' as part of his revolution in form, made radical experiments in harmony and invented the symphonic poem for orchestra. As the greatest piano virtuoso of his time, he used his sensational technique and captivating concert personality not only for personal effect but to spread, through his transcriptions, knowledge of other composers' music. As a conductor and teacher, especially at Weimar, he made himself the most influential figure of the New German School dedicated to progress in music. His unremitting championship of Wagner and Berlioz helped these composers achieve a wider European fame. Equally important was his unrivalled commitment to preserving and promoting the best of the past, including Bach, Handel, Schubert, Weber and above all Beethoven; his performances of such works as Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Hammerklavier Sonata created new audiences for music hitherto regarded as incomprehensible. The seeming contradictions in his personal life – a strong religious impulse mingled with a love of worldly sensation – were resolved by him with difficulty. Yet the vast amount of new biographical information makes the unthinking view of him as 'half gypsy, half priest' impossible to sustain. He contained in his character more of the ideals and aspirations of the 19th century than any other major musician.

1. EARLY CHILDHOOD. Liszt was born in that part of western Hungary which after World War I was ceded to Austria and became known as the Burgenland. German was his native tongue and he grew up unable to speak Hungarian. In this he was no different from many thousands of Magyars born at that time and place. Intensely patriotic, Liszt frequently declared himself for Hungarian causes, and in the 1840s he sometimes appeared on stage wearing Hungarian national costume in order to make his personal protest against Austrian domination of his country. His sense of national pride was shared by his ancestors, one of whom (his paternal grandfather, Georg Liszt) had 'magyarized' the family name by changing the spelling from 'List' to 'Liszt'.

Liszt's father, Adam Liszt (1776–1827), worked for many years as a clerk on the Esterházy estates in western Hungary. A gifted amateur singer, pianist and cellist, Adam often took part in the summer concerts at Eisenstadt, where he became acquainted with Joseph Haydn. Not long before his son's birth, Adam was transferred to the village of Raiding, one of the Esterházy sheep stations, where he was officially described as an 'ovium rationista' (sheep accountant). As a young man Adam had trained for the priesthood at the Franciscan monasteries of Malacka and Tyrnavia (in Slovakia) but had been dismissed 'by reason of his inconstant and changeable nature'. Adam never forgot the Franciscans, however; he often visited their local monasteries and named his son Franciscus in their memory. Liszt's mother, Maria Anna Lager (1788–1866), came from a working-class family in Krems (lower Austria) and spent much of her adolescence in poverty, working as a chambermaid in Vienna. 12 years younger than Adam, she met him in Mattersdorf in the summer of 1810, and they married in January 1811. Franz was their only child.

The boy's musical genius asserted itself in his sixth year. He overheard his father playing a concerto by Ferdinand Ries and was later able to sing one of its themes from memory. Thereafter Adam gave his son regular lessons, and the boy made such rapid progress that within 22 months he had mastered a large repertory of music by Mozart, Bach, Clementi, Hummel and others, and showed exceptional ability as an improviser. Adam presented his son to the public for the first time in Oedenburg, in November 1820, when the nine-year-old boy played the Concerto in E♭ by Ries and extemporized on popular melodies. Such was the success of this concert that Adam arranged a more ambitious one in nearby Pressburg. It coincided with an assembly of the Hungarian Diet and the boy's playing captured the attention of a number of Hungarian noblemen – including Counts Amadé, Szapáry, and Michael Esterházy – who later came forward with money to support the boy's education abroad. The Pressburger Zeitung reported that his playing 'was beyond admiration and justifies the highest hopes' (28 November 1820).

Adam had already begun to seek out the best teachers for his son. Hummel was considered in Weimar, but his fee was prohibitive. So Adam turned to Carl Czerny in nearby Vienna. Many years later, Czerny recalled their first meeting in his autobiography:

> One morning in the year 1819 ... a man with a small boy of about eight years approached me with a request to let the youngster play something on the fortepiano. He was a pale, sickly looking child who, while playing, swayed about on the stool as if drunk, so that I often thought he would fall to the floor. His playing was also quite irregular, untidy, confused, and he had so little idea of fingering that he threw his fingers quite arbitrarily all over the keyboard. But that notwithstanding, I was astonished at the talent which Nature had bestowed on him. He played something which I gave him to sight-read, to be sure, like a pure 'natural'; but for that very reason one saw that Nature herself had formed a pianist.

Not long after this scene took place, Czerny accepted the young Liszt as a pupil. In the early spring of 1822 Adam, having secured an unpaid leave of absence from Prince Nickolaus Esterházy, moved his family to Vienna. Since Czerny's teaching day was already full, he arranged to instruct the boy every evening in his home and refused to accept a fee. For theory lessons Adam placed his son in the charge of Antonio Salieri, who taught him counterpoint and score-reading in all the clefs and likewise waived his fee.

Although Liszt was with Czerny for only 14 months the lessons laid the groundwork for an infallible technique. Under Czerny's guidance the boy embarked on his first serious conquest of the keyboard and was soon able to play scales and arpeggios in all possible combinations 'with masterful fluency'. 'Never before had I had so eager, talented, or industrious a student', wrote Czerny. The boy worked his way through Clementi's Gradus ad Parnassum and Czerny's own School of Velocity, and he studied works by Hummel, Moscheles, Bach and Beethoven. Since Czerny forced him to learn everything very quickly, and to commit it to memory, the youthful Liszt became a formidable sight-reader. He also published his first composition: a variation on a theme of Diabelli, one of a set of 50 commissioned by the publisher from composers then living in Austria. Within a year, Czerny had overcome his initial reluctance to the idea of presenting Liszt to the Viennese public and allowed Adam to arrange several concerts. At one of these (1 December 1822), the Allgemeine Zeitung reported that Liszt's playing bordered on the incredible and referred to him as 'a little Hercules ... fallen from the clouds'. Emboldened by this reception, Adam conceived the idea of leaving Austria altogether and taking his son on tour to Paris. Czerny thought that such a move was premature and motivated by the pursuit of 'pecuniary gain', but a farewell concert was nonetheless announced for 13 April 1823.

Because of Czerny's friendly relations with Beethoven, the master received Liszt and his father at the beginning of April 1823. Beethoven's Conversation Books record a meeting during which Liszt (or his father) invited him to the farewell concert in the small Redoutensaal on 13 April. Beethoven was also asked for a theme on which Liszt might improvise. Legend later had it that Beethoven mounted the platform and bestowed a public Weihekuss on the young boy's brow. However, the Conversation Books imply that Beethoven neither attended the concert nor provided the theme (Konversationenhefte, iii, 168, 199). The 'kiss of consecration', which became such an important memory for Liszt in later life, could not have taken place at the concert but may well have occurred in Beethoven's lodgings.

Before setting out for Paris, Adam took his son back to Pest to show him off to the Hungarians. A 'homecoming' concert took place on 1 May 1823, and the placards carried the patriotic declaration: 'I am Hungarian!' As if to emphasize the point, Liszt appeared at the piano wearing a braided Hungarian national costume.

2. From Vienna to Paris. The Liszt family left Vienna on 20 September 1823. En route to Paris, Adam wrote a letter of appreciation to Czerny (dated 2 November) which summed up everything he felt about the great pedagogue: 'Together with my wife and child I kiss your hands with utmost gratitude for this good work which you have lavished on our boy. Never will you be able to escape our heartfelt thanks'. Adam plotted the journey through Munich, Augsburg, Strasbourg and Stuttgart in order to draw a comparison with the young Mozart who had made a similar tour with his father 60 years earlier. After much acclaim and many gifts along the way, Liszt and his parents arrived in Paris in December 1823. In those days the stagecoach terminated at rue du Mail, near the Erard piano factory. The Liszts and the Erards formed a lifelong friendship and the venerable head of the firm, Sébastien Erard, presented Liszt with a magnificent grand piano of seven octaves, containing his newly invented 'repetition action'. This device allowed extremely rapid note reiteration and turned the piano into an instrument of virtuosity, with new possibilities that Liszt was among the first to explore.

Liszt applied for admission to the Paris Conservatoire but was refused. Accompanied by his father and Erard, he attended an interview with the director, Luigi Cherubini. The discussion was stiff and formal, the result disappointing: the rules would not permit Cherubini to admit foreigners, even one so famous as Liszt. Since Cherubini himself was a foreigner and there were foreign students already enrolled, Liszt's vivid explanation ('Zur Stellung des Künstlers', 1835) has always seemed incomplete and casts Cherubini in a poor light. In fact the regulation against foreigners was designed to protect the piano department, which had recently been overwhelmed with applicants. It stemmed from a new government decree, sought and approved a few weeks earlier by the piano faculty itself. French citizenship was seen as the key to the problem of maintaining a proper balance across the student body. The setback ultimately worked to Liszt's advantage. Adam engaged two private teachers for his son, Antoine Reicha for theory and Ferdinando Paer for composition, both of them based in Paris. Under their guidance his natural talent was allowed to develop unfettered. At the Conservatoire it might have been restricted and could have led to the same sort of clash with authority that was shortly to befall Berlioz and, later, Debussy and Ravel. Meanwhile, the boy was free to continue his tours and build a career in his own way.

3. The trips to England, 1824–7. Notable among those tours were three visits to England where the young Liszt enjoyed some early triumphs. Father and son crossed the English Channel for the first time in May 1824 and stayed in lodgings at 18 Great Marlborough Street, a property that belonged to the firm of Erard. Liszt's London début took place at the Argyll Rooms on 5 June, under the auspices of the Royal Society of Musicians, 'surrounded by eminent professors, amateurs and admirers of the fascinating science of music' (Morning Post, 7 June). On 21 June Liszt returned to the Argyll Rooms where he played Hummel's B minor Concerto under the direction of Sir George Smart, before a distinguished audience that included Clementi, Ries, Kalkbrenner and Cipriano Potter (fig.1). Erard provided one of his latest grand pianos for these appearances. At his Drury Lane concert on 29 June the theatre posters informed the public that 'the incomparable Master Liszt has in the most flattering manner consented to display his inimitable powers on the New Grand Piano Forte invented by Sébastien Erard'. From London the Liszts journeyed to Manchester, where Franz played at the Theatre Royal, again on an Erard grand especially sent there for him. The ARGYLL ROOMS.

Master LISZT's CONCERT,
JUNE 21, 1824.

PART I.

Grand Sinfonia........ ....Haydn.
Aria, Signor Fabri, " Non piu andrai."......(Figaro.)......Mozart.
Grand Concerto, (with Orchestral Accompaniments,) Piano Forte, Master Liszt................................ ..Hummel
Duetto, Le Signore Marinoni ....Rossini
Fantasia, Corno, Signor Puzzi................ ....Puzzi.
Duetto, Madame Castelli and Signora Marinoni,
" E ben per mia memoria."....(La Gazza Ladra)....Rossini.
Recit. and Air, Mr. Braham, " Deeper and deeper still;"
and " Waft her, Angels." ....(Jephthah.)..........Handel.
Variations, Mandolin and Piano Forte, Signor Vimercati and Master Liszt.................. ....Mayseder.
Terzetto, Madame Castelli, Signor Marinoni, & Signor Garcia,
" Cruda sorte."..........(Ricciardo e Zoraide.)........ ....Rossini.

PART II.

Overture to Prometheus......................... ....Beethoven.
Ballad, Miss Stephens, " Gin living worth."
Fantasia, Harp, Monsieur Labarre.................... ....Labarre.
Cavatina, Signor Boccacini, " Fra un istante."..........Rossini.
Variations, Piano Forte, (with Orchestral Accompaniments,) Master Liszt.. ....Czerny.
Duetto, Signor Garcia and Signor Boccacini,
" Che bella vita.".......... ....Generali.

Extempore Fantasia on a written Thema, which Master Liszt respectfully requests may be given to him by any Person in the Company.

Leader of the Band, Mr. Mori.
Conductor........Sir George Smart.

Master Liszt will perform on Sebastian Erard's New Patent Grand Piano Forte

Mallett, Printer, 59, Wardour Street, Soho.

1. Programme of Liszt's second London concert, Argyll Rooms, 21 June 1824 climax of this first visit to England took place when they were received by George IV at Windsor Castle. Liszt played for more than two hours and caused particular delight with his improvisation on the Minuet from Don Giovanni.

A second, much shorter visit took place in June 1825. Once again Liszt gave concerts in London and Manchester and played before George IV. The Manchester handbills announced that he was 'only 12 years old', when he was in fact 13 – not the first time that Adam obscured the true age of his son. At the second Manchester concert, on 20 June, Liszt was featured as a composer and the orchestra began with 'A New Grand Overture, by Master Liszt'. This was almost certainly the overture to Liszt's opera Don Sanche, on which he had already started work and which was scheduled for production in Paris later that year. On their way back through London the Liszts visited St Paul's Cathedral and were deeply impressed by the singing of massed choirs of several thousand children of the Free Schools. Liszt never forgot the spectacle, nor the sea of sound that it made, and drew upon its memory many years later at the climaxes of his oratorio Christus.

When they got back to Paris in July, Adam Liszt was contacted by the Ministry of Arts and informed that the score of Don Sanche was required within eight days for scrutiny by the jury (which included Luigi Cherubini, Adrien Boieldieu and Henri Berton). The opera was performed on four consecutive nights, 17–20 October 1825, and then taken off. For many years the score of Don Sanche was thought to be lost, but the manuscript was rediscovered in 1903 and given its first performance in modern times on 20 October 1977 in London.

As a youth Liszt showed mystical leanings and was attracted to the church. He was familiar with the lives of the saints and had already read the Imitation of Christ by Thomas a Kempis. He spent many hours in prayer, began to suffer from religious mania and expressed a desire to become a priest. Adam Liszt, who had at first encouraged his son's devotions, resisted such a radical idea. Liszt later told Lina Ramann that his father had said: 'You belong to art, not to the Church' (Ramann, H1880–94, i, 97), a judgment that Liszt revised 40 years later when he took holy orders.

Liszt crossed the English Channel for a third time in May 1827. In London he and his father stayed at lodgings in Frith Street, Soho. Once again he appeared at the Argyll Rooms and this time created a stir with his performance of Hummel's A minor Concerto. Muzio Clementi was observed at the morning rehearsal sitting at the back of the hall, 'his brilliant, dark eyes glistening as he followed the marvellous performance' (Salamon). It was during this visit that Liszt composed a Scherzo in G minor, the manuscript of which bears the date 'May 27'. The piece indicates an advanced grasp of harmony for one so young, and more than a passing acquaintance with Beethoven's pieces in the same genre (ex.1).

According to Adam Liszt, his 15-year-old son was already composing industriously and had in his portfolio a number of compositions, including a sonata for four hands, a trio, a quintet and two piano concertos, all of which have disappeared. In 1826 he published his 'Etude en douze exercices' (see A8), a set of pieces which are important since they later formed the basis of the 12 Etudes d'exécution transcendante. A sufficient number of juvenile works remain to dispel the idea that Liszt was a late starter in the field of composition.

Ex.1 Scherzo in G minor

4. The death of Adam Liszt. Liszt left England with his father in August 1827. They had now been touring more or less incessantly for three years and Adam arranged a short holiday at Boulogne-sur-Mer to take the waters. Within days, however, Adam had succumbed to typhoid fever; he died in Boulogne on 28 August and was buried in haste the next day, in the Cimetière de l'Est, following a funeral service at the church of St Nicolas. The experience proved to be deeply traumatic for Liszt; the topic of death and dying became a preoccupation which often came out in his music (e.g. in his Apparitions, De profundis and Pensée des morts). While his later tours sometimes took him close to Boulogne (and on one occasion, in 1840, into the city itself), the memory was so painful that he never visited his father's grave. A funeral march (A10, composed two days after his father's death) is believed to be the young Liszt's musical tribute to his father.

It was Liszt's sad duty to write to his mother and inform her of his father's death. During the tours Anna Liszt had stayed with a sister in Graz; she was reunited with her famous son in Paris after a separation of three years. Adam left his family in straitened circumstances and the 16-year-old Liszt assumed the responsibility of being the sole breadwinner. He was obliged to sell his Erard grand piano to pay off some debts, and to seek a regular income as a fashionable teacher of the sons and daughters of the French aristocracy. At first he and his mother rented an apartment at 38 rue Coquenard, and then at 7 rue de Montholon in the district of Montmartre.

Among his pupils was the countess Caroline de Saint-Cricq, the 17-year-old-daughter of the Minister of Commerce in the government of Charles X. The couple fell in love, and although the relationship was innocent, the count banned Liszt ('a mere musician') from the house after discovering the pair prolonging a music lesson far into the night. Shortly afterwards Caroline was married to a wealthy landowner with estates near Pau in southern France, and left Paris. As a result of the rejection, which followed so hard on the death of his father, Liszt suffered a nervous breakdown. His absence from the concert platform during the 1827–8 season led to rumours of his death, and Le corsaire published a false obituary notice of him (23 October 1828). On the day of his 'demise', however, Liszt was at home on the rue de Montholon quietly celebrating his 17th birthday. It is clear, nevertheless, that he was in poor health. The journal Observateur des Beaux-Arts openly declared that Liszt's illness was directly connected to the death of his father. Wilhelm von Lenz visited him shortly afterwards, and described Liszt as 'a pale and haggard young man'. Anna Liszt told von Lenz that Liszt 'busied himself no more with music' and was almost always at church. Seized again with religious mania, Liszt often prostrated himself on the flagstones of St-Vincent-de-Paul and was deterred from entering a seminary only by the joint pleadings of his mother and his father confessor, Abbé Bardin. It was the July Revolution of 1830 that roused him from his lethargy. Hearing the sound of gunfire, he rushed outside and witnessed hand-to-hand fighting in the streets. He joined the crowds in shouting support for General Lafayette, who had taken up the people's cause. When Anna Liszt later reflected on these turbulent times, she observed: 'The cannons cured him!' Liszt began to sketch out a 'Revolutionary Symphony' whose manuscript bears the dates '27, 28, 29 juillet – Paris', the 'Three Glorious Days'. Only the first movement was finished; it later became the Symphonic Poem Héroïde funèbre, in which form it was associated with the revolutionary wars of 1848–9.

Liszt became a voracious reader (he was by now fluent in French, henceforth his language of preference) and absorbed the writings of Sainte-Beuve, Hugo and Balzac. He also fell under the spell of the Saint-Simonians, whose avowed aim of combining socialism with the teachings of Christ made a deep appeal to him. For a time Liszt attended the sect's clandestine revivalist meetings, conducted by its charismatic leader Father Enfantin, during which he would sometimes improvise on the piano for the congregation. He never became a Saint-Simonian, however, despite some later misleading comments by Heine. After the sect's headquarters at 6 rue Monsigny were raided by the police, its leaders gaoled or forced into exile, Liszt found a more lasting outlet for his idealism in the revolutionary teachings of Abbé Felicité de Lamennais. Liszt described Lamennais as a 'saint', and visited him at his home at La Chênaie, in Brittany (1834). Lamennais had already broken with the Catholic Church as a result of the publication of his magnum opus Paroles d'un croyant, which Pope Gregory XVI had attacked in his encyclical Singulari nos (July 1834). For several weeks Liszt sat at the feet of his mentor at La Chênaie, during which time Lamennais came to regard Liszt as 'one of the most beautiful and noble souls that I have met on this earth'. It was at La Chênaie that Liszt composed his Apparitions for piano. Later he dedicated to Lamennais his socialistic march Lyon, inspired by the revolt of the silkworkers of that city. It bears the motto 'To live working, or to die fighting'.

5. Contacts with Parisian society. Liszt became acquainted with a number of musical contemporaries at this time, including Berlioz, Chopin, Alkan, Hiller and others. His first encounter with Berlioz took place a few months after the July Revolution. He attended the first performance of Berlioz's Symphonie fantastique in the company of the composer (5 December 1830), and shortly afterwards produced his piano transcription of the unpublished score. (Liszt's transcription was published in 1834, while Berlioz's orchestral score did not appear until 1845; Schumann's famous review of the work in the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik was based on Liszt's piano score.) A warm friendship developed between the pair which lasted for more than 20 years before entering a long decline. While Berlioz speaks of Liszt with affection in his Mémoires, and regarded him as unrivalled as a pianist, he was more cautious of his compositions; with the passing years his lukewarm attitude to Liszt's orchestral works, together with the latter's growing support of Wagner, caused the friendship to languish.

Another meeting was with Chopin, who arrived in Paris as a refugee from Warsaw in the autumn of 1831. Liszt attended Chopin's début at the Salle Pleyel on 26 February 1832, and even appeared on the same platform as Chopin on 3 April and 15 December. Chopin cemented these early connections by dedicating his set of 12 Etudes op.10 to Liszt. Nevertheless, the idea of a great friendship between Liszt and Chopin is unsubstantiated. Chopin soon came to dislike what he perceived to be Liszt's theatricality and his striving after effect. After 1835 Liszt lived mainly abroad and the two composers barely saw one another. Since Chopin died in 1849, he never lived to appreciate the more mature Liszt of later years.

Paganini made his Paris début in March 1831, but Liszt was on a prolonged visit to Switzerland and did not hear him until his next appearance there in April 1832. In a famous letter to his pupil Pierre-Etienne Wolff, Liszt recorded some of his impressions: 'What a man, what a violin, what an artist! Heavens! What sufferings, what misery, what tortures in those four strings!' (Briefe, C1893–1905, i, 6–8). The letter is especially interesting because of the music examples Liszt includes to indicate those violinistic devices which had particularly caught his ear. The musical influence of Paganini cannot be overstated. One immediate outcome was the fantasy on La clochette (1833), the theme of which was used by Paganini in the finale of his B minor Concerto, and which bristles with difficulties. The six Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini followed (1838–40), based on the Italian master's formidable caprices for solo violin, and containing pianistic textures of terrifying complexity.

6. Marie d'Agoult. In the Paris of the 1830s the salon was the centre of intellectual and artistic life. Here mingled all the radical ideas of post-Revolutionary France. The fashionable hostesses of the stately homes of the Faubourgs St-Germain and St-Honoré vied with one another to entertain the most interesting personalities. Among the writers were Sainte-Beuve, Hugo, Balzac and George Sand; the painters included Delacroix, Devéria and Ary Scheffer. Soon this volatile mixture was enriched by a flood of refugees from Warsaw, including Chopin and the Polish nationalist poet Mickiewicz. Merely to call the roll is to name many of the leaders of the Romantic movement itself. This was the milieu in which the young Liszt developed many of his abiding notions about music and its relationship with the other arts.

Towards the end of 1832 Liszt was introduced to Countess Marie d'Agoult, the woman who was to become his lover, bear him three children and share his life for the next 12 years. Marie was 28; Liszt was 22. She was unhappily married to an older husband by whom she already had two daughters, Louise and Claire. Her marriage to Count Charles d'Agoult, a French cavalry officer, had taken place on 27 May 1827, before a glittering assembly in the fashionable Church of the Assumption, and the marriage contract had been witnessed by Charles X. Five years later the union was dead in all but name, and when Liszt met her Marie was living an independent life. Born Marie-Catherine-Sophie de Flavigny, she was descended from the powerful Bethmann family of Frankfurt, which had built up a fortune through its banking enterprises. There is no evidence that the Bethmanns were Jewish, despite their name and much debate on the matter. It was Bethmann money that paid for Marie's dowry and helped her to buy her palatial home, the Château de Croissy, which lay 9 km outside Paris.

2. 'Liszt at the Piano': painting by Josef Franz Danhauser, 1840 (Neue Nationalgalerie, Berlin); (from left to right) Alexandre Dumas, Victor Hugo, George Sand, Paganini, Rossini, Liszt and the Countess Marie d'Agoult

At first Liszt and Marie took pains to keep their liaison secret. Throughout 1833 and 1834 they arranged various trysts – sometimes at his cramped bachelor apartment in Paris (jocularly referred to by them as the 'Ratzenloch' – or rat-hole), and sometimes at Croissy. The fact that they were apart for much of this time generated a clandestine correspondence (first published in 1933–4) which provides clear evidence of the turbulent nature of the relationship. Whether under normal circumstances Marie would ever have abandoned hearth and home for Liszt is a matter of debate. In December 1834, however, Marie's six-year-old daughter Louise died, and that precipitated a crisis. Marie became suicidal and threatened to drown herself. She travelled to Paris, was reunited with Liszt, and became his lover in the full physical sense. That must have been no later than March 1835; their first daughter, Blandine-Rachel, was born in December of that year.

7. Years of pilgrimage, 1835–9. In order to escape the scandal Liszt and Marie eloped to Switzerland. Liszt was troubled by the possible consequences to his own life in leaving Paris with a mistress who was already a wife and a mother, and he sought counsel from Abbé de Lamennais, who advised against it and travelled to Croissy in a fruitless attempt to dissuade Marie from abandoning her family. The couple went first to Basle and thence to Geneva where they rented a house at 1 rue Tabazan. There was already an active artistic and intellectual élite in the city, and Liszt soon found himself in the middle of a circle which included the politician James Fazy, the botanist Pyrame de Candolle and the economist Simonde de Sismondi. Liszt's arrival in the city coincided with the opening of the newly founded Geneva Conservatoire and Liszt accepted an invitation from its founding president François Bartholini to head its piano faculty. He was assisted by two of his students, Pierre-Etienne Wolff and his colourful young pupil Hermann ('Puzzi') Cohen who had pursued him from Paris in order to continue his lessons with Liszt. During Liszt's brief tenure at the Geneva Conservatoire he was invited to write a piano method. Despite many rumours to the contrary, he never produced such a work. The only pedagogical works he ever completed were the volumes of Technische Studien (1868–73) published after his death, with which the non-existent method is sometimes confused.

Throughout the spring and summer of 1835 Liszt and Marie d'Agoult made various incursions into the Swiss countryside; they visited Lake Wallenstadt, William Tell's Chapel and (in the company of George Sand) the Chamonix Valley. Liszt's impressions of the sights and sounds of Switzerland – its pastures, storms and mountain springs – were captured in the pieces of his Album d'un voyageur, later reworked as the 'Swiss' volume of the Années de pèlerinage. Such compositions as Chapelle de Guillaume Tell and Vallée d'Obermann betray their time and place, and are in a sense autobiographical.

On 18 December 1835, Marie d'Agoult gave birth to Blandine-Rachel at Geneva. Liszt openly claimed paternity on the birth certificate, where he is described as 'a professor of music ... who freely acknowledged that he is the father of the child'; the identity of Marie d'Agoult was camouflaged as Catherine-Adélaïde Méran, 'a lady of property ... born in Paris'. Such a deception had less to do with protecting the identity of Countess d'Agoult than with protecting her husband the Count from future liability. Under French law, any child born to Marie would have been regarded as the offspring of her husband. 'Liszt and I had but one thought: to avoid this monstrosity' (Vier, H1955–63, i, 393–4). (Two other children were born of the union and Liszt again claimed paternity: Cosima (24 December 1837) and Daniel (9 May 1839). All three children achieved distinction. Blandine married Emile Ollivier, a prominent lawyer who became Prime Minister of France under the government of Napoleon III; Cosima became the wife, first of Hans von Bülow and then of Richard Wagner, directing the Bayreuth festivals after Wagner's death; Daniel died when he was only 20, but he had already won the national prize of France for classical studies in Latin and Greek while still in his adolescence.)

In the spring of 1837 Liszt's curiosity had been aroused by reports from Paris of the sensational piano playing of Sigismond Thalberg; he returned to the city in order to defend his crown. The famous 'ivory duel' between the two pianists took place in the home of the exiled Italian Princess Cristina Belgiojoso on 31 March 1837. Arranged as a charity concert for expatriate Italians, the affair attracted wide publicity. Thalberg played his fantasy on Rossini's Mosè in Egitto and Liszt followed with his fantasy on Pacini's Niobe. It is often said that Thalberg suffered a defeat as a result of the comparison, but the facts speak otherwise. Jules Janin wrote a long and judicious account of the affair for the Journal des débats (3 April) which concluded: 'Two victors and no vanquished; it is fitting to say with the poet "Et ad huc sub judice lis est"'. Afterwards, when invited to express her own opinion, Princess Belgiojoso uttered a diplomatic aphorism which has become enshrined in the literature: 'Thalberg is the first pianist in the world – Liszt is unique'. Liszt, in brief, could not be compared.

The friendship with George Sand led to an invitation to Liszt and Mme d'Agoult to join her at her country château in Nohant. Liszt spent the next three months there in the company of Sand and her friends (including the poet Claude de Mallefille, the actor Pierre Bocage and Sand's current lover Michel de Bourges). Sand had installed an Erard grand piano in Liszt's room. It was at Nohant that Liszt began his long series of transcriptions of the Schubert songs, somewhat earlier than is generally supposed, and by July 1837 he had already completed seven of them.

Liszt and Marie d'Agoult resumed their 'years of pilgrimage', wending their way from Nohant to Italy; by August they had reached Lake Maggiore. After exploring the eastern shores of Lake Como they lingered at Bellagio, there to await the birth of their second daughter, Cosima. Liszt made frequent trips to nearby Milan where he encountered the music publisher Giovanni Ricordi. In Liszt's own words he walked into Ricordi's music shop, sat down at the piano and began to improvise, whereupon Ricordi came rushing out of his office exclaiming: 'This must be Liszt or the Devil!' (Gesammelte Schriften, ii, 168). The music publisher lent Liszt his villa in the Branzia and his box at La Scala, and placed at his disposal a library of 1500 scores. One artistic result of the encounter was his piano transcriptions of Rossini's Les soirées musicales, which Liszt featured in his local recitals to the delight of the Milanese.

In the spring of 1838, while he was in Venice, Liszt read in the newspapers of the flood disaster in Pest. The Danube had overflowed its banks, inundating large areas of Hungarian lowlands, destroying homes and crops, and creating famine. This national crisis proved to be a turning-point in his life. Liszt travelled to Vienna in April 1838 and gave ten recitals for the victims of the floods; six had been planned but four more were given by popular demand. These recitals marked his official return to the concert platform and attracted wide attention. His playing had undergone a radical transformation during his years of travelling, and was received with universal acclaim. Clara Wieck (who later had serious reservations about Liszt's playing) attended these concerts and wrote: 'He can be compared to no other player ... he arouses fright and astonishment. He is an original ... he is absorbed by the piano' (B. Litzmann: Clara Schumann: ein Künstlerleben, i, Leipzig, 1902, p.199). Carl Czerny was also in attendance and remarked that the playing of his most famous pupil had emerged from the monstrous complexities that had dogged it in earlier years and was now characterized by clarity and wonderful brilliance. Clara Wieck and Czerny became the dedicatees of Liszt's most demanding pieces to date: the Six Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini were inscribed to Clara and the 12 Grandes études (A40) to Czerny. Through his Vienna concerts Liszt raised the sum of 24,000 gulden, the largest donation to be sent to Hungary from a private source.

3. Franz Liszt in Hungarian costume: watercolour by Josef Kriehuber, 1838

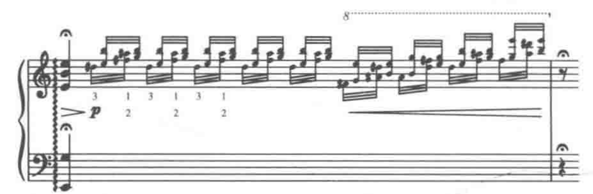
Liszt joined Marie d'Agoult in Rome to await the birth of their third child, Daniel. The couple then moved to Lucca to escape Rome's summer heat, and thence to the small fishing village of San Rossore. Inspired by Italian art and literature, Liszt had already begun work on the 'Italian' volume of his Années de pèlerinage, and produced the first versions of the three Sonetti del Petrarca, Il penseroso (after Michelangelo's celebrated statue), Sposalizio (after Raphael's painting, Lo sposalizio della vergine) and above all the last work of the collection, entitled Après une lecture du Dante and commonly known as the 'Dante' Sonata. This period marked the end of his relationship with Mme d'Agoult, fuelled as it was by dashed hopes and fractured feelings, a situation which their joint diary and their personal correspondence makes plain. As Liszt was pondering his future, he heard of the failure of the Beethoven Memorial Committee in Bonn to raise money for a statue to the composer at the place of his birth. Rather than see the scheme collapse, he offered to raise the funds himself, through concerts. The monument that stands in Bonn today (executed by Ernst-Julius Hähnel and unveiled in August 1845, the 75th year of Beethoven's birth) was made possible largely through Liszt's personal generosity.

4. Franz Liszt: daguerreotype, c1841



8. THE GLANZZEIT, 1839–47. During the years 1839 to 1847 Liszt unfolded a virtuoso career unmatched in the history of performance. He is still the model followed by pianists today. He was the first to play entire programmes from memory; the first to play the full range of the keyboard repertory (as it then existed) from Bach to Chopin; the first consistently to place the piano at right-angles to the stage, so that its open lid reflected the sound across the auditorium; the first to tour Europe from the Pyrenees to the Urals. Even the term 'recital' was his. He introduced it on 9 June 1840 at a concert in London at the Hanover Square Rooms. It was Liszt's way of announcing that his career was taking a new direction; henceforth he would present concerts without the benefit of assisting artists. As early as May 1839 he had given some solo concerts in Italy (not yet called 'recitals') and had jocularly observed that he was affecting the style of Louis XIV: 'Le concert, c'est moi!' he exclaimed (Briefe, C1893–1905, i, 25). His recitals have never been fully chronicled, but he gave well over 1000 during these fleeting years. He played in Spain, Portugal, France, Germany, Austria, Britain, Ireland, Romania, Turkey and Russia. And he undertook all this before the age of the railway, when travel was difficult and had to be accomplished mostly by post-chaise over rough terrain, often at night.

The Glanzzeit began with six Beethoven Memorial Concerts in Vienna, between 18 November and 4 December 1839. At the first concert, Liszt gave the première performance of his new transcription of Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony in the presence of the Dowager Empress and her retinue. The Viennese press spoke truer than it knew when it hailed Liszt as 'Protector of Beethoven'. Liszt's lifelong championship of the composer was intensified, and as the tours unfolded he introduced his audiences to works such as the Hammerklavier Sonata and the Diabelli Variations, which were still generally unknown.

From Vienna, Liszt made his way to Hungary and arrived in Pest in November 1839. It was his first return to his native land since his childhood and he was given the sort of reception normally reserved for potentates. He was by now the best-known living Hungarian, far better known abroad than the country's leading politicians. Hungary was locked in a struggle for independence from Austria, and found in Liszt a national hero. Everywhere he went he was greeted with the phrase 'Eljen! Liszt Ferenc' (Hail! Franz Liszt). He made patriotic gestures such as donning national costume and playing in public his arrangement of the Rákóczy March – a melody which was at that time banned by the Austrian authorities. On 4 January 1840 Liszt was presented with a ceremonial sword of honour on behalf of a grateful nation in a moving ceremony at the National Theatre. His speech of thanks offers telling proof of his support of Hungary's political aspirations.

Liszt renewed his contact with gypsy music and Hungarian folk music at this time. He visited a gypsy encampment and wrote a vivid description of what he observed (Gesammelte Schriften, vi, 135–7); he also heard a number of the best gypsy bands, and was inspired to produce a series of pieces called Magyar dallok ('Hungarian National Melodies'). These compositions were later revised and published under the generic title 'Hungarian

Ex.2 Hungarian Rhapsody no.10

Rhapsodies' (1851–3). They contain colourful evocations of gypsy bands, including the cimbalom-like effects in the Tenth Rhapsody (ex.2). The 'gypsy scale' is also in evidence, with its mournful augmented 2nds, as in the first part of the 13th Rhapsody (ex.3). Liszt has been maligned for mistaking some of the music played by gypsies (containing popular melodies of the day) for genuine Hungarian folksongs; his book Des bohémiens (1859) further clouded the issue, made him some prominent enemies in his homeland and caused the rhapsodies themselves to fall into disrepute. In 1840 there was general confusion even within Hungary itself as to what constituted gypsy as opposed to Hungarian music. Modern scholarship has revealed that Liszt did indeed incorporate genuine Magyar folk melodies into his rhapsodies, albeit ones he heard filtered through gypsy improvisations.

Ex.3 Hungarian Rhapsody no.13

In Leipzig Liszt got to know Robert Schumann, who wrote some important reviews of his Gewandhaus concerts (given in March 1840) for the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik (1840, no.12, pp.118–20). Schumann described Liszt's performance of Weber's Concert-stück as 'extraordinary', but could find only qualified praise for the Finale of the Pastoral Symphony, which he called 'a wilful choice' because the original was very well known to the Gewandhaus audience. 'We had at least seen the lion shake his mane', Schumann concluded.

A climax of sorts was reached in Berlin in 1841. After a sensational series of concerts in the Singakademie (attended by Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer and Spontini, as well as the entire Prussian royal family), Liszt was driven to the Brandenburg Gate in a coach drawn by a team of white horses, with crowds lining the Unter den Linden bidding him farewell. 'Not like a king, but as a king', wrote Rellstab in one of the best accounts we have of this visit. Such images of the profligate Liszt still haunt the literature and colour the way we view his life. The behaviour of his audiences has been compared to the mass hysteria associated with revivalist meetings or 20th-century rock stars, and prompted Heine to identify the phenomenon as 'Lisztomania'. Female admirers sought souvenirs in the form of hair clippings, cigar stubs and the dregs from his coffee cups. There is a rich supply of anecdotes from those years, part of that stock-in-trade material which his popular biographers have not been slow to use. Generally overlooked in the hullabaloo surrounding the Berlin concerts is a remarkable musical achievement: during his ten-week sojourn in the Prussian capital Liszt gave 21 concerts and played 80 works, 50 of them from memory. Few modern pianists could match that feat.

5. Piano recital by Liszt: coloured frontispiece from Adolf Brennglas, 'Berlin, wie es ist – und trinkt' (Berlin, 1842)

One of the best documented journeys was the long and arduous tour of the British Isles in 1840–41. It was arranged by the impresario and conductor Louis Lavenu, who assembled a small troupe of four or five musicians including the Welsh singer John Orlando Parry, whose diaries give a colourful account of those times. Liszt was the star attraction, and he was tempted by Lavenu's invitation because he needed the money to cover the rising expenditures of his family in Paris. The party appeared in such places as Oxford, Chichester and Exeter in the south, and Manchester, Halifax, Preston, Rochdale and Darlington in the north. In November 1840 Lavenu took his group across the Irish Sea where they performed in Dublin, Cork and the smaller market towns of southern Ireland. The tour, which later encompassed Scotland, was dogged by misfortune, attracted small audiences and confronted out-of-tune pianos and other mishaps, all faithfully reported in Parry's diaries. Lavenu lost more than £1000 on the venture (a small fortune in those days) and Liszt's fees remained unpaid. 45 years elapsed before Liszt returned to Great Britain.

While England may have failed to rally to the 'King of Pianists', the rest of Europe responded with enthusiasm. Hans Christian Andersen attended one of the Hamburg recitals in 1842, and left a graphic pen-portrait of the pianist:

> As Liszt sat before the piano, the first impression of his personality was derived from the appearance of strong passions in his wan face, so that he seemed to me a demon nailed fast to the instrument whence the tones streamed forth – they came from his blood, from his thoughts; he was a demon who would liberate his soul from thraldom; he was on the rack. His blood flowed and his nerves trembled; but as he continued to play, so the demon vanished. I saw that pale face assume a nobler and brighter expression; the divine soul shone from his eyes, from every feature; he became as beauteous as only spirit and enthusiasm can make their worshippers.

Pursuit of ecstasy and its transmission to the public were primary goals, and they turned Liszt into the quintessential romantic.

Liszt acquired many honours and decorations during these years, and he was willing to wear them on stage. For this he was regularly lampooned by the press, especially in France (fig.6). However, Liszt's display of these decorations had less to do with vanity than with a desire to raise the status of musicians generally. In Madrid he received the Order of Carlos II from Queen Isabel. In Turkey the Sultan, Abdul-Medjid Khan, presented him with the Order of Nichan-Iftikar. In Belgium the king bestowed on him the Order of the Lion of Belgium. In Moscow he was introduced to Tsar Nicholas I, who did not give him a decoration at all but presented him instead with a pair of performing bears. Perhaps this symbol of a

6. 'Fantaisie brillante sur Liszt': engraving by Yves and Barret from 'La vie parisienne' (3 April 1886)

circus reflected Nicholas's true opinion of Liszt. The Tsar, having made a noisy entrance at one of Liszt's concerts, had begun to talk loudly during the playing; whereupon Liszt stopped. When Nicholas inquired the cause, Liszt bowed stiffly and said: 'Music herself should be silent when Nicholas speaks'. It was, as Sacheverell Sitwell pointed out, the first time that 'music herself' had answered back.

Even as he enjoyed his greatest triumphs as a virtuoso, Liszt's troubled relationship with Marie d'Agoult and the uncertain future of their three children were casting shadows over his private life. Mme d'Agoult had returned to Paris in November 1839 to seek a reconciliation with her estranged family; while the Flavignys were ready to embrace her, they could not embrace her children by Liszt. The three infants were housed with their grandmother, Anna Liszt, who gave them much love and affection and acted in every respect as their mother. Liszt visited his children whenever he was in Paris, and held himself financially responsible for them, paying for their upkeep and education. In 1844, the rupture with Marie d'Agoult became permanent as a result of his widely publicized dalliance with the dancer Lola Montez, and they did not see each other again for 16 years. Marie d'Agoult assuaged her bruised feelings by adopting the pen name 'Daniel Stern' and writing her roman à clef, Nélida, in which Liszt is depicted as an impotent painter, Guermann Regnier, with herself as the wronged heroine. Liszt always refused to recognize himself in this novel, although the character-assassination was damaging.

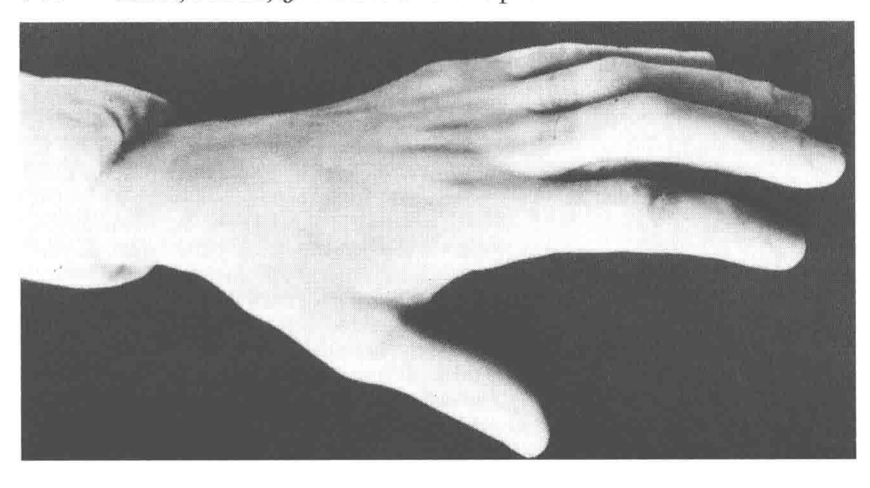
The most arduous tour of the Glanzzeit was the one that took him through the Danube principalities and Ukraine, during an 18-month period in 1846–7. Starting in Vienna, in March 1846, he wandered through Prague, Pest, Temesvár and Arad (Transylvania), gradually moving east to Bucharest and Iaşi, in Moldavia. By February 1847 he had reached Kiev; from there he progressed to Odessa, sailed across the Black Sea and arrived at Constantinople where he played in the Tchiragan Palace before the Sultan in June 1847. For these concerts Erard had sent over one of his best grand pianos which Liszt described as 'a magnificent instrument'. By July he was back in Ukraine and gave ten concerts in Odessa. The very last recital he gave for money took place in Elisavetgrad, in September. He was still only 35 years old. Had Liszt died at that moment, the title of the first modern pianist could not have been withheld from him.

9. Liszt and the piano. During the 1830s and 40s Liszt made an unprecedented advance in piano technique, introducing a range of new technical and expressive possibilities. This breakthrough, coupled with the related evolution in the instrument itself, its greater strength, its bigger sound and wider dynamic range, allowed a richer variety of pianistic textures. The instrument could encompass symphonic and vocal works, and imitate a wealth of colouristic and timbral effects. Modern piano technique owes much to Liszt's pioneering developments during these years. Pianists still turn to his music for its technical resources. When Busoni began to study the piano afresh at the age of 30, in order to remedy what he considered to be defects in his own playing, Liszt's music was his chief guide. Out of the laws he found there Busoni rebuilt his technique. 'Gratitude and admiration', he wrote, 'made Liszt at that time my master and my friend'.

The works most representative of Liszt's virtuoso years are the six 'Paganini' Studies and the 12 'Transcendental' Studies. The sets were published with the titles Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini and Grandes études respectively, before they were revised in 1851 with their final titles of Grandes études de Paganini and Etudes d'exécution transcendante. In their earlier versions these works remain among the most daunting challenges in the piano literature, and they offer telling proof of Liszt's pre-eminence among the pianists of his time.

The 'Paganini' Studies, with the exception of La campanella, are based on the caprices for solo violin, and each study concentrates on a particular technical or musical device, equivalent to those in the original violin works:



1. G minor, tremolando (based on Paganini's Caprice no.6, with introduction and coda based on Caprice no.5); 2. E♭ major, scales and octaves (Caprice no.17); 3. G♯ minor, leaps and rapid note reiteration (La campanella); 4. E major, arpeggios and crossing hands (Caprice no.1); 5. E major, echo effects and glissandos (Caprice no.9); 6. A minor, theme and variations (Caprice no.24)

The 12 'Transcendental' Studies A173 are closely related to the 'Paganini' Studies in style and virtuosity. These pieces exist in three versions (Mazeppa has an additional version dating from 1840 as well as an orchestral version as a symphonic poem), since the 12 Grandes études A40 are elaborate reworkings (with the exception of no.7, later called Eroica) of the juvenile Etude A8 (1827). It was not until the final version that Liszt added the poetic titles. The tonal plan of these 12 studies follows that of the original 1826 set. Liszt unfolds a descending circle of 5ths, with each alternate study in the relative minor of its predecessor. Since 24 studies were announced for the 1838 publication, we infer that Liszt originally intended to continue the key scheme and complete the circle. Robert Schumann reviewed this 1838 version for the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, and aptly described them as 'Studies in storm and dread ... fit for ten or 12 players in the world'.

The 1851 revisions of both sets of studies were designed to allow the pieces to 'speak' more effectively. Liszt smoothed out some of the more intractable difficulties and clarified the textures, giving the pieces a leaner, more brilliant sound. The revisions made these works more widely accessible and accommodated the changing requirements of the modern piano, with its heavier action. Nevertheless, even with the more complicated textures ironed out, these works make enormous demands on the pianist.

A comparison between the later versions of each study and the corresponding juvenile model reveals the immense strides that Liszt made as a pianist over 25 years (ex.4). The original 1826 (untitled) version of Wilde Jagd was unremarkable, influenced as it was by Cramer and Czerny. Yet it contains the seeds of one of the most difficult concert studies ever written for the piano.

Liszt's hands were long and narrow (fig.7), and lack of webbing between the fingers allowed him to take wide stretches with comparative ease. Because his fingertips were blunted rather than tapered, they gave maximum traction across the surface of the keyboard. Another physical advantage for Liszt was that his fourth fingers were unusually flexible, and this made it easier for him to play shimmering textures with several things going on inside the same hand simultaneously. His keyboard textures often assume that the player can stretch a 10th without difficulty (ex.5). Liszt's fingerings are of absorbing interest. They arise naturally from the keyboard and from the anatomy of the human hand. The layout of the double-3rds scale in the Sixth 'Paganini' Study seems perverse, until we consider the alternatives. Liszt forms the hand into a two-pronged fork (second and fourth fingers only), an unusual shape which permits him to move across the keyboard at high velocity (ex.6).

7. Cast of Liszt's left hand (Magyar Nemzeti Múzeum, Budapest)

Ex.5 Divertissement a l'hongroise

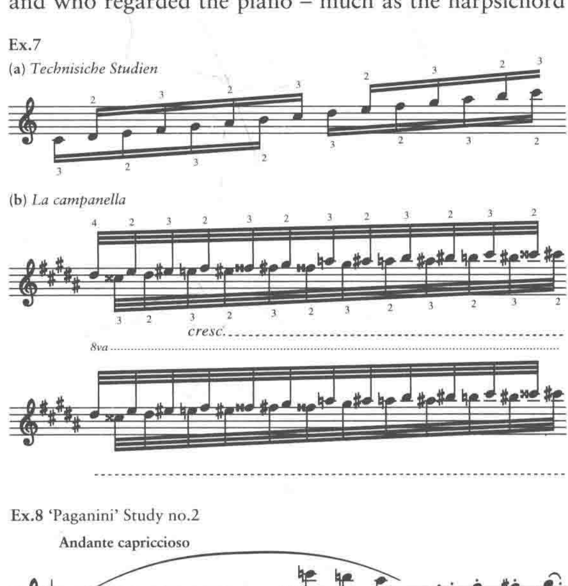
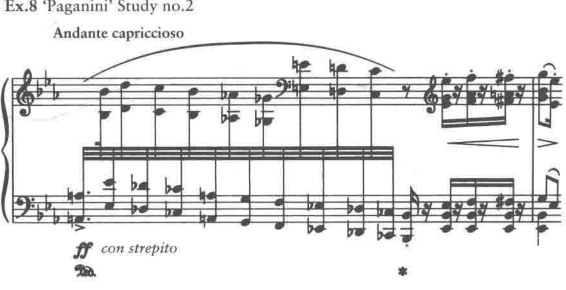
Ex.6 'Paganini' Study no.6



'Interlocking scales' show Liszt at his inventive best. One of the basic models may be found in the first volume of Technische Studien; it finds a home in such shining passages as found in La campanella (ex.7). The challenge turns out to be mental rather than physical. Rather than dividing his resources between two hands, each with five digits, Liszt in effect sees a single interlocked hand of ten digits.

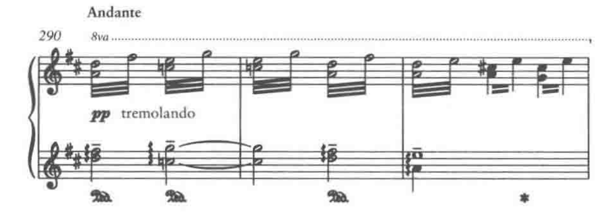


One of Liszt's most sensational effects still bears his name: 'Liszt octaves'. They are played with alternating hands, thumbs overlapping, creating the illusion of regular double octaves at unattainable speeds. Difficult as they sound, such passages are highly economical. The player achieves double the power with half the output. A well-known example occurs in the Second 'Paganini' Study, in E♭ major (ex.8).

The more dramatic devices in Liszt's music required larger halls for their full effect. It was Liszt who took the piano out of the salon and placed it in the modern concert hall. When, in early 1837, he gave a recital before 3000 people in Milan, at La Scala, he was democratizing the instrument. Nevertheless, in order to achieve this end he had to overcome much prejudice. There were many musicians whose thinking was rooted in the 18th century, and who regarded the piano – much as the harpsichord had been regarded before it – as a chamber instrument to be played before a small circle of connoisseurs. Chopin, Hummel and Moscheles had all made their reputations in this way. When Chopin played in the salons of Paris before a select audience drawn from high society, he gave his incomparable performances on the silvery toned Pleyel, with its light action. Liszt had often played the Pleyel and found it wanting: he disparagingly called it 'a pianino'. The seven-octave Erard, with its heavier action and larger sound, was more suited to his pianistic style. This was the instrument that he preferred during his tours of the 1830s and 40s. Even so, it could not always withstand the onslaught of his more powerful pieces, and Liszt occasionally broke a string or snapped a hammer. Not until the firms of Steinway and Bechstein produced their reinforced instruments in the 1850s did Liszt's repertory of the 1840s come into its own.

Ex.7

Ex.8 'Paganini' Study no.2



Ex.9 Tarantella

In Erard's double-escapement action Liszt perceived some unexplored possibilities. His music abounds in streams of rapid note reiterations which, when properly executed, delude the ear into believing that the piano has been turned into a sustaining instrument. One of the finest examples occurs in the Tarantella from Venezia e Napoli, a supplement to the Italian Années de pèlerinage (ex.9). Into a similar category falls the tremolando, a dangerous device in the wrong hands. Some of his later compositions (Les jeux d'eaux à la Villa d'Este, for example, or his arrangement of Isolde's 'Liebestod' from Tristan) rely heavily on the effect and can be ruined in performance. Liszt advised that the tremolando be played as rapidly as possible, with the keys already halfway depressed and brought to life by the slightest trembling of the hand. A notorious example occurs towards the end of the 'Dante' Sonata (ex.10).

Ex.10 'Dante' Sonata

Leaps were a particular speciality. Liszt himself enjoyed taking risks and he sometimes asks the pianist to perform some difficult feats. The first version of Au bord d'une source (1840) contains an invitation to disaster, which is generally declined in favour of the revision of 1855 (ex.11). The glissando was another effect with which Liszt dazzled his audience. The Tenth Hungarian Rhapsody, Les patineurs, and Totentanz all contain extended glissandos of an unprecedented range and power (ex.12). In a letter to Olga von Meyendorff, incidentally, Liszt advised her to use 'only the nail, either of your thumb or of your index or third finger, without even the tiniest area of flesh' (his italics; Waters and Tyler, C1979, p.390).

Ex.11 Au bord d'une source

(a) 1st version (1840)

(b) 2nd version (1855)

Ex.12 Hungarian Rhapsody no.10

In the 1830s Liszt developed some unconventional marks of expression. The impulse to do so arose from a youthful desire to control every aspect of interpretation, especially tempo rubato.

The 1838 version of the Transcendental Studies offers an abundance of such devices. In later years, when he revised much of his early output, Liszt dropped them, presumably because he felt that such matters are best left to each individual player. Their chief interest today is that they tell us how Liszt himself might have interpreted his own music.

10. Arrangements. Apart from his many original studies and character-pieces, Liszt made many keyboard arrangements. They fall broadly into two categories: paraphrases and transcriptions. These terms were coined by Liszt himself (he lay claim to them, together with the term 'Réminiscence', in his annotated copy of Ramann's biography) and their meanings are distinct. In a paraphrase the arranger is free to vary the original and weave his own fantasy around it. A transcription, on the other hand, must be a faithful re-creation of the original. Liszt's paraphrases of operas by Mozart, Bellini, Donizetti and Verdi sometimes encapsulate an entire act in a 15-minute concert piece, juxtaposing and combining the themes en route. A well-known example occurs in his paraphrase of Bellini's Norma, whose coda combines two of the opera's main themes – 'Deh! non volerli' and 'Ite sul colle'.

Liszt's transcriptions, by contrast, are usually so literal that they have been called gramophone records of the 19th century. Comparison between Liszt's arrangements and those of his contemporaries demonstrates why Liszt's remain of lasting interest. For him there were no stock devices or standard piano textures. Liszt's inventiveness enabled him to create individual pianistic solutions to the variety of problems encountered in translating music from one medium to another. After examining Liszt's impeccable transfers of the Beethoven symphonies Tovey remarked that 'they prove conclusively that Liszt was by far the most wonderful interpreter of orchestral scores on the pianoforte the world is ever likely to see' (Essays in Musical Analysis, i, 193).

The arrangements had much to contend with after Liszt's death. Since the operas and symphonies they had enterprisingly pioneered were by then well known the crusading impulse for playing such transcriptions in public had diminished. By the turn of the 20th century there was also a growing insistence on 'authentic' performance, a new emphasis on scholarly objectivity embodied by the Urtext. Arrangements in general came to be regarded as second-class music. Between the two world wars few pianists ventured to play this repertory in public. Out of temper with the times, an inimitable treasury of piano music was ignored and forgotten. Brahms, no Liszt admirer, used to declare that in Liszt's operatic paraphrases lay 'the true classicism of the piano'. It is in this spirit that they have been revived in modern times, and the best of them – those on Norma, Rigoletto and Faust – are likely to remain in the repertory for as long as the operas after which they are modelled.

Ex.13 Réminiscences de Norma

11. To Weimar. While giving concerts in Kiev, in February 1847 Liszt had met Princess Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein, the second great love of his life. Carolyne was 28 years old, seven years younger than Liszt. She was already separated from her husband, Prince Nicholas von Sayn-Wittgenstein (an aide-de-camp to Tsar Nicholas I), to whom she had been forcibly joined in a marriage of convenience when she was only 17 years old. This had become a source of bitter contention in her life, and soon after meeting and falling in love with Liszt she began a 13-year fight to secure an annulment. Polish by birth, Carolyne had inherited from her father vast estates in Ukraine. This had turned her into a victim of circumstance: the Wittgensteins would have been happy to comply with her wish for an annulment, but not if it meant losing control over her fortune. There was one daughter of the union, Princess Marie. Carolyne's home was at Woronince, about 150 miles southwest of Kiev, where she held dominion over 30,000 serfs. Liszt stayed as her house guest at Woronince for three months, from the autumn of 1847 until January 1848. This was a crucial turning-point in both their lives, and in February 1848 the Princess followed Liszt to Weimar.

As early as 1842 the Grand Duke of Weimar had offered Liszt the position of Kapellmeister-in-Extraordinary, a job his itinerent life style had hitherto prevented him from taking up. The post held many attractions for him. He had long wanted more leisure to compose. Weimar was a small yet important cultural centre that could boast a century's unbroken association with the arts. It was the city of Goethe and Schiller. Moreover, it possessed an orchestra and an opera house, important resources that would help Liszt to realize his ambitions to conduct and compose large-scale orchestral works.

To students of the Romantic era it may seem strange that Liszt, one of its leading representatives, was willing to bind himself to a minor German court at a time when great musicians had long since broken away from this system of patronage and were proud to proclaim their independence. Liszt attached himself to Weimar and his courtly duties, because he and the Grand Duke, Carl Alexander, were bonded together by mutual admiration and common ideals. Liszt wanted to create 'an Athens of the North', as he put it, and he believed that Carl Alexander would dip into the royal purse to make this possible. Liszt ultimately left Weimar disillusioned, but the 13 years he spent there from 1848 to 1861 saw the creation of some of his best work.

Throughout most of the Weimar years Liszt and Princess Carolyne occupied a large house on the outskirts of the city, called the 'Altenburg'. In this house Liszt did most of his composing and teaching, his favourite location being the so-called 'Blue Room' overlooking the garden. He also taught his first generation of pupils in the Altenburg, including Hans von Bülow, Peter Cornelius, Karl Klindworth, Carl Tausig, and William Mason, who left one of the best memoirs of those years. The Altenburg soon became a Mecca for modern musicians. Berlioz,

8. Autograph MS from Liszt's 'Réminiscences de Boccanegra', composed December 1882 (GB-Lbl Eg.2735, f.25)

Wagner, Anton Rubinstein and the young Brahms were all guests at one time or another. The princess also put on large parties, to which were invited not only musicians but painters, sculptors, poets, dramatists, scientists and politicians. The English novelist George Eliot visited Weimar in 1854 and left a record of her encounters with Liszt and Carolyne (Fraser's Magazine, July 1855). Liszt may well have been the real-life model for 'Klesmer', the concert pianist in Eliot's novel Daniel Deronda, whose views on talent, genius, musicality and priest-like devotion to work are so akin to those of Liszt that it is safe to assume that Eliot took them almost verbatim from Liszt himself.

Liszt's biographers have tended to marginalize Carolyne. Ernest Newman dismissed her as 'a half-cracked blue-stocking' who constantly meddled in Liszt's affairs. Clearly this was not Liszt's view of her, and the archival evidence supports him (it includes nearly 2000 of her unpublished letters to him, mostly in Weimar). Carolyne was receptive to his ideas and sympathetic to his artistic aims and she provided Liszt with a comfortable home during his most productive years. It is doubtful that he could have achieved so much without Carolyne's support. In his will (1860), he wrote of Carolyne: 'All my joys come from her, and all my sorrows go to her to be appeased'.

Liszt's first achievement in Weimar was to increase the size of the orchestra and bring in better players. He also involved himself in the musicians' personal welfare, and improved both their salaries and their pensions. Within two years he had formed a permanent ensemble of 45 players, and for special events he could call on the outlying orchestras of Erfurt and Jena to create a combined orchestra of 100 players or more. The appointment of Joachim as his leader in 1850 was a major step forward. Unfortunately, the two musicians quarrelled over artistic matters, particularly over the value of the new music that Liszt was continually promoting, and the violinist joined the Brahms-Schumann circle in opposition to Liszt.

12. The War of the Romantics. The Weimar years were notable for the struggle between 'progressive' and 'conservative' forces in 19th-century music, with Wagner, Berlioz and Liszt on one side, and Brahms, Schumann and Mendelssohn on the other. The conservatives were associated with Leipzig (whose conservatory had at one time been directed by Mendelssohn, with Schumann briefly serving on its staff); the group was championed by the powerful Viennese critic Eduard Hanslick, and Liszt bore the brunt of many of his criticisms. Liszt, for his part, staged several great Wagner and Berlioz festivals in Weimar and attracted national attention to these composers. As a result Leipzig was closed for many years to Liszt and his music. When the Dante Symphony received its first performance there in 1857 it was greeted with catcalls and boos.

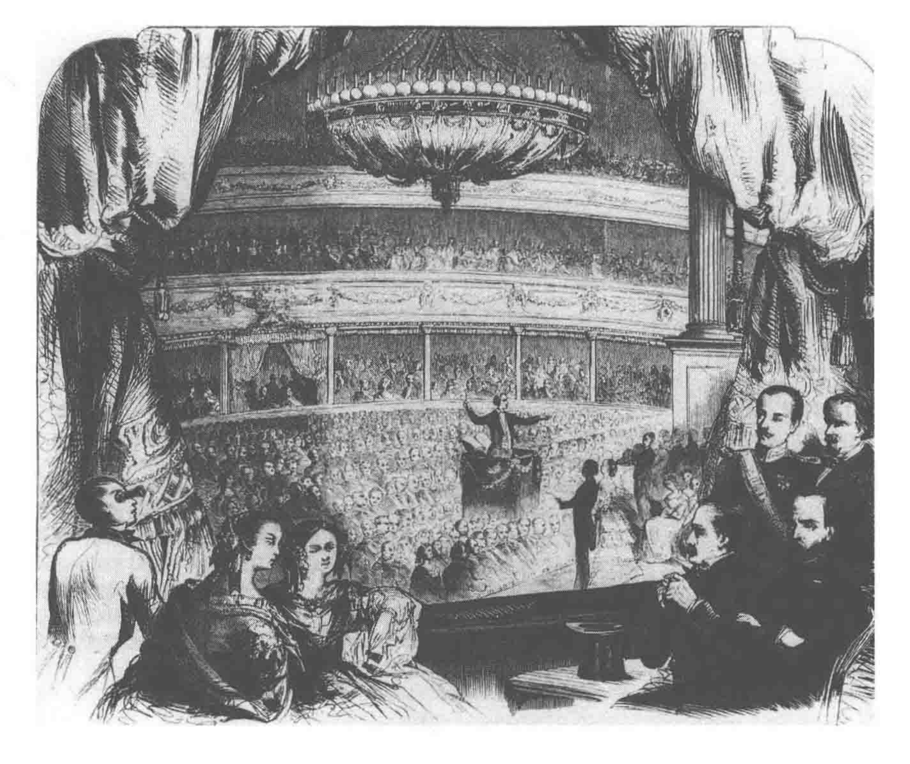
The 'War of the Romantics' generated much acrimony. The central problem agitating the world of music in the 1850s was the fate of sonata form. There were two chief alternatives open to composers: either to perpetuate the forms handed down by the Viennese classics; or to modify and develop them. Broadly speaking, Mendelssohn and Brahms chose the former; Liszt chose the latter. His work shows three distinct departures. First he evolved the single-movement cyclic sonata structure which rolled the separate movements of a sonata into one and had its final outcome in the symphonic poem – Liszt's alternative to the Classical symphony. Secondly, he developed the technique of thematic transformation whereby the contrasting ideas in a work spring from one or two basic musical thoughts. And thirdly, he believed that the language of music could be fertilized by the other arts – poetry and painting in particular – and so began a controversy which continued throughout the 19th century. There are still musicians who think that Liszt fostered the notion that music is a 'representational' art, that it can depict a poem, a flower, a picture, or a storm. What Liszt actually said (in the 'General Preface' to the symphonic poems) was rather different:

> It is obvious that things which can appear only objectively to perception can in no way furnish connecting-points to music; the poorest of apprentice landscape painters could give with a few chalk strokes a much more faithful picture than a musician operating with all the resources of the best orchestra. But if those same things are subjected to dreaming, to contemplation, to emotional uplift, have they not a peculiar kinship with music; and should not music be able to translate them into its mysterious language?

Hanslick's influential book Vom Musikalisch-Schönen (1854) challenged the notion that music could represent anything beyond itself – a powerful theoretical position that has retained a lot of support. When the first of Liszt's symphonic poems appeared in 1856, Hanslick disparaged them in a second edition of his book. Meanwhile, Franz Brendel had turned Robert Schumann's old magazine, the Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, into a mouthpiece for Liszt and the new music, a move that troubled Schumann's friends, and the 'war' spilled over into the columns of the European press. The crusading impulse in Liszt drove him to form the Neu-Weimar-Verein, an association of about 30 musicians (including Raff, Cornelius, Bülow and Klindworth) which held regular meetings in Weimar, promoted concerts of new music and generally sought to protect the interests of younger composers.

In 1859 the Verein was absorbed into the New German School, a term that was formally adopted at the national gathering of the Tonkünstler-Versammlung ('Congress of Musical Artists'), held that year in Leipzig. This move drew a powerful protest from Brahms and Joachim, among others, who circulated a 'Manifesto' across Germany, dissociating themselves from this organization, and canvassing for signatories willing to object to its principles as 'contrary to the innermost spirit of music, strongly to be deplored and condemned'. (The text was in fact written by Brahms, and was leaked to the offices of the Berliner Musik-Zeitung Echo, which published it prematurely, with only four signatories.)

The Wagner and Berlioz festivals were in keeping with Liszt's sense of mission for Weimar, and his enthusiasm for exploring and proselytizing new works. At the first Berlioz week (1852), Berlioz himself conducted his Roméo et Juliette and La damnation de Faust, while Liszt directed a performance of the revised version of the opera Benvenuto Cellini (which is dedicated to Maria Pavlovna, the Grand Duchess of Weimar). During the festivities, the Grand Duke of Weimar invested Berlioz with the Order of the White Falcon, one of the Duchy's highest honours for which he was nominated by Liszt. A second Berlioz week (1855) featured Berlioz conducting his L'enfance du Christ. Once again Berlioz was honoured at the conclusion of the festival when he was made an honorary member of the Neu-Weimar-Verein.



Liszt's support of Wagner was of still more lasting importance. Shortly after Liszt had taken up residence in Weimar, Wagner had participated in the failed Dresden Uprising, and had fled Saxony with a price on his head. Wagner made his way to Liszt (the pair had met as early as 1842), who not only sheltered him in the Altenburg (in May 1849) but arranged a loan of money and a forged passport to get Wagner out of Germany and into the sanctuary of a Swiss exile. For ten years Liszt supported Wagner with gifts of money, and kept alive his flagging spirits with personal trips to Switzerland. He also wrote letters to various heads of state to help Wagner secure a pardon. Above all, he made sure that Wagner's music was kept alive in Germany. He gave the première of Lohengrin (28 August 1850) after 46 rehearsals, a number without precedent for an opera (Wagner dedicated the work to Liszt and presented him with the manuscript of the full score), and he regularly mounted Der fliegende Holländer and Tannhäuser, as well as orchestral excerpts from all three operas at various German music festivals. He even tried to persuade the Grand Duke of Weimar to invite Wagner to settle in the city and build a theatre there for the performance of Tristan, long before Wagner thought of settling in Bayreuth. These gestures were openly acknowledged by Wagner, and in his Mein Leben he is often fulsome in his praise of Liszt. Nonetheless, the relationship was marred by Wagner's self-absorption and his constant demands on Liszt's purse. When Wagner's pardon came through in 1860 and his fortunes improved, he could have done much to repay Liszt artistically but failed to do so.

13. Liszt as conductor. Liszt's activities as an orchestral conductor have been overshadowed by his fame as a pianist and composer. He first mounted the podium in January 1840 to conduct an orchestral concert in Pest that included the overture to Mozart's Die Zauberflöte and Beethoven's Choral Fantasy. Two years later he conducted a performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in Berlin, and in 1843 he directed a complete performance of Die Zauberflöte in Breslau. He had also conducted several times in Weimar before settling there, directing the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's 'Eroica' and seventh symphonies.

Liszt's conducting soon began to command attention, partly because of the novelty of his programmes, and partly because of his new approach to technique. He was engaged in various European centres as a guest conductor, including the Ballenstedt Festival (1852), the Karlsruhe Music Festival (1853), and the Niederrheinisches Musikfest in Aachen (1857; fig.9). During the ten years in which he regularly directed orchestras Liszt cultivated a repertory of body signals which were considered revolutionary at the time but which have become commonplace. He often abandoned a regular square-cut beat in favour of great arcs that offered the shape of the phrase (as Furtwängler was later to do). He sometimes put down the baton and conducted with hand gestures alone (like Stokowski). To dramatize the difference between pianissimo and fortissimo he would crouch low over the podium for the former and raise himself to his full height for the latter, arms outstretched. The most telling signals came from his face, which registered all the emotions of the music as he tried to get the players to work as one. He also introduced tempo rubato, an almost unheard-of effect for an orchestra in the 1850s. His extant orchestral parts are filled with dynamic markings that show he strove to unfold different layers of sound simultaneously. We can hardly imagine what the orchestral players of his time would have made of such injunctions as 'the instruments must sound like ghosts' (Hunnenschlacht), or 'like blasphemous mocking laughter' (Dante Symphony), or to the double-bass players in the Dante Symphony, 'take the E♯ high'. Lina Ramann astutely declared that 'Liszt at the head of an orchestra is a continuation of Liszt at the piano' (Ramann, H1880–94, i, 92). Liszt disparaged the old-fashioned Prussian Kapellmeister, whose metronomic approach led him to refer to them as 'windmills'. In his manifesto 'On Conducting' (outlined in a letter to Richard Pohl, Briefe, C1893–1905, i, 142–5), he declared: 'We are helmsmen, not oarsmen', implying that it was the conductor's job to set the compass and plot the course, while the players rowed the boat. He elevated the conductor to 'musician-in-chief', shaming those who thought their job was done if they could get the band to start and finish together. Had Liszt not resigned his position in Weimar after a mere ten years (he stepped down from the podium almost for good in 1859) he might well have been recognized as the founder of modern conducting. As it was, people soon forgot about this side of his professional activity, and his reforms were taken up by his disciples Hans von Bülow (whom Liszt helped to get started in this field), Hans Richter and Felix Weingartner.

14. LISZT AS AUTHOR AND EDITOR. Liszt wrote many articles to coincide with his Weimar concerts. His essays on Wagner's Lohengrin, Berlioz's Harold en Italie, and Schubert's Alfonso und Estrella (the première of which he gave in 1854) arose from the requirement to provide local audiences with some background reading material. It used to be thought that Princess Carolyne was the author of this prose (just as Countess d'Agoult was considered to be the author of the earlier Lettres d'un bachelier ès musique, 1835–1841). So certain were scholars of this point that in 1937 Emile Haraszti declared that 'Liszt never wrote anything but his private letters' ('Le problème Liszt'). Research has shown that Liszt was actually the writer of much of this prose (with one notable exception: Des bohémiens et de leur musique en Hongrie, 1859, 2/1881, which was supervised by Princess Carolyne, who added the anti-Semitic material to the second edition

9. Liszt conducting at the Niederrheinisches Musikfest in the Stadttheater, Aachen, May 1857: wood engraving without the aging composer's knowledge). We know that he received practical assistance with first drafts from his literary-minded mistresses, but he always edited the results and held himself responsible for the published texts. Nine holograph documents are known to exist, comprising 240 pages, either in Liszt's handwriting or containing his autograph corrections (they are catalogued in Walker, H1983–96, ii, 369–70). That is a large body of evidence which shifts the burden of proof on to those who continue to declare that Liszt was not the author of his own prose. It must be admitted that the literary quality of his texts has been much criticized. His book on Chopin upset Chopin's family, who asserted that the biographical sections were inaccurate; and his book on gypsy music displeased Hungarians for turning the gypsies into the creators of Magyar folk music. Liszt's literary style tends to be verbose and self-centred though full of pithy aphorisms and maxims. 'The Artist is the bearer of the Beautiful'; 'For the formation of the Artist, the first prerequisite is the development of the human being'; 'Criticism begins with self-criticism'; 'It is not the Artist who chooses his profession, it is his profession which chooses him.' Such ideas, so vividly expressed, reveal Liszt to be a genuine musical thinker. His books shed much light on his theoretical picture of music, on music's connection to the other arts, on the condition of artists in society, on the role of virtuosity, and on many other topics.

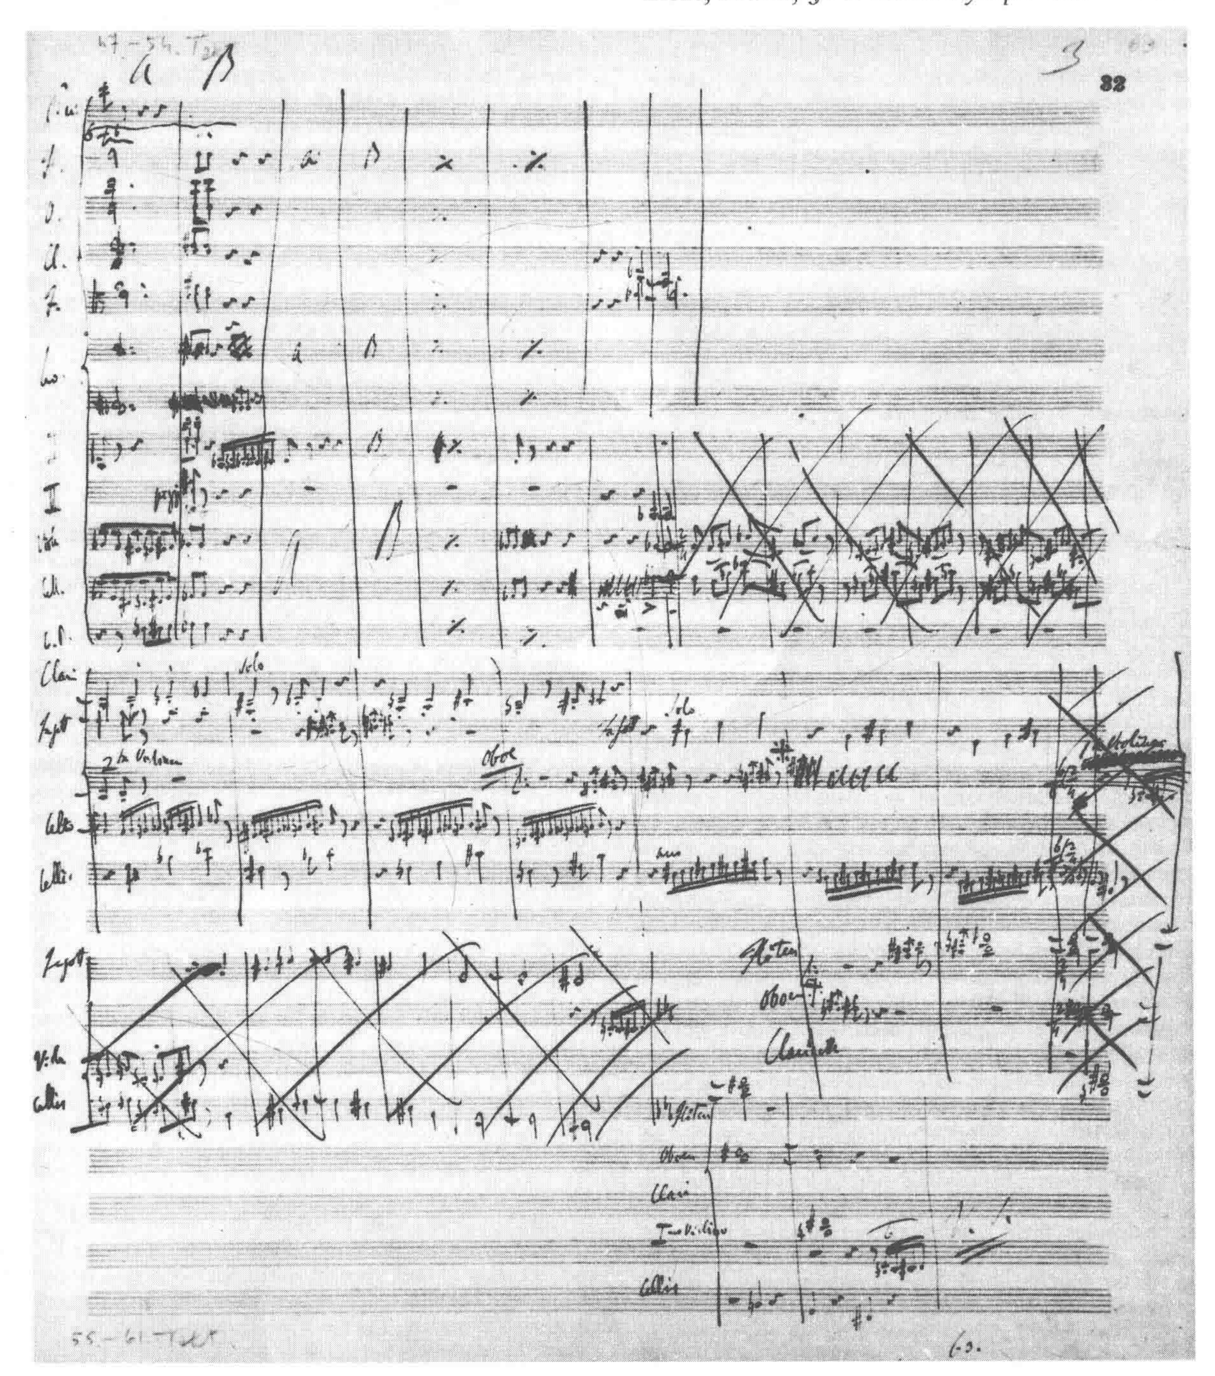
Liszt was also active as an editor. He published editions of Beethoven's 32 Piano Sonatas (1857), John Field's Nocturnes (complete edition *c*1860–70), the complete Etudes of Chopin (1878) and collections of sonatas by Schubert (1871–80) and Weber (1871–83). Liszt's editions are surprisingly free of Romantic or subjective excess and show a level of respect for the text unusual for the time. We do not readily think of him as a scholar and editor, yet his introduction to the Schubert sonatas presents us with a set of editorial principles that would be acceptable today, the chief one being the clear separation of the original text from his own (few) interpretative suggestions.

15. Symphonic poems. Until he arrived in Weimar, Liszt had written very little for the orchestra. He lacked confidence in this field but resolved to master it. At first he was assisted by August Conradi, a composer of light music whom he had engaged as a copyist as early as 1844. Liszt used to submit to Conradi a short score marked with instrumental cues. Conradi would then prepare a full score which embodied Liszt's instructions, and perhaps make some further suggestions of his own. From this version Liszt would rehearse the work and make revisions in the light of practical experience. The process might be repeated several times until Liszt was satisfied. Conradi lived in Weimar for about 18 months, from February 1848 until the summer of 1849. His work was eventually taken over by Joachim Raff who assisted Liszt until 1854. Since Raff later put out some inflated claims about his own role in Liszt's composing process (his letters on this topic, suggesting that he was an equal collaborator, were published posthumously in Die Musik, 1902–3) a question mark was placed over the authenticity of Liszt's orchestral music. Peter Raabe was able to remove it when he embarked on a careful comparison of all the known sketches with the published scores, and demonstrated that every note of the final versions is by Liszt himself (Raabe, H1931, ii, 71–9 contains a compressed account of his extensive discussion).



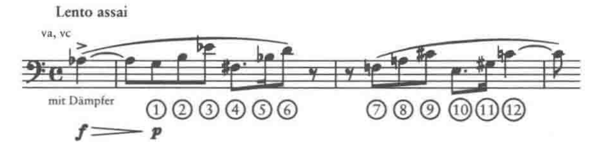
Around 1853 Liszt introduced the term 'Symphonische Dichtung' ('Symphonic Poem') to describe a growing body of one-movement orchestral compositions, programmatically conceived. 'New wine demands new bottles', he once declared. The language of music was changing; it seemed pointless to Liszt to contain it in forms that were almost 100 years old. In the symphonic poems there are shifts in structural emphasis: recapitulations are foreshortened while codas assume developmental proportions and themes are reshuffled into new and unexpected chronologies, with contrasting subjects integrated by means of thematic metamorphosis. He wrote 12 such pieces in Weimar (a 13th, Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe, is a product of his old age). The first group of six was published in 1856, the second between 1857 and 1861. All are dedicated to Princess Carolyne, and bear titles which reveal the source of their inspiration: Tasso, Les préludes, Orpheus, Prometheus, Mazeppa, Festklänge (all published 1856); Héroïde funèbre, Hungaria, Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne (all 1857); Die Ideale (1858); Hamlet, Hunnenschlacht (both 1861).

Several of the symphonic poems deal with exceptional heroes – Hamlet, Mazeppa, Orpheus, Tasso, Prometheus – characters who confront overwhelming odds or find themselves in an impossible dilemma. Liszt identified with such protagonists throughout his life. Each symphonic poem was published with a preface which discloses the source of its extra-musical inspiration: Kaulbach's painting Hunnenschlacht, Victor Hugo's poem 'Mazeppa', the Etruscan vase in the Louvre on which was depicted Orpheus playing his lyre, and so forth.

With the exception of Les préludes, none of the symphonic poems has entered the standard repertory, although the best of them – Prometheus, Hamlet and Orpheus – repay attention. Their historical importance is undeniable; both Sibelius and Richard Strauss were influenced by them, and adapted and developed the genre in their own way. For all their faults, these pieces offer many examples of the pioneering spirit for which Liszt is celebrated.

16. 'Faust-Symphonie'. The symphonic poems were still in Liszt's portfolio when he composed the Faust-Symphonie, his orchestral masterpiece, in a white heat of inspiration within the short space of two months, between August and October 1854 (a final section was added in 1857). Liszt had been introduced to Goethe's Faust by Berlioz in 1830, and had long nourished a desire to reflect that literary masterwork in music. (Appropriately, Liszt's score is dedicated to Berlioz.) For many years his itinerant life style had placed one obstacle after another in his path, and had prevented the realization of his plan. Once settled in Weimar, however, a city which still resonated with Goethe's presence, the work took possession of him and he put the best of himself into it.

One of the best discussions of the Faust-Symphonie was also one of the first. Written by Liszt's disciple Richard Pohl, and published in 1862, this essay is notable for a richness of detail which could only have come directly from Liszt himself (Pohl, H1883, pp.247–320). The first thing to observe is the work's title: 'A Faust Symphony in Three Character Sketches after Goethe: (1) Faust, (2) Gretchen, (3) Mephistopheles'. Liszt does not attempt to tell the story of Goethe's drama, but rather



10. Autograph score of part of the third movement ('Mephistopheles') from Liszt's 'Faust-Symphonie', composed 1854–7 (H-Bn Ms.mus.260, f.32r) creates musical portraits of the three main protagonists. The 'Faust' movement itself lasts nearly half an hour and reveals Liszt to be an orchestrator of the first rank. The work's keyless beginning has attracted commentary. It depicts Faust as thinker, contemplating the mysteries of the universe. Some theorists have seen in this passage not merely a descending sequence of augmented chords, but one of the earliest 12-note rows in musical history (ex.14*a*). Liszt's method of thematic metamorphosis is particularly suited to revealing the contradictory sides of Faust's personality. In turn we are introduced to a series of motifs (passion, love, pride, and so forth), all of which are subjected to character change. The doubt motif (ex.14*b*) and the Motif of Love (ex.14*c*), for example, are different sides of the same coin. The 'Gretchen' movement was composed straight into full score, a feat that commands respect given the complexity of the music. Liszt regarded the orchestra as the sum total of many chamber ensembles – a notion later pursued by Mahler and Richard Strauss – to be endlessly mutated and

Ex.14 Eine Faust-Symphonie

(a) Opening theme

(b) Doubt motif

(c) Love motif

(d) Fugue subject (metamorphosis of (b))

produce a sonic surface of kaleidoscopic variety. The 'Gretchen' theme is introduced first as a duet for oboe and viola, and later turns up as a woodwind quartet and then as a string quartet.

The finale – 'Mephistopheles' – shows Liszt at his ingenious best. Mephistopheles is the spirit of negation, or, as Goethe describes him, 'Der Geist, der stets verneint'. The problem for Liszt was how to depict him in music. Since Mephistopheles cannot create, but only destroy, Liszt gives him no themes of his own, but allows him to penetrate those of Faust, which are mocked and cruelly distorted. The evil spell under which Faust labours is strengthened by a self-quotation from one of Liszt's earlier works, Malédiction (or 'curse') for piano and strings. The entire finale is a vast metamorphosis of the first movement (only Gretchen's theme remains uncorrupted), an original idea that was later taken up by Bartók in his B minor Violin Concerto. Faust's flight from Mephistopheles is portrayed by a fugue (an appropriate form since the word itself denotes 'flight'), whose main subject is a metamorphosis of the doubt motif, Faust's most vulnerable character trait (ex.14*d*). The symphony was originally planned as a purely instrumental work, a version in which it is often played. Three years after its completion in 1854, however, Liszt added a new ending, a setting of the Chorus Mysticus, for solo tenor and male chorus. He himself conducted the first performance on 5 September 1857, on the occasion of the unveiling of the Goethe-Schiller monument in Weimar.

17. B MINOR PIANO SONATA. Among the crowning achievements of the Weimar years was the composition of the Piano Sonata in B minor. Completed in February 1853, it represents one of the most original contributions to sonata form to come out of the 19th century. Not only are its four movements rolled into one, but they are themselves composed against a background of a full-scale sonata scheme – exposition, development and recapitulation – which unfolds about half an hour's unbroken music. In short, Liszt has composed 'a sonata across a sonata', possibly the first time in musical history that such a thing had been attempted. Beethoven had occasionally linked the movements of his sonatas and symphonies, of course; one thinks of the Fifth Symphony and the Appassionata Sonata, whose respective finales emerge from the previous movements without interruption. But the B minor Sonata is different. The material is constantly making contributions to two sonata forms simultaneously. This 'double-function' structure was to have no successor until Schoenberg did something similar in his First Chamber Symphony more than 50 years later. It may be expressed as follows:

	Exposition	Development /	Leadback	Recapitulation/Coda
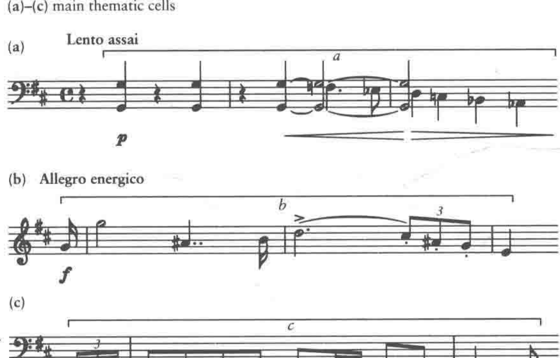
I:	Allegro II:	Andante III:	Fugato IV:	Allegro-Prestissimo
	B mi/D mj	F♯ mj	B♭ mi	B mi/B mj
	m.32	m.331	m.459	m.533	m.682

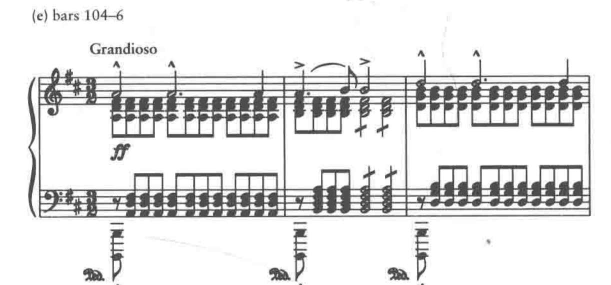


No other work of Liszt has attracted anything like the same degree of scholarly attention. Not the least of its many fascinations has to do with hidden programmes, the pursuit of which has kept three generations of experts busy despite Liszt's total silence on the matter: he simply called his work a 'sonata'. For someone who attached titles and programmatic descriptions to about 90% of his output, his silence as to extra-musical meanings is eloquent. It was nonetheless suggested by Peter Raabe that the Sonata is a musical portrait of the Faust legend, complete with Faust, Gretchen and Mephisto themes. Others have seen in the work a depiction of the Garden of Eden, with themes symbolizing God, Lucifer, Adam and Eve. Yet others regard the work as an autobiographical portrait of Liszt himself. The Sonata is clearly sufficiently robust and intriguing to bear many interpretations, including that of an abstract instrumental composition.

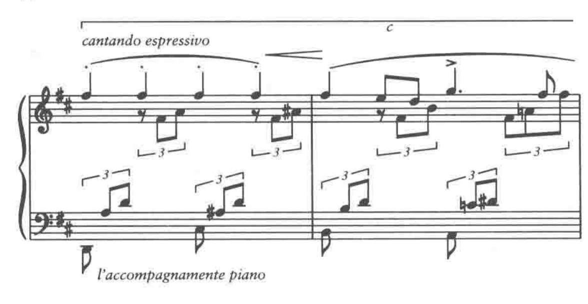
Much of the structure is generated from a small group of thematic cells, first heard in the Introduction (Lento assai/Allegro energico), but without reference to a definite key (ex.15*a–c*). The descending 'gypsy' scale with which the sonata begins (ex.15*a*), is used by Liszt to close down all the major structural junctures of the form, somewhat like the acts of a play. Liszt's metamorphosis technique is shown to good effect in the first subject, which is derived from a combination of themes (b) and (c), now firmly established in the tonic key (ex.15*d*). Particularly rich in the deployment of its contrasting themes is the second subject stage of the structure, in the relative major, whose main musical ideas are drawn from the introductory material. Compare, for example, themes 'e' and 'f' with theme 'c' (ex.15).

The great Andante sostenuto (itself a compound ternary form) occupies the same world of blissful contemplation as the slow movements of late Beethoven with which Liszt was so familiar. One of its contrasting themes offers a distant glimpse of the second subject (theme 'f') which helps to bind the movement to its broader context. The Andante is set in Liszt's 'beatific' key of F♯ major. Liszt's choice of keys is rarely the result of random selection, and is frequently determined by a higher expressive purpose, a wide topic still waiting to be explored. The 'Paradiso' section of the 'Dante' Sonata (A44/7), Bénédiction de Dieu dans la solitude and Les jeux d'eaux à la Villa d'Este (with a quotation from the Gospel According to St John) all have religious connotations and are all cast in this

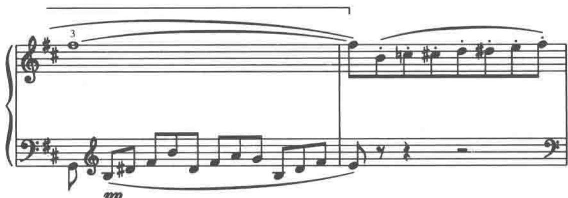
Ex.15 B minor Piano Sonata



(a)–(c) main thematic cells



(d) bars 32–3



(e) bars 104–6

(f) bars 152–5

same key. By incorporating a three-part fugato into his sonata, Liszt once more reminds us of Beethoven. The telescoping of two forms which are basically incompatible is not easy: where, exactly, does one place the fugato if both forms are to survive intact? Liszt maintains the structure's 'double function' by turning his fugato into both a third movement and an extended return to the recapitulation, in B minor (bar 533). Liszt originally intended the sonata to end with a loud flourish, a form in which it has occasionally been performed. The manuscript shows that the inspired quiet ending (a tranquil recollection of the Andante sostenuto) was an afterthought.

The sonata was published in 1854 with a dedication to Robert Schumann (a reciprocal gesture for the dedication of Schumann's C major Phantasie to Liszt, some years earlier). It had to wait a further three years for its first public performance, given by Hans von Bülow in Berlin on 22 January 1857. The work's reception was not promising. Otto Gumprecht described it as 'an invitation to hissing and stamping' (Nationalzeitung), while Gustav Engel thought that it conflicted both with nature and with logic (Spener'schen Zeitung). From this critical setback the sonata recovered only slowly, and Liszt's pianistic masterpiece received few performances before the turn of the century. One of the best known was the private performance that Karl Klindworth gave to Richard Wagner in London, on 5 April 1855 (for Wagner's fervent reaction see his letter to Liszt; Briefwechsel, C1887, ii, 69).

18. Organ works. It is no accident that Liszt's interest in the organ was aroused in Weimar. There was a powerful tradition of organ playing there which went back to Bach. Some of the old church organs scattered across Thuringia had remained unchanged since Bach's time, and Liszt often travelled to various towns and villages in the company of his disciple, the organist Alexander Gottschalg, in search of these venerable instruments. In Weimar, Liszt brought to completion his piano transcriptions of six of Bach's organ preludes and fugues; these engrossing transfers taught him much about the nature of the organ. According to Gottschalg, Liszt was a respectable organist but he lacked fluency on the pedals. However, he held some unconventional ideas on registration. He heard Gottschalg play Bach's Toccata and Fugue in D minor on the full organ, on one manual (the usual practice in Germany at that time), and Gottschalg later recalled (NZfM, 15 November 1899) that Liszt remarked:

> In terms of technique it is totally satisfying … but where is the spirit? Without this, Bach is a Book of Seven Seals! Surely Bach did not play his works in such a manner; he, whose registrations were so admired by his contemporaries! When you are playing on a three-manual instrument, why should the other two manuals be ignored?

Gottschalg later played the work with new registrations to his colleague, the great Weimar organist Gottfried Töpfer, who exclaimed: 'You must always play it like that!' With the composition of such large-scale works as Ad nos ad salutarem and the Fantasy and Fugue B–A–C–H, Liszt led the organ out of church and into the concert hall. It was with the former composition, incidentally, that Liszt's pupil Alexander Winterberger inaugurated the new organ at Merseburg Cathedral (1855), then the largest instrument in Europe, with four manuals, 81 stops and 5686 pipes.

19. Songs. Liszt came to maturity as a song composer during his Weimar years. He wrote his first songs ten years earlier, while he was resident in Italy (the Tre sonetti di Petrarca were first sketched there), and by the time he got to Weimar he had composed a dozen or more. He now revised and added to them, and eventually produced an impressive total of more than 80 songs and collections. The songs have been strangely neglected. They rarely turn up in modern lieder recitals, and some of them are unknown even to specialists. This is surprising, for a closer acquaintance with the best of them suggests that they represent a 'missing link' between Schumann and Hugo Wolf. Liszt's native language was German, and the years that he lived and worked in Weimar – where Goethe and Schiller had earlier been active – brought him into daily contact with German poetry. Some of his best settings are of the German poets Heine, Hoffmann von Fallersleben (Weimar's 'poet-in-residence'), Uhland, Rellstab, and of course Goethe and Schiller themselves.

Liszt had at his disposal a number of gifted singers attached to the Court Opera, who were ready and able to do the songs justice. Singers such as the tenor Franz Götze, the contralto Emilie Genast, the soprano Rosa von Milde-Agthe and her husband, the baritone Feodor von Milde, all had highly musical ears, which allowed Liszt to make unusual demands on them. They also had the supreme advantage of being coached and accompanied by Liszt himself, and may therefore be said to have sung his songs with authority. The von Mildes could have made more lucrative careers elsewhere; but when they were asked about that Feodor gave the unanswerable reply that they stayed in Weimar simply because Liszt was there. The Sunday afternoon 'matinées' held in the large music room of the Altenburg (Liszt's home in Weimar) provided a perfect setting for the performance of these pieces, within the circle of Liszt's own admirers, and often with Liszt himself at the keyboard.

One of Liszt's greatest songs is his setting of Heine's Die Lorelei (1841, rev. 1854–9). The introduction contains a striking anticipation of the opening bars of Tristan, which had not yet been composed (ex.16). The version of Die Lorelei for voice and orchestra is one of several that Liszt made (others include Die drei Zigeuner and Mignon's Lied). In general the Weimar songs are characterized by an unparalleled freedom of the vocal line, which often unfolds across an advanced harmonic texture. Moreover, Liszt's penchant for plunging back and forth from one extreme key to another often means that his melodies are fraught with enharmonic subtleties. It is one thing to employ this technique on the piano (where the player simply manipulates a keyboard), quite another to employ it through the human voice, where these pitches have to be created by throat and larynx. A good example occurs in Vergiftet sind meine Lieder, where the singer is asked to approach a high F♮ and quit it as an E♯ (ex.17).

Ex.16 Die Lorelei

Ex.17 Vergiftet sind meine Lieder

Liszt often asked his singers to 'colour' their voices where the poem required it. Scattered throughout his manuscripts are such unusual imperatives as: 'fast gesprochen' (almost spoken), 'mit halber Stimme' (with a half-voice), 'geheimnisvoll' (mysterious), 'phlegmatisch' (dull or heavy) and 'hintraumend' (day-dreaming). Not the least remarkable thing about the songs is the speed with which some of them were composed – often within the space of two or three hours. Liszt tended to work quickly as a matter of course, but there are few better examples of his moving with somnambulistic certainty towards his goal. Another quality is brevity. Liszt has the reputation of long-windedness, especially in some of the orchestral works. But the songs show that he could be direct, concise and economical. His setting of Heine's Vergiftet sind meine Lieder lasts a mere one-and-a-half minutes, and comes across with the force of an aphorism.

20. From Weimar to Rome, 1859–64. Liszt's tenure at Weimar was never easy. A major source of frustration was that the court theatre was also used for plays, and the Intendant Franz Dingelstedt (whom Liszt himself had brought to Weimar) quickly came into conflict with Liszt. In December 1859 Dingelstedt encouraged a hostile demonstration in the theatre against Cornelius's opera Der Barbier von Bagdad, which Liszt interpreted as a slight against himself, and he resigned. His will (1860) expresses his frustration with Weimar, and does not spare Carl Alexander from criticism for the lack of support that Liszt had hoped to receive from his royal benefactor:

> At a certain period (about ten years ago) I had visions of a new epoch for Weimar, similar to that of Carl August, in which Wagner and I should have been the leading spirits, as Goethe and Schiller were formerly. The meanness, not to say villany, of certain local circumstances, all kinds of jealousies, ineptitudes both external and internal, have prevented the realization of this dream, which would have brought honour to the present Grand Duke.

There was a dark side to Liszt's personal life in Weimar which fuelled his feelings of discontent. The action to have Carolyne's marriage annulled (started in March 1848) had trailed much unhappiness in its wake. Carolyne's case rested on a charge of vis et metus ('violence and fear'). She brought witnesses who were present at the marriage service to testify that her father had forced her into matrimony. Prince Nicholas defended the action, and denied that the wedding was forced. He argued further that the marriage had been in existence for a number of years and that the matrimonial bond had been strengthened with the birth of their daughter, Princess Marie. In 1854 Carolyne refused a summons from Tsar Nicholas I to return to Russia to explain her non-compliance with a property settlement; she was stripped of her citizenship and her lands were sequestered. The following year his successor Tsar Alexander II condemned her to exile.

Perhaps it was the stress of unremitting litigation, with its persistent uncertainty of a marriage to Carolyne, that led Liszt in 1853 to begin a clandestine relationship with Agnes Street-Klindworth (1825–1906), the daughter of Georg Klindworth, Metternich's master spy. This attractive woman, who worked in her father's espionage network, had been sent to Weimar to spy on the diplomatic officials there. The full story of her love affair with Liszt has only recently come to light with the discovery of the censored passages in the third volume of Liszt's Briefe, which La Mara originally published in a mutilated edition under the bland title of Briefe an eine Freundin. Carolyne learnt of the affair, accepted it as the price of her unusual situation, and realized that the only hope of regularizing her union with Liszt lay with the Vatican's approval of the annulment of her marriage.

In May 1860 Carolyne set out for Rome, carrying with her a personal petition to Pope Pius IX. For 18 months she argued her case at the Vatican. On 8 January 1861 the Holy Congregation, especially convened by Pius IX to examine the matter, finally ruled in Carolyne's favour. (The annulment document is reproduced in Walker, H1983–97, ii, 573.)

Liszt closed down the Altenburg in August 1861, and joined Carolyne in Rome, where their wedding was planned for his 50th birthday, 22 October 1861, in Carolyne's parish church of S Carlo al Corso. So certain was Carolyne of this marriage that she had already postdated her will to 'Rome, 23 October 1861' and signed it 'Carolyne Liszt'. What followed has all the elements of fiction, but is fact. At the last moment an emissary from the Vatican arrived at the church with instructions to the priest, Father Francesco Morelli, not to proceed with the service. It transpires that Monsignor (later Cardinal) Gustav Hohenlohe had been working secretly to bring about Carolyne's downfall, and had procured witnesses to testify that she had perjured herself with false testimony before the Russian Consistory that had first granted her an annulment. (The complex story is told in Walker and Erasmi, H1991, pp.12–16.) Hohenlohe's motive was straightforward. His youngest brother Prince Konstantin had in October 1859 married Carolyne's daughter Marie in Weimar, at which time control over Carolyne's fortune had passed to the newly-weds, part of a complex financial settlement approved by Tsar Alexander II. The Hohenlohes feared that if Carolyne remarried she or her future offspring would have legal reasons to re-negotiate this agreement, since Princess Marie might have been declared a bastard offspring of a marriage that no longer existed – a potential calamity the Hohenlohes were determined to forestall. Carolyne was unable to overcome their intransigence. They knew better than most that since a Catholic marriage was a sacrament, an annulment case could be reopened and re-examined at any time. In order to avoid a life of endless litigation, and also to secure a rapprochement with her daughter, from whom she had become estranged, she gave up her long fight to marry Liszt.

Liszt now found himself in Rome by default, uncertain of what to do and where to go. He took temporary lodgings at 113 via della Purificazione and installed a small upright Boisselet piano on which he composed a number of pieces, including his two concert studies Waldesrauschen and Gnomenreigen. He also formed contacts with the musical life of Rome, and regularly visited S Pietro and the Cappella Sistina, where he became fascinated by the music of Palestrina and by plainchant. Among the further fruits of these visits were his Evocation à la Chapelle Sixtine and transcriptions of the 'Confutatis' and 'Lacrymosa' from Mozart's Requiem. He began intensive research into the history of church music, developed an interest in the Cecilian movement and became acquainted with its leader, Franz Xaver Witt.

It was also a time of personal anguish. He had not only lost his son Daniel, in December 1859, but his elder daughter, Blandine, died in September 1862 after giving birth to her first child (his 'Weinen, Klagen' variations were inspired by that mournful event). Liszt's Lear-like estrangement from his only surviving child, Cosima, who was soon to desert Hans von Bülow in order to live with Richard Wagner, clouded his life with unhappiness. In 1867 he travelled to Lucerne to confront Wagner but failed to move either him or Cosima. (Liszt later described the encounter as 'like visiting Napoleon on St Helena'.) The two composers broke off all contact for five years. Especially hard for him was to learn that Cosima had turned Protestant shortly after her marriage to Wagner, in 1870. Liszt became old in Rome. The Roman historian Gregorovius described him unforgettably as: '… a striking, uncanny figure – tall, thin, and with long grey hair. Frau von S[chorn] maintains that he is burnt out and that only the outer walls remain, from which a little ghost-like flame hisses forth' (F. Gregorovius: Romische Tagebucher, 1852–1874, ed. F. Althaus, Stuttgart, 1893, p.201). In an attempt to bring some repose into his troubled life he entered a two-year retreat at the Madonna del Rosario, an almost deserted monastery on Monte Mario, which lay just outside Rome and was run by Dominican monks. He was visited there by Pius IX and an entourage of clerics, including Gustav Hohenlohe (on 11 July 1863). The music-loving pontiff sang a Bellini aria, with Liszt accompanying; afterwards Liszt performed the second of his recently composed Franciscan Legends, St François de Paule marchant sur les flots. The encounter was widely reported in the press and led to rumours that Liszt was about to be appointed director of the choir of the Cappella Sistina. Liszt never coveted that job, however, and there is no evidence that the pontiff was about to dismiss the incumbent Salvatore Meluzzi. Nevertheless, the story led to a mischievous 'conspiracy theory' (promoted by Haraszti among others) which argued that in exchange for the directorship of the choir, Liszt would agree to enter Holy Orders and thus make himself unavailable for marriage to Princess Carolyne. Despite all evidence to the contrary the theory still haunts the literature. What is undeniable is that a personal friendship developed between Liszt and Pius IX (who took to calling him 'my dear Palestrina'), and that the pontiff often summoned Liszt to give private recitals, both in the Vatican and at his summer home at Castel Gandolfo.

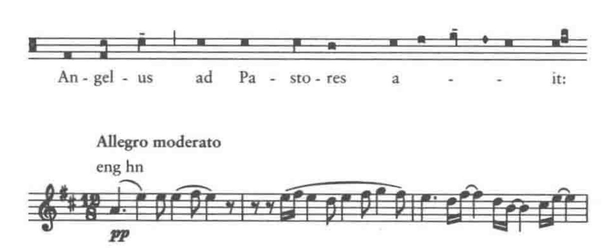
11. Autograph MS from Liszt's oratorio 'Christus', composed 1862–7 (GB-Lbl Add.34182, f.23)

21. Liszt enters the lower orders. Liszt received the tonsure on 25 April 1865, with Monsignor Gustav Hohenlohe officiating. For the rest of his life he would be known as 'Abbé Liszt'. He moved into Hohenlohe's private apartments in the Vatican, pursuing theological studies to prepare himself for the next step. That took place on 31 July when he entered the four minor orders – Doorkeeper, Lector, Acolyte and Exorcist – again with Hohenlohe participating. Doubt has been cast on Liszt's sincerity. For many years it was a standard fixture in the literature that his motive was to escape the yoke of matrimony. Such a view is unsustainable since the lower orders impose no vows of celibacy and Liszt remained free to marry. Liszt himself expressed it well when he said that his action 'harmonized with all the antecedents of my youth', that he had no desire to become a monk 'in the severe sense of the word' (he never became a priest), and that it was enough for him 'to belong to the hierarchy of the church to such a degree as the minor orders allow me to do' (Briefe, C1893–1905, ii, 81). Nevertheless, his son-in-law Emile Ollivier called it 'a spiritual suicide'; like others within Liszt's inner circle, Ollivier was aware of the psychological upheavals from which Liszt had recently emerged, and on which the cassock had a calming effect. Liszt's ties with the clergy were further strengthened when on 14 August 1879 he was made an honorary Canon of Albano.

Liszt lived in the Vatican for about 14 months, until Hohenlohe was made a cardinal and gave up his apartments there. On 22 November 1866, St Cecilia's Day, Liszt moved into the S Francesca Romana – with its unsurpassed views of the Forum and the Colosseum – which remained his principal Roman residence until the building was secularized in 1871. Not long after his arrival, the Boston firm of Jonas Chickering presented Liszt with its prize-winning grand piano, specially sent from Paris after being awarded a gold medal at the Great Exhibition of 1867. Liszt held masterclasses on this instrument every Wednesday afternoon, and gathered around him some interesting Italian pupils, including Giovanni Sgambati. Many visitors descended on Liszt, most famously the young Edvard Grieg who brought along some of his compositions for Liszt's approval, including the recently composed piano concerto which Liszt read at sight.

22. Oratorios: 'St Elisabeth' and 'Christus'. During the Roman years Liszt brought to fruition his two largest choral works: the oratorios Die Legende von der heiligen Elisabeth and Christus. Shortly after his arrival, he had written to Franz Brendel: 'After having, as far as I could, solved the greater part of the Symphonic problem set me in Germany, I mean now to undertake the Oratorio problem'. And he added: 'to me it is the one object in art ... to which I must sacrifice everything else' (Briefe, C1893–1905, ii, 8).

Liszt had been familiar with the life and works of St Elisabeth of Hungary since his childhood. Two events acted as the catalyst for his musical setting of the life of this saint. In 1855 Moritz von Schwind completed a series of frescoes in the 'Elisabeth gallery' of nearby Wartburg Castle (part of the continuing restoration of this historic shrine which lay within the domains of the grand duke of Weimar, and was soon to celebrate its 800th anniversary) depicting various scenes from the life of Elisabeth – 'Arrival at the Wartburg', 'The Crusaders', 'The Miracle of the Roses', 'The Banishment', and so forth. Liszt got to know these frescoes well, and resolved to provide them with musical counterparts. He began work on St Elisabeth in 1857, with a libretto prepared by Otto Roquette (based on an outline by Princess Wittgenstein). In 1858 Liszt's oratorio received a further stimulus when he read the newly published life of St Elisabeth, by the Hungarian writer János Danielik. He wrote to Danielik asking if he could see the various plainchant notations connected with the liturgical hymns and prayers the writer had consulted for his book. Since Danielik was not a musician, this task was passed to the composer Mihály Mosonyi, who went to the Pest National Library at Liszt's urging in search of the sources.



These plainchants form the basis of much of the important thematic material of St Elisabeth. Liszt himself provides a summary of them at the end of the score, a disclosure which reveals his deep involvement in the task of presenting these ancient melodies in a modern setting. 1. In festo, sanctae Elisabeth; 2. Hungarian Hymn to St Elisabeth, from the 'Lyra Coelistis'; 3. Hungarian popular melody; 4. Pilgrims' Song – dating from the time of The Crusades; 5. The 'Cross motif'.

No other composition cost him so dear, or was written over such a long period of time, as his oratorio Christus. He first conceived the idea of an oratorio on the life of Christ as early as 1853, but was unable to finish it until after 1866. Almost from the start he had trouble in finding a suitable libretto. At various times he considered approaching the poet Georg Herwegh, Peter Cornelius and Princess Carolyne for help in selecting the texts; but in the end he undertook the task himself. His sources were the Bible, the Catholic liturgy and various medieval Latin hymns. The first movement to emerge was 'The Beatitudes' (no.6), which was actually performed in Weimar at the wedding of Princess Carolyne's daughter, in 1859. But the bulk of the mammoth score was written in his cell at the Madonna del Rosario, during the years 1863–5, that is, at the very time he was preparing himself for the Lower Orders. Liszt referred to Christus as 'my musical will and testament'. And after the years of struggle were over he observed: 'The composition of Christus was an artistic necessity for me. Now that it is done, I am content' (Göllerich, A1908, p.5).

Christus calls for very large choral and orchestral forces, as well as six soloists, an offstage female choir and an organ. Since the oratorio lasts about three and a half hours without cuts, there are severe logistical and financial problems standing in the way of regular performances. Nevertheless, when properly presented and performed in a spacious church by devoted interpreters, the impression can be overwhelming.

Christus has been criticized for its loose and somewhat episodic structure. Liszt eschewed his usual method of thematic transformation, and relied instead on the realization of certain plainchant melodies with which he expected a Catholic audience to be familiar. A simple example occurs in the music of the Nativity where the plainchant 'Angelus ad pastores ait' ('And the Angel said unto the shepherds') is transformed into a pastorale melody on the english horn (ex.18). The great 'Stabat mater dolorosa' (a 20-minute movement which could well stand by itself in the concert hall) offers a further example of this interesting process. Liszt set all ten stanzas of the poem, ascribed to Jacapone da Todi (13th century), and clothed them in a radically altered form of the old plainchant melody with which these verses had been associated from the 15th century, and which Liszt found in the Liber usualis. The result is a strikingly modern texture, deeply rooted in history, which makes a profoundly emotional impact.

Ex.18 Christus

The first performance of the complete oratorio took place in the Herder Church, Weimar, on 29 May 1873. Richard and Cosima Wagner were in the audience (a sign of the recent rapprochement between the two composers). Although Wagner delivered an ambiguous judgment on the work, students of the two composers will not fail to observe some striking connections between the 'Agony in the Garden' (no.11) and Wagner's later music drama Parsifal.

23. LISZT AS TEACHER. From 1869 Liszt pursued what he called his 'vie trifurquée', or threefold life, in which he divided each year between Rome, Weimar and Budapest. The grand duke of Weimar had never ceased to inquire when Liszt would return to the city, and in February 1869 Liszt acceded to his request. A new home was found for him, the former Hofgärtnerei, or Court Gardener's house, which adjoined the Goethe Park. The grand duchess herself supervised the furnishings, and the firm of Bechstein provided a grand piano whenever Liszt was in residence. It was in the music room that he held his famous masterclasses three times a week.

Liszt was one of the greatest teachers of his generation. He taught from his earliest years in Paris, and was still giving lessons during the last month of his life, nearly 60 years later. More than 400 students are said to have studied with him, although this number is impossible to prove; so much depends on how the phrase 'a pupil of Liszt' is defined. Some of those who later claimed him as a teacher received only one or two lessons from him (Liszt called them 'one-day flies'), others none at all. (A comprehensive list is given in Walker, H1983–96, iii, 249–52.)

Liszt invented the masterclass, a concept which has come to dominate instrumental teaching. It was his belief that young masters would stimulate one another and achieve ever higher standards of perfection. The custom was for one pupil to play, Liszt and the others looking on, after which Liszt would make some observations about the performance and perhaps play portions of the work himself. These were moments to treasure. Simply to be in the same room as Liszt, as more than one pupil testified, turned one temporarily into a better pianist. His first generation of great students, whom he taught during the 1850s, had included Tausig, von Bülow, Klindworth and Hans von Bronsart, and it was arguably the finest group to pass through his hands. But the later generation also included some impressive talents, such as d'Albert, Rosenthal, von Sauer, Joseffy, Friedheim, Siloti and Sophie Menter. Clearly this exceptional group of peers formed one of the most critical audiences imaginable. If a young pianist could survive such a baptism of fire he could survive whatever lay in store in the world outside.

Liszt's pupils were like the members of an extended family. Once admitted to his inner circle they were allowed privileges normally denied to students of other teachers. They accompanied him on trips to such nearby towns as Jena, Erfurt and Eisenach to hear concerts, to attend social functions and to celebrate special anniversaries. A number of students kept diaries, recording their life together, and helped to fulfil Liszt's own best maxim: 'Create memories!'

Liszt was not interested in playing the pedagogue. He had no method, no system, and little technical advice to offer his students. When playing the piano, the physical problems associated with it were his last consideration. A favourite aphorism was: 'Technique should create itself from spirit, not from mechanics'. He expected his students to 'wash their dirty linen at home', as he put it, a phrase that became much dreaded among his students. Of course, by observing Liszt himself play – watching the lie of his hands on the keyboard, seeing how certain passages were fingered, studying his pedal-effects – his pupils undoubtedly received the best possible guidance, and learnt far more than they might have done from a dry, academic description of these events. Liszt generally liked to have before him some poetical image in order to draw an appropriate interpretation from his pupils. 'Do I care how fast you can play your octaves?' he once thundered at a pupil in the middle of the celebrated octave passage of Chopin's A♭ Polonaise. 'What I want to hear is the canter of the Polish cavalry before they gather force and destroy the enemy' (Lamond, E1949, p.68).

This emphasis on musical interpretation made Liszt's classes exceptional. He would take apart a Beethoven sonata, phrase by phrase, in an effort to get his pupils to comprehend the meaning behind the notes, and in so doing he established traditions of performance which survive to this day. His comments were spiced with anecdote, metaphor and wit. To a young student tapping out the opening chords of the Waldstein Sonata he remarked drily: 'Do not chop beefsteak for us'. And to another who had blurred the rhythm in Gnomenreigen (usually played too fast for him): 'There you go, mixing salad again'. He sat through many performances of La campanella, with its infamously high D♯s which force the player's right hand to leap back and forth at speed across the void. To those who hesitated before striking the key he would declare: 'Do not look for the house number'. Liszt also believed in preserving artistic individuality; he was not interested in making carbon copies of himself. This stood in marked contrast to his contemporaries. Kullak, Breithaupt, Deppe and others were known for their methodology and for drilling their pupils into conformity, like soldiers. The theory was that the 'soldiers' would eventually come marching out of the conservatories of Berlin, Cologne and Leipzig, and conquer the world. Not a single great pianist appears to have been produced by such methods, although one or two may have emerged despite them.

Many pen-sketches have come down to us from those times, written by August Göllerich, Carl Lachmund, Amy Fay and others. Lachmund, an American who studied with Liszt during the years 1882–4, once heard him play Feux-follets (A173/5).

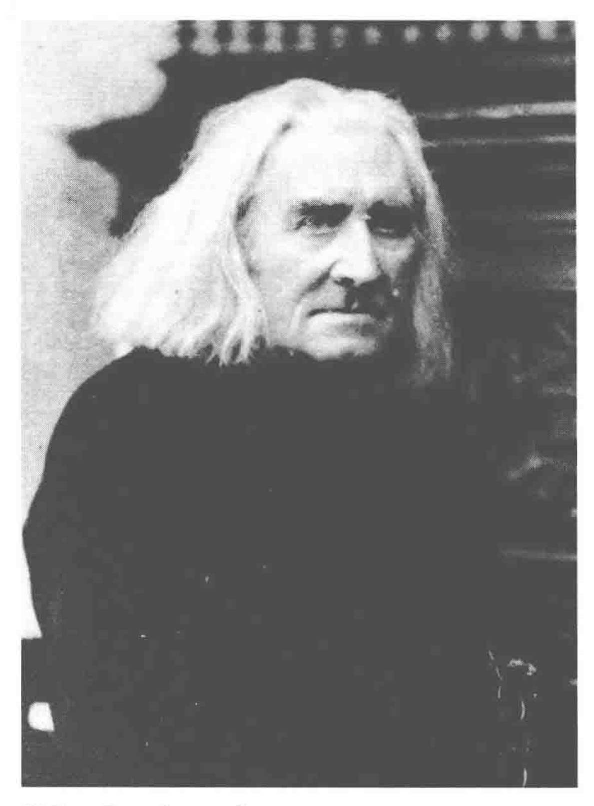
> The spirit and passion that this man still possesses at the age of 71 is marvellous; and how his hands flew from passage to passage! I had taken a position next to the keyboard ... My heart bubbled with the captivating joy he put into this music. I smiled; my interest was all intense, self-forgetful, and before I realized it, I gave vent to my delight in a loud laugh. Just then he stopped. He looked up, as I thought, a little surprised; I blushed and reproached myself for having broken the spell, and in a way he might have misconstrued into levity. But I think he understood. (Lachmund, 68)



Liszt had many hangers-on who took advantage of his kindness. Hans von Bülow, much feared for his banter, was perhaps somewhat cruel when he remarked that 'at the best pianist's house one can hear the worst pianists playing'. In the summer of 1881, when Liszt was indisposed, Bülow took over the Weimar masterclasses and almost caused a revolution at the Hofgärtnerei when he expelled the incompetents and ne'er-do-wells. Bülow insisted that he was doing no more for Liszt than he would do for his own dog by ridding it of its fleas. Shortly afterwards, however, Liszt was back and with him the 'fleas'. There were many in Weimar who criticized the hot-house atmosphere of the Hofgärtnerei, generated by an unthinking admiration of Liszt; and it was said (somewhat unkindly) that admiration was the price of admission to the class. Walter Damrosch visited Weimar in 1882 and came away with an unflattering picture of Liszt surrounded by 'a pitiful crowd of sycophants ... a band of cormorants in the shape of ostensible piano students'. This drew a powerful response from Carl Lachmund, who pointed out that the 'band of cormorants' had included some of the most famous names in piano playing, including Arthur Friedheim, Moriz Rosenthal, Frederic Lamond and Alexander Siloti (Walker, ed., E1995, p.xxiv).

Liszt never charged for his lessons. He lived by the motto 'Génie oblige!' He was troubled when the German newspapers published details of Theodor Kullak's will, revealing that the great pedagogue had left more than a million marks generated from his lucrative teaching practice. (Kullak's Neue Akademie der Tonkunst had become the biggest private teaching institution of its kind in Germany.) 'As an artist, you do not rake in a million marks without performing some sacrifice on the altar of Art', Liszt declared to Lina Ramann (E1983, pp.297–8). He wrote a letter to the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung in which he urged Kullak's sons to create an endowment for needy musicians (5 September 1885). From anyone else, such an idea would have been presumptuous. But through his personal example, Liszt had earned the right to propose it.

24. GROWING TIES TO HUNGARY. Liszt was in Hungary when Rome fell to Victor Emmanuel's troops in 1870, and Pius IX was besieged within the Vatican. Unable to return to Rome, Liszt languished for a while in his native land. His continued presence there led his friends and supporters to think of ways in which he might be persuaded to accept an official position. Although he wrote that he was 'terrified of being thrown back into an active career' (Hugo, ed., C1953, p.145) it was from this time that the bonds that already tied him to Hungary were made secure.

In June 1871 Liszt accepted the title of Royal Hungarian Counsellor from Emperor Franz Joseph. The position carried with it an annual stipend of 4000 forints and entitled Liszt to sit in the Hungarian legislature – a privilege he never used. Another distinction to come his way imposed a heavier burden. In March 1875 Liszt was appointed the first president of the newly formed National Hungarian Royal Academy of Music. This institution (which has been renamed the Liszt Academy of Music) opened its doors on 14 November 1875. Hitherto, the best Hungarian musicians had been obliged to study abroad in the absence of any institute of higher learning at home. Liszt understood that this process must be reversed in order to develop the musical life of the nation. He helped to draw up the curriculum and appoint the faculty, a task in which he was assisted by his distinguished contemporary Ferenc Erkel. He insisted that all students of composition study the piano, and all piano students study composition. Admission standards were high and each candidate was obliged to exhibit skills in improvisation, sight-reading from full score and transposition. This enlightened policy yielded rich dividends. By the end of the century Bartók, Kodály and Dohnányi, three of the country's most prominent musicians, had already graduated from the Academy. Liszt refused to accept any remuneration for the Academy's presidency; his rent-free apartment was the only 'payment' he ever received.

For the last 15 years of his life Liszt became an eternal wanderer. It has been estimated that he travelled at least 4000 miles each year – from Rome to Budapest, from Budapest to Weimar, and from Weimar back to Rome – in an endless circle, with occasional trips to Vienna, Bayreuth and Paris thrown in. That is an exceptional figure for a man in his twilight years, exposed to the rigours of road and rail in the 1870s. And it increases dramatically when we add the long journeys he made each year to the festivals of the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein (whose honorary president he became in 1882) held in such scattered places as Hanover, Karlsruhe and Leipzig. This ceaseless travel is often depicted in popular biographies as proof of a restless personality driven by deep insecurities. The facts speak otherwise: Liszt's travels were mainly a result of the demands on his time and talent by others. In Weimar it was to support Carl Alexander; in Budapest it was to help the fledgling Academy of Music; in Rome to maintain his personal loyalty to Princess Carolyne. Remove these causes and you remove the need for Liszt to have travelled at all. There was no monetary or material gain for him in any of these places, and since he invariably paid his own travel expenses, he was often out of pocket. This strained his already precarious financial situation, since he now made little money from the sale of his music, and on the rare occasions he played in public he invariably donated his services to charitable causes. The large donation he gave for the erection of the Bach monument in Eisenach in 1883 impoverished him for the better part of that year.

12. Franz Liszt: photograph

25. The music of Liszt's old age. As Liszt grew older he gave vent to music of darkness and depression. This is the language of outcries and asides, of whispers and laments. It stands in opposition to the exuberant, life-enhancing compositions of his younger years. One of the more urgent tasks awaiting Liszt scholarship is to demonstrate how the strange, remote language of his old age flows from his earlier style. The shift is extreme, and for many years these pieces lacked an audience. It is an indication of the renewed interest in Liszt's life and work that they have meanwhile obtained a devoted following.

Ex.19 Nuages gris

Compositions such as Trübe Wolken (Nuages gris) (1881) have acquired the status of an icon; with its gently grinding dissonances, its free approach to tonality, and its abandoned ending (ex.19), it has a claim to be a gateway to modern music. This impressionistic music looks forward to Debussy. We recall that during the last year of Liszt's life he and Debussy met in Rome (in January 1886) on three separate occasions. The young Frenchman heard Liszt play Au bord d'une source. He never forgot Liszt's use of the pedal, which he likened to 'a form of breathing'.

Liszt was a pioneer in building new chords. The pile-up of 3rds in Ossa arida (1879) had no precedent and this texture retains its striking originality. It was inspired by the vision of Ezekiel ('O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord'). Liszt depicts the raising up of the flesh from dust by gathering up all the notes of the diatonic scale in a rising column (ex.20*a*), and then sounding them simultaneously (ex.20*b*). A similarly original approach to building chords occurs in the pile-up of 4ths at the beginning of the Third Mephisto Waltz (1883) (ex.21). The chord (*) cannot be explained in terms of traditional harmony, but is best regarded as a '4ths' chord in its last inversion.

Ex.20 Ossa arida

Ex.21 Third Mephisto Waltz

At the terrifying climax of Unstern! (1881) Liszt pits two mutually exclusive chords against each other (ex.22).

Ex.22 Unstern!

Peter Raabe observed that it is as if 'a prisoner were hammering on the walls of his cell, well knowing that no one would hear him' (Raabe, H1931, ii, 63). We begin to understand what Liszt meant when he once told Princess Sayn-Wittgenstein that his one remaining ambition was 'to throw a lance into the boundless realm of the future'.

In one sense, such pieces represent a natural extension of the earlier Liszt, with his love of harmonic adventure, intense chromaticism and tonal ambiguity. What is new is the bitterness of heart which pervades this disturbing repertory. The late pieces are autobiographical. Around 1877 Liszt began to suffer from bouts of depression. He told Lina Ramann: 'I carry a deep sadness of the heart which must now and then break out in sound'. His 'deep sadness' arose from a variety of difficult personal circumstances, including the deaths of family members and close acquaintances. His physical condition also began to deteriorate, and he suffered from a variety of ailments including dropsy, ague and, towards the end of his life, cataracts, which made it difficult for him to read and write letters, let alone compose. On 2 July 1881 he fell down the stairs of the Hofgärtnerei and sustained injuries so severe that he was confined to bed for much of that summer. It was his traumatic entry into old age. (The medical report of his Weimar physician Dr Richard Brehme is published in Walker, H1983–96, iii, 404.) Small wonder that this late music is replete with funeral marches, elegies and memorial music of all kinds. Liszt referred laconically to these compositions as his 'mortuary pieces'. The expression may have been droll, but it reflects his constant preoccupation with death. Some of these compositions are marked by an economy of means so severe that the works seem starved of the very notes required to sustain them. Endings are unresolved, as in the Second Mephisto Waltz (ex.23). Liszt never lost

Ex.23 Second Mephisto Waltz interest in the problem of tonality, and foresaw its disintegration. He was one of the first composers to experiment with bitonality. A telling example occurs in his funeral march for László Teleky (whose tragic political career ended in suicide, in 1861). It is based on a four-note ostinato from the gypsy scale (ex.24). The tonal ambiguity, the question of whether it is heard in G minor or B minor, remains unresolved. Liszt carried such experiments even further in his keyless Bagatelle ohne Tonart (Bagatelle sans tonalité, 1885). The unusual title is Liszt's own; the manuscript remained unpublished until 1956, although the piece was performed in public by his pupil Hugo Mansfeldt a few days after Liszt wrote it, to the mystification of its first listeners (Walker, ed., E1995, pp.358–61).

Ex.24 Trauer-Marsch

Liszt once defended the dissonances of the 'Music of the Future' by declaring that the 12-note chord in ex.25 would soon become the basis of harmony and that chords of the future would consist of the arbitrary exclusion of certain intervals. 'In fact', he went on, 'it will soon be necessary to complete the system by the admission of quarter- and eighth-notes until something better turns up!' (Briefe, C1893–1905, i, 363). This was a shrewd prophecy of some of the experiments to which music would be subjected in the 20th century.

Ex.25

26. Last visit to England, 1886. As Liszt's 75th birthday approached, various countries came forward with plans to celebrate the event. Of the many invitations he received (some from as far away as St Petersburg), one held a special significance for him. For years his English disciple Walter Bache had mounted an annual Liszt concert in London at his own expense, and had drawn hostility for his trouble. When Bache pressed his master to return to Britain, after an absence of more than 40 years, Liszt found it impossible to refuse. Word spread quickly and invitations flowed in from Buckingham Palace, the Philharmonic Society and the Royal Academy of Music. Liszt became somewhat perturbed and wrote to Bache:

> My very dear friend: They seem determined in London to push me to the piano. I cannot allow this to happen in public, as my 75 year old fingers are no longer suited to it, and Bülow, Saint-Saëns, Rubinstein, and you, dear Bache, play my compositions much better than what is left of my humble self.

Liszt spent nearly three weeks in England, in April 1886. He travelled from Budapest and arrived in Paris on 20 March, where a number of celebrations awaited him, including a performance of the 'Gran' Mass under Edouard Colonne in the church of St Eustache. For much of the time he was a guest of the Hungarian painter Mihály Munkácsy, who completed his celebrated oil painting of Liszt at this time. On 3 April Liszt left Paris and was met at Calais by the conductor Alexander Mackenzie and Alfred Littleton of Novello & Co. Together they crossed the English Channel to Dover where they were greeted by Walter Bache. The party then proceeded to Westwood House, Sydenham, where Liszt stayed for his entire sojourn as a guest of Henry Littleton, the head of Novello's.

Despite his earlier resolve not to play the piano, Liszt performed a number of times, much to the delight of his many admirers. On 6 April he appeared at the Royal Academy of Music where he presented a cheque for £1100 to the principal, Sir George Macfarren. This large sum had been raised chiefly by Walter Bache (a professor of piano at the Academy) for the establishment of a Liszt Scholarship. Afterwards, in response to the cheers of the students, Liszt played (among other things) his Cantique d'amour. 'No piano has ever sounded the same to me, before or since', wrote the composer Orsmond Anderton, who was a student at that time. On 7 April Liszt appeared at Windsor Castle and played for Queen Victoria. They had last met 41 years earlier in Bonn, at the Beethoven Festival. Victoria wrote in her diary that he had then been 'a wild phantastic looking man, who was now a quiet benevolent looking old Priest, with long white hair, and scarcely any teeth. We asked him to play, which he did, several of his own compositions. He played beautifully'.

The following evening Walter Bache put on a great reception for Liszt at the Grosvenor Gallery, to which more than 400 people were invited, representing the fields of music, art, literature and the church. It was there that Liszt was publicly reunited with Joachim, and their historic handshake was captured by the London Graphic (17 April). Sir George Grove attended and recorded his impressions of Liszt's playing: 'so calm, clear, correct, refined – so entirely unlike the style of the so-called "Liszt School"'. Typically, he attended two recitals given by his young pupils Frederic Lamond (15 April, James Hall) and Bernhard Stavenhagen (16 April, Princes Hall), who was making his London début. Liszt had by now become a familiar sight in London, with his snow-white hair and his abbé's soutane; according to The Times (12 April 1886) the London cab drivers doffed their caps whenever he passed and addressed him as 'Habby Liszt'.

Liszt arrived back in Weimar, via Paris, on 17 May. The burdens of old age were clearly visible. He was by now partially blind and his body was so bloated with dropsy that the students who met him at the railway station had to support him as he alighted from the train. The next day Cosima turned up at the Hofgärtnerei, a visit that took Liszt by surprise since she had had no contact with him since Wagner's death in 1883. We lack a record of the conversation, but two things emerged. Liszt accepted an invitation to attend his granddaughter Daniela's marriage to the art historian Henry Thode, on 4 July; and he also promised to lend his presence to the Bayreuth Festival later that same month. Cosima had taken over direction of the festival, which was on the verge of collapse, and the presence of Liszt had become a matter of urgent public relations. It is difficult to disagree with Liszt's ironic description of himself as 'Bayreuth's poodle'. On 1 June Liszt travelled to Halle to consult the famous eye surgeon Alfred Graefe, who recommended the removal of a cataract on his left eye. An operation was scheduled for September, but Liszt died before it could be performed.

27. Death. After a brief stay at Colpach Castle in Luxembourg as a guest of Mihály Munkácsy (Liszt gave his last public recital in Luxembourg on 19 July, which may have been the last time he ever touched a keyboard), he caught the night train and reached Bayreuth on 20 July. He arrived suffering from a high fever and a racking cough, and had to take to his room at 1 Siegfriedestrasse. Cosima's festival duties prevented her from offering her father hospitality at Wahnfried (his usual abode during Wagner's lifetime), a decision for which posterity has criticized her. She visited Liszt every morning on her way to the Festspielhaus, however, and they chatted and had coffee together. For much of the day he was left in the company of his students, who had followed him to Bayreuth in the hope of continuing their lessons with him.

Lina Schmalhausen's unpublished diary gives an authentic and harrowing account of Liszt's last ten days. After being examined by the Wagners' local physician, Dr Karl Landgraf, he attended a performance of Parsifal on Friday 23 July. He insisted on leaving his bed on Sunday 25 July in order to attend the Bayreuth première of Tristan. He sat slumped at the back of the box, a handkerchief clasped to his mouth to stifle his coughing; he came forward only during the intermissions to show himself and acknowledge the applause directed towards him. During the night of Tuesday 27 July, Liszt began to hallucinate and was drenched in sweat. For the first time Cosima seems to have realized the seriousness of her father's condition and sought a second opinion from Dr Fleischer, a physician from Erlangen University, who diagnosed pneumonia. She barred the students from the room and enforced Fleischer's ban on alcohol; both decisions may have been mistakes since Liszt was now deprived of the company he most enjoyed, and the wine and cognac upon which he had long relied for daily sustenance. Liszt's condition worsened so Cosima made up a bed for herself in the adjacent room. In the early hours of Saturday 31 July, Liszt leapt up in bed clutching his chest and crying out 'Luft! Luft!' Miska, his manservant, attempted to restrain him but Liszt had great reserves of energy and flung him aside. Then he collapsed, his breathing became laboured and he entered a coma from which he never emerged. The next morning Fleischer was summoned back to the house; he now thought that it may have been a mistake to ban alcohol and a cocktail of heavy wine and champagne was forced down Liszt's throat. Cosima thought that he came to for a few moments and vainly tried to catch his words. Then she left to supervise the arrangements for a supper party to be held at Wahnfried that evening. It was the last time she saw her father alive. Liszt died at 11.30 pm on Saturday 31 July, according to the death certificate in the Bayreuth archives. From all the anecdotal evidence, death appears to have been caused by heart infarction. There is no evidence that Liszt whispered the word 'Tristan' at the end, an idea put about by the Bayreuth circle after his death.

The funeral took place on Tuesday 3 August. Since Liszt's will (1860) could not be located, his last wishes were not carried out: he was not buried in the habit of the Franciscan order and his desire to be buried simply, 'without pomp and if possible at night', was likewise ignored. Nor did he receive absolution from a Catholic priest; the officiating cleric was a Protestant and Liszt was buried in the Bayreuth Stadtfriedhof, a Protestant cemetery, with crowds of curiosity seekers, visitors to the Wagner festival, lining the funeral route.

After the interment a dispute arose over Liszt's last resting place. Princess Carolyne (Liszt's executrix) was agitated at the prospect of Liszt's body remaining in 'pagan Bayreuth' and took extraordinary measures to have it moved. The Franciscans wanted it returned to Budapest; Grand Duke Carl Alexander requested that it be brought back to Weimar; there were even arguments put forward in favour of Rome and of Liszt's natal village, Raiding. But Cosima's will prevailed, and her father still lies under Wagner's shadow. The debate has roused passion across the years, but it is worth recalling Liszt's own words on the matter. 'I will not have any other place for my body than the cemetery … in use in the place where I die'. (Briefe, C1893–1905, vi, 228–9).

28. STYLE, RECEPTION, POSTERITY. One of the chief obstacles faced by Liszt's music is that of finding satisfactory interpreters. It tends to attract those players who think that their duty is done if they play it fast and loud. Moreover, since they tend to play the same small handful of pieces, they never experience the enormous range of his creative output, and thus deprive themselves of an important learning experience. His music, moreover, is not performer-proof but rests to an unusual degree on the personality of the player. The reason for this is clear. Liszt composed with the outlook of a performer, and performed with the insight of a composer. He was always the best interpreter of his own music, and even those critics who generally disliked his compositions, like Hanslick and Brahms, were invariably impressed when he himself played them. The great Liszt interpreters of the past – Petri, Rosenthal, Rachmaninoff, Beecham – brought refinement, subtlety and colour to everything they did, with the necessary quality of virtuosity held in check until they had no alternative but to release it.

Liszt usually composed swiftly and easily, and he often worked on several compositions at the same time. His pupil Berthold Kellermann tells us that Liszt 'wrote full scores with fluent speed, from the bottom to the top, as fast as someone else would write a letter' (Kellermann, E1932, pp.31–2). On one occasion, in the 1870s, Kellermann came across Liszt in his Munich hotel room working on a new orchestral composition. After bidding his pupil welcome he chatted to him amicably 'while continuing to write uninterruptedly at his score'. Liszt subjected many of his compositions to frequent revision, a practice for which he is celebrated. For him a composition was rarely 'finished', but went on evolving through the years. It does not follow that later versions replace earlier ones. Some of his works exist in three or four radically different versions, all of which are there to be played. It is hardly surprising, in view of the speed with which he worked, that Liszt's manuscripts tend to be untidy and a number of them border on the illegible. The best-known of his holographs, that of the Sonata in B minor, is tidier than most; nevertheless, this even shows numerous corrections and paste-overs typical of his working methods.

In the past 25 years or so a number of manuscripts have been brought to light previously described as 'unknown', 'uncertain', or even 'unfinished'. Compositions including De profundis (an early work for piano and orchestra, dating from 1834, lacking mainly the last few bars), a piano trio arrangement of Vallée d'Obermann (from the Swiss book of Années de pèlerinage), a third piano concerto (in E♭ major), and an unfamiliar paraphrase on Verdi's Ernani (1847) are among those pieces that have in recent years been resurrected to a fanfare of publicity. This newly uncovered music does not always show Liszt at his best, and it is fair to ask whether he actually had good reason for not wanting to finish it – let alone publish it. He could not have known that his penchant for saving sketches (unlike Brahms and Chopin, who destroyed them) would one day attract the scrutiny of scholars, and it is doubtful that he would have welcomed their attention. Nevertheless, while these pieces may not be important enough to warrant a reassessment of Liszt's place in history, there is merit in the notion that even the chippings from a master's workbench are of value, and may occasionally throw light on his compositional process as a whole.

Liszt's fate has always been inseparable from that of the Romantic era in general. During the first half of the 20th century, much of the Romantic repertory fell into deliquescence, and Liszt's reputation suffered more than most. Even during his final years, the pendulum of history had started to swing away from him, and once the leaner textures of Stravinsky, Schoenberg and Bartók (who nonetheless greatly admired Liszt) took over, much of Liszt's music seemed flamboyant and excessive by contrast. Between the two world wars his reputation was kept alive mainly by his piano music, and by a relatively small number of pianists devoted to it. Only when the Romantic revival got underway, in the 1950s, could Liszt be viewed in a new and altogether more favourable light. The continuing publication of his letters (more than 7000 of them, to 800 correspondents across the world), together with the gradual appearance of a trustworthy Complete Edition of his works (projected as 70 volumes), is bringing Liszt into better perspective. The largeness of his personality, the all-encompassing breadth of his musical interests, the stunning originality of many of his compositions, together with his commanding influence among the musicians of his time, are today far better understood, and these qualities are likely to keep his name alive. The Grand Duke of Weimar once told Busoni: 'Liszt was what a prince should be'. Pianist, composer, teacher, conductor, writer and musical administrator, he enlarged everything that he touched. And through his many benefactions he advanced the dignity of the profession.

WORKS

Editions: Franz Liszt: Muskalische Werke, ed. F. Busoni, P. Raabe, P. Wolfrum and others (Leipzig, 1907–36) [MW]
Liszt Society Publications (London, 1950–) [LSP]
F. List: Operniye transkriptsii dlya fortep'yano [Piano Transcriptions from Operas], ed. V.S. Belov and K.S. Sorokin (Moscow, 1958–64) [RS]
Franz Liszt: Neue Ausgabe sämtlicher Werke/New Edition of the Complete works, 1st ser. ed. Z. Gárdonyi, I. Sulyok, I. Szélenyi and others, 2nd ser. ed. I. Sulyok and I. Mező (Kassel and Budapest, 1970–) [NLE ser./vol.; nos. in square brackets denote vols. in preparation]
Franz Liszt: Sämtliche Orgelwerke/Complete Organ works, ed. M. Haselböck (Vienna, 1986–) [UE]

Catalogue: R. Charnin Mueller and M. Eckhardt: Thematisches Verzeichnis der Werke Franz Liszts (Munich, in preparation) [LW]
C – no. in L. Chiappari: Liszt: 'Excelsior', op.1400: Catalogo delle composizioni cronologico, tematico, alfabetico (Pisa, 1996)
R – no. in P. Raabe: Franz Liszt: Leben und Schaffen, ii (Stuttgart, 1931, rev. 2/1968 by F. Raabe)
S – no. in H. Searle: 'Liszt, Franz', Grove6

B&H – Breitkopf & Härtel [single issues]
EMB – Editio Musica Budapest
† – first edition

names within square brackets after title denote original composers of transcribed or arranged works

PIANO

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A1	147	26	1	Variation über einen Walzer von Diabelli	1822	Vienna: Diabelli, 1824†	NLE ii/1; MW ii/7
				Remarks: 24th variation in Vaterländischer Künstlerverein, the collection of 50 'Veränderungen' solicited by Diabelli from 50 composers
A2				[2] Walzer (Walse)
			3	1, A	1823	Vienna: Artaria, 1825†
	208a		4	2, A, 'aus dem Ballet: Die Amazonen'	? 1823/1825	Vienna: Artaria, 1825†; London: Mori & Ball, 1832	NLE i/13 (no.2 only)
				Remarks: from Sieben Walzer, pubd in 3 settings, pf/(vn, pf)/(pf, gui); no complete copy of pf setting is known; Die Amazonen, by Robert von Gallenberg, first perf. Vienna, 9 Aug 1823; no.2 also pubd as Waltz, a Souvenir, in The Musical Gem, London, 1832, p.92; see D1
A3	148	27	6	Huit variations	1824	Paris: Erard, 1825†, as op.1	MW ii/7; NLE i/9
				Remarks: ded. S. Erard; see also A6, Q6
A4	149	28	7	Sept variations brillantes sur un thème de Rossini	1824	Paris: Erard, 1824†, as op.2; London: Boosey, ?1825, as op.2
				Remarks: ded. Mme E. Panckoucke; based on 'Ah come nascondere la fiamma' from Ermione
A5	150	29	8	Impromptu brillant sur des thèmes de Rossini et Spontini	1824	Paris: Erard, 1825†, as op.3; London: Boosey, ?1825, as op.3; Vienna: Mechetti, 1841 (rev.)	NLE ii/1
				Remarks: ded. Countess Eugénie de Noirberne in Erard and Boosey pubns; uses themes from Rossini's La donna del lago and Armida and Spontini's Olimpie and Fernand Cortez
A6	151	30	11	Allegro di bravura	1824–5	Paris: Erard, 1825†, as op.4/1; Leipzig: Probst, 1825; Vienna: Weigl, 1826	NLE i/11; MW ii/7
				Remarks: ded. Count Thadé Amadé; 1826 pubn with A7 as Deux allegri di bravura I; used in Q6; see also Q2
A7	152	31	12	Rondo di bravura	1824–5	Paris: Erard, 1825†, as op.4/2; Vienna: Weigl, 1826	NLE i/11; MW ii/7
				Remarks: ded. Count Amadé; 1826 pubn with A6 as Deux allegri di bravura; used in Q6
A8	136	1	22–33	Etude[s] pour le piano-forte en quarante-huit exercices dans tous les tons majeurs et mineurs ... par le jeune Liszt ... op.6: 1 Allegro con fuoco, C; 2 Allegro non molto, a; 3 Allegro sempre legato, F; 4 Allegretto, d; 5 Moderato, b♭; 6 Molto agitato, g; 7 Allegretto con molto espressione, E♭; 8 Allegro con spirito, c; 9 Allegro grazioso, A♭; 10 Moderato, f; 11 Allegro grazioso, D♭; 12 Allegro non troppo, b♭; [13 Preludio, Allegro maestoso, F♯, unpubd]	1826	Paris and Marseilles: Dufaut & Dubois–Boisselot, 1827, as op.6; Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1839 (later issue)	NLE i/18

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: 1st edn ded. L. Garella; only 12 études pubd; Hofmeister's 1839 edn is given erroneously as op.1 and titled Etudes pour le piano en douze exercices; the earliest version of no.13 was sold at Sotheby's in May 1991 (no.302); the later version sold at Stargardt in Nov 1997 (no.837), is marked 'Preludio', because it is the beginning of the 2nd series of the études; used as basis for A39, which was the basis for A172, B38, C13, G7
A9	153	19	34	Scherzo (Allegro molto quasi presto)	1827	in AMz, xxii–xxiii (1896)†	NLE i/13; MW ii/9
A10	[?745]		40	Marche funèbre	1827	in Liszt Saeculum, no.51 (1993), 59–60
				Remarks: written 2 days after his father's death in Boulogne on 28 Aug 1827
A11	241	107	41–42	Zum Andenken (Zwei ungarische Werbungstänze von László Fáy und János Bihari)	1828	Budapest: in Gárdonyi (G1936)†	LSP iii; NLE ii/1
A12a	385	116	43	Grande fantaisie sur la tyrolienne de l'opéra la fiancée de Auber	1829		NLE ii/1
				(a) 1st version	1829	Paris: Troupenas, 1829†, as op.1
				2nd version	late 1830s	Paris: Troupenas, 1839; Vienna: Mechetti, 1839; London: Wessel, 1840
				3rd version	*c*1842	Hamburg and Leipzig: Schuberth, 1842/3
A12b	385a		704	(b) Tyrolean melody	1829	Manchester: Andrews, in Athenaeum musicale, 1856; London: Curwen, 1958, in Five Liszt Discoveries
				Remarks: (b): ded. F. Chopin in Wessel edn; short piece based on theme of (a), an alternative version in G, renumbered by Searle (formerly s233c)
A13	421a		44	Introduction et variations sur une marche du Siège de Corinthe	?1830	facs., in FAM, xxiii (1976), 104 (introduction only)	[NLE ii/2]
				Remarks: based on Rossini's 'Questo nome qui suonò vittoria' from Maometto II (Le siège de Corinth); possibly the work mentioned in letter to Haslinger and in handwritten inventory (D-WRgs N8) as 'Maometto et Moïse', 1841/2, and in letter to Marie d'Agoult, 1841, as 'Maometto-Fantaisie: Moïse-Fantaisie'
A14	252a	91	48	La romanesca
				1st version	1832–3	in Gazette musicale de Paris (6 April 1833), suppl.†; Paris: Pacini, 1840; Leipzig: Cranz, 1840; Vienna: Haslinger, 1840	NLE ii/4; LSP vii
				2nd version	*c*1852	Vienna: Haslinger, 1852 ('Nouvelle edition')	LSP vii
				Remarks: ded. Mme H. Seghers in Pacini edn; s247, renumbered in Grove6
A15	420	231	50	Grande fantaisie di bravura sur La clochette de Paganini	1832–4	Paris: Schlesinger, 1834†, as op.2; Vienna: Mechetti, 1839, as op.2	MW ii/2; NLE ii/1
				Remarks: ded. H. Vial; 'La campanella' theme used also in A52, A113, A173
A16a, b, c				Symphonie fantastique [Berlioz, op.4]

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	470	134	54a	(a) Episode de la vie d'un artiste, Grande symphonie fantastique par Hector Berlioz	1833, rev *c*1876	Paris: Schlesinger, 1834†, 1836; Vienna: Trentsensky & Vieweg, 1836, Witzendorf, *c*1844–5; Leipzig: Leuckart, *c*1876 (rev., 2nd edn)	NLE ii/16
	395	135	53a, b	(b) L'idée fixe, Andante amoroso d'après une mélodie de Hector Berlioz	1833	Milan: Ricordi, 1846; Vienna: Mechetti, 1846 and 1847; Paris: Brandus, 1847	NLE ii/1
	470	136	54b	(c) Marche au supplice de la Sinfonie fantastique	1865	Leipzig and Winterthur: Rieter-Biedermann, 1866	[NLE ii/11]
				Remarks: (a): 1st edn costs paid by Liszt, movts later issued separately by different publishers; (c): new arr. of 4th movt from (a), with introduction from rev. (b)
A17	556	241	56	Die Rose [Schubert, D745]	1833	Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1835†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1838 (Nouvelle édition), in Hommage aux dames de Vienne	NLE ii/20
				Remarks: ded. Countess d'Apponyi
A18	154	13	62	Harmonies poétiques et religieuses	1833–4	in Gazette musicale de Paris (7 June 1835), suppl.; Leipzig: Kistner, 1853 (rev.)	MW ii/5; NLE i/9
				Remarks: ded. A. de Lamartine; orig. conception incl. orch
A19	155	11	59–61	Apparitions: 1 Senza Lentezza quasi Allegretto; 2 Vivamente; 3 Fantasie sur une valse de F. Schubert: Molto agitato ed appassionato	1834	Paris: Schlesinger, 1835†	LSP ii; NLE i/9; MW ii/5
				Remarks: no.1 ded. Countess Clara de Rauzan, no.2 ded. Viscountess Frédéric de Larochefoucauld, no.3 ded. Mme la marquise de Camaran; no.3 may be the earliest Schubert transcription, later transcr. in A131
A20	409a	170	66	Réminiscences de La Juive [Halévy]	1835	Paris: Schlesinger, 1836†; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1842 (2nd edn)	RS ii/1; NLE ii/1
				Remarks: ded. C. Kautz; mentioned in letter to Anna Liszt from Geneva, 28 July 1835
A21	157	9	70	Fantaisie romantique sur deux mélodies suisses	1835–6	Basle: Knop†; Milan: Ricordi; Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1837	MW ii/5; LSP v; NLE ii/2
				Remarks: ded. V. Boissier; melodic material used in A40b and A159
A22	397	151	71	Réminiscences de Lucia di Lammermoor [Donizetti]	1835–6	Paris: Latte; Leipzig: Hofmeister; Milan: Ricordi, 1840†	MW ii/1; NLE ii/2 (2nd version); RS ii/1
				Remarks: ded. Mme Vanotti
A23	398	152	72	Marche funèbre et Cavatine de Lucie de Lammermoor [Donizetti]	1835–6	Paris: Latte; Mainz: Schott, 1841†	MW ii/1; NLE ii/2; RS ii/1

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A24	419	230	74/1	Grande fantaisie sur des motifs de Niobe (Divertissement sur la cavatine de Pacini 'I tuoi frequenti palpiti')	1835–6	Paris: Latte†; Vienna: Hofmeister; Milan: Ricordi†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1838 (rev.)	MW ii/1; NLE ii/2
				Remarks: ded. Mme la Comtesse Miramont
A25	422	234	75	La serenata et L'orgia, grande fantaisie sur des motifs des Soirées musicales [Rossini]	1835–6	Mainz: Schott, 1836†; Milan: Ricordi; Paris: Troupenas, 1837; Mainz: Schott (rev. edn)	NLE ii/1 (2nd version)
				Remarks: ded. J. Montgolfier
A26	423	235	76	La pastorella dell'Alpi e Li marinari, 2me fantaisie sur des motifs Soirées musicales [Rossini]	1835–6	Mainz: Schott, 1836–7†; Milan: Ricordi; Paris: Troupenas, 1837; Mainz: Schott (rev. edn)	NLE ii/1
				Remarks: ded. H. de Musset
A27a	[156]	[8/10–12]	[94–6]	Trois airs suisses/ Schweizerische Alpenklänge: 1 Improvisata sur le Ranz des vaches (Départ pour les Alpes; Aufzug auf die Alp) [F. Huber], 2 Nocturne sur le Chant Montagnard (Bergliedchen) [E. Knop], 3 Rondeau sur le Ranz des chèvres (Geissreiher) [F. Huber]	1835–6	Basle: Knop, 1836†; Milan: Ricordi, 1837 (rev.)
A27b				2nd version Trois morceaux suisses: 1 Rañz des vaches, Mélodie de Ferd. Huber avec variations; 2 Un soir dans la montagne, nocturne [Knop]; Rondeau sur le Ranz des chèvres (Geissreiher) [Huber]	1876–7	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1877	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: 1st version also pubd 1842 as Album d'un voyageur, III (see A40c)
A28				Walse, A	?1835	Bryn Mawr: Presser/Thorpe Music, 1996†
				Remarks: orig. in the possession of the family of Pauline Viardot, who studied the piano with Liszt in the 1830s
A29	473	139	141	Marche des pélerins de la Sinfonie Harold en Italie [Berlioz]	1836/7–62	Leipzig-Winterthur: Rieter-Biedermann, 1866† (2nd version)	NLE ii/16
				Remarks: 2 versions; see also D5
A30	474	140	57	Ouverture du Roi Lear [Berlioz]	1836–7		LSP, 1987†; NLE ii/16
				Remarks: Liszt had already been working on this transcription since March 1836 when Berlioz suggested in a letter dated 22 May 1837 'If you have the time, transcribe the overture of King Lear'
A31	471	137	55	Ouverture des Francs-Juges [Berlioz]	?1836–7	Paris: Richault, 1844–5†; Mainz: Schott, 1845†	NLE ii/16

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A32a	209	32a	97	Grande valse di bravura (Le bal de Berne)	1836	Leipzig: B&H, 1836†, in Album musical; Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1836; London: Wessel; Paris: Latte; Milan: Ricordi, 1837
				Remarks: ded. P. Wolff and (in Wessel edn) Mme C. Ludlow; designated op.6, also known as Valse de Mariotique; see also A32b, A82, A84, B1
A32b	214/1–3	32b	578–80	3 caprices-valses no.1: Valse di Bravoure, B♭	1850–52	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1852; Vienna: Haslinger	LSP iv (no.3); NLE i/13; MW i/10 (nos.1–2)
				Remarks: 2nd version of A32a; see also A57, A84, A88
A33	252	88	99/1	Rondeau fantastique sur un thème espagnol (El contrabandista)	1836	Leipzig: Hofmeister; Milan: Ricordi; Paris: Latte, 1837†	NLE ii/2
				Remarks: ded. George Sand; based on a melody by M. Garcia as sung by M. Malibran; see also S26
A34	390	129	100/1	Réminiscences des Puritains de Bellini	1836	Mainz: Schott, 1837†; Mainz: Schott (Nouvelle édition)	RS ii/2; NLE ii/5
				Remarks: ded. Princess Cristina Belgiojoso; see also A74
A35	412	221	101	Grande fantaisie sur des thèmes de l'opéra Les Huguenots (Réminiscences des Huguenots) [Meyerbeer], 2 versions	1836–42	Paris: Schlesinger; Milan: Ricordi, 1837†; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1842 (nouvelle édition)	NLE ii/2; RS i/2, iv/1
				Remarks: ded. M. d'Agoult 1st perf. Leipzig, 24 March 1840
A36	424	236/1–12	124–35	Soirées musicales [Rossini]: 1 La promezza, 2 La regata veneziana, 3 L'invito, 4 La gita in gondola, 5 Il rimprovero, 6 La pastorella dell'Alpi, 7 La partenza, 8 La pesca, 9 La danza, 10 La serenata, 11 L'orgia, 12 Li marinari	1837	Milan: Ricordi 1838†; Paris: Troupenas, 1842	NLE ii/3
				Remarks: ded. Countess Julie Samoyloff (née Comtesse Phalen); 4-hand and 2 pf versions not by Liszt, but pubd by Schott; nos.2 and 9 for 2 pf pubd Schlesinger
A37a	464/3, 11	128/3, 11	306	[Symphonies de Beethoven no.3:] Marche funèbre	1837	Vienna: Mechetti, 1843, in Beethoven Album†; Leipzig: B&H, 1865 (rev.)
A37b	464/5–7	128/5–7	136–8	Symphonies de Beethoven [nos.5–7 1st version]	1837	Leipzig: B&H, 1840 (nos.5–6)†; Vienna: Haslinger (no.7)
A37c	464	128	874–9	Symphonies de Beethoven, partitions de piano (nos.1–9)	1863–4	Leipzig: B&H, 1865 (nos.1, 2, 3 complete, 4, 8, 9)†, (nos.5–7 rev.)	NLE ii/17, (nos.1–4), ii/18 (nos.5–7), ii/19 (nos.8–9)
				Remarks: ded. J.A.D. Ingres in Richault and B&H 1840 edns; see also A37a, C4
A38a	476	142a	139	Esmeralda [L. Bertin]	1837	Paris: Troupenas, 1837†
				Remarks: vs of complete opera attrib. to Liszt. The selections appear to have been extracted from the complete vs. See M. Short, Liszt Society Journal, xvii (1992), 25–36

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A38b	447a	142a	139	Esmeralda [L. Bertin]	1837	Paris: Troupenas, 1837†
				Air chanté par Massol [Quasimodo's Aria] ('Mon Dieu! j'aime')
A38c	477a	142b	139	Esmeralda [L. Bertin]	1837	Paris: Troupenas, 1837†
				Trois morceaux detachés d'Esmeralda arrangé par F. Liszt
				No.11 – Entracte, Recitatif et Romance, 'Quoi! lui'
				No.13 – Air, 'Mon Dieu! j'aime'
				No.10– Scène et Trio, 'D'ici vous pourrez voir, sans être vu'
A39	137	2a	112–23	Vingt-quatres grandes études pour le piano	?1837–1839	Vienna: Haslinger, 1839†; Milan: Ricordi†; Paris: Schlesinger, 1839†; London: Mori & Lavenu, 1839 (only nos.1–8)	MW ii/1; NLE
				Remarks: ded. C. Czerny; as A8, only 12 were pubd; ded. Chopin in the Ricordi edn (1837), bk II (nos.8–12); see also A8, A172, B38, C13
A40a, b, c	156	8	78–96	Album d'un voyageur (compositions pour le piano, 1re année, Suisse [3 bks])	1837–8	Paris: Latte, 1840 (only book ii, as 2nd Année); Paris: Richault, 1841 (only book i); Vienna: Haslinger, 1842† (collected edn)	NLE i/6 (bks I (nos.1, 3, 6), II), ii/14 (bk III, 2nd version); LSP ii (bk I no.1), v (bk I nos.3–4, bk II complete); MW ii/4
				Bk I Impressions et poésies:
	156/1	8/1	78	1 Lyon
	156/2	8/2a	79	2a Le lac de Wallenstadt
	156/3	8/2b	80	2b Au bord d'une source
	156/4	8/3	81	3 Les cloches de G …
	156/5	8/4	82	4 Vallée d'Obermann
	156/6	8/5	83	5 La chapelle de Guillaume Tell
	156/7	8/6	84	6 Psaume
				Bk II Fleurs mélodiques des Alpes:
	156/8	8/7a	85	7a Allegro, C
	156/9	8/7b	86	7b Lento, e/G
	156/10	8/7c	87	7c Allegro pastorale, G
	156/11	8/8a	88	8a Andante con sentimento, G
	156/12	8/8b	89	8b Andante molto espressivo, g
	156/13	8/8c	90	8c Allegro moderato, E
	156/14	8/9a	91	9a Allegretto, A♭
	156/15	8/9b	92	9b Allegretto, D♭
	156/16	8/9c	93	9c Andantino con molto sentimento, G
				Album d'un voyageur (op.10, nos.1–3)
				Bk III Paraphrases:
	156/17	8/10	94	10 'Ranz' de vaches (Montée aux Alpes: Improvisata)
	156/18	8/11	95	11 Un soir dans les montagnes (Nocturne pastoral)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	156/19	8/12	96	12 Ranz de chèvres de F. Huber (Allegro finale)
				Remarks: Bk 1 ded. Mr de L. [F. de Lamennais] (no.1), F. Denis (2b), B. Liszt (3), E. Pivert de Senancour (4), V. Schoelcher (5); Bk II ded. H. Reiset; Bk III ded. Mme Adolphe Pictet (10), M. Potocka (11), T. Walsh (12); no.1 orig. separate piece, composed 1833–4; Bk III orig. pubd as Trois airs suisses, see A27a; see also A159
A41	392	131	142/1	Hexaméron (Morceau de concert; Grandes variations de bravoure sur le marche des Puritains) [Bellini]	1837–38	Milan: Ricordi; Vienna: Haslinger, 1839†	MW ii/2; NLE ii/3
				Remarks: ded. Princess Cristina Belgiojoso; 6 variations by different composers (Thalberg, Pixis, Herz, Czerny, Chopin, Liszt) Liszt wrote the introduction, the piano version of the theme, variation 2, transitional material and the finale; see also C2, H5
A42	558	243/1–12	144–55	[12] Lieder von Schubert	1837–8	Vienna: Diabelli, 1838; Paris: Richault†; New York: Dover, 1996	NLE ii/20
				1 Sei mir gegrüsst, 2 Auf dem Wasser zu singen, 3 Du bist die Ruh, 4 Erlkönig, 5 Meeresstille, 6 Die junge Nonne, 7 Frühlingsglaube, 8 Gretchen am Spinnrade, 9 Ständchen (Horch, horch! die Lerch'), 10 Rastlose Liebe, 11 Der Wanderer, 12 Ave Maria
				Remarks: nos.1–11 ded. Countess d'Aragon in Richault edn, no.12 ded. M. d'Agoult in Ricordi edn
A43	219	41	169a, b	Grand galop chromatique	1838	Paris: Latte; Leipzig: Hofmeister; Milan: Ricordi; Breslau: Grosser, 1838†; Paris: Latte (simplified version); Paris: Leduc, 1886 (Nouvelle édition)	MW ii/10; NLE i/13
				Remarks: ded. Count Rudolf Apponyi; 2nd Trio is derived from the Galop de Bal (see A64); the simplified version was also pubd as a work by J. Strauss; 1st perf. Vienna, Café Sperl, 25 Nov 1839; see also B2
A44	399	153	171–3	Nuits d'été à Pausilippe:	1838	Mainz: Schott, 1839†	NLE ii/4
				1 Barcarola (Il barcajuolo), 2 Notturno (L'alito di Bice), 3 Canzone napoletana (La torre di Biasone)
				Remarks: ded. Mme la Marquise Sophie de Medici; based on songs and duet by Donizetti
A45	557	242	181	Lob der Tränen (Bénédiction des larmes) [Schubert]	1838	Vienna: Haslinger, 1838†; Braunschweig: Meyer, n.d.	NLE ii/20
				Remarks: based on the song D711
A46	559	244	182	Der Gondelfahrer [Schubert]	1838	Vienna: Spina, 1838†; Vienna: Cranz, 1883 (new edn)	NLE ii/3
				Remarks: based on 'Es tanzen Mond und Sterne', D809, for 4 male vv

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A47	411	220	174	Soirées italiennes (6 amusements pour piano sur motifs de Mercadante): 1 La primavera (Canzonetta), 2 Il galop, 3 Il pastore svizzero (Tirolese), 4 La serenata del marinaro, 5 Il brindisi (Rondoletto), 6 La zingarella spagnola (Bolero)	1838–9	Mainz: Schott, 1840†	NLE ii/4
				Remarks: ded. Archduchess Elisabeth of Austria
A48	425	250	183	Mélodies hongroises (d'après Schubert)	1838–9	Vienna: Diabelli, 1840†, Cranz, (3rd edn); Milan: Lucca, 1840; Vienna: Diabelli, 1846 (simplified edn)	NLE ii/3
				Remarks: ded. Count Gustav Neipperg; based on Schubert's Divertissement à la hongroise D818
A49	560	245/1–14	186–99	Schwanengesang (Chant du Cygne) [Schubert]: 1 Die Stadt, 2 Das Fischermädchen, 3 Aufenthalt, 4 Am Meer, 5 Abschied, 6 In der Ferne, 7 Ständchen 'Leise flehen meine Lieder', 8 Ihr Bild, 9 Frühlingssehnsucht, 10 Liebesbotschaft, 11 Der Atlas, 12 Der Doppelgänger, 13 Die Taubenpost, 14 Kriegers Ahnung	1838–9	Vienna: Haslinger, 1838 (nos.3, 7)†; 1840 (nos.1, 2, 4–6, 8–14)†, 1842 (nos.4, 12; new edn), n.d. (nos.7, 9); Paris: Hainauer, 1865 (no.7; rev.); Leipzig, 1901 (no.7) [in L. Ramann: Liszt-Pädagogium]; Paris: Schlesinger (no.3); Milan: Ricordi (no.7); Prague: Halla (no.7)	NLE ii/21
				Remarks: ded. Archduchess Sophie in later Haslinger edn; no.7 ded. Mme la comtesse d'Aragon (née Visconti) in Ricordi edn; based on Schubert's song cycle D957
A50	561	246/1–12	212–23	Winterreise [Schubert]: 1 Gute Nacht, 2 Die Nebensonnen, 3 Mut, 4 Die Post, 5 Erstarrung, 6 Wasserflut, 7 Der Lindenbaum, 8 Der Leyermann, 9 Täuschung, 10 Das Wirtshaus, 11 Der stürmische Morgen, 12 Im Dorfe	1838–9	Paris: Richault; Milan: Ricordi, 1840†; Milan: Ricordi, 1838 (no.4), 1840; Vienna: Haslinger, 1838 (no.4); London: Cocks, 1840
				Remarks: ded. Mme la comtesse d'Aragon (no.4, Ricordi 1838) and Princess Eleonore Schwarzenberg (Cocks 1840); based on songs from Schubert's cycle D911
A51	458	294	430	Piece based on Italian opera melodies [Mercadante's Il Giuramento]	1838–9		NLE ii/2
				Remarks: according to K. Hamilton (entry in D-WRgs catalogue, 1989), probably the fantasy played by Liszt, 10 Sept 1838, at a benefit concert in Milan under the title Réminiscences de La Scala
A52	140	3a	163–8	[6] Etudes d'exécution transcendante d'après Paganini (Bravour-Studien nach Paganini's Capricen)	1838–40	Paris: Schonenberger, 1840†	NLE i/2
				Remarks: ded. Clara Schumann; based on Paganini's 24 Caprices op.1 and B minor Vn Conc., last movt, 'La campanella' [Liszt no.1/Paganini no.6, 2/17, 3/Vn Conc., 4/1, 5/9, 6/24]; see also A15, A113, A173

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A53	159	10d/1–4	200–03	Venezia e Napoli [1st version]: 1 Lento, 2 Allegro, 3 Andante placido, 4 Tarantelles napolitaines	1838–40		MW ii/5; NLE i/7
				Remarks: see A197
A54	552	237	180	Ouverture de l'opéra Guillaume Tell [Rossini]	?1838–41	Mainz: Schott, 1842†	NLE ii/20
A55	161	10b/1–7	156–62	Années de pèlerinage, deuxième année, Italie, 2 versions	1838–61	Vienna: Haslinger, 1846 (1st version nos.4–6)†; St Petersburg: Au Ménestrel, ?1847 (no.5; ?1st edn); Mainz: Schott, 1858 (collected edn, 2nd version)†	MW ii/5 (1st version, nos.4–6), ii/6 (2nd version, complete); NLE i/7 (2nd version)
				1 Sposalizio, 2 Il penseroso, 3 Canzonetta del Salvator Rosa, 4 Sonetto del Petrarca no.47 (Benedetto sia'l giorno), 5 Sonetto del Petrarca no.104 (Pace non trovo), 6 Sonetto del Petrarca no.123 (I'vidi in terra angelici costumi), 7 Après une lecture du Dante, fantasia quasi sonata
				Remarks: no.1 inspired by Raphael's 'Brera' Madonna, Milan, no.2 by Michelangelo's statue for Giuliano de' Medici's tomb, Florence, nos.4–6 poems by Petrarch, nos.47, 104, 123, comp. 1846, publ. 1846 sep. for pf and pf/tenor; no.7 after poem by V. Hugo ; A197 (1859–61) added as 'Supplement 2de Volume'; see also A102, A197, J44, N14
A56	393	132	209	Fantaisie sur des motifs favoris de l'opéra La sonnambula [Bellini], 2 versions	1839–?42	Paris: Launer, 1842†; Leipzig: Schuberth, 1853 (2nd edn), 1874 (2nd edn, repr.)	NLE ii/4
				Remarks: ded. Princess Augusta of Prussia
A57a	210	33a	211	Valse mélancolique	1839	Vienna: Haslinger; Paris: Schlesinger, 1840†; 1841†	LSP iv; MW ii/10
	731	33a	1369	Valse élégiaque	1839	Berlin: Bote & Bock, n.d.
				Remarks: C1369 = Valse mélancolique (C211) in Mil'shteyn (H1956); see A66
A57b	214/1–3	32b, 33b	578–80	3 caprices-valses no.2: Valse mélancolique, E	1850–52	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1852†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1852 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: 2nd version of A57a
A58	466	121	210	Adelaide	1839–40	Paris: Schlesinger†; Leipzig: B&H, 1840†, (Nouvelle édition), 1877 (rev.)	NLE ii/4
				Remarks: ded. Marquise Martellini
A59	[242/13]	[105/13]	[237]	Rákóczi Marsch	1839–40	Budapest: in SMH, xxviii (1986)	NLE i/18
				Remarks: see A60b/13, with simplified version (incomplete), A132, S28

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A60a, b, c, d, e	242	105a/ 1–11	225–35	Magyar dallok/ Ungarische Nationalmelodien/ Mélodies hongroises [Hefte i–iv]:	1839–40		RS viii; NLE i/18 (nos.1–3, 8–10); LSP vii (nos.1–3, 6, 8–10)
A60a	242	105a/1	225	i: 1 Lento, c		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; Paris: Latte, 1841 (2nd edn)
	242	105a/2	226	i: 2 Andantino, C		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn); Paris: in Monde musicale, iii (1842), suppl.
	242	105a/3	227	i: 3 Sehr langsam, D♭		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn)
	242	105a/4	228	i: 4 Animato, C♯		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; 1843 (simplified edn), 1845 (rev.); Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn), 1844; Paris: in Monde musical, iii (1842), suppl.
	242	105a/5	229	i: 5 Tempo giusto, D♭		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; 1843 (simplified edn), 1845 (rev.); Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn), 1844
	242	105a/6	230	i: 6 Lento, g		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn)
	242	105a/7	231	ii: 7 Andante cantabile, E♭		Vienna: Haslinger, 1840†; Paris: Latte, 1842 (2nd edn)
	242	105a/8	232	iii: 8 Lento, f		Vienna: Haslinger, 1843†
	242	105a/9	233	iii: 9 Lento, a		Vienna: Haslinger, 1843†
	242	105a/10	234	iv: 10 Adagio sostenuto a capriccio, D		Vienna: Haslinger, 1843†
	242	105a/11	235	iv: 11 Andante sostenuto, B♭		Vienna: Haslinger, 1843†, 1843 (simplified edn), 1845 (rev.); Paris: Latte, 1844
				Remarks: ded.: Count Leo Festetics (nos./1–6), Count Casimir Esterházy (7), Count Albarti (9); nos. 1–7 also pubd Latte, 1841, as Album d'un voyageur, 3me année, Mélodies hongroises; no.4 used later in A60d/2 and A132/6, no.5 in A60d/1 and A132/6, no.6 in A60b/12 and A132/5, no.7 in A133/4, no.10 in A60b/13 and A132/16, no.11 in A60d/3 and A132/3 and 6
A60b				Magyar Rhapsodiak/ Ungarische Rhapsodien/ R[h]apsodies hongroises [R[h]apsodies hongroises, cahiers v–x]:	1846–7	Vienna: Haslinger, 1847 (nos.12–17)	NLE i/18 (nos.13, 15, 17); RS viii
	242	105b/12	236	v: 12 Héroïde élégiaque, mesto, e
	242	105b/13	237	vi: 13 Tempo di marcia, a [Rákóczy March]
	242	105b/14	238	vii: 14 Lento a capriccio, a

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	242	105b/15	239	viii: 15 Lento tempo e stilo zingarese, d
	242	105b/16	240	ix: 16 Preludio – Andante deciso, E
	242	105b/17	241	x: 17 Andante sostenuto, a
A60c				[Ungarische Rhapsodien]:
	242	105c/18	242	18 Introduction (Adagio), c♯
	242	105c/19	243	19 Lento patetico, f♯
	242	105c/20	244	20 Allegro vivace, g
	242	105c/21	245/1	21 Lento, tempo di marcia funebre, e
				Remarks: ded.: Count Leo Festetics, Baron Anton Augusz, Baron Banffy, Count D. Teleky, P. Nyáry, R. Eckstein (all no.13), Baron Fery Orczy (nos.14, 15), Baron Béne Egressy (no.16); no.12 based on A60a/6, used later in A132/5; another version of no.13 exists as Ungarische Nationalmelodie erleichtert (Heft vi), see also A132 and A224; no.14 used later in A132/11, no.15 in A132/7, no.16 in A132/10, no.17 in A132/13, no.18 in A132/12, no.19 in A132/8, no.20 in A132/6 and 12, no.21 in A132/4 and H12, no.22 in A132/9 and 14
A60d	243	105d/1–3	257–9	Ungarische National-Melodien:	1840–?44 or 46	Vienna: Haslinger, 1842–3†, 1846 (2nd version)	MW ii/12; NLE i/18
		105d/1	257	1 Tempo giusto, D
		105d/2	258	2 Animato, C
		105d/3	259	3 Prelude – Allegretto, B♭
				Remarks: based on A60a nos.5, 4, 11; used later in A132
A60e	242	[105/5]		[R[h]apsodies hongroises]: 22 Pesther Karneval (Le Carneval de Pest)	1846–8
				Remarks: see A132/9, 1st version
A61	[173]	[14]	[347]	Harmonies poétiques et religieuses, 1st version	1840–48	Huizen: Muziekuitgeverij XYZ, 1997†	NLE i/9 (nos.1–3)
			294	1 Elevez-vous voix [Invocation]
	173a		295	2 Hymne de la nuit (1st version)
	173a		296	3 Hymne du matin (1st version)
	695a		501	4 Litanies de Marie
				5 [Miserere d'après Palestrina]
				6 Pater noster, d'après la psalmodie de l'église
				7 Hymne de l'enfant à son réveil
				8 [Les morts]
				9 La lampe du temple
				10 [unidentified piece, E♭]
				11 [?Bénédiction de Dieu dans la solitude]
				12 [?Ave Maria]
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; incl. 12 pieces (Liszt's inventory, D-WRgs); orig. idea for set 1835; titles and order are from MS sources in Liszt's 1847 draftbook (WRgs 60/N9) and the French source of the Miserere/Pater Noster (F-Pbn MS 163); no.9 is the earlier version of Andante lagrimoso (A158/9); see also A158, J2, J3
A62	525	188	827	Totentanz	1839–65	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bülow; later rev. for pf, orch (see H8; see also C24)
A63a	142	4a	249	Morceau de salon, étude de perfectionnement de la Méthode des méthodes (de piano de Fétis), 1st version	1840	Paris: Schlesinger, 1841†	MW ii/3; [NLE]

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A63b	143	4b	648	Ab irato (Etude de perfectionnement de la Méthode des méthodes de Fétis), 2nd version	1852	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1852†	LSP viii; NLE i/2; MW ii/3
				Remarks: the main theme is the same as that of Les Préludes (G3)
A64	220	42	250/2	Galop de bal	1840	St Petersburg: Bernard, 1840†	NLE i/13
				Remarks: ded. A. Koczuchowski; see also A43
A65	231	53	251/1	Heroischer Marsch im ungarischen Styl	1840	Leipzig: Cranz, 1840†	NLE i/13
				Remarks: ded. King Ferdinand of Portugal; uses main theme of G13; see also C16, S28
A66	164	64/2	252	Albumblatt, E (Deux feuilles d'Album no.1)	1840	NZfM, 1841 (no.15)†; Leipzig: Friese, 1841; Hamburg: Schuberth, 1850 (with A57)
				Remarks: based on Valse mélancolique, 1st version (A57a)
A67	234	100	255	Hussitenlied	1840	Prague: Hoffmann, 1840–41†; Paris: Richault, 1841	NLE ii/5
				Remarks: ded. Count Chotek of Chotkowa and Wognin based on a song melody by J.T. Krov (Těšme se blahou nadějć); see also B3
A68	451	284	262	Freischütz Fantasie [Weber]	1840	unpubd	NLE ii/5
				Remarks: based on Und ob die Wolke sie verhülle (Act 3) and Waltz (Act 1)
A69	465	127	263	Grand septuor [Beethoven]	1840	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1842†	NLE ii/22
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna; see also B4
A70	467	122	264–9	Sechs geistliche Lieder [Beethoven, op.48 (C.F. Gellert)]: 1 Gottes Macht und Vorsehung, 2 Bitten, 3 Busslied, 4 Vom Tode, 5 Die Liebe des Nächsten, 6 Die Ehre Gottes aus der Natur	1840	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1840†	NLE ii/4
				Remarks: ded. Mlle Zoë de la Rue
A71a	400	154	270	Réminiscences de Lucrezia Borgia [Donizetti] 1st version (1840): Fantaisie sur des motifs favoris de Lucrezia Borgia (Chanson à boire, orgie)	1840–48	Paris: Latte; Vienna: Mechetti, 1841†	RS iv/1
A71b	400	154	270	Réminiscences de Lucrezia Borgia [Donizetti] 2nd version: grande fantaisie: i Trio du seconde Acte, ii Chanson à boire-(Orgie) Duo-finale	*c*1848	Vienna: Mechetti, 1849	RS ii/1; NLE ii/5
A72	547	217	271	Lieder [Mendelssohn]	1840; rev.1874–5	Leipzig: B&H, 1840†; Leipzig: B&H, 1876 (rev. edn)	[NLE ii/22]
				Remarks: ded. Frau Cécile Mendelssohn; based on 7 songs from opp.19a, 34, 47
A73	562	247/1–4	278–81	Franz Schuberts geistliche Lieder: 1 Litaney, 2 Himmelsfunken, 3 Die Gestirne, 4 Hymne [from Rosamunde]	1840	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1841†	[NLE ii/4]
				Remarks: based on D343 (no.1), 651 (no.2), 444 (no.3), 797 (no.4; part of Geisterchor)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A74	391	130	261	I puritani, introduction et polonaise [Bellini]	1840–41	Mainz: Schott, 1841†; London: Cramer, Addison & Beale, ?1841 (2nd edn)	RS ii/2; NLE ii/5
				Remarks: sep. version of Polacca from A34
A75	167b		1303	Miniatur Lieder	1840s	unpubd
A76	235	98	299/1	God Save the Queen	1841–9	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1849†	NLE ii/5
				Remarks: 1st version includes material from 'Messiah' and 'Judas Maccabeus' by Handel, and 'Rule Brittannia'
A77	394	133	300	Réminiscences de Norma [Bellini]	1841	Paris: Latte; Mainz: Schott, 1844†	RS ii/2; NLE ii/5
				Remarks: ded. M. Pleyel; see also C3
A78	413	222	302/1	Réminiscences de Robert le diable [Meyerbeer]	1841	Berlin: Schlesinger; Paris: Schlesinger, 1841†	MW i/2; NLE ii/5
				Remarks: ded. Princess Ekaterina Dmitriyevna de Soutzo; see also W2
A79	416	225	304	Le moine (Der Mönch) [Meyerbeer]	1841	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1842	[NLE ii/5]
				Remarks: ded. Baron Ferdinand Ziegesar
A80	418	228	305	Réminiscences de Don Juan [Mozart]	1841	Paris: Schlesinger; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†	[NLE ii/5]
				Remarks: ded. King Christian VIII of Denmark; see also C26
A81				Die Zelle in Nonnenwerth (Ach, nun taucht die Klosterzelle)	1841–80
A81a	534		316a	1st version	1840	Paris: Latte: in Album de piano du Monde musical, 1843†	LSP, 1978
A81b	[274/1]	[618a]	316b	2nd version (Elegie für das Pianoforte)	1841	Cologne: Eck, 1843†, 1844; Paris: Schlesinger, 1844; Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1872
A81c	167	64/2	316c/318	3rd version (Feuilles d'album, no.2)	1849	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1850†
A81d	534	213	316d	4th version (Elegie)	?1880	Cologne: Tonger, 1883†; in Neue Musik-Zeitung, iv (1883) (rev.)	NLE i/17; LSP vii
				Remarks: ded. Prince Felix Lichnowsky (1st version), M. d'Agoult (2nd version); based on N6; see also D21
A82			253	Valse de Marie	1842	Budapest: in SMH, xxviii (1986), 237–48
				Remarks: not the same as Valse Mariotique or Valse de Mariotte, the latter another name for the Grande valse di bravoura; see A32a, b
A83	166	63	317	Albumblatt in Walzerform	1842	in Göllerich (H1908), suppl.†	MW ii/10; NLE i/13
A84a	212	35	320a	Petite valse favorite (Souvenir de St Pétersbourg)	1842	Hamburg: Schuberth; Leipzig: Schuberth; Paris: Latte; St Petersburg: Odéon; Milan: Ricordi, 1843†
A84b	212	35	320b	[Petite valse favorite]	1843		NLE i/13
				Remarks: MS "Petersbourg 3 Juin 1843" ded. Mme Maria Kalergis; enlarged version of A84a
A84c	213	36	577	Valse-impromptu	1850–52	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1852	MW ii/10; NLE i/13
				Remarks: based on A84a–b

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A85	248	92	321a/b	Canzone Napolitana	1842	Dresden: Meser, 1843†, 1848 (Edition nouvelle)	NLE ii/6
				Remarks: ded. Mlle C. de Groeditzberg
A86				Deux mélodies russes (Arabesques)
	250	102/1	322	1 Le rossignol, air russe d'Alabieff	1842	Leipzig: Cranz, 1842†, 1879 (Nouvelle édition)	EMB, 1952; NLE ii/6
	250	102/2	323	2 Chanson bohémienne	?1843	Hamburg: Cranz, A., 1843† 1879 (rev.)
A87	577	291	324a, b	Autrefois (Romanze) [M. Wielhorski]	1842	Moscow: Jürgenson, 1843†; Berlin: Fürstner, 1860	NLE ii/6
A88a	401	155	326	Valse à capriccio sur deux motifs de Lucia et Parisina [Donizetti]	1842	Vienna: Haslinger, 1842†	MW ii/1; NLE ii/6
				Remarks: see A88b
A88b	214/1, 2, 3	32b	578–80	3 caprices-valses no.3: Grande valse de bravoure, A	1850–52	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1852†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1852
				Remarks: 2nd version of A88a; see also A32b and A57b
A89			327	Die Gräberinsel der Fürsten zu Gotha, Herzog Ernst II von Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha	1842		EMB, 1985†; NLE ii/6
				Remarks: ded. Fürsten Ernst II of Saxe-Coburg
A90	697	660	328/1	Fantasie über Motive aus Figaro und Don Juan [Mozart]	1842		MW, 1912†; EMB, 1998
A91	484	103, 149	608	Souvenir de Russie, feuillet d'album	1842	St Petersburg: Bernard, ?1842†	NLE ii/24
				Remarks: later rev. for inclusion in Bunte Reihe transcriptions (see A170)
A92	462	119	341	Sechs Präludien und Fugen für die Orgel [Bach]	1842–50	Leipzig: Peters, 1852†	NLE ii/22
A93	384	115	325	Mazurka pour piano composée par un amateur de St Pétersbourg	?1842	Moscow: Jürgenson, 1842†	NLE ii/6
A94	168	75	319	Elégie sur des motifs du Prince Louis Ferdinand	1843	Berlin: Schlesinger, ?1843/1847†, ?1852 (rev.)	NLE i/17
				Remarks: ded. Princess Augusta of Prussia
A95	211	34	370	Ländler, A♭	1843	London: Curwen, 1958†, in Five Liszt Discoveries	NLE i/13
A96	240	99	372	Gaudeamus igitur	1843	Breslau: Hainauer, 1843†	NLE ii/6
				Remarks: concert paraphrase, not related to A246
A97	531	209	373–8	Buch der Lieder für Piano allein, I: 1 Die Loreley, 2 Am Rhein, 3 Mignon's Lied, 4 Es war ein König in Thule, 5 Der du von dem Himmel bist, 6 Angiolin dal biondo crin	1843	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on 1st version of songs N1, 3, 5, 8–10
A98	533	203	379	Il m'aimait tant!	1843	Mainz: Schott, 1843†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on N4

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A99	478	143	382	Russischer Galopp [Bulhakov]	1843	St Petersburg: Jürgenson, 1843†
A100	695	663	384	Klavierstück, F	1843		NLE†
A101				Quasi Mazurka	?c1843	unpubd
				Remarks: ded. Princess Radziwill
A102	158	10b	393–5a, b	Tre sonetti del Petrarca: 1 Benedetto sia'l giorno, 2 Pace non trovo, 3 I' vidi in terra angelici costumi	1843–6	Vienna: Haslinger, 1846†; Moscow: Au Ménestrel, ?1846 (no.2); Mainz: Schott, 1858 (rev.)	NLE i/7; MW ii/6
				Remarks: based on Petrarch sonnets nos.47, 104 and 123; see also A55 and N14
A103	541	211	583–5	Liebesträume, 3 notturnos: 1 Hohe Liebe (In Liebesarmen), 2 Seliger Tod (Gestorben war ich), 3 (O lieb, o lieb, so lang du lieben kannst)	1843–50	Leipzig: Kistner, 1850†, 1886 (2nd edn)	NLE i/15; MW
				Remarks: based on songs N18 according to a letter of 1843 (US-Wc); no.3 orig. meant for pubn as song in Eck's Sechs Lieder (1844), but lost in post; see also A233
A104	165	62	297	Feuilles d'Album	1844	Paris: Latte; Mainz: Schott, 1844†	NLE i/13; MW ii/10
				Remarks: ded. Gustave Dubousquet
A105	233		397	Marche hongroise	1844		RS, 1956†; NLE i/13
A106	236	93	399	Faribolo Pastour	1844	Paris: Bureau Central, 1844†	NLE (single issue); in Liszt Society Journal, xvi (1991), suppl., 28–33
				Remarks: ded. Countess Carolyne d'Artigaux
A107	236	94	400	Chanson du Béarn	1844	Paris: Bureau Central, 1844†	NLE ii/6; in Liszt Society Journal, xvi (1991), suppl., 34–41
				Remarks: ded. Countess d'Artigaux
A108	402	156	401	Marche funèbre de Dom Sébastien [Donizetti]	1844	Paris: Bureau Central, 1844†	MW ii/1; NLE ii/6
				Remarks: ded. Queen Maria da Gloria of Portugal
A109	563	248/1–6	402–7	Sechs Melodien von Franz Schubert: 1 Lebewohl, 2 Mädchens Klage, 3 Das [Zügen glöcklein] Sterbeglöcklein (La cloche des agonisants), 4 Trockne Blumen, 5 Ungeduld (1), 6 Die Forelle (1)	1844	Paris: Richault, 1844†	NLE ii/7
				Remarks: no.1 not by Schubert, but Richault's edn does not give the names of the actual composer, A.H. von Weyrauch (b Riga, 1788), and poet, K.F.G. Wetzel; nos.2–6 based on D191, 871, 795/18, 795/7, 550
A110	487	161	454	Spanisches Ständchen [L. Festetics]	1844		NLE ii/18†
A111a	172	12	420–25	Consolations 1st version: 1 Andante con moto, E; 2 Un poco più mosso, E; 3 Lento, quasi recitativo, E; 4 Quasi adagio/cantabile con divozione, D♭; 5 Andantino, E; 6 Allegretto, E	1844–50

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A111b				2nd version: 1 Andante con moto, E; 2 Un poco più mosso, E; 3 Lento placido, D♭; 4 Quasi adagio, D♭; 5 Andantino, E; 6 Allegretto sempre cantabile, E		Leipzig: B&H, 1850†	NLE i/9; MW ii/8; Munich: Henle, 1992
				Remarks: the title appears to have been a suggestion from Marie Lamartine, citing the two 'consolations' Liszt as an artist had to offer the world, 'génie et La Charité'; the 1st version was engraved by Kistner but withdrawn and rev. Liszt in 1850; no.3 used the melody taken into Hungarian Rhapsody no.1, A132/1; no.4 is based on a melody by Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna of Weimar; see D11, E22
A112				Seconde marche hongroise (Ungarischer Sturmmarsch)
	232	54a	371a, b	1st version	1844	Paris: Schlesinger, 1844†	NLE i/16
	524	54b	1097	2nd version, e	1875–6	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1876 (rev.)	NLE i/16
				Remarks: ded. S. Teleky; see also B46, G35
A113				[Variations de bravoure pour piano sur des thèmes de Paganini]	1845		EMB, 1989†
				Remarks: see also A15, A52, A173
A114	253	89	428	Grosse Concert-Phantasie über spanische Weisen [Fandango, jota et cachuca]	1845	Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, 1887†	NLE ii/6
				Remarks: ded. L. Ramann; see A195, Q11
A115	428	258	429	Feuille morte (Elégie d'après Sorriano)	1845	Paris: Troupenas, ?1845†	LSP, xiv; NLE ii/6
A116	189a	44a	426	[Piano piece, A♭]	?1845		NLE i/9
				Remarks: Ballade no.1, frag., 1845, first pubd in Hung. trans. (1965) of Mil'shteyn (H1956); MS in RUS-Mcl; see A117
A117	170	15	427/1	Ballade no.1	1845–9	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†; Paris: Meissonnier, 1849 (later issue)	NLE i/9; MW ii/8; Munich: Henle, 1996
				Remarks: ded. Prince Eugen Wittgenstein; pubd by Meissonnier as Chant du Croisé (not Liszt's title); other alternative titles incl. Dernière illusion, Galop bohémien; see A116
A118	144	5	515-17	Trois [grandes] études de concert (1 Il lamento, A♭, 2 La leggierezza, f, 3 Un sospiro, D♭)	1845–9	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†; Paris: Meissonnier, 1849 (later issue)	NLE i/10; MW ii/3; Munich: Henle, 1987
				Remarks: ded. E. Liszt; individual titles are not Liszt's and not in edns pubd during his lifetime
A119	218	40	298	Galop, a	1846		MW ii/10†; NLE i/13; LSP iv
A120	412a		302/2	Cavatine de Robert le diable (Robert, toi que j'aime) [Meyerbeer]	1846		LSP, 1996 (transcr.); NLE
				Remarks: based on music in Ricordi's Antologia Classica di Musica suppl., 1842, 1st perf., before pubn, Copenhagen, ?1841 (see Autexier)
A121	576	290	463	Jubelouvertüre [Weber]	1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1847†	[NLE ii/23]
A122	574	288	383	Ouvertüre zu Oberon [Weber]	1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1847†	RS i; [NLE ii/23]
A123	426	251	466/1	Schuberts Märsche für das Pianoforte solo	1846	Paris: Richault, 1846†; Berlin: Fürstner, 1880 (new edn)
				Remarks: ded. F. von Koudelka; based on D819 and D968b; see also B35, G24
A124	388	125	449–50	Capriccio alla turca sur des motifs de Beethoven (Ruines d'Athènes)	1846	Vienna: Mechetti, 1847†
				Remarks: see A177, C6, H9

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A125	386	117	452	Tarantelle di bravura d'après la tarantelle de La muette de Portici [Auber]	1846	Paris: Mechetti, 1847†; Milan: Ricordi (2nd edn)	MW i/10; NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. M. Pleyel
A126	507	198	453	Klavierstück nach Motiven aus der 1. Beethoven-Kantate	1846†	Bonn: Hallberger, 1846	NLE i/11
				Remarks: based on B6, L1
A127	564	248	455	Die Forelle [Schubert], 2nd version	1846	Vienna: Spina, 1856†; Vienna: Diabelli, 1846 (2nd version)	NLE ii/7
				Remarks: see A109
A128	565	249/1–6	456–61	Müllerlieder [Schubert]: 1 Das Wandern, 2 Der Müller und der Bach, 3 Der Jäger, 4 Die böse Farbe, 5 Wohin?, 6 Ungeduld (2)	1846	Vienna: Spina, 1846†; Hamburg: Cranz, 1879 (simplified edn)	NLE ii/7
				Remarks: ded. R. Spina; based on D795
A129	575	289	462	Ouvertüre zum Freischütz [Weber]	1846	Paris: Brandus, 1847†	RS i/1; [NLE ii/23]
				Remarks: although Liszt did not write down this piece until 1846, he and Valerie Boissier perf. the 'Ouv. du Freischütz' for pf 4 hands in Paris in Jan 1832
A130	485	150	481–3	Lieder [Dessauer]	1846–7	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1847†	[NLE ii/8]
A131	427	252	649–57a, b	Soirées de Vienna ([9] Valses caprices d'après Schubert)	1846–52	Vienna: Spina, 1852/3†; Paris: Bureau Central, ?1852†	NLE ii/10
				Remarks: ded. S. Löwy; based on Schubert dances for pf: no.1: D365 734, 783; no.2: D365, 145, 365; no.3: D145, 783, 365, 145; no.4: D365; no.5: D365, 969; no.6: D969, 779; no.7: D783; no.8: D783, 969, 783; no.9: D365
A132	244			[19] Ungarische Rhapsodien			MW ii/12; NLE i/3 (nos.1–9), i/4 (nos.10–19)
A132/1		106/1	466	1 Lento quasi recitativo, c♯	1846–51	Leipzig: Senff, 1851†
A132/2		106/2	467	2 Lento a capriccio, c♯	1846–51	Leipzig: Senff, 1851†; Milan: Ricordi
A132/3		106/3	468	3 Andante, B♭	1846–53	Vienna: Haslinger, 1853†; Berlin: Schlesinger
A132/4		106/4	469	4 Quasi adagio, altieramente, E♭	1846–53	Vienna: Haslinger, 1853†; Berlin: Schlesinger (later issue)
A132/5		106/5	470	5 Héroïde élégiaque, e	1846–53	Vienna: Haslinger, 1853†; Paris: Brandus; Berlin: Schlesinger
A132/6		106/6	471	6 Tempo giusto, D♭	1846–53	Vienna: Haslinger, 1853†; Berlin: Schlesinger
A132/7		106/7	472	7 Lento, d	1846–53	Vienna: Haslinger, 1853†; Berlin: Schlesinger
A132/8		106/8	473	8 Lento a capriccio, f♯	1846–53	Mainz: Schott, 1853†	RS, 1956 (facs.)
A132/9a		106/9a	474	9 Pesther Carneval (Le carnaval de Pesth), E♭
				1st version	1846–8	Paris: Brandus, 1848†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1848†; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1848 (later issue)
A132/9b		106/9b	474	2nd version	1846–53	Mainz: Schott, 1853

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A132/10		106/10	475	10 Preludio, E	1846–53	Mainz: Schott, 1853†
A132/11		106/11	476	11 Lento a capriccio, a	1846–53	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1853†
A132/12		106/12	477	12 Introduzione, mesto, c♯	1846–53	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1853†
A132/13		106/13	478	13 Andante sostenuto, a	1846–53	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1853†
A132/14		106/14	479	14 Lento, quasi marcia funebre, f	1846–53	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1853†
A132/15a		[105/13]	[237]	(1) Marche de Rákóczy, Edition populaire	1851	Leipzig: Kistner, 1851
A132/15b		106/15a	480	(2) 15 Rákóczi-Marsch, a	1846–53	Paris: Schlesinger, 1853†; Mainz: Schott, 1853†
A132/16		106/16	1267	16 Allegro, a	1882	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1882†, n.d. (Veränderte Ausgabe); Vienna: Weinberger
A132/17		106/17	1268	17 Lento, d	1884	Paris: in Le figaro, ?1885†; Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1886; Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1886
A132/18		106/18	1333	18 Lento, c♯	1885	Budapest: Rózsavőlgyi, 1885†, Táborszky & Parsch, 1885 (later issue)
A132/19		106/19	1334	19 Lento, d	1885	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1885†; Leipzig: Hofmeister; EMB, 1985 (facs.)

Remarks: ded. 1: E. Zerdahélyi, theme from 1st version of A111/3; 2: ded. Count László Teleky, based on Romanian theme; see also T5; 3: ded. Count Leo Festetics, based on A60a/11; 4: ded. Count Casimir Esterházy, based on A60a/7; 5: ded. Countess Sidonie Revicsky, based on A60a/6 and A60b/12; 6: ded. Count Anton Apponyi, based on A60a/4–6, A60a/11, A60c/20, and A60d; 7: ded. Baron Fery Orczy, based on A60b/15; 8: ded. Baron Anton Augusz, based on A60c/19; 9: based on A60e/22, 2nd version ded. H.W. Ernst; 10: ded. B. Egressy, based on A60b/16; 11: ded. Baron Orczy; 12: ded. J. Joachim, based on A60c/18, A60a/10: ded. Count Festetics, based on A60a/17; 14: ded. H. von Bülow, based on A60a/21, 22, used in H12; [s105/13]: Ráckóczy (1) = version between A60a/13 and A132/15; 16: ded. M. Munkácsy, for Munkáscy's arrival home from France, 1st perf., Budapest, 25 Feb 1882; 18: in honour of the 1885 Hungarian National Exposition, pubd in Ausstellungsalbum ungarischer Tondichter, ed. I. Bartalus; 19: based on two melodies in Elegáns csárdások, from K. Ábrányi's Csárdás nobles

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A133	566	253	530	Liebeslied (Widmung) [Schumann]	?1846–1860s	Leipzig: Kistner, 1848†; Paris: Richault, 1849

Remarks: rev. version unpubd, US-Wc

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A134		[579a]		Andantino [Freudvoll und Leidvoll]	1847

Remarks: part transcr. of N23

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A135				Albumblätter für Marie Wittgenstein: 1: Lilie (Andantino, C) 2: Mazurek: Gdy w czystem polu [Mazurka: When on the Clean Earth], A 3: Hryć 4: Krakowie, F	1847	unpubd

Remarks: easy pieces inscribed in Princess Marie-Sayn Wittgenstein's album

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A136			260	'Spirto gentil' de l'opéra La favorite [Donizetti]	1847	in Liszt Society Journal, xvii (1992), suppl., 25–33

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: based on a version of the aria in Ricordi's Antologia di Gazetta Musicale di Milano (no.7, July 1842), but Liszt probably did not encounter this issue until 1847
A137	403	157	488	Grande paraphrase de la marche de Donizetti composée pour Sa Majesté le sultan Abdul Medjid-Khan	1847	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1848†, n.d. (simplified edn)	NLE ii/8
A138	431a	293	489	Concert paraphrase on an operatic theme [Verdi: Ernani]	1847	unpubd
				Remarks: written while Liszt was on tour in Constantinople, June 1847; identified by Schnapp (A1942), p.132; see also A203
A139				[6 transcriptions]:	1847		NLE i/18†
	536	210	490	1 Oh, quand je dors
	535	204	491	2 Comment, disaient-ils
	537	205	492	3 Enfant, si j'étais roi
	538	206	493	4 S'il est un charmant gazon
	539	207	494	5 La tombe et la rose
	540	208	495	6 Gastibelza
				Remarks: 1 composed in Woronince, Oct 1847, based on N11; 2–6 based on N12, N24, N25, N26 and N27 respectively
A140	405	160	496	Schwanengesang und Marsch aus Hunyadi László [F. Erkel]	1847	unpubd	NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. S. Bohrer; Erkel's op was first perf. in Pest, 1844
A141	553	238	498–9	Deux transcriptions d'après Rossini: 1 Air du Stabat mater (Cujus animam), 2 La charité	1847	Mainz: Schott, 1852†	NLE ii/23
				Remarks: 1: see F1, K5
A142	579/3		500	Stabat mater	1847		NLE i/12†
				Remarks: erroneously considered to be part of Christus (I7); not related to A141
A143	249	101/1–3	504–6	Glanes de Woronince: 1 Ballade d'Ukraine (Dumka), 2 Mélodies polonaises, 3 Complaintes (Dumka)	1847	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†; Moscow: Muzgiz, 1952	NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie Sayn-Wittgenstein; no.1 based on Polish melody Oj, nye hogy Grigu, no.2 on Chopin's Mädchen's Wunsch (op.74/1), no.3 on Ukrainian folksong, Vijuty vitri, vijuty bujni; see also A193
A144	387	118	1345–6	Drei Stücke aus der Oper La muette de Portici von Auber	1847/8		NLE ii/5
				Remarks: nos.1 and 2 are a single piece, Introduction (E, 4/4) and Cavatine (?Berceuse, A♭); no.3 (Klavierstuck über ein fremdes Thema Andantino, a, 4/4) apparently not from Auber's opera
A145		64a		Andante amoroso	?1847	Paris: Brandus, 1847†
A146	422	275	524	Ouvertüre zu Tannhäuser [Wagner]	1847/?1849	Dresden: Meser, 1849†	MW arrs./i; NLE ii/23
A147	481	146	497	La célèbre Zigeunerpolka	1848	Leipzig: Schlesinger, 1849†	NLE ii/8
A148	169	66a	518	Romance	1848	Vienna: Hofmeister, 1908†	NLE i/11; LSP, vii
				Remarks: ded. J. Koscielska; arr. of song Oh, pourquoi donc (N30)
A149	431	264	519	Salve Maria de Jerusalem [Verdi: I Lombardi]	1848	Mainz: Schott, 1848†	MW iii/2; NLE ii/9
				Remarks: ded. M. Kalergis

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A150	454	287	520	Schlummerlied von C.M. von Weber mit Arabesken	1848	Leipzig: Kistner, 1848†	NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. F. Kroll
A151	452	285	523	Leyer und Schwert [Weber]	1848	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1848†	NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. Princess Augusta of Prussia
A152	453	286	525	Einsam bin ich, nicht alleine [Weber]	1848	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1848	MW i/10; [NLE ii/23]
				Remarks: ded. P. Bérard based on incidental music for P.A. Wolff's Preziosa
A153	510	201	521	Marche héroïque	?1848		NLE i/15
				Remarks: transcr. of M16; see also B7
A154	488	162	526	Er ist gekommen in Sturm und Regen [R. Franz]	1848	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†	NLE ii/9
				Remarks: ded. Mlle Jousselin based on song from op.4
A155	493	172	527/1–2	Septett [Hummel]	1848	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1849†, 1869 (rev.)	NLE ii/23
				Remarks: see also U12
A156	548	218	528–9	Mendelssohn's Wasserfahrt und Der Jäger Abschied [Mendelssohn]	1848	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†	NLE ii/9
				Remarks: based on choral songs op.50 nos.4 and 2
A157	489	163	531–42	[12] Lieder von Robert Franz: i: Schilflieder op.2: 1 Auf geheimen Waldespfaden; 2 Drüben geht die Sonne scheiden; 3 Trübe wird's; 4 Sonnenuntergang; 5 Auf dem Teich ii [3 Lieder]: 6 Der Schalk, op.3/1; 7 Der Bote, op.8/1; 8 Meeresstille, op.8/2 iii [4 Lieder]: 9 Treibt der Sommer, op.8/5; 10 Gewitternacht, op.8/6; 11 Das ist ein Brausen und Heulen, op.8/4; 12 Frühling und Liebe, op.3/3	1848	Leipzig: B&H, 1849†	NLE ii/9
A158	173	14/1–10		Harmonies poétiques et religieuses, 2nd version:	1848–53	Leipzig: Kistner, 1853†	LSP ii; MW ii/7; NLE i/9
			347	1 Invocation
			348	2 Ave Maria
			349	3 Bénédiction de Dieu dans la solitude
			294/350	4 Pensée des morts
			294	5 Pater noster
			294	6 Hymne de l'enfant à son réveil
			294	7 Funérailles (October 1849)
			294	8 Miserere, d'après Palestrina
			294	9 Andante lagrimoso
			294	10 Cantique d'amour
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; no.4 based on no.8 of 1st version, no.9 on no.9 of 1st version (see A61); see also H3, J2
A159	160	10/1–9	103–11	Années de pèlerinage, suite de compositions, 1re année, Suisse:	1848–55	Mainz: Schott, 1858†	MW ii/6; NLE i/6

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				1 Chappelle de Guillaume Tell (after Schiller), 2 Au lac de Wallenstadt (after Byron), 3 Pastorale, 4 Au bord d'une source (after Schiller), 5 Orage (after Byron), 6 Vallée d'Obermann (after Senancour), 7 Eglogue (after Byron), 8 Le mal du pays (Heimweh), 9 Les cloches de Genève (after Byron)
				Remarks: no.1 based on A40/1, 5, no.3 on A40b/7c, no.5 on A40c/2; see also A21, D18
A160	404	159	552	Halloh! Jagdchor und Steyrer aus der Oper Tony	1849	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†	MW iii/12; NLE ii/9
				Remarks: based on composition by Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha
A161	468	123	553–8	Beethovens Lieder von Goethe: 1 Mignon, 2 Mit einem gemalten Bande, 3 Freudvoll und leidvoll, 4 Es war einmal ein König, 5 Wonne der Wehmut, 6 Die Trommel gerühret	1849	Leipzig: B&H, 1849†	MW iv/1 (nos.3 and 6); NLE ii/23
A162	469	124	559	An die ferne Geliebte (Liederkreis) [Beethoven]	1849	Leipzig: B&H, 1850†	NLE ii/24
A163	444	277	560	O du mein holder Abendstern, Rezitativ und Romanze aus der Oper Tannhäuser [Wagner]	1849	Leipzig: Kistner, 1849†	MW arrs./i; NLE ii/23; RS iii/1
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duke Carl Alexander; see also D7
A164				Festmarsch zur Säcularfeier von Goethes Geburtstag
A164a	227	48a	562		1849	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1849†	NLE i/14; MW ii/10
A164b	521	48b	725		1859	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1859†; Cologne: Schuberth, ?1872 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duke Carl-Friedrich; see also B19, G5
A165	414	223	569–71	Illustrations du Prophète [Meyerbeer]: 1 Prière, Hymne triomphale, Marche du sacre, 2 Les patineurs, Scherzo, 3 Choeur pastoral, Appel aux armes	1849–50	Leipzig: B&H, 1850†	MW i/2; NLE ii/9
				Remarks: ded. M. D'Agoult
A166	410	219	572	Concertparaphrase über Mendelssohn's Hochzeitsmarsch und Elfenreigen aus dem Sommernachtstraum	1849–50	Leipzig: B&H, 1860†	MW ii/2; NLE ii/9
				Remarks: ded. S. Bohrer
A167	176	18	573	Grosses Konzertsolo (Grand solo de concert)	1849–50	Leipzig: B&H, 1851†	MW ii/18; NLE i/15
				Remarks: ded. A. Henselt; 'Grand solo écrit pour le concours de piano (Conservatoire de Paris, 1850)'; see also C18, H11

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A168	221	43	581	Mazurka brillante	1850	Leipzig: Senff, 1850†	LSP v; MW ii/10; NLE i/13
				Remarks: ded. A. Koczuchowski
A169	238	96	582	La cloche sonne	*c*1850	London: Curwen, 1958†; Budapest: Muszika, 1961	NLE ii/10
				Remarks: ded. A. Koczuchowski
A170	484	149	586–610	Bunte Reihe [F. David]	1850–51	Leipzig: Kistner, 1851†, 1874 (2nd edn)	NLE ii/24
				Remarks: no.22 pubd earlier as Souvenir de Russie (see A91)
A171	223	44	619–20	Two Polonaises, c, E	1850–51	Leipzig: Senff, 1852†, 1875 (simplified edn)	MW ii/10; NLE i/13
A172	139	2/1–12	623–34	Etudes d'exécution transcendante	1851 (except no.4 (1))	Leipzig: B&H, 1852† (except no.4 (1))	MW ii/2 (except no.4 (1)); NLE i/1
				1 Preludio, C 2 in a, 3 Paysage, F
	138	2c	248	4 [Mazeppa] (1)	1840	Vienna: Haslinger, 1847†; Paris: Schlesinger, 1847	MW ii/1
				4 Mazeppa, d (2) 5 Feux follets (Irrlichter), B♭ 6 Vision, g 7 Eroica, E♭ 8 Wilde Jagd, c 9 Ricordanza, A♭ 10 Allegro agitato molto, f 11 Harmonies du soir, D♭ 12 Chasse neige, b
				Remarks: 1851 set ded. C. Czerny, no.4 (1) ded. V. Hugo; no.4 (1) = version between 4 (2) and earlier version in A39; see also A8, B38, C13, G7
A173	141	3b	635–40	Grandes études de Paganini	1851	Leipzig: B&H, 1851†	MW ii/3; NLE i/2
				Remarks: ded. C. Schumann; orig. title 'Grandes études de Paganini transcendantes pour le piano'; see also A15, A52, A113
A174	177	20	641	Scherzo und Marsch	1851	Brunswick: Meyer, 1854†	MW ii/8; NLE i/13;
				Remarks: ded. T. Kullak
A175	455	460	642	Polonaise brillante [Weber]	1851	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1851†
				Remarks: ded. A. Henselt; see also H10
A176				Zwei Stücke aus Tannhäuser und Lohengrin [Wagner]	1852	Leipzig: B&H, 1853†; RS; Leipzig: B&H, 1875 (new edn)	MW arrs./i; NLE ii/10
A176/1	445	278/1	661/1	1 Einzug der Gäste auf der Wartburg
A176/2	445	278/2	661/2	2 Elsas Brautzug zum Münster
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bülow
A177	389	126	658	Fantasie über Beethovens Ruinen von Athen	1852	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†	NLE ii/12
				Remarks: ded. N. Rubinstein; see also A124, C6, H9
A178	396	141	660	Bénédiction et serment, deux motifs de Benevenuto Cellini [Berlioz]	1852–3	Leipzig: Meyer, 1854†	MW ii/2; NLE ii/10
				Remarks: based on material in Act 2.vi and Act 1.vii; see also B10
A179	178	21	668	Sonate, b	1852–3	Leipzig: B&H, 1854†	MW ii/8; NLE i/5; Munich: Henle, 1973 (facs.)
				Remarks: ded. R. Schumann in return for Schumann's ded. to Liszt of his Phantasie op.17; 1st perf., Berlin, 22 Jan 1857, by Bülow

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A180				Ungarischer Romanzero	1853		NLE ii/10
A181	171	16	669	Ballade no.2	1853	Kistner, 1854†	MW ii/8; NLE i/9; Munich: Henle, 1996 (new edn)
				Remarks: ded. Count Charles de Linange (Karl von Leiningen, half-brother of Queen Victoria)
A182	228	49	670	Huldigungs-marsch	1853	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1858†, 1863 (2nd edn)	NLE i/15
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duke Carl Alexander; see also G8
A183	421	233	671–2	Andante finale und Marsch aus der Oper König Alfred [Raff]	1853	Magdeburg: Heinrichshofen, 1853†; Hamburg: Schuberth, 1871 (2nd edn)	NLE ii/10
				Remarks: ded. K. Klindworth; see also B11
A184	229	50	684	Vom Fels zum Meer (Deutscher Siegesmarsch)	1853–6	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1865†	NLE i/15; MW ii/10
				Remarks: ded. Wilhelm I of Prussia; see also B14, G11
A185	446	279	688–9	Aus Lohengrin [Wagner]: 1 Festspiel und Brautlied, 2 Elsa's Traum und Lohengrins Verweis	1854	Leipzig: B&H, 1854†, 1861 (new edn), 1875 (rev.)	NLE i/10
A186	174	57ab	686a, b	Berceuse	1854–62	Vienna: Haslinger, 1854†; Leipzig: Heinze (Peters), 1865 (2nd edn)	MW ii/9; NLE i/11(b)
A187	434	267	772	Rigoletto: paraphrase de concert [Verdi]	?1855	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1860†	NLE ii/11
				Remarks: based on the Act 4 qt; first perf. Berlin, 6 Jan 1860, by Bülow
A188	226	47	714	Festvorspiel-Prelude (Preludio pomposo)	1856	Stuttgart: Hallberger, 1857†, Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1863	NLE i/11
				Remarks: ded. K. Tausig; see also G18, U8
A189	514	181	789	[Episode aus Lenaus Faust] Der Tanz in der Dorfschenke (Erste Mephisto-Walzer)	1856–61	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1862†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: ded. K. Tausig; pf version preceded orch version (G16), contrary to earlier chronologies; solo version of G16/1 was made by Robert Freund in early 1870s and pubd Schuberth, 1872; see also B15
A190	513	180	1053	Gretchen: 2. Satz aus der Faust-Symphonie	1857–74	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1876†, 1880 (rev.)	NLE i/16
				Remarks: based on G12; see also C19
A191	542	212	721–2	Weimars Volkslied (Von der Wartburg)	1857	Weimar: Kühn, 1857†, 1873 (2nd version)	NLE i/15
				Remarks: see B16, see also E6, G9, L10, M32, N53
A192	2	477	749–51	Drei Stücke aus der heiligen Elisabeth: 1 Orchester (Einleitung), 2 Marsch der Kreuzritter, 3 Interludium	1857–62	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1872†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: see also B27, E25, I4
A193	480	145	509–14	Six chants polonais [Chopin, from op.74]	1857–60	Leipzig: Schlesinger, 1860†	NLE ii/8
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie Hohenlohe; see also A143
A194	542a	211a	740	Ich liebe dich	?1857–60		NLE i/15†
				Remarks: based on N52

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A195	254	90	863	Rhapsodie espagnole (Folies d'Espagne et jota aragonesa)	1858	Leipzig: Siegel, 1867†	NLE ii/2
				Remarks: ded. Empress Eugenie; see also A114, Q11
A196	522	51	738	Festmarsch nach Motiven von E.H. z. S.-C.-G	1858–9	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1860†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on themes from Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha's opera Diana von Solange, 1858; see also B21, G23
A197	162	10/1–3	767–9	Années de pèlerinage, supplément aux Années de pèlerinage 2de Volume: Venezia e Napoli: 1 Gondoliera, canzone del Cavaliere Peruchini (La biondina in gondoletta), 2 Canzone ('Nessun maggior dolore, canzone del Gondoliere nel Otello di Rossini'), 3 Tarantella da Guillaume Louis Cottrau (Presto e canzone napolitana)	1859	Mainz: Schott, 1861†	MW ii/6; NLE i/7
				Remarks: part based on A53; see also A55
A198	179	23	770	Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen, Präludium [J.S. Bach]	1859	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1863†; Leipzig	MW ii/9; NLE ii/12
				Remarks: ded. A. Rubinstein; based on Cantata no.12/i; see also A214
A199	433	266	771	Miserere du Trovatore [Verdi]	1859	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1860†	NLE ii/11
A200	439	272	773	Phantasiestück über Motive aus Rienzi 'Santo Spirito cavaliere' von Richard Wagner	1859	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†	NLE ii/11
A201	520	187	741	Künstlerfestzug zur Schillerfeier 1859	1859–60	Weimar: Kühn, 1860†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1883 (rev.)	NLE i/15
				Remarks: see also B22, G20, L9
A202				Trois odes funèbres:
A202/1	516	183	788	1 Les Morts	1859–60	Berlin: in Göllerich (A1908)†	NLE i/11
A202/2	699	664	890	2 La notte	1864–6	Mainz: Schott, 1883 (rev.)	NLE i/11†
A202/3	517	184	920	3 Le Triomphe funèbre du Tasse	1866–9	Leipzig: B&H, 1878†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: no.1 ded. C. von Bülow, 3 ded. L. Damrosch; no.1 in memory of Liszt's son Daniel (d 13 Dec 1858), 2 based on A55/2; see also B23, D9, E7, G25/2, S57
A203	432	265	419	Ernani: [2nd] paraphrase de concert [Verdi]	?1859	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1860†	MW iii/2; NLE ii/11
				Remarks: see A138
A204	440	273	797	Spinnerlied aus dem Fliegenden Holländer [Wagner]	1860	Leipzig: B&H, 1862†	RS iii/1; MW arrs./i; NLE ii/11
				Remarks: ded. L. Jungmann
A205	475	142	798	Danse des Sylphes de La damnation de Faust [Berlioz]	1860	Berlin: Rieter-Biedermann, 1866†	NLE ii/11
A206	549	226	799	Festmarsch zu Schillers 100jähriger Geburtsfeier [Meyerbeer]	1860	Paris: Brandus, 1860†	NLE ii/11

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A207	511	202	794–6	Geharnischte Lieder: 1 Nicht gezagt, 2 Vor der Schlacht, 3 Es rufet Gott uns mahnend	*c*1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861	NLE i/15
				Remarks: see M22, M23, M24
A208	407	166	829	Valse de l'opéra Faust de Gounod	1861	Paris: Muraille, 1861†; Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1863 (2nd edn)	NLE ii/11
				Remarks: ded. Baron Alexis Michels; based on Act 2 duet O nuit d'amour
A209	532	[209]	830	Die Loreley (Ich weiss nicht, was soll's bedeuten)	1861	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1862†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on N5; see also A97/1
A210	443	276	831a, b	Pilgerchor aus Tannhäuser [Wagner]	1861	Berlin: Fürstner, 1864†, 1885 (rev.)	NLE ii/12
				Remarks: originally for organ, pubd 1863 (see E10]); the 1885 pf version is based on E10
A211				Zwei Lieder [E. Lassen]			NLE ii/13
A211/1	494	173	832	1 Löse Himmel meine Seele	1861	Dresden: Heinze (Peters), 1865†
A211/2	495	174	1015	2 Ich weil in tiefer Einsamkeit	1872	Leipzig: Heinze (Peters), 1872†
				Remarks: ded. Baroness Olga von Meyendorff
A212	567	255/1–2	833–4	Zwei Lieder [R. Schumann]:	1861	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1861†	NLE ii/11
212/1				1 An den Sonnenschein
212/2				2 Rotes Röslein
				Remarks: no.1 based on Schumann, op.36/4, no.2 on op.27/2
A213	508	199	835	Pastorale (Schnitterchor aus dem Entfesselten Prometheus)	1861	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on L8; see also B24; G6
A214	180	24	840	Variationen über das Motiv ... von Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen und des Crucifixus der H-moll Messse [Bach]	1862	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1864†	MW ii/9; NLE i/5
				Remarks: ded. A. Rubinstein; partly based on Cantata no.21 but not related to A198; Ramann (Liszt-Pädagogium, Leipzig, 1902) lists a version for orch but no source survives; 1st perf. Hanover, 28 April 1875; see also A198, E17
A215	182	67	841	Ave Maria für die grosse Klavierschule von Lebert und Stark (Die Glocken von Rom)	1862	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1863†	MW ii/9; NLE i/11
A216	183	68	842–3	Alleluja et Ave Maria ([Arcadelt])	1862	Leipzig: Peters, 1865†	NLE ii/11
				Remarks: melody attrib. Arcadelt but actually by L. Dietsch; see E14
A217	461	114	844	A la Chapelle Sixtine (Miserere d'Allegri et Ave verum corpus de Mozart)	1862	Leipzig: Peters, 1865†	EMB i/11; NLE ii/12
				Remarks: see also B26, E15, G26
A218	145	6	850–51	Zwei Konzertetüden:	1862	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1863†; Berlin: Trautwein, 1869	MW ii/3; NLE i/2; Munich: Henle, 1994
A218/1				1 Waldesrauschen
A218/2				2 Gnomenreigen
				Remarks: ded. D. Pruckner; composed for the Lebert and Stark Klavierschule; the order here (reversed in MW ii/3) reflects Liszt's instructions; titles probably not Liszt's, but used by him in the 1870s
A219	175	17/1–2	860	Deux légendes:		Budapest: Rózsavölgyi, 1865 (no.1)†, 1866 (no.2)†

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A219/1			860	1 St François d'Assise: la prédication aux oiseaux	1862/3		EMB (simplified edn); MW ii/9; NLE i/9
A219/2			859	2 St François de Paule marchant sur les flots	1863		MW ii/9
				Remarks: ded. C. von Bülow; no.1 inspired by Petites fleurs de St François d'Assise (Paris, 1860), chap.16, no.2 by drawing by E. Steinle, and G. Miscimarra: Vita di San Francesco di Paolo, chap.35; 1st perf., Budapest, 29 Aug 1865; see also G27, J13
A220	550	229	895–6	Confutatis und Lacrymosa aus dem Requiem K.626 von Mozart	?1862	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†	NLE ii/24
A221				Mazurka	1863	unpubd
A222	[3]	[478]	855–6	Zwei Orchestersätze aus dem Oratorium Christus	1862–6	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1872†	NLE i/16
A222/1				1 Hirtengesang an der Krippe
A222/2				2 Die heiligen drei Könige (Marsch)
				Remarks: based on I7 nos.4 and 5; see also A228, B30, E19, G31
A223	503	196	869	Slavimo slavno Slaveni!	1863	in L. Ramann: Liszt-Pädagogium (Leipzig, 1902)†	NLE i/11
				Remarks: based on J16; bars 1–38 arr. str qt in RUS-SPsc, transcr. partly by A. Siloti, probably in St Petersburg, *c*1880; see also E18
A224	244	106/15b	480	Ungarische Rhapsodien XV (Rákóczi-Marsch)	?1863	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1871†	MW ii/12; NLE i/3
				Remarks: based on A60a/10 and A60b/13; see also B33, C25, G29
A225	518	185	865	Salve Polonia (Interludium aus dem Oratorium Stanislaus)	?1863	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1884†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: based on G28; see also A302, Q1, Q17
A226	185	70	880	Vexilla regis prodeunt (Kreuzeshymne)	1864		NLE i/12†
				Remarks: transcr. of hymn with text by Venantius Fortunatus; see also G30
A227	502	197	882	Weihnachtslied II: Christus ist geboren	1864	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1865†	NLE i/15
				Remarks: based on J15b
A228	530	190	883	L'hymne du pape (Inno del papa, Der Papsthymnus)	1864	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1865†
				Remarks: see also B29, E19, G31, I7
A229	184	69	886	Urbi et orbi, bénédiction papale	1864		NLE i/12†
A230	415	224	892–3	Illustrations de l'Africaine [Meyerbeer]	1865	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1866†, 1875 (2nd edn)	NLE ii/12
A230/1				1 Prière des matelots
A230/2				2 Marche indienne
				Remarks: ded. A. Jaëll
A231	408	167	894	Les sabéennes, berceuse de l'opéra La reine de Saba [Gounod]	1865	Mainz: Schott, 1865†	NLE ii/12; RS iii/2
A232	417	227	905	Fantaisie sur l'opéra hongroise Szép Ilonka [Mosonyi]	1865–7	Budapest: Rózsavölgyi, 1867†	NLE ii/13; RS iii/2
				Remarks: ded. M. Mosonyi
A233	192	60	907–11	Fünf kleine Klavierstücke:	1865–79	Robert Lee, 1963 (complete); EMB, 1969 (single issue)	MW ii/10 (nos.1–4)†; LSP i (nos.1–4)
A233/1				1 Sehr langsam, E
A233/2				2 Lento assai, A♭
A233/3				3 Sehr langsam, F♯

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A233/4				4 Andantino, F♯
A233/5				5 Sospiri! (Andante)
				Remarks: ded. Baroness Olga von Meyendorff; no.1, 1865; same theme as A103/2
A234	189		912	Piano piece, A♭	1866		LSP, ix (1988)
				Remarks: originally thought by Searle (Grove5) to be an early version of A299; 1st perf. by William Wright, BBC (Scotland), 22 June 1987
A235	491	168	913	Hymne à Ste Cécile [Gounod]	1866	unpubd	NLE ii/12
A236	237	95	47	La marseillaise [Rouget de Lisle]	1866–72	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1872	MW vii/2; NLE ii/13
				Remarks: not the same as work composed in 1830
A237	409	169	927	Les adieux, rêverie sur un motif de l'opéra Roméo et Juliette [Gounod]	1867	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1868†, 1875 (2nd edn)	NLE ii/12; RS iii/2
A238	501	192	928–9	Aus der Ungarischen Krönungsmesse: 1 Benedictus, 2 Offertorium	1867	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: see also B31, D10, E23, F3, H14, I9
A239	447	280	930	Isoldes Liebestod aus Tristan und Isolde [Wagner]	1867	Leipzig: B&H, 1868†	[NLE ii/24]
A240	435	268	932	Don Carlos [Verdi]	1867–8	Mainz: Schott, 1868†	[NLE ii/13]; RS iii/2
A241	190	65	944	La marquise de Blocqueville, un portrait en musique	1868	Paris: in Le Figaro (14 April 1886)†	NLE i/12
				Remarks: ded. Marquise de Blocqueville (Louise Davout)
A242	146	7	950–61	Technische Studien	1868–73	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1886† (inc.)	EMB, 1983 (complete)
				Remarks: 1886 edn pubd by A. Winterberger after Liszt's death, without 3rd part (12 grosse Etüden), mentioned in letter from Liszt to A.W. Gottschalg, 20 Oct, 1871
A243	506	195	946	Ave maris stella	1868	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: based on J19; see also E27, K3
A244	463	120	862	Fantasie und Fuge, g [Bach]	1869	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1868†	NLE ii/24
				Remarks: ded. Dr S. Lebert; based on BWV542 (for org)
A245	492	171	962–9	Tanzmomente [J. von Herbeck]	1869	Vienna: Gotthard, 1870†	NLE ii/13
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst
A246	509	200	983	Gaudeamus igitur (Humoreske)	1869–70	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: ded. K. Gille; not related to A96; see also B34, L11
A247	504	193	975a, b	Ave Maria, II, aus den '9 [12] Kirchenchorgesängen'	1869–72	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†, 1874 (2nd version)	NLE i/12
				Remarks: based on J24, see also E24, K4; 1st version, D, 1871, 2nd version, D♭, 1873/4
A248	523	55	988	Ungarischer Marsch zur Kronungsfeier in Ofen-Pest am 8. Jun 1867	1870	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1871†; Leipzig: Schuberth, 1876 (rev.)
				Remarks: see also B32, G33
A249	194	110	990	Mosonyis Grabgeleit	1870	Budapest: Tàborszky & Parsch, 1871†	NLE; LSP iii
				Remarks: W5 1st version (W5) as Michael Mosonyi, see also A335/7, B50, P5; composed on the death of Mosonyi (31 Oct 1870), perf. Budapest, 16 Nov 1870
A250			992	Präludium und Fuge über das Motiv B.A.C.H.	[1855, for organ?]	Rotterdam: Vletter (de), 1859†	NLE i/5

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	529	22	993	Fantasie und Fuge über das Thema B–A–C–H.	1870	Leipzig: Siegel, 1871†	MW ii/9; NLE i/5
				Remarks: earliest version; see also E3
A251	485a	157a	994	Der Schwur am Rütli [F. Draeseke]	1870	unpubd
				Remarks: transcr. of cantata
A252	233	56	989	Ungarischer Geschwindsmarsch (Magyar Gyors induló)	1870–71	Pressburg: Schindlers Verlag, 1871†	MW i/14
A253				Polnisch	1870s	unpubd
				Remarks: on the verso of the Kaiser Wilhelm national hymn (1876)
A254	448	281	1005	'Am stillen Herd' aus den Meistersingern [Wagner]	1871	Berlin: Trautwein, 1871†	MW arrs./i; [NLE ii/13]; RS iii/1
				Remarks: ded. M. von Schleinitz
A255	246	113	1233/1	Puszta-Wehmut (Die Werbung)	1871	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1885†	NLE ii/13
				Remarks: arr. of song by L. Gizycka (née Zámoyská) on a poem by N. Lenau
A256	191	59	1014	Impromptu (Nocturne)	1872	Leipzig: B&H, 1877†	MW ii/9; NLE i/12
				Remarks: ded. Baroness Olga von Meyendorff
A257	568	256	1016	Frühlingsnacht (Überm Garten durch die Lüfte) [Schumann]	1872	Dresden: Heinze (Peters), 1872†	NLE ii/13
				Remarks: based on Schumann's song op.39/12
A258	573	261	1027	Einleitung und Ungarischer Marsch (Bevezetés és magyar indulo)	1872	Budapest: Rózsavőlgyi, 1873†
				Remarks: ded. I. Széchényi
A259	441	274	1028	Ballade aus dem fliegenden Holländer [Wagner]	1872	Berlin: Meser (Fürstner), 1873†	MW arrs./i; [NLE ii/13]; RS iii/1
A260	526	189	1030	Epithalam zu Eduard Reményis Vẽrmählungsfeier	1872	Budapest: 1872†	NLE i/12
				Remarks: arr. of D12; see also W7
A261	486	158	1034–5	Szózat und Ungarischer Hymnus [B. Egressy and F. Erkel]	1872	Budapest: Rózsavőlgyi, 1873†	NLE i/16
				Remarks: ded. Count Gyula Andrássy; based on G34; pf 4 hands version (S628b) probably by H. Gobbi; see A335
A262	239	97	1004	Vive Henri IV	1872–80		LSP vii†; [NLE ii/14]
A263	245	108	1047–51	Fünf ungarische Volkslieder: 1 'Csak titokban akartalak szeretni' (Lassan [Lento], D) 2 'Jaj beh szennyes az a maga kendöje' (Mérsekélve [sic] [Allegretto], G) 3 'Beh szomorú ez az élet én nékem' (Lassan [Andante], G) 4 'Beh! sok falut, beh! sok várost bejártam' (Kissé élénken [Vivace], c♯) 5 'Erdó, erdó, sürü erdó árnayában' (Búsongva [Lento], f)	1873	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1873†	LSP iii; [NLE ii/13]
				Remarks: based on folksong arrs. by the elder K. Ábrányi

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A264a	569	257	1017–23	Lieder von Robert und Clara Schumann [nos.1–7 by Robert]: 1 Weihnachtslied, 2 Die wandelnde Glocke, 3 Frühlings Ankunft, 4 Des Sennen Abschied, 5 Er ist's, 6 An die Türen will ich schleichen	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†	NLE ii/24
				Remarks: based on op.79 nos.16, 17, 19, 22, 23, and op.98a nos.3, 8
A264b	569	257	1024–6	Lieder von Robert und Clara Schumann [nos.8–10 by Clara]: 8 Warum willst du andere fragen, 9 Ich hab' in deinem Auge, 10 Geheimes Flüstern	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†	NLE ii/24
				Remarks: based on op.12/3, op.13/5, op.23/3
A265	479	144	1054	Dantes Sonett 'Tanto gentile e tanto onesta'	1874	Leipzig: Schlesinger, 1875†
				Remarks: based on a song by H. von Bülow
A266	196/195a	76	1056/1–2	Elegie I (Schlummerlied im Grabe)	1874	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1875†	LSP iii; MW ii/9; NLE i/10
				Remarks: in memory of M. Moukhanoff; see also B36, D13
A267	186	71/1–12	1075–86	Weihnachtsbaum: 1 Altes Weihnachten, 2 O heilige Nacht! (Weihnachtslied nach einer alten Weise), 3 Die Hirten an der Krippe (In dulci jubilo), 4 Marsch der hl. drei Könige (Adeste fideles), 5 Man zündet die Kerzen des Baumes an (Scherzoso), 6 Carillon, 7 Schlummerlied, 8 Altes provençalisches Weihnachtslied, 9 Abendglocken, 10 Ehemals, 11 Ungarisch, 12 Polnisch	1874–6, no.7 rev. 1879–81	Berlin: Fürstner, 1882†; Moscow: Gutheil, ?1882†; New York: Schirmer, 1922, 1950 (no.7)	MW ii/9; NLE i/10
				Remarks: ded. D. von Bülow; no.2 arr. vv, org/hmn (J42); see also B43
A268	92/542b	562	1103a, b	Carl August weilt mit uns, Festgesang zur Enthüllung des Carl-August-Denkmals in Weimar	1875	Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, 1887†
				Remarks: b = Fanfare; 1st perf. Weimar, 3 Sept 1875; see also I6
A269	449	282	1098	'Walhall' aus dem Ring des Nibelungen [Wagner]	1875	Mainz: Schott, 1876†	MW arrs./i; [NLE ii/13]; RS iii/1
A270	551	232	1347	Una stella amica, mazurka [Pezzini]	?1875	Rome: Manganelli, 1876†	NLE ii/13
A271	214a	60b	1105	Carrousel de Mme P[elet]-N[arbonne]	?1875–81		NLE i/12†
				Remarks: apparently Liszt's only humorous piece, about the owner of the house in Weimar where the Meyendorff family lived

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A272	197b		1106b	Kaiser Wilhelm!, national hymn	1876	unpubd
				Remarks: probably inspired by a meeting with the Kaiser during ceremonies on 3 Sept 1875 (see A268)
A273	555	240	1107	Danse macabre [Saint-Saëns]	1876	Paris: Durand, 1877†	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: ded. S. Menter
A274	528	296	1108	Festpolonaise	1876	Berlin: in Göllerich (H1908)†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie of Saxony, for her wedding, 15 Jan 1876
A275	571	259	1110	Die Rose, Romanze aus der Oper Zemir und Azor [Spohr]	1876	Brunswick: Bauer, 1877†	[NLE ii/13]
A276	436	269	1013	Aida, danza sacra e duetto final [Verdi]	?1876	Milan: Ricordi, 1879†	[NLE ii/13]; RS iii/2
				Remarks: ded. A. (Toni) Raab; Liszt first saw the opera in Budapest on 19 Feb 1876
A277	197	77	1125	Elegie II	1877	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1878†	LSP iii; MW ii/9; NLE i/10;
				Remarks: ded. L. Ramann; see also D14
A278	187	73	1127	Sancta Dorothea	1877		LSP vii; MW ii/9†; NLE i/12
				Remarks: MS apparently rescued from the rubbish bin by R. Strauss
A279	195	111	1128	Dem Andenken Petőfis	1877	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1877†	LSP iii
				Remarks: based on P5 and used later in A335, also B50; first perf. Budapest, 28 Feb 1877
A280	204	86	1132	Recueillement	1877	Naples: Associazione musicale industriale, 1884†	MW ii/9; NLE i/12
				Remarks: written at the invitation of F. Florimo for the erection of a monument to Bellini in Naples
A281	456	292	1133	Valse d'Adèle, transcription brillante	1877	Paris: Heugel, 1877†	NLE ii/11
				Remarks: transcr. of waltz for the left-hand by Count Zichy; 1st perf. Budapest, 15 Feb 1877
A282	546	216	1143	Der blinde Sänger	1877	St Petersburg: Bessel, 1881†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: after A. Tolstoy
A283	163	10/1–7	935–41	Années de pèlerinage, troisième année: 1 Angelus! Prière aux anges gardiens, 2 Aux cyprès de la Villa d'Este, thrénodie (Andante 3/4), 3 Aux cyprès de la Villa d'Este, thrénodie (Andante non troppo lento, 4/4), 4 Les jeux d'eaux à la Villa d'Este, 5 Sunt lacrymae rerum, en mode hongrois, 6 Marche funèbre, 7 Sursum corda	1877–82	Mainz: Schott, 1883†; Venice: Tasolini, 1987 (facs.)	MW ii/6; NLE i/8
				Remarks: no.1 ded. D. von Bülow, no.5 ded. H. von Bülow; no.1, see also D15, E30; nos.2–3 inspired by the cypresses of S Maria degli Angeli, Rome; no.5 title from Virgil's Aeneid (bk i, ll.461–2); no.6 in memory of Emperor Maximilian I of Mexico; no.7 title from Canon of the Mass
A284	437	270	1135	Agnus Dei della Messa di Requiem di G. Verdi	1877–82	Milan: Ricordi, 1879†	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: see also E29

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A285	496	176	1144–7	Aus der Musik zu Hebbels Nibelungen und Goethes Faust: i Nibelungen: 1 Hagen und Krimhild, 2 Bechlarn ii Faust: 1 Osterhymne, 2 Hoffest: Marsch und Polonaise	1878	Breslau: Hainauer, 1879†	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: ded. Baroness Ingeborg von Bronsart
A286a	50	72	1154–74	[Choräle] Zwölf alte deutsche geistliche Weisen: 1 Crux ave benedicta, 2 Jesu Christe (Die fünf Wunden), 3 Meine Seele erhebet den Herrn (Gott sei gnädig und barmherzig), 3a Es segne uns Gott, 4 Nun danket alle Gott, 5 Nun ruhen alle Wälder, 6 O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden, 7 O Lamm Gottes! 8 O Traurigkeit, 9 Vexilla regis, 10 Was Gott tut, das ist wohlgetan, 11 Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten	1878–9		MW v/7; NLE i/10†; UE v
				Remarks: proposed ded. Baron Robert von Keudell; composed for Cardinal Gustav Hohenlohe; vocal versions pubd in MW as Deutsche Kirchenlieder und liturgische Gesänge; texts by A. von Löwen, G. Neumark, M. Rinckart and F. von Spee; see also J34
A286b	50	72	1175–86	Zwölf alte deutsche geistliche Weisen [Deutsche Kirchenlieder und liturgische Gesänge]: 1 Was Gott tut, das ist wohlgetan, 2 O Traurigkeit, 3 Nun ruhen all Wälder, 4 Meine Seel' erhebet den Herrn, 5 O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden, 6 O Lamm Gottes, 7 Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten, 8 Es segne uns Gott, 9 Vexilla regis, 10 Crux benedicta, 11 Jesu Christe, 12 Nun danket alle Gott	1878–9		MW v/7†
				Remarks: in Chiappari and Grove6 these pieces were listed as choral works with kbd (as in MW), but there is no evidence that they were intended for other than kbd perf.; see also J34
A287	504a	534	1187	Via Crucis [Les 14 stations de la croix]	1878–9		NLE i/10
				Remarks: based on J33; see also B52, E31
A288	515	182	1241	Zweiter Mephisto-Walzer	1878/9–1881	Berlin: Fürstner, 1881†	MW i/1; NLE i/17
				Remarks: ded. C. Saint-Saëns; the solo pf and 4-hand versions were composed at the same time and used later as the basis for the orch work; see also B54, G37
A289	734–5		800, 1370	Ländler, D, allegretto (Air cosaque)	1879	London: Curwen, 1958†
A290	181	25	1194	Sarabande und Chaconne aus dem Singspiel 'Almira' von Handel	1879	Leipzig: Kistner, 1880†	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: ded. Walter Bache

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A291	483	148	1196	Tarantelle, transcrite et amplifiée pour le piano à deux mains [Dargomïzhsky]	1879	Moscow: Jürgenson, 1880†	NLE ii/14; RS ii/2
				Remarks: ded. N. Helbig; original for 3 hands
A292	572	260	1197	Revive Szegedin, marche hongroise de Szabady	1879	Paris: Heugel, 1892†; St Petersburg: Somogyi-könyvtár, 1986 (facs.)	NLE ii/14
				Remarks: ded. A. Gouzien; based on Massenet's Marche héroïque de Szabadi, ded. Liszt, an arr. of piece by I. Szabadi Frank
A293	429	262	1198	Polonaise aus der Opera Jewgeny Onegin [Tchaikovsky]	1879	Moscow: Jürgenson, 1880†; Hamburg: Rahter, 1880†	NLE ii/15; RS iii/2
				Remarks: ded. K. Klindworth; based on the polonaise from Act 3
A294	54	514	1200	O Roma nobilis [G. Baini]	1879		MW v/7† (for chorus, org); NLE i/17†
				Remarks: intended as kbd work, but pubd in MW (1936) for chorus (source lost); see also J36
A295	197a	60a	1195	Toccata	?1879		NLE i/12†
A296	207a	297	1212	Variation, prélude à la polka de Borodine	1880	Hamburg: Rahter, 1881 (rev.); Leipzig: Belaieff, 1893 (rev.); Bonn: in Tcherepnin paraphrase, 1959 (facs.)	[NLE ii/15]
	256	297	1213	Variation über das Thema [Chopsticks]	1880
				Remarks: variation on the 'Chopsticks' theme, composed for the 2nd edn of the set by Borodin, Cui, Lyadov and Rimsky-Korsakov; s256 was renumbered as s207a
A297	573a	113/1	1215	Seconda mazurka variata da Pier Adolfo Tirindelli	1880	Turin: Giudici & Strada, 1880†	[NLE ii/15]
A298	490	165	1216–17	Liebesszene und Fortunas Kugel aus Die sieben Todsünden (Phantasiestück) [A. von Goldschmidt]	1880	Hanover: Simon, 1881†	[NLE ii/15]
A299	527	66b	1223	Romance oubliée	1880	Hanover: Simon, 1881†	LSP vii; NLE i/12
				Remarks: see also A234, D16, W9
A300	188	74	1211/1224	In festo transfigurationis Domini nostri Jesu Christi	1880		LSP vii; MW ii/9; NLE i/12; UE vi
A301	499a		1221	San Francesco (Preludio per il Cantico del sol di S Francesco)	?1880		NLE i/17†
				Remarks: arr. from I8; see also A307, E35, F2, S59
A302	519	186	1092–3	Deux Polonaises de l'oratorio Stanislaus	?1880–84		NLE i/17†
				Remarks: probably intended for publication with the pf score (A225) of G28, but unpubd until 1983
				Remarks: see also Q1, Q17
A303	198	58	1214	Wiegenlied (Chant du berceau)	1881	London: Curwen, 1958†; in Five Liszt Discoveries	NLE i/12
				Remarks: ded. A. Friedheim; see also A310, B55, G38 and S61
A304	554	239	1218	O! wenn es doch immer so bliebe	1881	Leipzig: Kistner, 1881†	NLE ii/15
				Remarks: ded. Mme Rubinstein based on songs by A. Rubinstein

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A305	199	78	1238	Trübe Wolken (Nuages gris)	1881		LSP i; MW ii/9† [1927]; NLE i/12
A306	570	254	1243	Provençalisches Minnelied	1881	Berlin: Fürstner, 1881†	NLE ii/15
				Remarks: based on Schumann's song op.139/4
A307	499	191	1244	Cantico di San Francesco	1881		NLE i/17
				Remarks: based on In dulci jubilo from I8; see also A301, E35, F2, S59
A308	545	194	1247–8	Ave Maria [IV]	1881	London: Curwen, 1958†, in Five Liszt Discoveries	NLE i/12; UE vi, ix
				Remarks: see also K8
A309/1	534	214	1250/1	A magyarok Istene (Ungarns Gott)	1881	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1881†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: the pf 4 hands arr. cited by Chiappari (no.1250/2) is spurious; see also E37, G40, L16, M37
A309/2	[534]	[214]	1251	A magyarok Istene (Ungarns Gott), pf left hand	1881
				Remarks: version of A309/1 arr. for G. Zichy
A310	512	179	1253	Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe	1881	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1883†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: ded. Count M. Zichy; possibly after an engraving by Zichy, see A303, B55, G38, S61; 1st perf. Budapest, 23 March 1884
A311	215	37	1262–5	[4] Valses oubliées	1881 (no.1), 1883 (nos.2–3), 1884 (no.4)	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1881 (no.1)†, 1884 (nos.2–3)†, 1884 (no.1; later issue); Bryn Mawr: Presser, 1954 (no.4)†; in Uj zenei szemle, vii (1956) (no.4)	LSP iv (nos.1–3); MW ii/10 (nos.1–3); NLE i/14 (nos.1–4)
				Remarks: nos.2 and 3 ded. O. von Meyen dorff; pieces composed separately (incl. Q21) and later connected by title as a set
A312	208	80	1328	Unstern! Sinistre, disastro	1881		LSP i; MW ii/9†; NLE i/12
A313	224	46	1239	Csárdás macabre	1881–2		NLE i/14; RS vii; LSP, 1952†
				Remarks: planned ded. Saint-Saëns, but ded. S. Teleky; MS sent to the publisher Táborszky, 1882, and ed. Bartók, 1912, for MW, but not issued by either; see also B56
A314	438	271	1270	Réminiscences de Boccanegra [Verdi]	1882	Milan: Ricordi, 1883†	NLE ii/15; RS iii/2
				Remarks: based on the revised version of the op, perf. Milan, 24 March 1881
A315	450	283	1271	Feierlicher Marsch zum heiligen Gral aus Parsifal (Marche solennelle du Saint Gral de Parsifal) [Wagner]	1882	Mainz: Schott, 1883†	MW arrs./i; NLE ii/15; RS iii/1
A316	498	177	1272–4	Drei Lieder aus J. Wolffs Tannhäuser: 1 Der Lenz ist gekommen (Frühlingslied), 2 Trinklied, 3 Du Schaust mich an (Liebeslied)	1882	Berlin: Barth (A. Junne), 1883†	NLE ii/15
				Remarks: based on songs by O. Lessmann
A317	217	39	1288	Mephisto-Polka	1882–3	Berlin: Fürstner, 1883†	LSP v; MW ii/10; NLE i/14
				Remarks: ded. L. Schmalhausen
A318	430	263	1304	Valse de concert	1882–3	Budapest: Harmonia, 1883†	NLE ii/15
				Remarks: transcr. of J. Végh's Suite en forme de valse, pf 4 hands (Budapest, 1882)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
A319				La lugubre gondola [Dritter Elegie]	1882–5
A319a	200/1	81/1	1279	1st version, 6/8		Leipzig: Fritzsch, 1886†; Siegel, 1886 (later issue)	Heyer, 1926 (facs.); LSP i; MW ii/9; NLE i/12
A319b	200/2	81/2	1280	2nd version, 2/4		Leipzig: Fritzsch, 1886†	MW ii/9; NLE i/12
				Remarks: 2nd version ded. Bassani; associated with premonition of Wagner's death; orig. planned for chbr ens (see D19), begun Dec 1882, rev. Jan 1883 as 2nd version of A319a; unused 1882 material used later as A319a
A320	201	82	1285	R.W.–Venezia	1883		LSP i; MW ii/9†; NLE i/12
A321	202	85	1282	Am Grabe Richard Wagners	1883		NLE i/12†; LSP ii
				Remarks: composed on 22 May, the birth date of Wagner, who had died on 13 Feb 1883; see also B42, D20, E26, E38, L15, W8
A322	203	79	1286	Schlaflos, Frage und Antwort (Insomnie!, Question et réponse), nocturne	1883		LSP iii; MW ii/9†; NLE i/12
				Remarks: after a poem by T. Raab
A323	497	175	1278	Symphonisches Zwischenspiel (Intermezzo) zu Calderons Schauspiel Über allen Zauber Liebe	1883	Breslau: Hainauer, 1883†	[NLE ii/24]; RS iii/2
				Remarks: Liszt attended a performance in Weimar, 24 April 1883, cond. E. Lassen
A324	251	104	1332	Abschied, russisches Volkslied	1885	Leipzig: Fritzsch, 1885†	NLE ii/15
				Remarks: ded. A. Siloti
A325	216	38	1287	Dritter Mephisto-Walzer	1883	Berlin: Fürstner, 1883†	LSP i; MW ii/10; NLE i/14
				Remarks: ded. M. Jaëll; LaMara mentions a version for pf 4 hands (copy in US-CAh); orch version apparently by A. Reisenauer
A326	230	52	1289	Bülow-Marsch	1883	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1884†	MW ii/10; NLE i/14
				Remarks: ded. Meiningen Court Orchestra; orch version mentioned on MS title-page and in 1884 pubn, but orchestration probably by C. Goepfart; see also B59, C30
A327	482	147	1337	Tarantelle [C. Cui]	1885	Paris: Durand, 1886†; Moscow: Muzgiz, 1952	[NLE ii/15]
				Remarks: ded. M. Argenteau
A328	544	215	1296	Magyar király-dal (Ungarisches Königslied)	1883	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1884†	NLE i/17
				Remarks: based on N81; see also B60, L17
A329	554/2	239/2	1219	Der Asra	?1883	Leipzig: Kistner, 1884†	[NLE ii/15]
				Remarks: based on song by A. Rubinstein
A330	460	295	1291	Kavallerie-Geschwindmarsch	?1883	Esslingen: Weissmann, 1883†	NLE ii/2
A331	671	395	1309	In domum Domini ibimus (Zum Haus des Herren ziehen wir), Präludium für Orgel oder Klavier	1884	Berlin: in Göllerich (H1908)†	NLE i/17; UE vi
				Remarks: arr. from J46; see also E40
A332	233a	56a	1266	Siegesmarsch-Marche triomphale	1884	in Magyar zene, xiv (1973)†; New York: Mach, 1982	NLE i/14
A333				2 Czárdás

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	225/1	45/1	1305	Czárdás	1884	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1886†; Paris: Delanchy, 1885	LSP iii; NLE i/14
	225/2	45	1306	Czárdás obstiné	1884	Berlin: Táborszky & Parsch, 1886†
				Remarks: see also W11
A334				Trauervorspiel und Trauermarsch		Leipzig: B&H, 1888†	LSP i; MW ii/9; NLE i/12
	206/1	83	1319	1 Preludio funebre	1885
	206/2	84	1320	2 Marcia funebre	1885
				Remarks: no.2 ded. A. Göllerich and based on material from M. Mosonyi's music composed on the death of I. Széchényi; see also A335/3
A335	205	112/1–7	1321–7	Historische ungarische Bildnisse:
				1 Stephan Széchényi	1885	Budapest: in Új zenei szemle, vii (1956)†; EMB 1958 (nos.2–7), 1959 (no.1)	NLE i/10
				2 Franz Deák	1885
				3 Ladislaus Teleky	1885
				4 Josef Eötvös	1885
				5 Michael Vörösmarty	1885
				6 [Michael] Alexander Petőfi	1885
				7 Michael Mosonyi	1885
				Remarks: the order of movts is that of the 1st edn and Grove5; orig. 5 pieces, titled Ungarische Oden, comprising nos.1, 2, 4–6; nos.3 and 7 added 8 June 1885; no.3 based on music by M. Mosonyi (see A334), no.5 on B. Egressy's Szózat (used earlier in A261 and G34), no.6 on A279 and P5, no.7 on A249; see also B50, T36
A336	207	87	1329	En rêve, nocturne	1885	Vienna: Wetzler, 1888†	LSP i; MW ii/9; NLE i/12
				Remarks: ded. A. Stradal
A337	696	661	1330	Vierter Mephisto Walzer	1885	in Új zenei szemle, vii (1956)†; Eastwood, Southend-on-Sea: Basil Ramsey, 1978 (completed L. Howard)	LSP ii; NLE i/14
A338	216a	60c	1331	Bagatelle ohne Tonart (Bagatelle sans tonalité)	1885	EMB, 1956†	NLE i/14
				Remarks: earlier titles incl. Bluette fantasque and Vierter Mephisto Walzer (ohne Tonart); several iconographies reproduce H. von Mansfeldt's forgery (1885) of the orig. MS, see Walker (H1983–96), iii, 445–6

PIANO FOUR HANDS

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published
B1	615	298	98	Grande valse di bravura	1836	Milan: Ricordi, *c*1837†; Vienna: Haslinger, 1838; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1842; Leipzig: Schuberth, 1844
				Remarks: ded. P. Wolff; arr. of A32a
B2	616	299	170	Grand galop chromatique	1838	Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1838; Milan: Ricordi, 1838†
				Remarks: arr. of A43
B3	620	308	256	Hussitenlied	1840–41	Prague: Hoffmann, 1841†

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published
				Remarks: arr. of A67
B4	634	347	292	Grand septuor de Beethoven (Septett von Beethoven), op.20	1840–42	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1842†
				Remarks: arr. of A69
B5	628a		73	Marche [funèbre] et cavatine de Lucia di Lammermoor [Donizetti]	?1844	Mainz: Schott, 1844†
				Remarks: Raabe's assertion that this version is not by Liszt is incorrect; arr. of A23
B6	584	340	431	Fest-Cantate für die Inaugurations-Feier des Beethoven-Denkmals in Bonn	1845	Mainz: Schott, 1846†
				Remarks: arr. of L1
B7	587	343	522	Marche héroïque	?1848	Milstein's date from 1872 edn cannot be verified
				Remarks: based on M16 ('Arbeiterchor'), arr. of A153
B8	624	314	612	Fantasie und Fuge über den Choral 'Ad nos, ad salutarem undam' [from Meyerbeer: Le prophète]	1850	Leipzig: B&H, 1852†
				Remarks: see E1
B9	627	348	663	Sonnambula de Bellini, Grosse Concert-Fantasie	1852	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1876†
				Remarks: arr. of A56
B10	628	349	675	Bénédiction et Serment, deux motifs de Benvenuto Cellini [Berlioz]	1852–3	Leipzig: Meyer, 1854†
				Remarks: arr. of A178
B11	631	353	673–4	Andante finale und Marsch aus der Oper König Alfred [Raff]	?1853	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: arr. of A183
B12	591	317	754	Les Préludes	1853–8	Leipzig: B&H, 1859†
				Remarks: arr. of G3
B13	595	321	699	Festklänge	1854–61	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†
				Remarks: arr. of G10
B14	618a	[435]	709	Vom Fels zum Meer (Deutscher Siegesmarsch)	?1855	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1865†
				Remarks: arr. of A184 dated ?1855 by C[hiappari]; Liszt's arr. unpublished; the Schlesinger 1865 arr. is by Bülow
B15	599	325	838–9	Zwei Episoden aus Lenaus Faust	?1856–61	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1862†
				Remarks: ded. K. Tausig; arr. of G16
B16	588	344	724	Weimars Volkslied	1857	Weimar: Kühn, 1857†
				Remarks: see A191, E6, L10, M32, N53
B17	592	318	755	Orpheus	1858	Leipzig: B&H, 1859†
				Remarks: arr. of G9
B18	593	319	756	Prometheus	?1858	Leipzig: B&H, 1862†
				Remarks: arr. of G6; see also C14, L8

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published
B19	606	302	757	Festmarsch zur Goethe-jubiläumsfeier (Goethe-Festmarsch)	?1858	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1859†, 1870 (rev. edn)
				Remarks: arr. of G5
B20	590	316	753	Tasso: lamento e trionfo	1858	Leipzig: B&H, 1859†
				Remarks: arr. of G2, see also C10
B21	607	303	739	Festmarsch nach Motiven von E.H. z. S.C.-G.	1858–9	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1860†
				Remarks: arr. of G23, see also A196
B22	605	331	774	Künstlerfestzug zur Schillerfeier 1859	1859	Weimar: Kühn, 1860†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1865 (later issue)
				Remarks: arr. of G20, see also A201
B23/1–3				Trois odes funèbres
	601	327	791	1 Les morts	1860
				Remarks: ded. In memory of Daniel Liszt
	602	328	914	2 La notte	1866
	603	329	921	3 Le triomphe funèbre du Tasse	1866–9
				Remarks: see A202/1–3, G25/1–3
B24	585	341	836	Pastorale: Schnitterchor aus dem Entfesselten Prometheus	1861	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
				Remarks: arr. of L8
B25	445	278	661/2	Zwei Stücke aus Tannhäuser und Lohengrin: 1 Einzug der Gäste auf Wartburg, 2 Elsas Brautzug zum Münster [Wagner]	?1862	Leipzig: B&H, 1862†
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bülow; arr. of A176
B26	633	346	897	A la Chapelle Sixtine (Miserere d'Allegri et Ave verum corpus de Mozart)	1862–65	Leipzig: Peters, 1866†; Milan: Lucca, n.d.
				Remarks: arr. of A217, see also G26, E15
B27	578	334	915–18	Vier Stücke aus der Legende von der Heiligen Elisabeth: 1 Orchester Einleitung, 2 Marsch der Kreuzritter, 3 Der Sturm, 4 Interludium	?1862–6	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1868†
				Remarks: arr. from I4; see also A192, E25
B28	604	330	866	Salve Polonia
				1st version Salve Polonia! (Boże coś Polske!)	1863	unpubd
				2nd version Salve Polonia, Interludium aus dem Oratorium Stanislaus	1884	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1884†
				Remarks: arr. of G28, see also A225, A302, Q17
B29	625	336	898	Der Papsthymnus	1865	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1865†
				Remarks: based on I7 no.8, see also A228, E19a, G31
B30	579	335	925–6	Zwei Orchestersätze aus dem Oratorium Christus: 1 Hirtenspiel an der Krippe, 2 Die heiligen drei Könige	?1866–73	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1873†, Kahnt, 1880

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published
				Remarks: arr. of I7(nos.4–5)
B31	581	338	972–3	Aus der ungarischen Krönungsmesse: 1 Benedictus, 2 Offertorium	1869	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: arr. of I9 (nos.4–5), see also A238, D10, E23, F3, H14
B32	609	306	995	Ungarischer Marsch zur Krönungsfeier in Ofen-Pest am 8. Juni 1867	1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: arr. of G33, see also A248
B33	608	310	996	[Rákóczi March, sym. arr.] Rákóczi-Marsch	1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: based on rev. version of G29, see also C25
B34	586	342	999	Gaudeamus igitur, Humoreske	?1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1872†
				Remarks: ded. K. Gille; arr. of L11, see also A246
B35	632	354	1000–3	Vier Märsche von Franz Schubert	?1872–9	Berlin: Fürstner, ?1880†
				Remarks: ded. W. and L. Thern; arr. of G24 from D818, 819, 968b; 1st perf., Budapest, 26 March 1872, by Liszt and M. Reitter Pázmándy
B36	612	333	1057	Elegie I	1874	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1875†
				Remarks: ded. in memory of Mme. Marie Moukhanoff; arr. of D13; see also A266
B37	589	315	1061	Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne (Bergsymphonie)	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†
				Remarks: arr. of G1, see also C9, E12
B38	594	320	1058	Mazeppa	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†
				Remarks: arr. of G7, see also A8, A39, A172, C13
B39	596	322	1060	Hungaria	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†
				Remarks: arr. of G13; see also A65, B39, C16
B40	597	323	1059	Hamlet	1874	Leipzig: B&H, 1875†
				Remarks: arr. of G22, C22
B41	621	309	1062–7	[6] Ungarische Rhapsodien	1874	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1875†
				Remarks: ded.: 1 H. von Bülow, 2 J. Joachim, 3 A. Apponyi, 4 L. Teleki, 5 S. Reviczky, 6 H.W. Ernst; based on orch version (G21), by Liszt and F. Doppler, of A132 nos.14, 12, 6, 2, 5, 9 (in that order)
B42	580	337	1095	Excelsior! (Preludio zu den Glocken des Strassburger Münsters)	1874	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1876†
				Remarks: ded. H.W. Longfellow; arr. of L15 no.2, see also E26
B43	613	307	1113–24	Weihnachtsbaum [nos.1–12] (2 versions)	1875–81	Berlin: Fürstner, 1882; Milan and Lucca (simultaneous 1st edns, L'albero di natale)†; EMB, 1989
				Remarks: entire set ded. Daniela von Bülow, no.11 ded. K. Ábrányi; based on A267, with different order of nos.; see also J42
B44	596c		1091	Die Ideale	1874–7	Leipzig: B&H, 1880†
				Remarks: arr. Sgambati/Liszt of G15
B45	629	351	381	Tscherkessen-Marsch aus Russlan und Ludmilla [Glinka]	1875	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1875 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: based on 'March of Chernomor'; arr. of A103, 2nd version

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published
B46	610	305	1099	Ungarischer Sturmmarsch (Seconde marche hongroise)	1875	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1876†
				Remarks: arr. of G35, see also A112 2nd version
B47	634a	352a	1106	Adagio (Der welcher wandelt diese Strasse) [Mozart: Die Zauberflöte]	?1875–81	EMB, 1992† (incl. text)
B48	634b	296	1109	Festpolonaise	1876	Berlin: in Göllerich, (H 1908)†
B49	596a	[419]	1137	Héroïde funèbre	1877	Leipzig: B&H, 1878†
				Remarks: arr. of G4, see also C15; Raabe's suggestion that this arr. was by Bülow is incorrect
B50	614	313	1129	Dem Andenken Petőfis/Petőfi szellemének	1877	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1877
				Remarks: based on P5, see also A279, A335
B51	596b	[422]	1138	Hunnenschlacht	1877	Leipzig: B&H, 1878†
				Remarks: arr. of G17, see also C21; Raabe's suggestion that this transcr. was by Bülow is incorrect
B52	583	339	1188	Via Crucis	1878–9	EMB, 1987†
				Remarks: arr. of J33, see also A287, E31
B53	582	350	1190	O Lamm Gottes, unschuldig (N. Decius)	1878–9	unpubd
				Remarks: see A286a no.7 and A286b no.6
B54	600	326	1242	Zweiter Mephisto-Walzer	1878–9	Berlin: Fürstner, 1881†
				Remarks: this version and A288 were composed at the same time and later formed the basis for the orchestral version (G37)
B55	598	324	1254	Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe	1881	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1883†
				Remarks: ded. M. Zichy; arr. of G38, see also A310, S61
B56	617	301	1275	Csárdás macabre	1881–2
				Remarks: ded. J. Végh; arr. ?Végh/Liszt of A313; Ramann's pubn (Berlin: Barth, n.d.) cannot be verified
B57	622	311	1269	Ungarische Rhapsodie zu den Budapester Munkácsy-Feierlichkeiten [no.16, Allegro]	1882	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1882†
				Remarks: ded. M. Munkácsy; arr. from A132
B58	[216]	[38]	[1287]	Dritter Mephisto Walzer	1883	unpubd
				Remarks: arr. of A325; MS copy in US-CAh
B59	619	304	1290	Bülow-Marsch	1883	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1884†
				Remarks: ded. Meiningen Hofkapelle, arr. of A326, see also C30
B60	626	345	1311	Magyar király-dal (Ungarisches Königslied)	1883	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1884†
				Remarks: see A328, L17, N81

TWO PIANOS

(4-hand and 8-hand)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
C1	257	355	63	Grosses Konzertstück über Mendelssohns Lieder ohne Worte	1834	unpubd
				Remarks: 1st perf. Paris, 9 April 1835, Liszt and Mme Herminie Vial

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
C2	654	377	143	Grandes variations de Concert (Hexaméron) sur un thème des Puritains [Bellini] [2 versions]	1840–70	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1870† (2nd version)	RS iv/2
				Remarks: ded. Princess Cristina Belgiojoso; 1st perf., Hamburg, 28 Oct 1840, by Liszt and 'Puzzi' [H. Cohen]; see also A41, H5
C3	655	378	301	Réminiscences de Norma [Bellini]	?1845–?74	Mainz: Schott, 1874	RS iv/2
				Remarks: arr. of A77
C4	657	376	645	9. Symphonie de Beethoven	1851	Mainz: Schott, 1853†
				Remarks: see A37
C5	653	375	644	Franz Schuberts Grosse Fantasie op.15 [D760]	after 1851	Vienna: Spina, 1862†
				Remarks: see H13
C6	649	371	659	Fantasie über Motive aus Beethovens Ruinen von Athen	1852	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†	RS iv/2
				Remarks: see A177, H9
C7	641	363	678	Festklänge	1853	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†
				Remarks: see B13, G10
C8	650	372	676	Piano Concerto no.1	?1853–6	Vienna: Haslinger, 1857†
				Remarks: see H4
C9	635	357	696	Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne (Bergsymphonie)	1854–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†
				Remarks: arr. of G1, see also B37, E12
C10	636	358	692	Tasso	1854–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†
				Remarks: arr. of G2, see also B20
C11	637	359	693	Les Préludes	?1855	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†
				Remarks: arr. of G3, see also B12
C12	638	360	694	Orpheus	1855–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†
				Remarks: arr. of G9, see also B17
C13	640	362	700	Mazeppa	1855	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†
				Remarks: arr. of G7, see also A8, A39, A172/4, B38
C14	639	361	705	Prometheus	1855–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1856–7†
				Remarks: arr. of G6; see also B18, L8
C15	642	364	695	Héroïde funèbre	1854–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1856–7†
				Remarks: arr. of G4, see also B49
C16	643	365	691	Hungaria	1855–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†
				Remarks: arr. of G13, see also A65, B39
C17	646	368	735	Die Ideale	1855–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1858†
				Remarks: arr. of G15, see also B44
C18	258	356	715 a, b, c	Concerto pathétique	1856	Leipzig: B&H, 1866†, 1877 (2nd version)
				Remarks: ded. I. von Bronsart; arr. of A167, see also H11
C19	647	369	716	Eine Faust-Symphonie [Goethe]	1856	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1862†, 1870 (new rev. edn)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: arr. of G12, see also A190
C20	648	370	719	Eine Symphonie zu Dantes Divina Commedia	1856–7	Leipzig: B&H, 1858–9†
				Remarks: arr. of G14; see also E8, N44, T6
C21	645	367	727	Hunnenschlacht	1857–60	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†
				Remarks: ded. W. Kaulbach; arr. of G17, see also B51
C22	644	366	766	Hamlet	1858–60	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†
				Remarks: arr. of G22, see also B40
C23	651	373	775	Piano Concerto no.2	1859	Mainz: Schott, 1863†
				Remarks: arr. of H6
C24	652	374	790	Totentanz	?1859–65	Leipzig: Siegel, ?1865†
				Remarks: arr. of H8, see also A62
C25		439	997	[Rákóczi-Marsch, sym. arr.] Rákóczi-Marsch	1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: see B33; based on rev. version of G29
C26	656	379	307	Réminiscences de Don Juan [Mozart]	1876–7	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1877†	RS iv/2
				Remarks: arr. of A80
C27	657a		1191	Beethoven: Piano Concerto no.3	1878–9	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1879†
				Remarks: transcr. with cadenzas by Liszt
C28	657a		1192	Beethoven: Piano Concerto no.4	1878–9	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1879†
				Remarks: transcr. with cadenzas by Liszt
C29	657a		1193	Beethoven: Piano Concerto no.5	1878–9	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1879†
				Remarks: transcr. with cadenzas by Liszt
C30	657b		1313	Bülow-Marsch	?1884	unpubd
				Remarks: see B59, A326; 2 pf, 8 hands

CHAMBER MUSIC

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
D1	208a		3–4	[2] Walzer (Walse), pf/vn, pf	1825	Vienna: Artaria, 1825†; London: Mori & Ball, 1832	LSP xi
				Remarks: see A2
D2	717		18	Trio, vn, vc, pf	1825
				Remarks: mentioned in letter of A. Liszt (14 July 1825) to Czerny; MS vn part Drouot Nov 1997; MS pf part Stargardt July 1998
D3	127	461	51	Duo (Sonata), vn, pf	1835	New York: Southern Music, 1964†
				Remarks: based on Chopin's Mazurka op.6 no.2
D4	128	462	69	Grand duo concertant sur la romance de 'Le Marin' (C.P. Lafont), vn, pf	1835	Paris: Richault, 1852†; Mainz: Schott, 1852†

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: 1st perf., Geneva, 29 Sept 1835
D5	472	138	102	Harold en Italie [Berlioz], pf, va; 2 versions	1836–early 1850s	Leipzig: Leuckart† (1st edn); Paris: Brandus, 1879/80 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: see A29
D6	379	470	1362	Le carnaval de Pesth (Rhapsodie hongroise, no.9), vn, vc, pf	1848	Mainz: Schott, 1892†	LSP xi
				Remarks: arr. of A132/9
D7	380	464	664	O du mein holder Abendstern [Wagner: Tannhäuser], vc, pf	1852	Journal of the American Liszt Society, xxxv, 1994 (facs. and reconstruction by W. Wright)
				Remarks: ded. B. Cossmann; arr. of A163; only the concert ending is by Liszt
D8	383	469	888	Die drei Zigeuner, vn, pf	1864	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1896
				Remarks: ded. E. Reményi; based on N62 (1st version)
D9	377a	464a	891	La notte, vn, pf	1864–?6
				Remarks: based on G25/2; see also A202/2, B23
D10	381	465	970–71	Aus der Ungarischen Krönungsmesse: 1 Benedictus, 2 Offertorium, vn, pf	1869	Leipzig: Schuberth, ?1870†
				Remarks: arr. from I9; see also A238, B31, E23, F3, H14
D11			420, 424	Consolations nos.1 and 4, vc, pf/org; based on vc and pf transcr. of A111b by J. de Swert; a new transition section by Liszt for concert perfs. with K. Fitzenhagen and E. de Munck, 1870–71	1870		LSP x
D12	129	466	1029	Epithalam zu Eduard Reményi's Vermählungsfeier, vn, pf	1872	in Apolló, i (1872)†; Budapest: Táborszky, 1873
				Remarks: composed for Reményi's wedding to Gizella Fáy on 10 Feb 1872, but not perf. until 16 Feb, by Siposs and Reményi; see also A260, W7
D13a, b, c	130	471a	1055a	Elegie I, pf, hp, hmn	?1874	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1875†
		471b	1055b	vc, pf	1875	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1875†	LSP x
		471c	1055c	vn, pf; vn part arr. F. Plotényi	1876	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1876†
				Remarks: ded. in memory of Mme Marie Moukhanoff; see also A266, B36
D14	131	472	1126	Elegie II, vn/vc, pf	1877–8	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1878†, ?1885† [full orch version by A. Hahn authorised by Liszt]	LSP x
				Remarks: ded. L. Ramann; see also A277
D15	378	473	1225	Angelus! Prière aux anges gardiens, str qt	1880–82	Mainz: Schott, 1883†, 1887† [str qnt version]	LSP x
				Remarks: arr. of A283/1, see also E30; version for str qnt (cb arr. Walter Bache) also issued by Schott, 1887; 1st perf., qt: Weimar, before 29 April 1882; qnt: Prague, Umělecká Besedá, 22 Feb 1883
D16a, b, c	132			Romance oubliée, va/vn/vc, pf	1880	Hanover: Simon, 1881†
		467a	1222/1a

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
		467b 467c	1222/1b 1222/1c				LSP x
				Remarks: ded. H. Ritter; see also A299, W9
D17	379b		1234	Puszta-Wehmut, vn, pf	1880	unpubd
D18	723		1391	Tristia, Vallée d'Obermann, vn, vc, pf	?1880		LSP xi
				Remarks: identified and reconstructed by W. Marggraf in 1986; based on A159/6; E. Lassen's arr. substantially rev. by Liszt
D19	134	468	1281	Die Trauergondel (La lugubre gondola), vn/vc, pf	1882–5	EMB, 1974†	LSP x
				Remarks: begun Dec 1882 but only completed for piano (A319); final chamber version from 2nd version of A319
D20	135	474	1283	Am Grabe Richard Wagners, str qt, hp ad lib	1883		LSP x
				Remarks: based on L15; see also A321, B42, E38, W8
D21	382	463	1299	Die Zelle in Nonnenwerth (Elegie; Nonnenwerth IV) vn/vc, pf	?1883	Cologne: Tonger, 1883†	LSP x
				Remarks: based on N6 (s274/2); authenticity doubtful according to Searle, but 1st perf. Budapest, 16 March 1885; see also A81a–d

See also Q18, S61

ORGAN, HARMONIUM, PEDAL PIANO

for organ unless otherwise stated

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
E1	259	380	611	Fantasie und Fuge über den Choral 'Ad nos, ad salutarem undam' [from Meyerbeer: Le prophète], org/pedal pf	1850	Leipzig: B&H, 1852†	EMB i; UE i
				Remarks: ded. G. Meyerbeer; see also B8 4th 'Illustration du prophète'
E2	675	406	665	Kirchliche Fest-Ouvertüre über den Choral 'Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott' [Nicolai], org/pedal pf	1852	Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1852†	EMB iv; UE vii
E3	260	381	712a, b	Praeludium und Fuge über den Namen B–A–C–H	1855–70		EMB ii; UE ii
				1st version	1855–6	Rotterdam: Vletter, 1856–62†
				2nd version	1869–70	Leipzig: Schuberth, *c*1872–3
				Remarks: ded. A. Winterberger; see also A250
E4	[20/2]	[496b]	486	Ave Maria [I]	?1856–9	Leipzig: B&H, 1860†	EMB ii; UE iv
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; arr. of J1 (2nd version)
E5	660 [12]	402 [12]	804	Aus tiefer Noth schrei ich zu dir [Bach, BWV38], org/hmn/pedal pf	?1856–60	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB iv; UE vii
				Remarks: J.G. Töpfer; pubd with E9
E6	672	398	899a, b	Weimar's Volkslied
				1st version	?1857–?63		UE iii†
				2nd version, org/hmn	?1872–73	Weimar: Kühn, 1873†	EMB iv; UE iii
				Remarks: see A191, B16, L10, M32, N53

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
E7	268/2	390/2	792	Les morts, oraison (Die Todten, Oration)	1860	Leipzig: Siegel, 1890†	EMB iii; UE iii
				Remarks: ded. C. von Bülow; arr. of G25/1; see also A202/1
E8	[109]	[426]	801	Einleitung, Fuge und Magnificat aus der Symphonie zu Dantes Divina commedia, org/hmn/pedal pf	1860	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB ii; UE vi
				Remarks: ? Gottschalg-Liszt, ded. R. Wagner; arr. from G14
E9	660[/1]	402[/2]	803	Einleitung und Fuge aus der Kantate 'Ich hatte viel Bekümmernis' [Bach, BWV 21], org/hmn/pedal pf	1860–66	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB iv; UE vii
				Remarks: ded. J.G. Töpfer; pubd with E5
E10	[676]	407/1–2	805a, b	Chor der jüngeren Pilger (Der Gnade Heil) [Wagner: Tannhäuser], org/hmn/pedal pf
				1st version	1860	Dresden: Meser, 1863†	EMB iv; UE vii
				2nd version	1862		EMB iv; UE vii
				Remarks: 1st version ded. F. Müller: see also A210
E11	[98]	[415]	802	Orpheus, sym. poem, org/hmn/pedal pf	1860–72	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1873†	EMB iii; UE iv
				Remarks: see also C12, G9, W6
E12	[261a]	[412]	837	Andante religioso, org/hmn/pedal pf	?1861–2	Leipzig: Klinkhardt, 1862†, Schuberth 1869 (2nd edn)	EMB i; UE iv
				Remarks: ded. J. Schneider (1st edn), K. Gille (2nd edn); arr. Gottschalg/Liszt based on G1; see also B37, C9
E13	661	403	854	Adagio von Bach [from vn sonata BWV1017], org/hmn/pedal pf; arr. Gottschalg/Liszt	1861–3	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB iv; UE vii
E14	659	401	849	Ave Maria von Arcadelt, org/hmn	1862–3	Erfurt: Körner, 1865†	EMB i; UE iii
				Remarks: ded. A.W. Gottschalg; see also A216
E15	658	400	845	Evocation à la Chapelle Sixtine (Miserere d'Allegri et Ave verum corpus de Mozart), org/hmn/pedal pf	1862–5	Erfurt: Körner, 1865†	EMB ii; UE ii
				Remarks: ded. A.W. Gottschalg; see also A217, B26, G26
E16	662	404	852–3	Fr. Chopins Präludien [op.28 nos.4 and 9]	?1862–3	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB iv; UE vii
E17	673	382	867	Variationen über den Basso continuo des ersten Satzes der Kantate 'Weinen, Klagen, Sorgen, Zagen . . .' und des Crucifixus der H-moll-Messe von J.S. Bach	?1862–3	Leipzig: Körner, 1865†	EMB iv; UE ii
				Remarks: ded. A.W. Gottschalg; composed after the death of Liszt's daughter, Blandine, on 9 Sept 1862; see also A198, A214
E18	668	397	870	Slavimo slavno, Slaveni! (Andante maestoso)	1863	Vienna: in Jb des Sängerbund Dreizehnlinden (1910–11)†	EMB i; UE iii
				Remarks: arr. of J16

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
E19				Der Papst-Hymnus [Pio IX] (Tu es Petrus; Hymne du Pape)
E19a	261	391	871	hmn/org	1863–5	Erfurt: Körner, 1865†	EMB iii; UE iii
E19b	664	[391]	931	1st version, org/hmn/pedal pf	1867	Paris: Repos, 1867†
				2nd version, org	1867
				Remarks: (a) reworked for chorus and orch I7 no.8; (b) 1st version based on I7 no.8, simplified for 2nd version (unpubd) and ded. Don Zeffirino Falcione; see also A228, B30
E20	262	383	887	Ora pro nobis, litanei, hmn/org	1864	Erfurt: Körner, 1865†	EMB iii; UE iii
				Remarks: ded. Cardinal Prince Gustav Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst; after motifs brought from Palestine by Princess Catharina Hohenzollern
E21	663	405	900	Regina coeli laetare [Lassus], org/hmn/pedal pf	?1865	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1869†	EMB iv; UE vii
E22				[4] Consolations, org/hmn/pedal pf	1866–79
		[12/3]		1 [3], A	?1879
	759		613	2 [4], Adagio, D♭	*c*1866–7	Weimar: Kühn, 1867†	EMB ii; UE iv
		[12/5]	614	3 [5], E	*c*1872–3	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1873†	EMB ii; UE iv
		[12/6]	615	4 [6], Tröstung, E	?*c*1879	Langensalza: Beyer, 1884†	UE iv
				Remarks: based on A111b nos.3–6 (no.1 orig. D♭), 2–3 arr. Gottschalg-Liszt; see also D11
E23	667	411b	948	Offertorium aus der ungarischen Krönungsmesse, org/hmn/pedal pf	?1868	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1873†	EMB iii; UE iv
				Remarks: arr. from I9, see also A238, B31, D10, F3, H14
E24	[504/1]	[193a]	976	Ave Maria [II], D, hmn	1869	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871	EMB i; UE vi
				Remarks: arr. of J24, see also A247a, K4
E25	[2]	[477]	847	Einleitung zur Legende der Heiligen Elisabeth, org/hmn/pedal pf	1872	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1873†, Schuberth, 1873	EMB ii; UE iv
				Remarks: arr. Müllerhartung/Liszt from I4, see also A192, B27
E26	666	393	1096	Preludio (zu den Glocken des Strassburger Münsters: 'Excelsior!'), org, vv ad lib	1874–5		EMB ii; UE vi
				Remarks: arr. of L15/1; see also B42
E27	669	394	1139–40	Zwei Kirchenhymnen, org/hmn:
				1 Salve Regina, nach dem gregorianischen Kirchengesang	1877	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1880†	EMB iii; UE vi
				2 Ave maris stella			NLE i/16†
				1st version, hmn, 4/4	1871–7
				2nd version, org, hmn, 6/4 [2/3]	1877	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1880†	EMB i, UE vi
				Remarks: ded. Cardinal Prince Gustav von Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst; no.2 (1st version) based on J19
E28	263/187a	388	1131	Resignazione (Ergebung), kbd	1877–81	Berlin: facs. in A. Göllerich (H1908)	EMB iii; NLE i/12; UE vi
				Remarks: for kbd, but inst not specified; pubd as pf work in NLE
E29	[437]	[270]	1134	Agnus Dei de la Messe de Requiem [Verdi], org/hmn/pf	1877–8	Milan: Ricordi, 1879†, 1883 (rev.)	EMB iv; UE vii
				Remarks: 1883 edn with added version for armonipiano; see also A284

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
E30	378/1	389	1136/1	Angelus! Prière aux anges gardiens, hmn	1877–82	Mainz: Schott, 1883†	EMB i; UE vi
				Remarks: ded. D. von Bülow; arr. of A283/1, see also D15
E31	674a	534	1189	Via crucis	1878–9	EMB, 1986†	EMB iii (partial edn); UE v
				Remarks: part pubd EMB iii entitled 'Kreuzandachten' after Göllerich; arr. of J33, see also A287, B52
E32	265	386	1203/1	Gebet (Preghiera), org/hmn	1879
				1st version, Andante		Langensalza: Beyer, 1884	EMB iii; UE vi
				2nd version, Andante pietoso
				Remarks: ded. A.W. Gottschalg; transposed 2nd version added to E33
E33	264	384	1202	Missa pro organo lectarum celebrationi missarum adjumento inserviens	1879	Rome: Manganelli, 1879†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1880	EMB iii; UE v
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; based on J5 (2nd version), see also E32 and E24
E34	670	396	1206	Rosario: 1 Mysteria gaudiosa, 2 Mysteria dolorosa, 3 Mysteria gloriosa, org/hmn	1879		EMB iii†; UE v
				Remarks: arr. of J37 (without no.4)
E35	665	392	1220	San Francesco (Preludio per Il cantico del Sol di San Francesco)	1880		EMB iii†; UE vi
				Remarks: from I8; see also A301, A307; theme based on 'In dulci jubilo'
E36	[58]	[515]	1261/1	O sacrum convivium, org/hmn	*c*1880–85		UE vi†
				Remarks: see J40
E37	674	399	1252	A magyarok Istene (Ungarns Gott), org/hmn	1881	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1881†	EMB iii; UE vi
				Remarks: see also A309, L16, M37
E38	267	387	1284	Am Grabe Richard Wagners, org/hmn	1883		EMB i†; UE vi
				Remarks: see A321, B42, D20, L15, W8
E39	266	385	943	Requiem für die Orgel	1883	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1885†	EMB iii; UE v
				Remarks: perf. at C. Sayn-Wittgenstein's requiem mass, Rome, 17 June 1887; arr. of J22
E40	671	395	1309	In domum domini ibimus (Zum Haus des Herren ziehen wir), Kirchliches Präludium (À l'église)	1884	Berlin: in Göllerich (H1908), appx	EMB iii
				Remarks: see also A331, J46
E41	268/1	390/1	1312	Introitus	1884	Leipzig: Körner, 1887†	EMB ii; UE vi
E42			1343	Ave verum corpus [Mozart, K618], org/hmn; not the same as E15	1866	Leipzig: Kahnt, n.d. (after 1886)†	EMB iv; UE vii

See also: A267/1–4, A286, A294, A300, A308, J43, J44

ORGAN WITH OTHER INSTRUMENTS

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
F1	679	410	828	Aria 'Cujus animam' aus dem Stabat Mater von Rossini, org, trbn	*c*1860–70		UE viii
				Remarks: ded. C.E. Grosse; not rel. to A141/1; see K5

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
F2	677	409	848/1,2	Hosannah (Alleluja del Cantico del Sol), org, trbn ad lib	1862–3	Weimar: Kühn, 1867†	EMB ii, UE viii
				Remarks: I8, 1st version
F3	678	411a	1006–7	Aus der Ungarischen Krönungsmesse, vn, org/hmn: 1 Offertorium, 2 Benedictus	1871	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†; 1873	UE viii
				Remarks: arr. from I9; the order here reflects the liturgical sequence, as in the 1st edn; see also A238, B31, D10, E23, H14

ORCHESTRAL

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
G1	95	412	508a, b, c, d	Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne (Bergsymphonie), méditation symphonie after Hugo; 4 versions	1847–56	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†	MW i/1
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; see also B37, C9, E12
G2	96	413	575/a, b, c, d	Tasso: lamento e trionfo, sym. poem; after Goethe and Byron; 4 versions	1847–54	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†	MW i/1
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; orig. for the centenary of Goethe's birth, as Ouvertüre de Tasso von Goethe, and 1st perf. Weimar, 28 Aug 1849, cond. Liszt; later expanded into sym. poem; see also B20, C10
G3	97	414	551a, b	Les Préludes, sym. poem 'after A. de Lamartine'	1849–55	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†	MW i/2
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; orig. Ouvertüre des Quatre élémens, rev. 1850–52 as independent orch work, with final title and association with Lamartine from mid-1853; 1st perf. Weimar, 23 Feb 1854, cond. Liszt; see also B12, C11, L2, N44
G4	102	419	576a, b	Héroïde funèbre, sym. poem; 2 versions	1849–50, rev. 1854–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†	MW i/4
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; see also B49, C15, 1st movement of Q1 until 1853
G5	115	433	561a, b	Festmarsch zur GoetheJubiläumsfeier; 2 versions	1849–57	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1859†	MW i/11
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn Wittgenstein; based on A164; see also B19
G6	99	416	622	Prometheus, sym. poem; 2 versions	1850–55	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†	MW i/3
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; orig. Ouvertüre to L8, perf. Weimar, 24 Aug 1850, cond. Liszt; rev. as sym. poem, perf. Brunswick, 18 Oct 1855, cond. Liszt; see also B18, C14
G7	100	417	647a, b	Mazeppa, sym. poem after V. Hugo	1851–4	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†	MW i/3
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; based on material used in A175/4; sketch, 1845, 1st perf., Weimar, 16 April 1854, cond. Liszt; see also A8, A39, A172, B38, C13
G8	357	434	679a, b	Huldigungsmarsch; 2 versions	1853–7	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1858†, 1863 (2nd edn)	MW i/11
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duke Carl Alexander; arr. of A182, 1st version orch. Raff
G9	98	415	682	Orpheus, sym. poem	1853–4	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†	MW i/2
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; 1st perf. Weimar, 1854: 16 Feb as introduction to Gluck's opera, 10 Nov, as sym. poem; see also B17, C12, E11, W6
G10	101	418	677	Festklänge, sym. poem; 2 versions	1853–61	Leipzig: B&H, 1856†, 1861 (rev.)	MW i/4
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; 1st perf. with Schiller's play Huldigung der Künste (music by C. Stör), Weimar, 9 Nov 1854, cond. Liszt; see also B13, C7
G11	358	435	685	Vom Fels zum Meer! Deutscher Siegesmarsch	?1853	Berlin: Schlesinger: ?1860†	MW i/12

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: ded. King Wilhelm I of Prussia; arr. of A184, see also B14
G12	108	425	697a, b	Eine Faust-Symphonie in drei Charakterbildern, after J.W. von Goethe; 2 versions, 1st for orch, 2nd for T, male vv, orch	1854–7, 1861	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1861†	MW i/8–9
				Remarks: ded. Berlioz; drafted from late 1830s, Chorus mysticus added 1857, rev. up to 1861; 1st perf., Weimar, 5 Sept 1857, cond. Liszt; see also A190, C19
G13	103	420	690	Hungaria, sym. poem	1854	Leipzig: B&H, 1857†	MW i/5
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; 1st perf. Pest, 8 Sept 1856, cond. Liszt; see also A65, B39, C16
G14	109	426	507	Eine Symphonie zu Dantes Divina Commedia	1855–6	Leipzig: B&H, 1859†	MW i/7
				Remarks: ded. R. Wagner; planned 1839, themes 1847–8, elaborated 186855–6; see also C20, E8, N44, T6
G15	106	423	734	Die Ideale, sym. poem after Schiller	1856–7	Leipzig: B&H, 1858†	MW i/6
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; 1st perf., Weimar, 5 Sept 1857, cond. Liszt; see also B44, C17
G16	110	427	782–3	Zwei Episoden aus Lenaus Faust: 1 Der nächtliche Zug, 2 Der Tanz in der Dorfschenke (Erster Mephisto Walzer)	1857–61	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1866†	MW i/10
				Remarks: ded. K. Tausig; no.1 uses the Pange lingua gloriosa for the feast of Corpus Christi; orch. version of no.2 based on A189; see also B15
G17	105	422	726	Hunnenschlacht, sym. poem after paintings by W. von Kaulbach	1857	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†	MW i/6
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; uses melody Crux fidelis (on Pange lingua); projected 1855; 1st perf. Weimar, 29 Dec 1857, cond. Liszt; see also B51, C21
G18	356	431	732	Festvorspiel	1857	Stuttgart: Hallberger, 1858†	MW i/11
				Remarks: arr. of A188; 1st perf. Weimar, 4 Sept 1857
G19				Weimar's Volkslied, Sym. orch, C	1857
				Remarks: See A191, B16, E6, L10, M32, N53
G20	114	432	733	Künstlerfestzug zur Schillerfeier, 1859	1857	Leipzig: Kühn, 1860†	MW i/11
				Remarks: Based on themes from L9, G15; see also A201, B22
G21	359	441	742–7	[6] Ungarische Rhapsodien	1857–60	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1874–5†
				Remarks: orch version by Liszt and F. Doppler of A132 nos.14, 12, 6, 2, 5, 9 (in that order); see also B41
G22	104	421	765	Hamlet, sym. poem	1858	Leipzig: B&H, 1861†	MW i/5
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; composed for a private perf. of Shakespeare's play in Weimar, 25 June 1858, cond. Liszt, then much rev; perf. Sondershausen, 2 July 1876, cond. M. Erdmannsdörfer; see also B40, C22
G23	116	436	737	Festmarsch nach Motiven von E.H. z. S.-C.-G.	1858–9	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1860†
				Remarks: based on themes from Duke Ernst of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha's opera Diana von Solange, 1858; see also A196, B21
G24	363	449	784–7	Franz Schuberts Märsche: 1 Vivace, b, 2 Trauermarsch, e♭, 3 Reitermarsch, D, 4 Ungarischer Marsch, d	1859–60, rev. 1870	Berlin: Fürstner, 1870–71†
				Remarks: based on Schubert's D818, 819, 968b; see also B35
G25	112	429		Trois odes funèbres:

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
			793a, b	1 Les morts (Lamennais), male vv ad lib	1860		MW i/12†
			889	2 La Notte, c, after Michelangelo	1860–4	MW i/12†
			919	3 Le triomphe funèbre du Tasse	1866	Leipzig: B&H, 1877†	MW i/2
				Remarks: no.1 ded. C. von Bülow, no.3 ded. L. Damrosch; no.1 see also A202, B23, E7, no.2 B23, D9, no.3 used as epilogue to G3; see also A202, B23, S57
G26	360	445	846	A la Chapelle Sixtine (Miserere d'Allegri et Ave verum corpus de Mozart)	1862	EMB, 1993†
				Remarks: see A217, B26, E15
G27	354	440	858–9	Deux légendes: 1 St François de Paule marchant sur les flots, 2 St François d'Assise: la prédication aux oiseaux	1863	EMB, 1984†
				Remarks: see A219 (where order of pieces is reversed); contrary to Schnapp's assertion, the piano version preceded the orchestral; see also J13
G28	113	430	864	Salve Polonia 1st version (Boze coś Polskę) 2nd version (Interludium aus dem Oratorium St Stanislaus)	1863–84	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1884/5† (2nd version)
				Remarks: based on Pol. song 'Boze coś Polskę', text by A. Felinski, and the Dą browski Mazurek (since 1927 the Pol. national anthem); see also A225, A302, Q1, Q17
G29	117	439	904	Rákóczi-Marsch, Symphonisch bearbeitet	1863–7	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: see A228, B33, C25; A60b and A132 are different arr. of same melody
G30	355	442	881	Vexilla regis prodeunt (Kreuzeshymne)	1864	unpubd
				Remarks: transcr. of hymn with text by V. Fortunatus; see also A226; J33 different arr. of same melody
G31	361	443	885	Der Papsthymnus	1864	unpubd
				Remarks: see also A228, B30, E19, I7 no.8
G32	351	446	903	Mazurka-Fantasie von Hans von Bülow	1865	Leipzig: Leuckart, 1868†
				Remarks: based on Bülow's op.13
G33	118	438	987	Ungarischer Marsch zur Krönungsfeier in Ofen-Pest am 8. Juni 1867	1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†	MW i/12
				Remarks: see A248, B32
G34	353	448	1032–3	Szózat und Hymnus (Zwei vaterländische Dichtungen von Vörösmarty and Kölcsey) [B. Egressy and F. Erkel]	1872	Budapest: Rózsavölgyi, 1873†
				Remarks: ded. Count Gyula Andrássy; 1st perf. Budapest, 19 March 1873, cond. Liszt; see also A261, A335/5
G35	119	437	1100	Ungarischer Sturmmarsch	1875	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1876†	MW i/12
				Remarks: ded. Count S. Teleky; see also A112, B46
G36	352	447	1142	Peter Cornelius: Zweite Ouvertüre zum Barbier von Bagdad	1877–80	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1905†
G37	111	428	1231	Zweiter Mephisto-Walzer	1880–81	Berlin: Fürstner, 1881†	MW i/10
				Remarks: ded. Saint-Saëns; based on A288 and B54; contrary to previous assertions, the pf versions preceded the orch version; 1st perf., Budapest, 9 May 1881, cond. S. Erkel

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
G38	107	424	1255	Von der Wiege bis zum Grabe Du berceau jusqu'a la tombe, sym. poem: 1 Die Wiege, 2 Der Kampf um's Dasein, 3 Zum Grabe, die Wiege des zukünftigen Lebens)	1881–2	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1883†	MW i/10
				Remarks: ded. Count M. Zichy; possibly after an engraving by Zichy, Du berceau jusqu'au cercueil, pubd 21 April 1881 in Fővárosi Lapok; see also A303, A310, B55, S61
G39	364	450	1259–60	Danses galiciennes von J. Zarembski [Zaręmbski]	1881–2	Berlin: Simrock, 1882†
				Remarks: Liszt inserted a mazurka by Zaręmbski between two Danses galiciennes; see also H14, L17e
G40	[534]	[214]	1277	A magyarok Istene (Ungarns Gott), orch	1881	unpubd
				Remarks: Schnapp 82; see also A309, E37, L16, M37

SOLO INSTRUMENT AND ORCHESTRA

for piano and full orchestra unless otherwise stated

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
H1	145	452	58	Malédiction, pf, str orch	1833–40		MW i/13
				Remarks: a version for sextet (pf, str), also exists
H2	120	453	64	Grande fantaisie symphonique über Themen aus Berlioz' 'Lelio'	1834	Leipzig: Peters, 1981†
				Remarks: based on Chant du pêcheur and Chant des brigands
H3	691	668	65	De profundis (Psaume instrumental)	1834	Eschweiler: Ács, 1989† (2 pf); Chicago: Rosenblatt, 1990†; Toronto: Maxwell, 1990†
				Remarks: ded. Abbé Lamennais; mentioned in letter to Anna Liszt from Geneva, 28 Aug 1835; H8 (early version) uses some of the thematic material
H4	124	455	52	Piano Concerto no.1, E♭	1835–56	Vienna: Haslinger, 1857†	MW i/13
				Remarks: ded. H. Litolff; sketches for main theme exist from 1832; 1st perf. Weimar, 17 Feb 1855, with Liszt, cond. Berlioz; see also C8
H5	392	131	142/2	Grandes variations de concert (Hexaméron) sur un thème des Puritains [Bellini]	1837–9	Paris: Troupenas, ?1839†
				Remarks: see A41, C2
H6	125	456	247	Piano Concerto no.2, A	1839–61	Mainz: Schott, 1863†	MW i/13
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bronsart; 1st perf. Weimar, 7 Jan 1857, Bronsart, cond. Liszt; see also C23
H7			299/2	Grande paraphrase de concert 'God Save the Queen' et 'Rule Britannia'	1841
				Remarks: MS at Stargardt, July 1998, item 908
H8	126	457	246/1,2	Totentanz (2 versions)	1847–?1862	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†	MW i/13
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bülow; inspired (1839) by Orcagna's frescoes in the Campo Santo di Pisa and Holbein etchings; 1st perf. The Hague, 15 April 1865, with Bülow, cond. Verhulst; see also A62, C24
H9	122	454	550	Fantasie über Motive aus Beethovens Ruinen von Athen	1848–52	Leipzig: Siegel, 1865†

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: ded. N. Rubinstein; shares thematic material with A124; 1st perf. Pest, 1 June 1853, with Bülow, cond. F. Erkel; see also A177, C6
H10	367	460	563	Polonaise brillante von Weber [op.17]	1849	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1851†
				Remarks: ded. A. Henselt; see also A175
H11	365		574	Concerto pathétique (2 versions)	1849/50–85	Leipzig: B&H, 1896†
				Remarks: 1st version based on A167; orchd version Liszt/Raff, unpubd; 2nd version based on C18, orchd E. Reuss, rev. Liszt, pubd posthumously; 1st perf. Tivoli, Villa d'Este, between 10 and 15 Sept 1885, cond. Liszt
H12	123	458	667	Fantasie über ungarische Volksmelodien	1849–52	Dresden: Heinze (Peters), 1864†
				Remarks: ded. H. von Bülow; based on A132 no.14; 1st perf. Pest, 1 June 1853, with Bülow, cond. F. Erkel
H13	366	459	643	Franz Schuberts grosse Fantasie op.15 [D760]	1851	Vienna: Spina, 1857†
				Remarks: see C5
H14	362	444	1102	Benedictus aus der Ungarischen Krönungsmesse, vn, orch	1875–7	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1877†
				Remarks: ded. A. Kömpel on MS; see also A238, B31, D10, F3, I9

SACRED CHORAL WITH ORCHESTRA

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
I1	5	480	1073	Sainte Cécile (légende, D. Gay), Mez, mixed chorus ad lib, orch/pf/(with hmn, hp)	1845–74	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1876†
				Remarks: ded. L. Haynald, Archbishop of Kalocsa; orig. version begun 1845 for Queen Maria da Gloria of Portugal
I2	9	484	706	Missa solennis zur Erweihung der Basilika in Gran, S, A, T, B, mixed chorus, orch	1855–8	Vienna: Imperial Printing House, 1859†; Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871 (rev.)
				Remarks: 1st perf. 31 Aug 1856, Esztergom
I3	13	489	707/1a, b	Der 13. Psalm (Herr, wie lange willst du meiner so gar vergessen)
				1st version: S, Mez, T, Bar, mixed chorus, orch	1855–8
				2nd version: T, mixed chorus, orch	1859–63	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1864†, 1878 (rev. edn)
				Remarks: 2nd version ded. P. Cornelius; 1st version 1st perf. Berlin, 6 Dec 1855, 2nd version 1st perf. Karlsruhe, 22 Aug 1864; org part (C707/2) not a separate work, but added for perf. in Amsterdam, 25 April 1866
I4	2	477	748	Die Legende von der heiligen Elisabeth (orat, O. Roquette), S, A, 3 Bar, B, chorus, orch, org	1857–62	Leipzig: Kahnt, vs 1867†, fs 1869, 1882 (Fr. version); London: Novello, 1884 (Eng. version)
				Remarks: ded. King Ludwig II of Bavaria; 1st perf. Pest, 15 Aug 1865; see also A192, B27, E25

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
I5	14	490	822	Der 18. Psalm (Coeli enarrant gloriam Dei; Die Himmel erzählen die Ehre Gottes)
				1st version, male vv, (orch, org ad lib)/(ww, brass, perc ad lib)	1860	Weimar: [autographiert Carl Götze], 1861†
				2nd version, male vv, (org)/(ww, brass, perc ad lib)	1870	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: intended ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein
I6	48	503	1104	Der Herr bewahret die Seelen seiner Heiligen (Ps xcvi. 10–11), mixed chorus, 2 tpt, 3 trbn, tuba, org, timp	?1860s–1875	Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, 1887†	MW v/6
				Remarks: for memorial concert unveiling the Carl August monument, Weimar, 3 Sept 1875; see also A268
I7	3	478	710	Christus (orat, Bible and Catholic liturgy), S, A, T, Bar, B, mixed chorus, orch, org	1866–72	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1872†
				I Oratorium in Nativitate Domini (Weihnachts-Oratorium): 1 Rorate coeli (Einleitung), 2 Angelus Domini (Pastorale und Verkündigung des Engels), 3 Stabat Mater speciosa (Hymnus), 4 Hirtenspiel an der Krippe (Pastorale), 5 Et ecce stella (Die heiligen drei Könige Marsch)
				II Post Epiphaniam: 6 Beati pauperes spiritu (Die Seligkeiten), 7 Pater Noster (Gebet), 8 Tu es Petrus (Die Gründung der Kirche); 9 Et ecce motus magnus (Das Wunder), 10 Hosanna, benedictus qui venit (Der Einzug in Jerusalem)
				III Passio et resurrectio: 11 Tristis est anima mea, 12 Stabat Mater dolorosa (Jacopone da Todi), 13 O filii et filiae (Hymnus Paschalis), 14 Resurrexit!
				Remarks: planned from 1853; nos.6–7 also separate works (J9, J14); 1st perf. Weimar, 29 May 1873; see also A222, A228, B30, E19, G31
I8	4	479	857a, b, c	Cantico del Sol di San Francesco	1862		UE ix†
				1st version, Cantico di San Francesco, Bar, male vv, orch, org/ (Bar, male vv ad lib, pf, org/hmn)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	[4]	[479]	[857a, b, c]	2nd version, Cantico del Sol di San Francesco d'Assisi, Bar, male vv, orch, org	1879–82	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1884†	MW v/5
				Remarks: 2nd version ded. A. Senfft von Pilsach; 1st version 1st perf. Rome, Palazzo Altieri, 23 March 1863; see also A219, E14, F2; 2nd version 1st perf. Pressburg, 21 Dec 1884; see also A301, A307, E35, F2, S59
I9	11	487	924	Ungarische Krönungsmesse, S, A, T, B, mixed chorus, orch	1866–9	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1870† fs, vs 1871
				Remarks: for coronation of Emperor Franz Joseph I and Empress Elisabeth as king and queen of Hungary, 1st perf. Buda, 8 June 1867, cond. W.G. Preyer; Ps cxvi (J6) added 1869; see also A238, B31, D10, E23, F3, H14, J6;
I10	7	481	120a, b	Cantantibus organis (Antiphona in festo Sta Caeciliae, A, mixed chorus, orch/ A, mixed chorus hmn, pf, hp ad lib	1879	Rome: Manganelli, 1880†; Leipzig, Kahnt, 1881	MW v/5
				Remarks: for the inauguration of a Palestrina monument, Rome, May 1880; see also L10, Q17, S53, S54

SACRED CHORAL MUSIC

a cappella, or with ensemble or keyboard

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
J1				Ave Maria (I)			MW v/6
	20/1	496a	357a	1st version, B♭, mixed chorus 6vv, org ad lib	1842	Vienna: Haslinger, 1846†
	20/2	496b	357b	2nd version, A, mixed chorus 4vv, org	1852	Leipzig: B&H, 1853†
				Remarks: 2nd version ded. Pater Stanislaus Albach; see also E4
J2	19	508	443	Hymne de l'enfant à son réveil (O père qu'adore mon père (A. de Lamartine)
				1st version, female, vv, hmn/pf, hp ad lib	?*c*1844
				2nd version, 3 equal vv, pf/hmn	?1860–62
				3rd version, 3 equal vv, pf/hmn	1865
				4th version, female vv, hmn/pf, hp ad lib	1874	Budapest: Táborsky & Parsch, 1875†	MW v/5
				Remarks: version 1 lost; composed 1843 according to Schnapp (A1942), no.39, possibly used in A61, A158/6; version 2 MS incl. inc. Ital. text; version 3 with complete Ital. text; version 4 pubd with text in Fr., Ger. (P. Cornelius) and Hung. (K. Ábrányi)
J3	21/1	518a	484a	Pater noster (I)
				1st version, male vv	1846	Vienna: Haslinger, 1846†
	21/2	518b	484b	2nd version, TTBB, org	1852, rev.	Leipzig: B&H, 1853†	MW v/6
				Remarks: MS title same as in A61/6
J4				Five choruses on French texts, 4 mixed vv (nos.1–4), 3 equal vv (no.5):	?1846	Budapest: EMB, 1989† (no.2 only)
	18/2	506/2	287	1 L'Eternel est son nom (J. Racine)
	18/3	506/3	288	2 Chantons, chantons l'auteur de la lumière (Racine)
	18/4	506/4	289	3 untexted, in A (Allegretto, moderato con grazia)
	18/5	506/5	290	4 Combien j'ai douce souvenance (Chateaubriand)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	18/1	506/1	286	[5] Qui m'a donné la naissance
				Remarks: probably for choral competition Nos patriae fines, mentioned in letter to Anna Liszt, March 1846; no.4 uses Auvergne folksong melody, see Schnapp (A1942), no.43; no.5 text inc., and not numbered; another chorus probably lost; see also S46
J5				Missa quattuor vocum ad aequales, 4 male vv, org
	8/1	485a	547a	1st version	1846–7	Leipzig: B&H, 1853†
	8/2	485b	547b	2nd version	1869	Paris: Repos, 1869†; Leipzig: B&H, 1870 (new edn)	MW v/3
				Remarks: 1st version ded. Pater Albach; pubd 1848 according to Ramann, vol.ii/2, p.503, but unconfirmed
J6	15a	[487/3]	981	Psalm cxvi (Laudate Dominum), male vv, pf	1849–69	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1869†
				Remarks: see I9
J7	24	533a	680	Te Deum (I), male vv, org	1853		MW v/7†
J8	23	504	681	Domine salvum fac regem (Ps xx), T, male vv, org/orch	1853		MW v/5†
				Remarks: orchd for ww by Raff
J9	25	529	708	Les béatitudes (Die Seligkeiten) (Matthew v, 3–10), Bar, mixed vv, org	1855–9	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein: see also I7 no.6
J10	15/2	491b	779b, c	Der 23. Psalm (Mein Gott, der ist mein Hirt), (J.G. Herder, after Bible)
				1st version, T/S, male chorus, hp/pf, org/hmn	?1859–61
				2nd version, T/S, male vv ad lib, hp/pf	1859–62	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1864†	MW v/6
				3rd version, chorus, orch
				Remarks: 1st version 1st perf. 18 June 1860; pubd 1864 without chorus (K1); 3rd version lost, see S53
J11	17	493	780	Der 137. Psalm (An den Wassern zu Babylon) S, female vv, vn, hp/pf, org/hmn	1859–62	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1864†, 1880s (rev.)	MW v/6
				Remarks: see also K2; orch version lost, see S54
J12	27	533b	781	Te Deum (II), mixed vv, org, brass and perc ad lib	1859		MW v/7†
				Remarks: for the wedding of Marie Sayn-Wittgenstein to Prince Constantine von Hohenlohe, Weimar, 15 Sept 1859
J13	28	494	823	An den heiligen Franziskus von Paula, Gebet (?M. von Sabinin), solo male vv, male chorus, hmn/org, 3 trbn and timp ad lib	*c*1860–1874	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1875†	MW v/5
				Remarks: see A219/2, G27/2
J14	29	519	824	Pater noster (II), A♭, 4 mixed vv, org	?1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1864†	MW v/6
				Remarks: as Pater noster I in MW, Grove6 and Raabe; used in I7 (no.7)
J15a				Christus ist geboren (Weihnachtslied I) (T. Landmesser) (1st setting Mässig bewegt, 4/4)	1863	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1865†
	31/1	536a	872a	1st version, D, mixed vv, org
	31/2	536/1	872b	2nd version, E, male vv, org
J15b				Christus ist geboren (Weihnachtslied II) (T. Landmesser) (2nd setting Andante pietoso, 2/4)	1863	Berlin: Bote & Bock, 1865†
	32/1	536b	873a	1st version, F, mixed vv, org/hmn

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	32/2	536/2	873b	2nd version, G, male chorus a cappella, org postlude ad lib
				Remarks: See A227
J15c	32/3	536d	873c	[Weihnachtslied II], 3rd setting (Andante pietoso, 2/4), G, SSA a cappella
J16	33	531	868	Slavimo slavno, slaveni! (O. Pozzo [U. Pucić]), male vv, org	1863–6		MW v/6†
				Remarks: for the millennium celebration for St Cyril and St Methodius; 1st perf. Rome, S Girolamo deglia Schiavoni, 3 July 1863; see also A223, E18
J17	35	501	901a, b	Crux! (Hymne des marins avec Antienne approbative de N[otre]T[out][Saint]P[ère] Pie IX (Guichon de Grandpont), male vv, a cappella/(female/children/s vv, pf)	1865	Brest: Imp. Anner., 1865†	MW v/6
J18	10	486	902	Missa choralis (Organo concinente), chorus, org	1859–65	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1869†	MW v/3
J19				Ave maris stella (V. Fortunatus)	1865/6–1868		MW v/6
	34/1	499a	906a	1st setting, G, male vv, org/hmn		Leipzig: Kahnt, 1870†, 1871, 1882
	34/2	499b	906b	2nd setting, B♭, male vv, org/hmn		Paris: Repos, 1868†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871, 1882
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot; see also A243, E27, K3
J20	30	526	825	Répons et Antiennes (Responsoriens und Antiphonen), male vv, org ad lib	1860		MW v/7†
J21	36	502	933	Dall'alma Roma, 2vv, org ad lib	1867–8		UE ix†
				Remarks: see I7/8, E19
J22	12	488	934	Requiem (Messe des morts), 2 T, 2 B, male vv, org, brass ad lib	1867–8	Paris: Repos, 1869†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871, (rev., incl. J30)	MW v/3
				Remarks: in memory of Liszt's mother and children Daniel and Blandine; see also E39
J23	37	513	949	Mihi autem adhaerere (Offertoire de la messe du patriarche séraphique San François) (from Ps lxxiii), male vv, org	1868	Paris: Repos, 1869†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871 (2nd edn), 1882	MW v/6
J24	38	497	974	Ave Maria (II), D, mixed vv, org	1869	Regensburg: Pustet, 1870†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871, 1882	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot and Cherubini Choral Society, Florence; see also A247a, E24, E32, E33, K4

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
J25	39	510a, b	978a, b	Inno a Maria Vergine, (mixed vv, hp, org)/(mixed vv, hp, pf 4 hands, hmn)	1869		MW v†
J26				Pater noster (III)
	41/1	521a	979a	1st setting, F, mixed vv, org/pf	1869	Regensburg: Pustet, 1870†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871, 1882
	41/2	521b	979b	2nd setting, B♭, male vv, org/hmn/pf	1869		MW v/6†
				Remarks: 1st setting ded. J. Laussot and Cherubini Choral Society; no.1 in 9 Kirchenchorgesänge, also in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge; 2nd setting ded. J. Laussot
J27				Tantum ergo (T. Aquinas)	1869		MW v/6
	42/1	532a	980b	1st setting, female vv, org		Regensburg: Pustet, 1871†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871 (2nd edn), 1882 (rev.); London: Curwen, 1896
	42/2	532b	980a	2nd setting, male vv, org		Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†, 1882 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: 1st setting ded. F. Witt in 1st edn; no.4 in 9 Kirchenchorgesänge; also in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge, ded. J. Laussot; 2nd setting ded. J. Laussot, no.4 bis in 9 Kirchenchorgesänge; also in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge
J28	40	516a	984	O salutaris hostia (I), (T. Aquinas), B♭, female vv, org	1869	Regensburg: Pustet, 1871†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871 (2nd edn), 1882 (3rd edn); London: Curwen, 1896	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. F.X. Haberl, no.3 in 9 Kirchenchorgesänge; ded. J. Laussot; in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge
J29	43	516b	985	O salutaris hostia (II), E, mixed vv, org	1869–?1870	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†, 1882	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot; no.8 in 9 Kirchenchorgesänge; in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge
J30	45	511	991	Libera me, male vv, org	1871	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†, 1882 (2nd edn)
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot; used in J22
J31	44	500	1010	Ave verum corpus (T. Aquinas), mixed vv, org ad lib	1871	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†, 1882	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot
J32				Anima Christi, sanctifica me, male vv, org	1874
	46/1	495a	1072a	1st version, 4/4 (Lento ma non troppo)			MW v/6†
	46/2	495b	1072b	2nd version, 3/4 (Andante, non troppo lento)		Leipzig: Kahnt, 1882†	MW v/6a, b
				Remarks: ded. J. Laussot; no.10 in 12 Kirchenchorgesänge
J33	53	534	1112	Via Crucis, les 14 stations de la croix (P. Gerhardt and J. Rist), solo vv, chorus, org/pf	1876–9		MW v/7†; EMB, in Musicotheca classica, ix, n.d.

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Einleitung: Vexilla Regis. O Crux, Ave!; Station 1. Jésus est condamné à Mort; Station 2. Jésus est chargé de la Croix; Station 3. Jésus tombe pour la première fois; Station 4. Jésus rencontre sa très sainte mère; Station 5. Simon la Cyrénéen aide Jésus à porter sa Croix; Station 6. Sancta Veronica ('O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden'); Station 7. Jésus tombe pour la seconde fois; Station 8. Les femmes de Jérusalem ('Nolite flere super me, sed super vos ipos et super filios vestros'); Station 9. Jésus tombe pour une troisième fois; Station 10. Jésus est dépouillé de ses vêtements; Station 11. Jésus est attaché à la Croix ('Crucifige'); Station 12. 'Eli, eli, lamma Sabacthani.' ('Consummatum est'; 'O Traurigkeit, o Herzeleid'); Station 13. Jésus est deposé de la Croix; Station 14. Ave Crux, spes unica. Amen.
				Remarks: offered to Pustet, Regensburg, 1884, but refused; see also A287, B52, E31
J34	51	507	1152	Meine Seel' erhebt den Herrn! (Gott sei uns gnädig und barmherzig; Der Kirchensegen) (Ps lxvii, 2–3, 8), mixed vv, org	1878	unpubd
				Remarks: ded. R. Pohl; orig. for keyboard, see A286
J35	52	530	1153	Septem sacramenta, responsories, Mez, Bar, mixed vv, org: 1 Baptisma, 2 Confirmatio, 3 Eucharistia, 4 Poenitentia, Extrema unctio, 6 Ordo, 7 Matrimonium	1878–84	Rome: Manganelli, 1879; autographies nos.3 and 7 only	MW v/7†
				Remarks: inspired by drawings by F. Overbeck, now in the Nationalgalerie, Berlin; 1st perf. Weimar, 10 July 1879; see also L. Ramann (E1983, p.136)
J36	546a		1199	O Roma nobilis	?1879		MW v/7†
				Remarks: melody by G. Baini; see also A294
J37	56	527	1204–5	Rosario, nos.1–3 mixed vv, org/hmn, no.4 Bar/unison male vv, org/hmn: 1 Mysteria gaudiosa, 2 Mysteria dolorosa, 3 Mysteria gloriosa, 4 Pater noster	1879		MW v/7†; UE ix (no.4)
				Remarks: offered to Pustet, Regensburg, in 1879, but declined; see also E34
J38	55	517	1209	Ossa arida, unison male vv, org 4 hands/pf 4 hands	1879		MW v/6†
J39				Pro Papa, mixed vv, org	1880	Rome: Manganelli, 1881†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1882	MW v/6
	59	523/2	1229	1 Tu es Petrus
	59	523	1228	2 Dominus conservet eum
				Remarks: ded. Pope Leo XIII
J40	58	515	1236	O sacrum convivium, A solo, female vv ad lib, org, hmn	1880–85		MW v/6†; UE ix

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: see E36
J41	47	483	1258	Sankt Christoph, female vv, pf, hmn, hp ad lib	1881	unpubd
J42	49	535	1111a	Weihnachtslied (O heilige Nacht), T, female vv, org/hmn	1881	Berlin: Fürstner, 1882†	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. N. Helbig; based on A267/2
J43	61	408	1293	Nun danket alle Gott (M. Rinckart), male/mixed vv, brass, perc, org ad lib	1883	Leipzig: B&H, 1884†	MW v/7; UE vi
				Remarks: ded. C. Hase; for the consecration of the organ in Riga
J44	60	498	1297	Sposalizio [Trauung] nach dem gleichnamigen Bilde Raphael's (Geistliche Vermählungsmusik; Ave Maria), (unison A vv)/(A solo, A chorus), org/pf 4 hands	?1883	B&H, 1890†	MW v/6; UE ix
				Remarks: based on A55/1; 1st edn also with Ger. text, Geist der Liebe, segne uns!
J45	16/2	492a	1232b	Der 129. Psalm (De profundis), B/A, pf/org	1883–6	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1886†
				Remarks: orig. intended for inclusion in St Stanislaus (Q17)
J46	57	509	1308	In domum Domini ibimus (Zum Haus des Herren ziehen wir) (Ps cxxi), mixed vv, org, brass, perc	1884		MW v/5†
				Remarks: 1st perf. Bayreuth, Catholic Church, 1892, by Göllerich on 6th anniversary of Liszt's death; see also A331, E40
J47	62	512	1315	Mariengarten (Quasi cedrus!; Jardin de Marie), (Ecclesiastes xxiv. 13–15, 12), A, T, solos ad lib, SSAT, org	*c*1884		MW v/6†
				Remarks: sent to Pustet, Regensburg, in 1884 but declined
J48	63	525	1316	Qui seminant in lacrimis (Ps cxxv), mixed vv, org	1884		MW v/6†
J49	64	522	1339	Pax vobiscum!, 4 male vv, org	1885	Zürich: Hug, 1885†; Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, ?1885; Weimar: Licht & Meyer, 1886	MW v/6
				Remarks: ded. B. Hilpert and Strasbourg Male Choir
J50	65	524	1340	Qui Mariam absolvisti (T. da Celano), Bar, unison mixed vv, org/hmn	1885	Leipzig: in Der Chorgesang, 1886†, Kistner, 1886	MW v/6†
J51	66	528	1341	Salve Regina, mixed vv	1885		MW v/6†
				Remarks: 1st melody, Gaude Mater Polonia, occurs in sketches for St Stanislaus (Q17)
J52	22	520	616	Pater noster (IV), C, 4 mixed vv, org		unpubd
				Remarks: apparent composition date in MS, 1850, unverifiable

ACCOMPANIED SACRED SOLO VOCAL MUSIC

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
K1	15/1	491a	779a	Der 23. Psalm (Mein Gott, der ist mein Hirt) (J.G. Herder, after Bible), T/S, hp/pf, org/hmn	1859–62	Leipzig; Kahnt, 1864†, ? mid-1880s (rev.)
				Remarks: Fr. edn also pubd Kahnt; see also J10, S53
K2	17	493	780	Der 137. Psalm (An den Wassern zu Babylon), A, vn, hp/pf, org/hmn	1859

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: 1st perf. Weimar, 30 Oct 1859; orch version mentioned in letter to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein, 12 Jan 1872; see also J11, S54
K3	680	641	945	Ave maris stella, 1v, pf/hmn	?1868	Paris: Repos, 1868†; Leipzig; Kahnt, 1872	MW vi/6†; UE ix
				Remarks: see also A243, E27, J9
K4	681	639	977	Ave Maria, D, 1v, org/hmn	1869		MW v/6†; UE ix
				Remarks: see also J24 and A247a, E24, E32, E33
K5	682	643a	1071	Cujus animam [Rossini: Stabat mater], T, org	?1874	Mainz: Schott, 1874†	MW v/7; UE ix
				Remarks: see also A141/1, F1
K6	16/1	492b	1232a	Der 129. Psalm (De profundis), Bar, male vv, org	1880–81	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1883†
				Remarks: see also J45 and Q17
K7	343	643	1237	Sancta Caecilia (Fiat cor meum immaculatum ut non confundar), A, org/hmn	1880–85		MW vi/6†; UE ix
				Remarks: music different from I1
K8	341	640	1246	Ave Maria, G, 1v, hmn/pf	1881	Berlin: Plothow, 1906†
				Remarks: a version with orch is by Goepfart; see also A308
K9	342	642	1317a, b, c	Le crucifix (V. Hugo), female vv (3 versions)	1879–84	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1884†	MW v/6; UE ix
				Remarks: 1st and 2nd versions 1879, 3rd version 1881, rev. 1884
K10	683a		1366	Gebet (E. Geibel) [F. Korbay], 1v, org	?1883
				Remarks: see also N80/2

SECULAR CHORAL MUSIC WITH ORCHESTRA

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
L1	67	537	442	Festkantate zur Enthüllung des Beethoven-Denkmals in Bonn (Was versammelt hier die Menge) (O.L.B. Wolff), 2 S, 2 T, 2 B, orch	1845	New York: Peters, 1989† (vs)
				Remarks: 1st perf. Bonn, 13 Aug 1845; see also A126, B6
L2	80	547	415–18	Les quatre élémens (J. Autran): 1 La terre, 2 Les aquilons, 3 Les flots, 4 Les astres, male vv, orch	1844–8	unpubd
				Remarks: based on M20, orchd Conradi and Liszt; 1st perf. Marseilles, 1845; used in G3
L3	81	548	444	Le forgeron (Le fer est dur, frappons, frappons) (F. de Lamennais), T, B, male vv, orch	1845–8	unpubd
				Remarks: based on M21, orchd Conradi and Liszt; see also T7
L4	[79]	[549]	[332]	Titan (Auf des Athos blauen Felsenspitzen) (F. von Schober), Bar, male vv, orch	1848	unpubd
				Remarks: based on M14 (2nd version), orchd Conradi and Liszt

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
L5	83	553	548	Ungaria-Kantate (Aus Osten aus der Sonne Tor) (F. von Schober), S, T, B, male qt (soli), male choir, vv, orch/pf	1848		EMB, 1961†
				Remarks: 1st planned 1842, see poem 'In Musik gesetzt von Franz Liszt', in Schober's Gedichte (Stuttgart, 1842); orchd Conradi and Liszt; 1st perf. Weimar, 21 May 1912, cond. P. Raabe
L6	708		1398	Rinaldo (cant., Goethe), T, male vv, orch/pf	1848	unpubd
				Remarks: based on music by unidentified composer; orchd Conradi and Liszt
L7	[85]	[555]	[568]	Chor der Engel aus Goethe's Faust (pt 2) (Rosen, ihr blendenden), mixed vv, hp/pf	1849	unpubd
				Remarks: orchd Conradi and Liszt; see also M29
L8	69	539		Chöre zu Herders entfesseltem Prometheus (R. Pohl)
			621a	1st version; S, A, 2 T, 2 B, mixed vv, orch	1850
			621b, c	2nd version, S, A, 2 T, 2 B, double chorus, orch	1855–9	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861† (fs), 1874 (vs), 1877 (rev. fs)
				Remarks: 1st version 1st perf. Weimar, 24 Aug 1850; see also A213, B24, G6
L9	70	540	683a, b, c	An die Künstler (F. Schiller)
				1st version, 2 T, 2 B, male vv, wind ens	1853	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1854†; Weimar: Kühn, 1854
				2nd version, 2 T, 2 B, male vv, orch	1853–4	Weimar: Kühn, Autography, 1854†; Berlin: Schlesinger
				3rd version, 2 T, 2 B, male vv, orch	1856–7	Weimar: Kühn, 1856†
				Remarks: 1st version: wind arr. by Raff, 1st perf. Karlsruhe, 3 Oct 1853, cond. Liszt; 2nd version ded. R. Wagner; for full orch; 1st perf. Weimar, 24 Feb 1854, cond. Liszt; 3rd version 1st perf. Weimar, 5 Sept 1857, cond. Liszt, org part added after 1st perf.
L10				Weimar's Volkslied (Von der Wartburg) (P. Cornelius), 2 versions:
	87/1	557a	720a	1st version E, male vv, wind orch, perc	1857, rev. ?before 1875	Weimar: Kühn, 1857†
	[87]	[557]	[720]	2nd version, C, unison mixed vv, brass orch		1857
				Remarks: 1st perf. Weimar, 3 Sept 1857, for the Carl-August-Feier; pubn incl. pf acc., see M32a; mixed vv MS incl. pf acc.; see also A191, B16, E6, G19, N53
L11	71	541	982	Gaudeamus igitur, (Humoreske, Zur Feier des hundertjährigen Jubiläums der Akademischen Konzerte zu Jena 1870), solo vv ad lib, male/mixed chorus, orch	1869–70	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1871†
				Remarks: ded. K. Gille; 1st perf. Jena, 1870, cond. K.E. Naumann; see also A246, B34
L12	68	538	986	Zur Säcularfeier Beethovens (II. Beethoven-Kantate) (A. Stern), S, A, T, B, mixed chorus, orch	1869–70	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1870†

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duchess Sophie of Saxe-Weimar; addl verses by F. Gregorovius; 1st perf. 29 May 1870, for the Allgemeinen deutschen Musikverein
L13	376	652	1012	Die Allmacht von Franz Schubert (Gross ist Jehova, der Herr) (J.L. Pyrker), T, male vv, orch, org/hmn	1871	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1872†
				Remarks: based on Schubert's song D852/2; 1st perf. Budapest, 29 March 1871, cond. Liszt
L14	345	638	1040–46	Wartburg Lieder (Der Braut Willkommen auf Wartburg) (J.V. Scheffel), T, 2 Bar, mixed vv, orch/pf: 1 Introduction, 2 Wolfram von Eschenbach, 3 Heinrich von Ofterdingen, 4 Walther von der Vogelweide, 5 Der tugendhafte Schreiber, 6 Biterolf und der Schmied von Ruhla, 7 Reimar der Alte	1872–3	Leipzig: Kahnt, vs 1873†, ?1876	MW vii/3
				Remarks: orig. version incl. Die verzauberte Prinzessin, Klingsor aus Ungarland and longer introduction, deleted by Liszt before 1873 pubn; fs unpubd; 1st perf. Wartburg, 23 Sept 1873
L15	6	482	1074	Die Glocken des Strassburger Münsters: 1 Vorspiel, 2 Excelsior! 3 Die Glocken (H.W. Longfellow), Mez, Bar, mixed chorus, orch, org	1874–5	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1875†
				Remarks: ded. Longfellow: uses the pitches of the Strasbourg Cathedral bells; 1st perf. Budapest, 10 March 1875; see also A321, B42, E26, E38, T31, W8
L16	339	635	1249	A magyarok Istene (Félre kiskelküek)/ Ungarns Gott (Hinweg, Kleinmütige) (A. Petőfi, trans. Neugebauer), Bar, male vv, wind orch, perc	1881
				Remarks: orchd for National Choral Festival, Debrecen; 1st perf. 19 Aug 1882; see also A309, E37, M37
L17	93	563	1294a–f	Magyar király-dal (Aldott légyen Magyarok királya) Ungarisches Königslied (Sei gesegnet König der Magyaren) (K. Ábrányi trans. L. Neugebauer), 6 settings (1 male vv a cappella, 2 mixed vv a cappella, 3 male vv, pf, 4 mixed vv, pf, 5 male/mixed vv, orch/ orch, 6 childrens' vv)	1883	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1885†
				Remarks: composed for the opening of the Budapest Opera House (24 Sept 1884), but 1st perf. Pressburg, 21 Dec 1884; see also A328, B60, N81

SECULAR CHORAL MUSIC A CAPPELLA, OR WITH ENSEMBLE OR KEYBOARD

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
M1	74	545/1	312a	Das deutsche Vaterland I (Was ist das deutsche Vaterland?), (E.M. Arndt), in D, maestoso, 4 solo vv, chorus male vv, pf	1841	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1842†
				Remarks: ded. King Friedrich Wilhelm IV of Prussia; see also M27, S33; 1st edn mentions orch version (S33), presumed lost; 1st perf. Leipzig, 16 Dec 1841
M2	72/1	542/1	308	Rheinweinlied (Wo solch ein Feuer) (G. Herwegh) [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.1], male vv, pf	1841, rev. 1884	Mainz: Schott, 1843†
				Remarks: ded. J. Lefebvre; 1st perf. Jena, 30 Nov 1841 (not Leipzig, 6 Dec, as reported in AMZ, xliii (1841), 1070
M3	72/2	542/2	309	Studentenlied aus Goethe's Faust (Es lebt' eine Ratt im Kellernest) [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.2], male vv	1841–2	Mainz: Schott, 1843†
				Remarks: ded. W. Speyer; revision for perf. before 12 Jan 1857 mentioned in letter to J. Herbeck
M4	72/3	542/3	310	Reiterlied (Die bange Nacht ist nun herum) (Herwegh), 1st version [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.3], B♭ (Allegro eroico), male vv	1841–2	Mainz: Schott, 1843†
				Remarks: ded. S. Teleky
M5	72/4	542/4	311	Reiterlied (Die bange Nacht ist nun herum) (Herwegh), 2nd version [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.4], C (Mässig ritterlich), male vv	1841–2	Mainz: Schott, 1843†
				Remarks: ded. S. Teleky
M6	90/10	560/10	367	Der Gang um Mitternacht (Ich schreite mit dem Geist) (Herwegh) [Sechs Männerchöre no.4]
				1st version (Tempo deciso, allegro moderato), male chorus 4vv	?1841–1843
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.10] (Mässig), T, male chorus	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
M7	90/2	560/2	359	Ständchen (Hüttelein, still und klein) (F. Rückert), T, male vv
				1st version, A (Allegretto amoroso, 3/4)	?1841–1843
				2nd version [Sechs Männerchöre no.6], A (Allegretto, 4/4)	late 1840s
				3rd version [Für Männergesang no.2], G (Allegretto, 4/4)	?1841–1843, rev. 1857–60

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
M8	90/9	560/9	366	Saatengrün (Saatengrün, Veilchenduft; Frühlingstag) (L. Uhland)
				1st version [Sechs Männerchöre no.3], male vv, pf/?hp ad lib	*c*1843
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.6], A major, male vv	1860/61	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
M9	90/8	560/8	365	Die alten Sagen kunden
				1st version [Sechs Männerchöre no.2], B♭ (Andante espressivo), 4 male vv, pf	?1841–5
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.8], a, 4 solo vv, male chorus	1860/61	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
M10	90/3	560/3	360	Wir sind nicht Mumien (Hoffmann von Fallersleben), male vv, pf
				1st version [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.1]	1842	Cologne: Eck, 1844†
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.3]	1860/61	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
				Remarks: ded. Prince F.W. Constantin von Hohenzollern-Hechingen; 1st version pubd with M11, M12, M13
M11	76	546	331	Das düstre Meer umrauscht mich, 4 male vv, pf [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.2]	1842	Cologne: Eck, 1844†
				Remarks: ded. Prince Constantin von Hohenzollern-Hechingen; pubd with M10, M12, M13
M12				Über allen Gipfeln ist Ruh' (Wanderers Nachtlied) (Goethe)
	75/1	544/1	330a	1st version (Lento, 3/4), 4 male vv	1842	Cologne: Eck, 1844†
	75/2	544/2	330b	2nd version (Lento, 4/4), 4 male vv	1849	Hamburg and New York, 1849†
				3rd version (Langsam, 4/4), 4 male vv, 2 hn	1856	Hamburg, Leipzig and New York: Schuberth, 1856†
				Remarks: ded. Prince F.W. Constantin von Hohenzollern-Hechingen; pubd with M10, M11, M13; 2nd version pubd in Festalbum zur Säkularfeier von Goethe's Geburtstag; 3rd version pubd with M28 (2nd version)
M13	90/12	560/12	369	Gottes ist der Orient (Goethe), 4 male vv
				1st version [Vierstimmige Männergesänge no.4], B major (Andante maestoso)	1842	Cologne: Eck, 1844†
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.12], A major	1860–61	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
				Remarks: ded. Prince F.W. Constantin von Hohenzollern-Hechingen; 1st version pubd with M10, M11, M12

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
M14	79	549	332	Titan (Auf des Athos blauen Felsenspitzen) (F. von Schober)
				1st version, solo male v, pf	1842	unpubd
				2nd version, Bar, male vv, pf	1842–7	unpubd
				Remarks: also with orch, see L4; 1st version pf part inc.
M15			385	Heil! Unsrer Glocke heil! (F. von Dingelstedt), unison male vv, pf	1843	unpubd
				Remarks: ded. H. von Hohenlohe-Oehringen; composed for the Stuttgart society 'Glocke'
M16	82	552	396	Arbeiterchor (Herbei, herbei, den Spath' und Schaufel ziert) (H.F. de Lamennais, trans. P. Kaufmann) B solo, 4 male vv, chorus, male vv, pf	?1843–48	Budapest: Zenemükiado Vallalát, 1954
				Remarks: engraved by Haslinger but withdrawn by Liszt because of 1848 revolution; transcr. A. Webern, 1924 (B, mixed vv, orch), 1st perf. Vienna, 13 March 1925, vs (Vienna, 1924); see also A153, B7
M17	78	550	392a, b	Trinkspruch (Giesst Wein in die Gläser, ihr Zecher!) [Sechs Männerchöre no.1], male vv, pf	1843/4	in ZfM, x (1929)† London: Curwen, 1958
				Remarks: ded. Stubenvoll (Munich) male-voice qt; see also M9, M8, M6, M18, M7
M18	90/7	560/7	364	Soldatenlied aus Faust (Burgen mit hohen Mauern und Zinnen) (Goethe), 4 male vv, tpts and timp ad lib
				1st version [Sechs Männerchöre no.5] (Allegro marziale)	1844
				2nd version [Füꝛ Männergesang no.7]	1860/61	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
M19	73	543	445	Es war einmal ein König (Flohlied) (from Goethe: Faust), B/Bar, male vv, pf	1844/5	Weimar: Nationale Forschungs-und Gedenkstätten, 1986 (facs.)
M20	80	547	415–18	Les quatre élémens (J. Autran)
				1 La terre, male vv, pf	1844–5
				2 Les aquilons, male vv, 2 pf/pf 4 hands	1844
				3 Les flots, male vv, pf	1845
				4 Les astres, male vv, pf	*c*1845
				Remarks: 1st complete perf. Budapest, 28 March 1993; see also G3, L2; no.2 for the Trotebas choral society, 1st perf. Marseilles, 6 Aug 1844, acc. Liszt and Darborville; no.4 pf acc. inc.
M21	81	548	444	Le forgeron (Le fer est dur, frappons, frappons) (F. Lamennais), T, B, male vv, pf	1845	Budapest: Zenemükiado Vallalát, 1962†
				Remarks: see L3, T7
M22	90/4	560/4	361	Trost I (Vor der Schlacht; Es rufet Gott uns mahnend) (T. Meyer-Merian)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
				1st version [Drei vierstimmigen Männerchöre no.1] (Tempo deciso, allegro non troppo), 4 male vv, pf	1845	Basle: Knop, 1845†
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.4], E♭ (Gehalten und fest betont), 4 male vv	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861
				Remarks: ded. C. Brenner; transcr. pf with M23 and M24 as Geharnischte Lieder, see A207; 1st version pubd with M23, M24
M23	90/5	560/5	362	Nicht gezagt (Nicht gezagt! Nicht geklagt!) (Meyer-Merian)
				1st version [Drei vierstimmigen Männerchöre no.3], A♭, male vv, pf	1845	Basle: Knop, 1845†
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.5], G, 5 male vv, pf	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861
				Remarks: ded. A. Muller; transcr. pf with M22 and M24 as Geharnischte Lieder, see A207
M24	90/6	560/6	363	Trost II (Es rufet Gott) (Meyer-Merian)
				1st version [Drei vierstimmigen Männerchöre no.2] (Mässig in tempo, erhaben im Vortrag), male vv, pf	1845	Basle: Knop, 1845†
				2nd version [Für Männergesang no.6] (Mässig, sehr fest betont), male vv	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861†
				Remarks: ded. 'Herr Architekt Heimlicher'; transcr. pf with M22 and M23 as Geharnischte Lieder, see A207; 1st version pubd with M22, M23
M25	81a	564a	464	A patakhoz (A patakcsa) [To the Brook], (J. Garay), 4 male vv	1846	in Apollo, iii (1874), 13†
M26	77	551	465a, b	Die lustige Legion (A. Buchheim), male vv, pf ad lib	?1846	Vienna: Diabelli, 1848† (parts only)
M27	74	545/2	312b	Das deutsche Vaterland II (Was ist das deutsche Vaterland?) (E.M. Arndt), in C, lebendig und lebhaft, male vv a cappella	1848	Philadelphia: Curtis Institute, 1969 (facs.)
				Remarks: ded. Students of Berlin, Vienna, Königsberg, Breslau, Halle and Jena; see also M1
M28	84	554	567	Licht, mehr Licht (Goethe's letzte Worte) (F. von Schober)
				1st version, male vv, 3 trbn, tuba	1849	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1849†
				2nd version, male vv, 2 tpt, 3 trbn	1856	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1856
				Remarks: pubd in Festalbum zur Säkularfeier von Goethe's Geburtstag, 1st perf. Weimar, 25 Aug 1849, cond. Liszt; 2nd version pubd with M12 (3rd version)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
M29	85	555	568a, b, c	Chor der Engel aus Goethe's Faust (pt 2) (Rosen, ihr blendenden) (a) male vv, pf, (b) female vv, hp, pf/hmn, (c) mixed vv, hp/pf	1849	Hamburg and New York: Schuberth, 1849† (3rd version)
				Remarks: pubd in Festalbum zur Säkularfeier von Goethe's Geburtstag; see also L7
M30	86	556	617	Festchor zur Enthüllung des Herder-Denkmals in Weimar (A. Schöll), male vv, pf/brass orch	1850	Leipzig: Leipziger illustrierte Zeitung (2 Nov 1850)†
				Remarks: orchd J. Raff for 1st perf. Weimar, 25 Aug 1850
M31	90/1	560/1	358	Vereins-Lied (Frisch auf, zu neuem Leben) (Hoffmann von Fallersleben) [Für Männergesang no.1], male vv	1855, rev. 1857, rev. 1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861† (3rd version)
				Remarks: 1st perf. Weimar, 2 July 1855; rev. for song festival, Crefeld, Aug 1857
M32	87/1–7	557a–g	720a–g	Weimar's Volkslied (Von der Wartburg) (P. Cornelius)
				(a) in E, male vv, pf	1857, rev. ? before 1875	Weimar: Kühn, 1857†
				(b) in F, male vv, pf ad lib		Weimar: Kühn, 1873†
				(c) in E, 4 male vv	?1860, rev.	Weimar: Kühn, 1860†
				(d) in F, male vv, org	1875	unpubd
				(e) in E, mixed vv, pf ad lib		Weimar: Kühn, 1875†
				(f) in E, 3 equal vv	?1870s	Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, 1887, as Zwei Terzette no.1 (facs.)
				(g) in F, 3 children's vv	?1870s	Weimar: Kühn, 1875†, in Zech: Liederbuch, no.73
				Remarks: (a) pf acc. pubd in orch score (see L10), 1st perf. Weimar, 3 Sept 1857; (c) rev. version unpubd; (e) arr. B. Sulze; (f) pubd with M34; see also A191, B16, E6, G19, L10, N53
M33	26	505	764	Festgesang zur Eröffnung der zehnten allgemeinen deutschen Lehrerversammlung (Wir bau'n und bestellen das edelste Feld) (Hoffmann von Fallersleben), male vv, org ad lib	1858	Weimar: Kühn, 1859†
				Remarks: ded. German Schoolteachers' Association
M34a	89	559	777	Mit klingendem Spiel (Morgenlied), children's vv	1859	Weimar: Böhlau, 1860†, in Vaterländisches Liederbuch, ed. A.W. Gottschalg and others
				Remarks: same music as M34b, with different text
M34b	88	558	778	Morgenlied (Die Sterne sind erblicken) (Hoffmann von Fallersleben), women's vv	1859	Weimar: Böhlau, 1861†, suppl. to Vaterländisches Liederbuch; Neues Vaterländisches Liederbuch, 1877

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/ alternative title)	Composed	Published, Collected editions
				Remarks: same music as M34a, with different text
M35	90/11	560/11	368	Festlied zu Schillers Jubelfeier 10 November 1859 (Dingelstedt) [Für Männergesang no.11], Bar, male vv	1859, rev. 1860	in Leipziger illustrierte Zeitung (12 Nov 1859)†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1861 (2nd version)
				Remarks: 1st perf. Weimar, 10 Nov 1859
M36	91	561	1011a, b	A lelkesedés dala (Das Lied der Begeisterung; Was nützt mir der Erde reichstes Gut) (K. Ábrányi the younger)
				1st version, male vv	1871	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1871†
				2nd version [Ger. only], male vv, org	1874	Táborszky & Parsch, 1874†
				Remarks: ded. Hungarian Choral Society
M37	339	635	1249	A magyarok Istene (Félre kiskelküek)/(Ungarns Gott (Hinweg, Kleinmütige) (A. Petőfi, trans. Neugebauer), Bar, male vv ad lib, pf	1881	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1881†; MW vii/3
				Remarks: see also A309, E37, L16
M38	94	564	1342	Gruss (Glück auf), male vv	1885	Leipzig: Licht & Meyer, 1885†
				Remarks: ded. Riga Liedertafel

SONGS

for solo voice and piano unless otherwise stated

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
N1				Angiolin dal biondo crin (C. Boccella)
	269/1	593a	208a	1st version	1839	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†
	269/2	593b	208b	2nd version	?1849	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	LSP vi; MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A97/6
N2	684	644	282	Barcarole vénitienne de Pantaleoni	1840	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1852†;
				Remarks: ded. Mme Thérèse de Bacheracht
N3				Im Rhein, im schönen Strome (H. Heine)
	272/1	567a	291a	1st version	1840	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†	MW vii/1
	272/2	567b	291b	2nd version	1855	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1856†; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856 (2nd edn), 1860 (new edn)	MW vii/2
				Remarks: ded. Princess Augusta of Prussia; an early text variant begins 'Am Rhein'; see also A97/2
N4	271	566	293	Il m'aimait tant! (E. de Girardin; Ger. trans. by M.G. Friedrich and T. Rehbaum)	1840–42	Mainz: Schott, 1843†	MW vii/1
				Remarks: see A98
N5				Die Loreley (Heine)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	273/1	591a	313a	1st version	1841	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†
	273/2	591b	313b	2nd version	1854–9	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856†, Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
	369	647	812	3rd version, 1v, orch	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1862†
				Remarks: ded. M. d'Agoult; see also A97/1, A210
N6				Die Zelle in Nonnenwerth (Ach, nun taucht die Klosterzelle) (F. Lichnowsky)
	274/1	618a	314a	1st version	1841	Cologne: Eck, 1843 (2nd issue)
	301b	618b	314a/441	2nd version En ces lieux tout me parle d'elle (E. Monnier)	1844	Paris: Latte, 1844†
	274/3	618c	314/441	3rd version: Elégie (En ces lieux)	1845	unpubd
	274/2	618b	314b	4th version (Ach, nun taucht die Klosterzelle)	1858	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†; Weimar: NFG [GSA], 1961 (facs.)	MW vii/3
	274/2,3	618b,c		5th version (Lichnowsky)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: A81, D21; 1st version ded. M. d'Agoult; another version (between versions 1 and 2), with unattrib. Fr. text, uses same melody as 1st version; 4th version ded. E. Genast; 5th version ded. E. Merian-Genast in MS only
N7				Was Liebe sei (C. von Hagn)
	288/1	575a	333/1	1st setting	1842	Cologne: Eck, 1844†	MW vii/1
	288/2	575b	333/2	2nd setting	1854–5		MW vii/2†
	288/3	575c	333/3	3rd setting	1878–9	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duchess Sophie of Weimar
N8				Mignons Lied (Kennst du das Land) (J.W. von Goethe)
	275/1	592a	335a	1st version	1842	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†
	275/2	592b	335b	2nd version	1854	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
	275/3	592c	335c	3rd version	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1863†	MW vii/2
	370	648	813	4th version, arr. 1v, orch	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1862†
				Remarks: see A97/3
N9				Es war ein König in Thule (Goethe)
	278/1	594a	336a	1st version	1842	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†	MW vii/1
	278/2	594b	336b	2nd version	1856	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A97/4
N10				Der du von dem Himmel bist
	279/1	568a	337a	1st version	1842	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1843†	MW vii/1
	279/2	568b	337b	2nd version	1849	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1856†	MW vii/2
	279/3	568c	337c	3rd version	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
	279/4	568d	337d	4th version	1870	MW vii/2†
				Remarks: ded. Princess Augusta of Prussia; see also A97/5

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
N11				Oh! quand je dors (V. Hugo)
	281/1	569a	338a	1st version	1842	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
	282/2	569b	338b	2nd version	1849	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A139/1
N12				Comment disaient-ils (Hugo)
	276/1	570a	339a	1st version (trans. Rehbaum)	1842	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
	276/2	570b	339b	2nd version	1849–59	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, ?1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A139/2
N13	306a		564	Quand tu chantes bercée (Hugo)	1842	Budapest: in Magyar zene, xv (1974) (facs.)
				Remarks: ded. M. Juva Branca
N14				Tre sonetti di Petrarca
	270/1	578a	204–206a	1st version: 1 Pace non trovo (Sonnet no.104), 2 Benedetto sia'l giorno (Sonnet no.47), 3 I' vidi in terra angelici costumi (Sonnet no.123)	1842–6	Vienna: Haslinger, 1846†	MW vii/1
	270/2	578b	204b	2nd version	1864–82	Mainz: Schott, 1883 (2nd edn)	MW vii/3
				Remarks: order of nos.1 and 2 reversed in 2nd version; see also A55/4–6, A102
N15	701	673	1365	Dem Felsengipfel stieg ich einst hinan	1843?	unpubd
N16				Morgens steh' ich auf und frage (Heine)
	290/1	576a	387a	1st version	1843	Cologne: Eck, 1844†	MW vii/1
	290/2	576b	387b	2nd version	1849–59	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859; Leipzig: Kahnt, ?1860	LSP vi; MW vii/2
N17				Die tote Nachtigall (P. Kaufmann)
	291/1	577a	388a	1st version	1843	Cologne: Eck, 1844†	MW vii/1
	291/2	577b	388b	2nd version	1870s	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	LSP vi; MW vii/3
N18				Liebesträume
	307	587	565	1 Hohe Liebe (In Liebesarmen ruht ihr trunken) (L. Uhland)	1850	Leipzig: Kistner, 1850†	MW vii/2
	308	588	566	2 Gestorben war ich (Uhland)	1845–6	Leipzig: Kistner, 1850†	MW vii/2
	298	589	439	3 O lieb, so lang du lieben kannst (F. Freiligrath)	1843–50	Leipzig: Kistner, 1847, 1850 (rev.)	MW vii/2
				Remarks: no.3 orig. intended for pubn by Eck in Sechs Lieder, according to letter (unpubd) of Dec 1843; see also A103, A233
N19	287	607	386	Du bist wie eine Blume (Heine)	1843–9	Cologne: Eck, 1844†; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859	MW vii/2
N20	310	600	391	Nimm einen Strahl der Sonne (Ihr Auge) (L. Rellstab)	1843–9	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
N21	277	625	389	Bist du (Mild wie ein Lufthauch) (E. Metschersky)	1844	Cologne: Eck, 1844†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879 (rev.)	MW vii/3

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
N22				Die Vätergruft (Uhland)
	281	601	408		1844	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1860†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
	371	649	1344	arr. 1v, orch	1886	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1886†; London: Novello, Ewer & Co.
N23				Freudvoll und Leidvoll (Goethe)
	280/1	579a	409a	1st setting	1844	Vienna: Haslinger, 1848†	MW vii/1
	280/1	579c	409c	1st setting, 2nd version	1849	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
	280/2	579b	409b	2nd setting	?1848	Vienna: Haslinger, 1848†	MW vii/1
				Remarks: ded. A. Scheffer; see also A134
N24				Enfant, si j'étais roi (Hugo)
	283/1	571a	410a	1st version	1844	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
	283/2	571b	410b	2nd version	1849	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; LSP vi; Leipzig: Kahnt, ?1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A139/3
N25				S'il est un charmant gazon (Hugo)
	284/1	572a	411a	1st version	1844	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
	284/2	572b	411b	2nd version	1849–59	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, ?1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see A139/4
N26	285	573	412	La tombe et la rose (Hugo)	1844	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
				Remarks: see A139/5
N27	286	574	413	Gastibelza (Bolero) (Hugo)	1844	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1844†	MW vii/1
				Remarks: see A139/6
N28	295	598	414	Wo weilt er? (Heimath) (Rellstab)	1844	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
N29	289	608	334a,b	Vergiftet sind meine Lieder (Heine)	1844–9	Hamburg: Eck, 1844†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1859; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859; Paris: [unknown], 1870s (rev.)	LSP vi; MW vii/2
N30	301a	638a	390	Oh, pourquoi donc (Les pleurs des femmes romance oubliée) (C. Pavloff)	?1844	Moscow: Grotrian, 1844†; Leipzig: Tonger, 1878 (rev.)	MW iii; LSP xiv
				Remarks: ded. Mme, Caroline Pavloff; see A148
N31	296	606	437	Ich möchte hingehn (G. Herwegh)	?1844–1856	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860 (rev.)	LSP vi: MW vii/2
				Remarks: ded. [L. Köhler]
N32				Lieder aus Schillers 'Wilhelm Tell': 1 Der Fischerknabe (Es lächelt der See), 2 Der Hirt (Ihr Matten lebt wohl), 3 Der Alpenjäger (Es donnern die Höh'n)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
	292/1	582a	432	1st version	1845	Vienna: Haslinger, 1847†	MW vii/1
	292/2	582b	433	2nd version	1850s	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1859†, 1860	MW vii/2
	372	645	701–3	arr. 1v, orch	1855	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1872†
				Remarks: ded. A. Scheffer
N33				Es rauschen die Winde (Rellstab)
	294/1	596a	436a	1st version	1845		MW vii/2†
	294/2	596b	436b	2nd version	?1849	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
N34				Wer nie sein Brot mit Tränen ass (Goethe)
	297/1	609a	438/1	1st setting	1845, Berlin	Vienna: Haslinger, 1848†; Leipzig: Schlesinger, 1859 (2nd edn); Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
	297/2	609b	438/2	2nd setting	1849	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
N35				Schwebe, schwebe, blaues Auge (F. von Dingelstedt)
	305/1	581a	440a	1st version	1845	MW vii/1†
	305/2	581b	440b	2nd version	1849–60	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
N36				Ein Fichtenbaum steht einsam (Heine)	1845–60	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	LSP vi; MW vii/2
	309/1	599a	711/1	1st setting
	309/2	599b	711/2	2nd setting
N37				Jeanne d'Arc au bûcher (A. Dumas, trans. M.G. Friedrich) [versions 1–4]		Paris, Latte, 1846 (1st version)†; Mainz: Schott, 1876 (versions 2–3 with orchd versions)†, Schott, 1876 (4th version)
	293/1	586a	435a	1st version	1845
				2nd version	1858
				3rd version ('scène dramatique'), 1v, pf/hmn	mid-1860s
	293/2	586b	435b	4th version	1874/5		MW vii/3
	373	646	763	(A. Dumas, Ger. trans., unknown), arr. lv, orch	1848–75
				Remarks: lst version orchd Conradi and Liszt, 2nd and 3rd versions orchd Liszt; 1st perf. Pest, 1877
N38				Über die Aeolsharfe	1846	Unpubd
N39	299	627	487	Isten veled (Lebe wohl) (P. Horvath, trans. C.F. Zerffi)	1847	Prague: Hoffmann, 1847†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879	LSP vi; MW vii/3
N40	300	585	502	Le juif errant (J. Béranger)	1847	unpubd
N41				Göttliche Gedanken, selige Gefühle	1848	unpubd
N42				Kling leise, mein Lied (J. Nordmann)
	301/1	580a	543a	1st version	1848		MW vii/1†
	301/2	580b	543b	2nd version	1849–60	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/2
N43	303	584	544	Weimars Toten (F. von Schober)	1848	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1849†	MW vii/1
N44	304	565	545	Le vieux vagabond (Béranger)	1848		MW vii/1†
				Remarks: based on themes used in G3 and G14
N45	302	583	549	Die Macht der Musik (Duchess Helen of Orleans)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				1st version	1848	Leipzig: Kistner, 1848†	MW vii/1
				2nd version	1848
				Remarks: ded. Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna
N46				Über allen gipfeln ist Ruh' (Goethe)
	306/1	610a	546a	1st version	1848	Vienna: Haslinger, 1848†
	306/2	610b	546b	2nd version	1859	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: see also M12
N47	685	644b	1364	Es hat geflammt die ganze Nacht (Lied der Grossherzogin Marie Pavlovna)	1849–54	unpubd
N48	311	602	717	Anfangs wollt' ich fast verzagen (Heine)	1849–60	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†, 1880	MW vii/2
				Remarks: composed and rev. 1849, copied by Conradi before Sept 1849, rev. again over the next ten years; an 1880 Fr. edn contained a new ending
N49	314	590	666	Es muss ein Wunderbares sein (O. von Redwitz)	1852	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1859†, 1860 (rev.)	MW vii/2
N50	324	616	698	Blume und Duft (In Frühlings Heiligtume) (F. Hebbel)	1854	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
N51	312	595	718	Wie singt die Lerche schön (Hoffmann von Fallersleben)	1855	Würzburg: Deutsches-Musen-Almanach (1856), suppl.; Berlin: Schlesinger, 1860 (rev.); Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860	MW vii/2
N52	315	617	728	Ich liebe dich (F. Rückert)	1857	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: pubd with 2 versions of ending; see also A194
N53	313	597	723	Weimars Volkslied (Von der Wartburg) (P. Cornelius)	1857	Leipzig: Kühn, 1857†
				Remarks: see A191, B16, E6, G9, L10, M32
N54	316	603/1–2	730–31	Muttergottes-Sträusslein zum Mai-Monate (J. Müller)
				1 Das Veilchen (Spende, Veilchen, deine Düfte).	1857	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860, 1879 (new edn)	MW vii/2
				2 Die Schlüsselblumen (Dort am grünen Hügel)	1857	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1859, 1860	MW vii/2
				Remarks: a 3rd song, Die Glöckchen, is lost (see S45)
N55	314	604	758	Lasst mich ruhen (Hoffmann von Fallersleben)	1858	Berlin: Schlesinger, 1859†; Leipzig: Kahnt, 1859	MW vii/2
N56	318	605	759	In Liebeslust (Hoffmann von Fallersleben)	1858	Leipzig: Schlesinger, 1859†, Kahnt, 1859	MW vii/2
N57	683	644a	1363	Serbisches Lied (Ein Mädchen sitzt am Meeresstrand)	?1858	Stuttgart: Göpel, n.d.†
N58	319	611	806	Ich scheide (Die duftenden Kräuter auf der Au) (Hoffmann von Fallersleben)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	LSP vi; MW vii/2

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
N59	321	613	807	Die stille Wasserrose (E. Geibel)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
N60	322	614	808	Wieder möcht ich dir begegnen (Cornelius)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
N61	323	615	809	Jugendglück (O süsser Zauber in Jugendmut) (R. Pohl)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
N62				Die drei Zigeuner (N. Lenau)
	320	612	810a, b	1st version	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
	374	650	811	2nd version	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1871†
				Remarks: ded. E. Merian-Genast; see also D8
N63	375	651/1–6	814–19	Sechs Lieder von Schubert, 1v, orch: 1 Die junge Nonne, 2 Gretchen am Spinnrade, 3 Mignons Lied (Kennst du das Land), 4 Erlkönig, 5 Der Doppelgänger, 6 Abschied	1860	Leipzig: Förberg, 1863†; (nos.1–4); nos.5–6 unpubd
				Remarks: ded. E. Merian-Genast; based on Schubert's D828 (no.1), D118 (no.2), D321 (no.3), D328 (no.4), D957/13 (no.5), unknown (no.6)
N64	340a		923	No brani menya, moy drug [Do not reproach me, my friend] (A. Tolstoy)	1866		Moscow: Mil'shteyn, 1958†
				Remarks: ded. Countess Sofia Tolstoy
N65	325	619	1009	Die Fischertochter (C. Coronini [Cronberg])	1871	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	MW ii/3
N66	338	634	1314	Und wir dachten der Toten (Die Trompete von Gravelotte [sic] ['Und nun kam die Nacht']) (Freilignath)	?1871		MW vii/3
N67	326	623	1038	La perla (Sono del mare bianca la figlia) (Therese von Hohenlohe; trans. Rehbaum)	1872	Rome: Blanchi, 1876†	MW ii/3
N68	327	620	1039	J'ai perdu ma force et ma vie (Tristesse) (A. de Musset; trans. A. Meissner)	1872	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	LSP vi; MW vii/3
N69	328	621	1068	Ihr Glocken von Marling (E. Kuh)	1874	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	LSP vi; MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie Hohenlohe
N70	329	622	1069	Und sprich (Sich auf dem Meer) (R. von Biegeleben)	1875–9	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein
N71	330	624	1141	Sei still (Ach, was ist Leben) (Nordheim [H. von Schorn])	?1877–1879	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†; in J. Kapp (H1909) (facs.)	MW vii/3
N72	331	628	1148	Gebet (In Stunden der Entmutigung) (F. Bodenstedt)	1878	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	LSP vi; MW vii/3
N73	332	629	1149	Einst (Bodenstedt)	1878	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	LSP vi; MW vii/3
N74	333	630	1150	An Edlitam (In meinem Lebensringe) (Bodenstedt)	1878	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	MW vii/3

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
				Remarks: Edlitam is an anagram of Matilde, the name of the poet's wife
N75	334	631	1151	Der Glückliche (Wie glänzt nun die Welt) (A. Wilbrandt)	1878	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1879†	MW vii/3
N76	335	626	1207	Go not, happy day (A. Tennyson; trans. L. Kirschbaum for the MW)	1879	London: Kegan Paul, 1880†, Stanley Lucas, Weber, 1880†	MW vii/3; LSP vi
				Remarks: set at the invitation of Sir William Cusins; Liszt's only setting of a text in English
N77	336	632	1226	Verlassen (Mir ist die Welt so freudenleer) (from G. Michell: Irrwege)	1880	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1880†; Munich: Schneider, 1975 (facs.)	MW vii/3
N78	337	633	1227	Des Tages laute Stimmen schweigen (F. von Saar)	1880	Weimar: Briefe, vol. viii, 1905 (facs.)	LSP vi: MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. Princess Marie Hohenlohe
N79	344	637	1210	O Meer in Abendstahl (Abend am Meer, A. Meissner)	?1881–3	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1881†	MW vii/3; UE ix
				Remarks: ded. M. Breidenstein, duet for solo vv
N80	368	653	1300–01	Zwei Lieder von Francis Korbay, 1v, orch: 1 Le matin (Bizet), 2 Gebet (Geibel)	1883	unpubd
				Remarks: see K10
N81	340	636	1295	Magyar király-dal (Ungarisches Königslied) (K. Ábrányi)	?1883	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1884†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: see A328, B60, L17
N82	377	451	1318a,b	Der Zaubersee (Bűvös tó) [G. Zichy], ballade, T, orch	1884	unpubd
				Remarks: 1st perf. 10 Jan 1885, cond. Richter

OPERA

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
O1	1	476	13	Don Sanche, ou Le château d'amour (op, 1, Mme Théaulon and de Rancé, after Claris de Florian)	1824–5	Paris: Jean Chantavoine, 1912†

MELODRAMAS

for reciter with piano accompaniment unless otherwise stated

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
P1	346	654	736	Lenore (Der Bräutigam) (G.A. Bürger)	1857–8	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1860†	MW vii/3
P2	347	655	776	Vor hundert Jahren (F. Halm), orch acc.	1859	unpubd
P3	348	656	820	Der traurige Mönch (In Schweden steht ein grauer Turm) (N. Lenau)	1860	Leipzig: Kahnt, 1872†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. F. Ritter (née Wagner)
P4	686	659	821	Helges Treue (M. Strachwitz)	1860	Hamburg: Schuberth, 1874†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: ded. B. Dawison (actor)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
P5	349	657	1070	Des toten Dichters Liebe (Der Hein wiederhallt von der Nachtigall Sang) [A holt költó szerelme (Zeng a liget a csalogány dalain)] (M. Jókai, trans. A. Dux)	1874	Budapest: Táborsky & Parsch, 1874†	MW vii/3
				Remarks: 1st perf. Budapest, 16 March 1874, by Liszt and Róza Laborfálvy Jókai; see also A249, A279, A335, B50
P6	350	658	1101	Der blinde Sänger (Der Fürst ritt um Morgen) (A. Tolstoy)	1875–7	St Petersburg: Bessel, 1877†	MW vii/3

INCOMPLETE WORKS

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
Q1	690	667	45a, b	Symphonie révolutionnaire, orch	1830–53	Stuttgart-Berlin: Cotta, 1931, facs.; repr. 1968
				Remarks: projected movts (1849): 1 Héroïde funèbre, 2 Tristis est anima mea, 3 Rákóczi et Dombrowski, 4 Marseillaise, 5 Psaume ii; only no.1 completed (see G4); see also Q17
Q2			46	Allegro di bravura, orch; see A6	1830
Q3	754a		49	Grand solo caractéristique à propos d'une chansonette de Panséron, pf	1832
				Remarks: mentioned in letter, 12 Dec 1832, to Valérie Boissier; Sotheby MS Nov 1987
Q4				La belle en robe des Dimanches, song	1830s
				Remarks: facs. in L. Eősze (1980), no.43
Q5	701b		140	Marie, poème, pf/? chbr ens	1835–mid 1840s	unpubd
				Remarks: facs. in T. Marix-Spire (H1954)
Q6	125a		224	Concerto, pf, orch	1835–9	EMB, 1989†
				Remarks: uses themes from A3, A6, A7
Q7	700	665	1349	Carnaval de Venise [Paganini], pf	early 1840s
Q8	235	98	283	Fantaisie sur des thèmes anglais (God Save the Queen), pf/orch	early 1840s	announced but not pubd Hamburg: Schuberth, 1841; MS frag. July 1998
Q9				Manfred, vv, orch	1842–4
				Remarks: see Schnapp 38
Q10	695	663	384	Piano Piece, F; MS in D-WRgs	?1843
Q11a, b	738		207	Spanish folksong arrangements, pf, 2 versions	?1844
				Remarks: listed in Conradi and Liszt: Programme général (A1843–9); MSS in D-WRgs; see also A114, A195
Q12	693	662	284–5	Zwei Klavierstücke ungarischen Characters (Deux pièces en style hongrois): no.1, d, no.2, b♭	1845		LSP iii† no.1
Q13	687	670	485	Sardanapale (op, Rotondi, after Byron)	1846–early 1850s	unpubd
				Remarks: lib commissioned by Princess Cristina Belgiojoso; intended for the Vienna Hofoper

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published	Collected editions
Q14	689	672	503	Singe, wem Gesang gegeben (L. Uhland: Freie Kunst), male vv, orch; orchd Conradi/Liszt	?1848	unpubd
Q15	703		646	Psalm ii, (Quare fremuerunt gentes et populi), T, mixed vv, orch	1851
				Remarks: orig. intended for Q1
Q16				[Dies Irae] (Melodie in dorischer Tonart), pf; MS in US-NYpl	1861	unpubd
Q17	688	671	1052	Die Legende vom heiligen Stanislaus (orat, P. Cornelius and others, after L. Siemienski)	1869–85	Madison, WI: A-R Edns, 1998†
				Remarks: ded. C. Sayn-Wittgenstein; begun 1869 as an orat, although orch section Salve Polonia (G28) dates from 1863; listed in F. Schnapp (A1942), no.90; see also A225, A302, B28, J45, J51
Q18	692a	674	1230	Die vier Jahreszeiten, str qt	?1874	unpubd
Q19	698	666	1235	La mandragore, ballade [Delibes], pf	1881	unpubd
				Remarks: transcr./sketch from the op Jean de Nivelle, 1st perf. Budapest, 17 March 1881, cond. Delibes
Q20				3tes Conzert, pf, orch; MS in A-Wn, an earlier undatable and different sketch to a '3me Concerto' in D-WRgs	1880s
Q21	215	37		Petite valse (Nachspiel zu den 3 vergessenen Walzern)	?1883–84
				Remarks: see A311

UNIDENTIFIED FRAGMENTS

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
R1				Scherzo, pf	1830
R2				Variazione II, pf
R3				Albumblatt, A♭	?1840
R4				?opera paraphrase, pf	?1840	inscribed 'A chaque chose sa saison'

LOST WORKS

numbers listed in Schnapp refer to F. Schnapp (A1942)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S1	702		2	Tantum ergo (T. Aquinas), chorus a cappella	1822	mentioned in letter to Ramann, 4 Nov 1874; listed in Schnapp (no.1)
S2			5	Lieder, songs	1824	mentioned by Adam Liszt in letter (20 March 1824) to Carl Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.2)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S3	724		9	Rondo, pf	1824	mentioned by Adam Liszt in letter (29 July 1824) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.3)
S4	724		10/1	Fantasia, pf	1824	mentioned by A. Liszt in letter (29 July 1824) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.4)
S5	725		14	Sonata, f, pf	1825	mentioned in letter to Ramann, 10 Oct 1881; facs. of 1881 MS written from memory in L. Ramann (E1983)
S6	725		15	Sonata, pf	1825	mentioned in letter to Ramann, 10 Oct 1881; listed in Schnapp (no.6)
S7	725		16	Sonata, pf	1825	mentioned in letter to Ramann, 10 Oct 1881; listed in Schnapp (no.7)
S8	713		20	Piano concerto, pf, orch	1825	mentioned by A. Liszt in letter (14 July 1825) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.8)
S9	713		21	Concerto, pf, orch	1825	mentioned by A. Liszt in letter (14 July 1825) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.9)
S10	755		17	Sonata, pf 4 hands	1825	mentioned by A. Liszt in letter (14 July 1825) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.10)
S11	718		19	Quintet	1825	mentioned by A. Liszt in letter (14 July 1825) to Czerny; listed in Schnapp (no.12)
S12				Charles Mayer – Coda pour l'étude no.3, A♭, pf	1826–7	for L. Garella; according to Boissier (E1927), 1st perf. Paris, 8 March 1832, by Liszt; listed in Schnapp (no.13)
S13			35	Fantasia on Rule Britannia, pf, perf. London, Argyll Rooms (Covent Garden Playbill), 2 June 1827	1827

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S14			36	Duet from Rossini's Semiramide, vn, pf	1827	by Liszt and N. Mori; 1st perf. London, Argyll Rooms, 2 June 1827; see W. Wright: 'Liszt's London Appearances in 1827', Liszt Society Journal, xvi (1991), 8–12
S15			37	The Fall of Paris, military air with variations, fl, pf	1827	by Liszt and A. Minasi; 1st perf. London, Drury Lane, 5 June 1827; see W. Wright: 'Liszt's London Appearances in 1827', Liszt Society Journal, xvi (1991), 8–12
S16			38	Fantasia, vn, pf	1827	by Liszt and Mori: 1st perf. London, Drury Lane, 8 June 1827; see W. Wright: 'Liszt's London Appearances in 1827', Liszt Society Journal, xvi (1991), 8–12
S17	[121]	[452]	39	Grand Concerto, a, pf, orch	1827	mentioned by Moscheles, see C. Moscheles, ed.: Aus Moscheles' Leben (Leipzig, 1872), i, 138; listed in Schnapp (no.14); 1st perf. London, Argyll Rooms, 9 June 1827; not 1st version of H1
S18	720		1390	Allegro moderato, E, vn, pf	1829	listed in Schnapp (nos.16, 16a)
S19	715		1392	Piano Concerto in the Italian Style, pf, orch	1830s	mentioned in Göllerich (H1908), 281
S20	754b		1385	Ballade, pf	1832	mentioned in letter to V. Boissier, 12 Dec 1832, and in Grove 1–4
S21				Introduction und Walzer (Walse), pf	?1833	ded. J. Reiset; MS described by G. Kinsky in his catalogue (p.239) of the Koch Sammlung (ed. M.-A. Souchay, Stuttgart, 1953)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S22	629b		67	Sonate, pf	1835	mentioned in letter to Anna Liszt, Geneva, 28 July 1835; listed in Schnapp (no.19), with incipit
S23	726a		68	Valse, E, pf	1835	mentioned in letter to Anna Liszt, Geneva, 28 July 1835, as intended for the album of Mme Goussart; listed in Schnapp (no.20)
S24			77	Méthode de piano pour le Conservatoire de Genéve	1835–6	?pubd Sampierdarena (Lyons, 1836), see Chiappari; listed in Schnapp (no.21)
S25			74/2	Divertissement sur la cavatine de Pacini 'I tuoi frequenti palpiti'	1835–6	pubd Leipzig: Hofmeister, 1837†
S26	252	88	99/2	Rondeau fantastique sur un thème espagnol (El contrabandista), pf, orch	1836	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 9 Feb 1841; listed in Hofmeister's 1843 catalogue; see also A34
S27	390	129	100/2	Réminiscences des Puritains de Bellini, pf, orch	1836	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 6 Dec 1839; listed in Schnapp (no.28)
S28			251/2	Marche hongroise, pf, orch	1840	London perf. mentioned in RGMP (14 June 1840); listed in Schnapp (no.31), possibly A59 or A65
S29				Euryanthe-Fantaisie [Weber], pf	1840	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 29 Dec 1840; based on the Act 3 chorus Die Thale dampfen; 1st perf. Cork, 2 Jan 1841; listed in Schnapp (no.32)
S30			299/3	Grosse Fantasie über 'God Save the Queen' und 'Rule Britannia', pf 4 hands	1841	listed in Schnapp (no.33)
S31	743a		303	Fantasia on themes from Halévy's Guitarero	1841	1st perf., Kassel, 19 Sept 1841; listed in Schnapp (no.35)
S32	765a		340	L'aube naît (V. Hugo), song	1842	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 7 May 1842; listed in Schnapp (no.36)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S33	[74]	[545/1]	[312a]	Das deutsche Vaterland I (Was ist das deutsche Vaterland), in D, maestoso, male vv, brass orch	1842	see also M1
S34			329	Paraphrase über Weber's Aufforderrung zum Tanz, pf	1842	1st perf. Berlin, 19 Feb 1842; listed in Schnapp (no.37)
S35	748		1381	Die Zauberflöte Overture [Mozart], pf	?1843	mentioned in Conradi and Liszt: Programme général, (A1843–9); listed in Schnapp (no.46)
S36	744		1378	Paraphrase of Act 4 of Kullak's Dom Sébastien, pf	?1843/4	mentioned in Conradi and Liszt (A1843–9); perf. Vienna, 22 March 1846
S37	741		1373	La carnaval romain overture [Berlioz], pf	after 1844	mentioned in Conradi and Liszt (A1843–9); listed in Schnapp (no.40)
S38	739		1374	Coriolanus Overture [Beethoven], pf	1846–7	mentioned in letter to V. Stasov, 14 Sept 1847; listed in Schnapp (no.44)
S39	740		1375	Egmont Overture [Beethoven], pf	1846–7	mentioned in Conradi and Liszt: Programme général (A1843–9); perf. Liszt and Luisa Cognetti, Rome, 15 Dec 1885, listed in Schnapp (no.45)
S40	758		1388	The Organ, sym. poem after J.G. Herder, org	1850s	mentioned in Grove1–4
S41	710		1394	Funeral march, orch	1850	mentioned in H. Raff (C1901–2), 389; possibly Héroïde funèbre (see G4; see also S51)
S42	753		618	Alfonso und Estrella [Schubert], pf	1850–51	transcr. of Act 1; mentioned in letters (1851) to Raff and Léon Escudier
S43	752		1384	Gelb rollt [A. Rubinstein], pf	after 1854	based on Rubinstein's song op.34/9; mentioned in Grove1–4
S44			713	Cantique d'amour, hp	1856	for J. Eyth-Pohl; listed in Schnapp (no.55)
S45	765		729	[Muttergottes-Sträusslein zum Mai-Monate, no.3], Die Glöckchen (J. Müller), 1v, pf	1857	intended as no.3 of N54; mentioned in C. Sayn-Wittgenstein's MS catalogue (A1848–58)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S46	762		760	Air de Chateaubriand, song	1858	'p[our] chant' in C. Sayn-Wittgenstein's catalogue (A1848–58); possibly J4/4; listed in Schnapp (no.57)
S47	763		761	Strophes de [G.] Herlossohn, song	1858	mentioned in C. Sayn-Wittgenstein's catalogue (A1848–58); listed in Schnapp (no.58)
S48	764		762	Kränze pour chant, song	1858	mentioned in C. Sayn-Wittgenstein's catalogue (A1848–58); listed in Schnapp (no.59)
S49	692	669	826	Violinkonzert für Reményi, vn, orch	1860	no MS exists, despite citations in Raabe and Searle
S50				Polonaise martiale, pf	1860	listed in Schnapp (no.62)
S51	761		1389	Chopin's Marche funèbre, op.35, org, vc, pf	1860s	from Sonata op.35; mentioned in A. Habets, ed.: Borodine et Liszt (Paris, 1893; Eng. trans., 1895); see also S41
S52				Trauermarsch, orch	1861	not the same as S41; Sitwell (H1934) gives the wrong date
S53	15/1	491	779c	Psalm xxiii, chorus, orch	1862	listed in Schnapp (no.64); see also J10, K1
S54	[17]	[493]	[780]	Der 137. Psalm (An den Wassern zu Babylon), chorus, orch	1862	mentioned in letter to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein, 12 Jan 1872; see also J11, K2
S55	743		1377	Soldiers' chorus from Faust [Gounod], pf	1864	mentioned in letter to H. von Bülow, 20 Dec 1866; listed in Schnapp (no.67); 1st perf. Rome, 20 Dec 1866
S56	749		1382	Radovsky's Preussischer Armeemarsch, pf	after 1866	mentioned in Thouret's Katalog der Musikbibliothek im Schlosse zu Berlin (?1895)
S57	757		922	Le triomphe funèbre du Tasse, 2 pf	1866–9	listed in Schnapp (no.68)
S58			947	Ave Maris Stella, hp	1877	mentioned in letter to Kahnt, 12 Dec 1877; listed in Schnapp (no.77)

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
S59	760	[409]	1245	Cantico del sol di S Francesco, org	1881	mentioned in letter to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein, 6 Oct 1881; see also A301, A307, E35, F2, I9
S60	768		1257	Der ewige Jude [C.F.D. Schubart], melodrama, pf orch	1881	mentioned in Gottschalg (E1910) and Grove1–4; listed in Schnapp (no.79)
S61	133	475	1256	Die Wiege, 4 vn	1881	version for 4 vn listed in Göllerich (H1908), but 1st perf. Rome, 22 Oct 1881, was for str qt; listed in Schnapp (no.84); see also A303, A310, B55, G38
S62	711		1395	Csárdas macabre, orch	?1882	mentioned in Göllerich (A1908), 278 and listed in Schnapp (no.81); transcr. by G. Darvos not based on authentic material
S63	721		1276	Prelude, vn, ?pf	1882	ded. L. Helbig; listed in Schnapp (no.83)

PLANNED COMPOSITIONS OR TRANSCRIPTIONS

all listed in Chiappari, but most unnumbered

LW	S/C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
T1		Consuelo (op, George Sand)	1842	ded. 1842; mentioned in RGMP (29 Oct and 5 Nov 1843)
T2		Le corsaire, op	1842	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 11 April 1842
T3	c1379	Trauermarsch, pf	?1843–4
T4		Les djins, Les Haleines vv, orch	1840s	mentioned in sketchbook inventory
T5		Rêves et fantaisies, pf	1840s	alternative title for a version of A132/1
T6		La divina commedia (J. Autran), ?op	1845	possibly used in G14
T7		Les laboreurs (Les matelots; Les soldats) (F. Lamennais), male vv, pf	1845	planned as continuation of M21; mentioned in letters to Lamennais, 28 April and 1 May 1845; see also L3
T8		Richard in Palestine (op, W. Scott)	1846	mentioned in letter to M. d' Agoult, 3 Jan 1847
T9		Marguerite, op	1846	mentioned in letters to Grand Duke Alexander (6 Oct 1846) and M. d'Agoult (14 April 1846)
T10		Spartacus (op, O.L.B. Wolff)	1848
T11		Le ciel et la terre (Himmel und Erde), oratorio	1849	supposedly to text by Wagner, after Byron; mentioned in letter to Wagner, 28 Oct 1849

LW	S/C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
T12		Faust, op	1850	mentioned in letter to M. d'Agoult, 27 Jan 1846; probably based on A. Dumas or lib by G. de Nerval; ?abandoned in favour of G12
T13		Symphonie, D [Schubert], 2 pf	1850	mentioned in letters to B&H, 4 Jan 1850; perhaps pubd under Klindworth's name; listed in Chiappari, p.320
T14		Tempête (Musik zu Shakespeare's Sturm), orch	1853	mentioned in letters to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein (23 Sept 1853) and F. von Dingelstedt (22 Nov 1855 and 20 Feb 1856)
T15		Musik zur Orestie, orch	1853–5	mentioned in letters to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein (23 Sept 1853) and F. von Dingelstedt (22 Nov 1855)
T16		2 masses	1856
T17		Kahma, La bohémienne (op, O. Roquette)	1858	lib in D-WRgs
T18		János (Janká, der ungarische Rosshirt) (op, S. Mosenthal, after C. Beck)	1858	mentioned in letters to C. Sayn-Wittgenstein, 29 March, and 19 and 27 April 1858
T19		Schlusschor aus dem Barbier von Bagdad (Salemaleikum) [P. Cornelius], pf	1859
T20		Liturgie catholique: liturgie romaine, vocal	1860–61
T21		Die Weltgeschichte in Tönen und Bildern: Nimrod, Jerusalem, Der Turm von Babel, The Glory of Greece, orch	1862	after W. von Kaulbach's murals in Berlin
T22		Beethoven String Quartets, pf	1863
T23		St Etienne, roi d'Hongrie (M. Jokai, after K. Ábrányi), chorus, orch	1869
T24		Schiffsjung, vocal	1870
T25		Messe du couronnement, pf 4 hands	1870
T26		Chopin [2 works], pf, orch	1871	mentioned in Gottschalg (E1910)
T27		Fiedler der heiligen Cäcilia (T. Körner), chorus, orch	1871	mentioned in Gottschalg (E1910)
T28		Miserere, chorus, orch	1874
T29		Psalm xv, chorus, orch	1874
T30		Magnificat, chorus orch	1874
T31		The Golden Legend (melodrama), pf/orch	1874–5	continuation of L15
T32		Psalm xiv, chorus, orch	1875
T33	s577a, c1350–61	John Field: Nocturnes nos.1–9, 14 and 18, and Nocturne pastorale, E, pf 4 hands	1877	nos.1–9 advertised by Schuberth in NZM, lxxiii (1877), 21 Dec; see U7
T34		Le devin du village, pf	1883	mentioned in letters to Michaelis; Liszt's failing eyesight prevented work on this piece
T35		Consolations des misères de ma vie (J.-J. Rousseau), pf	1883	mentioned in letter to Michaelis
T36		Ungarische Bildnisse, orch	1885	transcr. of A335
T37		Csárdás di Somogy, pf	1886
T38		Le troubadour [op by A. Mackenzie], pf	1886	mentioned in Sitwell (H1934), 353
T39		Das Geburtsfest, op
T40		Die Braut, op
T41		Der Saalstrudel, op
T42		Semele, op		planned libretto by Karl Ritter, after F. von Schiller
T43		St Hubert (H. Riedl), op
T44		Camoens, op
T45	s706, c1397	Benedictus, vv

LW	S/C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Remarks
T46		Die beide jungen Gesellen, op

EDITIONS

LW	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Revised Liszt	Published	Remarks
U1	Rev.20	M. Clementi: Préludes et exercices, pf	1826	Paris: Dufaut & Dubois–Boisselot, 1826/7†, Saint-Etienne, 1868 (new edn)	Liszt's own Etudes (A8) are mentioned on title page of 1st edn as 3rd vol.
U2	Rev.2	J.S. Bach: Fantaisie chromatique, pf	before 1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, before 1846
U3		J.S. Bach: Fugue, a, pf	before 1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, before 1846
U4	Rev.3–5	J.S. Bach: 3 préludes et fugues [5vv, 3vv, 5vv], c♯, pf	before 1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, before 1846
U5	Rev.24	G.F. Handel: Prélude at Fugue, e, pf	before 1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, before 1846
U6	Rev.30	D. Scarlatti: Katzenfuge, pf	before 1846	Berlin: Schlesinger, before 1846
U7	Rev.22	J. Field: 18 nocturnes, pf	*c*1850–70	Leipzig: Schuberth, 1850 (nos.1–6), *c*1860–70 (complete)	according to Raabe only nos.1–10 and 12 rev. Liszt (Raabe, p.363); Liszt's preface also pubd in Gesammelte Schriften, iv; see T33
U8		Das Pianoforte: Ausgewählte Sammlung älterer und neuerer Original-Compositionen, 2 vols.		Stuttgart: Hallberger, 1857 (vol.i), n.d. (ii)	vol.i incl. A188
U9	Rev.7–15	Ludwig van Beethovens Sämtliche Kompositionen: erste vollständige Gesammtausgabe unter Revision von Franz Liszt und C. Geissler		Wolfenbüttel: Holle, 1857–61	Liszt apparently responsible only for pf sonatas and pf qts; see Raabe, p.363
U10	Rev.23	A.W. Gottschalg: Repertorium für Orgel, Harmonium oder Pedalflügel	*c*1860–77	Leipzig and New York: Schuberth, 1869† (vol.i), 1873† (ii), 1877† (iii)	rev and with addl material by Liszt; 2 more vols. planned but not pubd (list of contents in vol.iii)
U11	Rev.27	J.N. Hummel: Mädchenlieder	1861	Weimar: Böhlau, 1861	collab. Hoffmann von Fallersleben; ed. A. Bräunlich and A.W. Gottschalg
U12	Rev.25	J.N. Hummel: Grosses Septett op.74	?1866	Leipzig: Schuberth, *c*1866–7	also pubd as qnt (pr, str); see also A155)
U13	Rev.35–6	C.M. von Weber: Ausgewählte Sonaten und Solostücke für das Pianoforte: 2 vols., i: sonatas opp.24, 39, 49, 70; ii: Momento capriccioso op.12, Grande polonaise op.21, Rondeau brillant op.62, Aufforderung zum Tanz op.65, Polacca brillante op.72, Conzertstück op.79	1868–74	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1871† (i), 1875 (i, rev.), 1875† (ii), 1883 (ii, rev.)	vol.i and opp.12, 72, 79 with addl 'variants' by Liszt; see also Raabe, p.364

LW	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Revised Liszt	Published	Remarks
U14/1–3	Rev.31	F. Schubert: Ausgewählte Sonaten, Solostücke und Compositionen, i–iii, pf [i:D760, 845, 850, 894; ii: D145, 146, 365, 734, 779, 780, 783, 899, 924, 935; iii: ed. Liszt, rev. Lebert]	1868–74	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1871† (i), 1875 (rev.) (vols.i–ii), 1880† (iii)	i–ii: new finale for D760 and all with addl 'variants'; iii rev. S. Lebert; see also Raabe, p.363
U15	Rev.34	R. Viole: Die Gartenlaube, 100 études op.50, pf	?1869	Leipzig: Kahnt, *c*1869–70	see also Raabe, p.363
U16	Rev.18	F. Chopin: 24 Preludes op.28	1877–8	Leipzig: B&H, 1878†	see also Raabe, p.363
U17	Rev.32	F. Schubert: Ausgewählte Sonaten, Solostücke und Compositionen, iv–v, pf 4 hands [iv: incl. D602, 733, 783, 813, 818, 819; v: incl. D823/2–3, 940, 968a]	1877–9	Stuttgart: Cotta'sche Buchhandlung, 1880†	collab. S. Lebert, works ed. by him not listed here; see also Raabe, p.363
U18		J. Haydn: Collection complète des oeuvres, pour piano seul ... nouvelle édition ... par F. Liszt [10 bks]	n.d.	Paris: Richault, n.d.	Liszt's contribution unknown
See also A296, C28–30

CORRECTIONS AND ADDITIONS TO WORKS BY OTHER COMPOSERS

LW	S/R/C	Original composer, work	Composition date (Liszt)	Remarks, publication
V1		Hermann [H. Cohen]: Les contre-temps, grande valse brillante, pf	1838-9	corrections to MS copy
V2		B. Smetana: Stammbuch Blätter, bk 3	1854	variants to nos.13 (op.5/1), 15 (op.5/3), 16 (op. posth.), 17 (op.4/3), 18 (op.5/4); only nos. 17–18 accepted by Smetana; orig. pubd Prague, 1858 (opp.4–5), 1903 (op. posth.); Liszt's versions pubd Prague: Supraphon, 1968
V3	CRev.29	J. Raff: Valse, A♭, pf	?1854	introduction and finale by Liszt: pubd in L. Ramann: Liszt-Pädagogium (Leipzig, 1901), v
V4	S405a, C752	L. Festetics: Magyar nóták: Pásztor lakodalmas (Mélodies hongroises: Les noces du pâtre), pf	1858	corrections to autograph (lost), pubd Vienna: Glöggl, 1859; see E. Major (J1940)
V5	S554a, R239a, C1348	A. Rubinstein: Etude, C, pf	after 1867	introduction and addl material; MS in US-Wc
V6	CRev.18	F. Chopin: Sonata, b, op.58, pf	?*c*1870-71	variants to finale; facs. of frags. in R. Bory: La vie de Chopin par l'image (Geneva, 1936), 166 and S. François: 'Le très grand pianiste, Chopin', Génies et réalités (Paris, 1965)
V7	CRev.6	G. Beliczay: Aquarellen, op.26, pf	1871	corrections to autograph; incl. in orig. pubn, Leipzig: B&H, *c*1882/3
V8/1–2		H. Maréchal: 1 Bonjour! Aubade (E. Bertin), 2 Les cloches du soir (M.Desbordes Valmore) lv, pf	*c*1872/3	corrections to orig. pubn, Paris: Colombier, *c*1870 (no.1), c1872/3 (no.2); MS in F-Pn
V9	CRev.21	F. Erkel: I. Király-hymnus (E.Szigligeti), chorus, orch	1873	corrections to MS score; excerpts in M. Eckhardt (A1986), 218–23
V10		A. Ritter: In der Christmette, vn, org	after 1873	corrections to orig. pubn, Leipzig: Schuberth, 1873: rev. copy in H-Bl

LW	S/R/C	Original composer, work	Composition date (Liszt)	Remarks, publication
V11		composer unknown, 4 dances, e, G, g, G, vn, pf	1875	corrections and addns; MS in F-Pgm
V12	S383a, C1240	K. Ábrányi (the elder): Virág-dal (Chant des Fleurs), pf	1880	introduction, corrections and addns to orig. pubn, Budapest, *c*1876; incl. addns etc., Budapest: Akadémiai Kiadó, 1986; ed. M. Eckhardt (A1986), 203–14
V13		L. Gizycka-Zamoyska: Sérénade allemande, pf	1880	corrections to orig. pubn, Leipzig: Kahnt, 1880; copy in H-Bl
V14	C1386	J.S. Bach: Chaconne from BWV1004, transcr. G. Zichy, pf left hand	1880	variants to Zichy's transcr., MSS lost; incl. variants, Hamburg and St Petersburg: Rahter-Büttner, 1881; listed in Schnapp (no.78)
V15	S167a, R113a, C1302	C. Tausig: Valses-caprices d'après J. Strauss, III. Wahlstimmen [op.250]	?1883–5	introduction and finale by Liszt; facs. in Liszt Society Journal, xiv (1989), suppl., 18–19; pubd E. Mach (1980) as 'Ruhig'
V16	CRev.33	B. Smetana: Polka de salon, F♯, op.7/1, pf	1885	introduction and finale by Liszt; orig. pubd Prague, 1854; with addns in L. Ramann: Liszt-Pädagogium (Leipzig, 1901), v; facs. in HR, ii (1909)
V17		Beethoven: Die Ehre Gottes aus der Natur, op.48/4, arr. A.W. Gottschalg, male vv, org		corrections to MS copy, in D-WRgs
V18		R. Schumann: Die Davidsbündler, op.6/14, arr. Gottschalg, org		corrections to MS copy, in D-WRgs
V19		H. Gobbi: 7ème valse, op.19, pf		corrections to orig. pubn, Pest: Táborsky & Parsch, *c*1868; rev. copy in H-Bl
V20		O. Lessmann: Tarantella-Impromptu, op.25, pf		corrections to orig. pubn, Berlin: Fürstner, *c*1880; rev. copy in Bl

DOUBTFUL WORKS

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published/Collected editions
W1			10/2	Fünf Variationen über die Romanze aus der Oper 'Joseph' von Méhul, pf	1824	NLE ii/1
				Remarks: attrib. Liszt but by F.X. Mozart (op.23)
W2	630	352	315	Réminiscences de Robert le diable [Meyerbeer], pf 4 hands	1841–3	Berlin: Schlesinger, ?1843†
				Remarks: see A78
W3	747		1380	Poco adagio, pf	[1847]
				Remarks: from I2; mentioned in Catalogue of the Music Loan Exhibition of the Worshipful Company of Musicians, London 1904 (London, 1909), 286
W4	766		884	Der Papsthymnus, song	1864	Leipzig: Kahnt, n.d.†
				Remarks: based on E19a
W5	756		998	Mosonyi's Grabgeleit	1870	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1871†
				Remarks: arr. of A249
W6	723a		1008	Orpheus, chbr ens	1871
				Remarks: composed by L.A. Zellner; 1st perf., Budapest, 16 Feb 1871, with Liszt and Reményi
W7	611	332	1031	Epithalam zu Eduard Reményi's Vermählungs-feier	1872	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, 1872†
W8	767		1399	Excelsior!, 1v, org	1874	Hamburg: Schuberth, n.d.
				Remarks: see also L15
W9	712		1222/2	Romance oubliée, orch	1881	Hanover: Bachmann, n.d.
				Remarks: doubtful; see also A299, D16
W10	543	214	1250/2	Ungarns Gott, pf 4 hands	?1881

LW	S	R	C	Title (subtitle/alternative title)	Composed	Published/Collected editions
W11	618	300	1307	Csárdás obstiné	?1884	Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, ?1886
W12	623	312	1336	[18.] Ungarische Rhapsodie	1885	?Budapest: Táborszky & Parsch, ?1885†
				Remarks: arr. of A132/18, mentioned in A1908
W13	623a		1335	[19.] Ungarische Rhapsodie (nach Ábrányi)	?1885	Vienna: [unknown], n.d.†
				Remarks: arr. of A132/19
W14	126a		1338	Piano Concerto in the Hungarian style, pf, orch	1885	New York: 1909†
				Remarks: it is unlikely that the concerto mentioned by Liszt in 1885 and referred to by Göllerich (A1908) and Gottschalg (E1910) is the work arr. S. Menter and orchd Tchaikovsky (pubd New York, 1909, as Hungarian Gypsy Songs); Liszt's autograph frag. ('3tes Conzert', Q20) does not contain gypsy elements
W15	737	109	1371/2	Trois morceaux en style de danse ancien hongrois, pf
				Remarks: orig. pieces not by Liszt; see E. Major: 'Három – tévesen Liszt Ferencnek tulajdonitott kompozicióról', Zenei szemle, x (1926) 21–8
W16	736		1371/1	Kerepesi csárdás, pf
				Remarks: doubtful according to Searle; mentioned in H-Bn catalogue (1911)

WRITINGS

EDITIONS

Franz Liszt: Gesammelte Schriften, 6 vols., ed. and trans. L. Ramann, except i (Leipzig, 1880–83/R)

i: Friedrich Chopin (1852) (trans. La Mara [M. Lipsius])

ii/1: Zur Stellung des Künstlers (1835); Über die zukünftige Kirchenmusik (1835); Über Volksausgaben bedeutender Werke (1836); Über Meyerbeers Hugenotten (1837); Thalbergs Grande fantaisie und Caprices (1837) [on op.22 and opp.15 and 19]; Robert Schumanns Klavier-Kompositionen (1837) [on opp.5, 11 and 14]; Paganini: ein Nekrolog (1840)

ii/2: Reisebriefe eines Baccalaureus der Tonkunst (1835–40) [letters to G. Sand, A. Pictet, L. de Ronchaud, M. Schlesinger and M. d'Ortigue]

iii: Dramaturgische Blätter (1849–56) [incl. articles on 19th-century ops]

iv: Aus den Annalen des Fortschritts (1855–9) [essays on Berlioz, Robert and Clara Schumann, Franz, Sobolewski and Field]

v: Streifzüge: kritische, polemische und zeithistorische Essays (1850–58)

vi: Die Zigeuner und ihre Musik in Ungarn (1859, rev. 1881)

Franz Liszt: Sämtliche Schriften, ed. D. Altenburg (Wiesbaden, 1989–) [in progress; 9 vols. projected]

iii: Die Goethe-Stiftung

iv: Lohengrin et Tannhäuser

v: Dramaturgische Blätter

Franz Liszt: Artiste et société: édition des textes en français, ed. R. Stricker (Paris, 1995) originally published in Gazette musicale de Paris (later RGMP) unless otherwise stated

ARTICLES

(a) Lettres d'un bachelier ès musique

'Lettre d'un voyageur: à M. George Sand' (6 Dec 1835)
'A un poète voyageur' [George Sand] (12 Feb 1837)
[A George Sand] (16 July 1837)
'A M. Adolphe Pictet' (11 Feb 1838)
'A Louis de Ronchaud' (25 March 1838)
'La Scala' [Maurice Schlesinger] (27 May 1838)
'A Heinrich Heine' (8 July 1838)
'Lake Como' [Louis de Ronchaud] (22 July 1838)
'A Lambert Massart' (2 Sept 1838)
'Le Persée de Benvenuto Cellini' (13 Jan 1839)
'De l'état de la musique en Italie' [Maurice Schlesinger], Revue musicale (28 March 1839) [Thursday issue of RGMP]
'La Sainte Cécile de Raphaël' [Joseph d'Ortigue] (14 April 1839)
'Venise', L'artiste (16 June–11 Aug 1839) [in five instalments]
'A Hector Berlioz' (24 Oct 1839)
'Gênes et Florence', L'artiste (3 Nov 1839)
'A Léon Kreutzer' (19 Sept 1841)

ed. J. Chantavoine: Pages romantiques (Paris, 1912/R) [reprints of selected Gazette musicale articles]
ed. C. Suttoni: An Artist's Journey: lettres d'un bachelier ès musique, 1835–1841 (Chicago, 1989) [Eng. trans.]
ed. R. Stricker: Lettres d'un bachelier ès musique (Paris, 1991)

(b) Other articles

'De la situation des artistes et de leur condition dans la société' (3 May, 10 May, 17 May, 26 July, 30 Aug, 11 Oct and 15 Nov, 1835) [incl. the article 'De l'avenir de la musique d'église']
'Des publications à bon marché' (3 Jan 1836)
'Sur un concert au conservatoire', Le monde (11 Dec 1836)
'M. Thalberg: Grande Fantaisie, oeuvre 22' (14 May 1837)
'Reponse à M. le professeur Fétis' (14 May 1837)
'Trois morceaux dans le genre pathétique, par C.V. Alkan' (22 Oct 1837)
'Les oeuvres pianistiques de Robert Schumann' (12 Nov 1837)
'Sur Paganini, à propos de sa mort' (23 Aug 1840)
'Lettre au directeur de La Revue des Deux Mondes' (22 Nov 1840)
'Le concert Chopin' (2 May 1841)
'Sur le concert à Hamburg' (19 Sept 1841)
'Des Esquisses par F. Kroll et des Esquisses mignonnes par Ch. Reinecke, pour le piano', La musique (1 July 1849)

Also prefaces to some of his compositions, incl.: Album d'un voyageur, 1835–6; Vallée d'Obermann, 1835–6; Transcriptions of Beethoven symphonies, 1838; each of his 13 Symphonic Poems, 1854–81; 2 Légendes: 1, St François d'Assise: la prédication aux oiseaux, 2, St François de Paule marchant sur les flots, 1864; Via Crucis, 1878

BOOKS AND ESSAYS FROM LATER YEARS

De la fondation Goethe à Weimar (Leipzig, 1851)
Lohengrin et Tannhäuser de Richard Wagner (Leipzig, 1851)
F. Chopin (Paris, 1852, new edn 1879/R; several Eng. trans., incl. 1863, 1877 and 1899 as Life of Chopin, 1963 as Frederic Chopin) [orig. pubd by instalments in La France musicale, 5 Feb–17 Aug 1851]
Des bohémiens et de leur musique en Hongrie (Paris, 1859, 2/1881/R; Eng. trans., 1926/R, as The Gypsy in Music) [orig. pubd by instalment in La France musicale, July–Aug 1859]
Über John Fields Nocturne (Leipzig, 1859)
R. Schumann's musikalische Haus- und Lebensregeln (Leipzig, 1860)
Robert Franz (Leipzig, 1872)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A Catalogues, bibliographies. B Genealogies and iconographies. C Letters to and from Liszt. D Other correspondence. E Memoirs, recollections and reminiscences. F Liszt as author. G Folkloristic studies. H Biographical studies. I Analysis and criticism: (i) Piano music (ii) Orchestral music (iii) Songs (iv) Choral music. J Other studies. K Specialist publications.

A: CATALOGUES, BIBLIOGRAPHIES

A. Conradi and F. Liszt: Programme général des morceaux exécutés par F. Liszt à ses concerts de 1838 à 1848 (MS, 1843–9, D-WRgs)
C. Sayn-Wittgenstein: Catalogue of works (MS, 1848–58, D-WRgs)
F. Liszt: Thematisches Verzeichnis der Werke, Bearbeitungen und Transcriptionen von F. Liszt (Leipzig, 1855, 2/1877)
L. Friwitzer: 'Chronologisch-systematisches Verzeichnis sämtlicher Tonwerke Franz Liszts', Musikalische Chronik, v (1887)
A. Göllerich: Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1908), 272–331
A. Göllerich: 'Zur Erinnerung an Franz Liszt', NZM, lxxxiii (1887), 145–6, 169–70, 203 only, 237 only, 272–5, 375–6, 428–9, 440–41
G. Kinsky: Musikhistorisches Museum von Wilhelm Heyer in Cöln: Katalog, iv (Cologne, 1916)
P. Raabe: Franz Liszt (Stuttgart, 1931, 2/1968), ii, 241–364; suppl., 7
L. Koch: Liszt Ferenc bibliográfiai kísérlet [Towards a Liszt bibliography] (Budapest, 1936)
F. Schnapp: 'Verschollene Kompositionen Franz Liszts', Von deutscher Tonkunst: Festschrift zu Peter Raabes 70. Geburtstag, ed. A. Morgenroth (Leipzig, 1942), 119–53
H. Searle: The Music of Liszt (London, 1954, rev. 2/1966), 155–95
M. Eckhardt and C. Knotik: Franz Liszt und sein Kreis in Briefen und Dokumenten aus den Beständen des Burgenländischen Landesmuseums (Eisenstadt, 1983)
M. Eckhardt: Franz Liszt's Music Manuscripts in the National Széchényi Library, Budapest (Budapest, 1986)
M. Eckhardt, ed.: Liszt Ferenc Memorial Museum (Budapest, 1986)
C. Suttoni: 'Franz Liszt's Published Correspondence: an Annotated Bibliography', FAM, xxvi (1979), 191–234; rev. Journal of the American Liszt Society, no.25 (1989) [whole issue]; 3/ in preparation
E.H. Auman and R.A.White, eds.: The Music Manuscripts, First Editions, and Correspondence of Franz Liszt (1811–1886) in the Collections of the Music Division, Library of Congress (Washington DC, 1991)
M. Saffle: Franz Liszt: a Guide to Research (New York, 1991)
R. Charnin Mueller: 'Liszt's Catalogues and Inventories of his Music', SMH, xxiv (1992), 231–50
M. Eckhardt, ed.: Liszt Ferenc hagyatéka [Franz Liszt's estate] (Budapest, 1993); i: Könyvek[Books]; ii: Zeneművek [Music]
E. Liepsch: 'Der Nachlass Franz Liszt in Weimar', Das Goethe- und Schiller-Archiv 1896–1996: Beiträge aus dem ältesten deutschen Literaturarchiv, ed. J. Golz (Weimar, 1996), 347–52
R. Charnin Mueller: Thematisches Verzeichnis der Werke Franz Liszts (in preparation)

B: GENEALOGIES AND ICONOGRAPHIES

J. Hárich: 'Liszt Ferenc családja és az Esterházy hercegek' [Franz Liszt's family and the Princes Esterházy], Napkelet, ix (Budapest, 1934)
D. Bartha: Franz Liszt, 1811–1886: sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1936)
R. Bory: La vie de Franz Liszt par l'image (Geneva, 1936)
W. Füssmann and B. Mátéka: Franz Liszt: ein Künstlerleben in Wort und Bild (Langensalza, 1936)
H.E. Wamser: Abstammung und Familie Liszts (Eisenstadt, 1936)
I. Cekey: Liszt Ferenc származása és hazafisága [The descent and national identity of Franz Liszt] (Budapest, 1937)
E. Ritter von Liszt: Abstammung, Familie, Begebenheiten (Vienna and Leipzig, 1937)
A. Valkó: 'A Liszt család a levéltári iratok tükrében'[Archive documents in the National Széchényi Library concerning the Liszt family], Magyar Zene, i (1961), 388–99, 498–507
H. Weilguny and W. Handrick: Franz Liszt: Biographie in Bildern (Leipzig, 1961)
A. Buchner: Franz Liszt in Böhmen (Prague, 1962; Eng. trans., 1962)
Z. László and B. Mátéka: Franz Liszt: sein Leben in Bildern (Kassel, 1967; Eng. trans., 1969)
E. Békefi: Liszt Ferenc származása és családja [Liszt's family and its origins] (Budapest, 1973)
E. Burger: Franz Liszt: eine Lebenschronik in Bildern und Dokumenten (Munich, 1986; Eng. trans., 1989)
A. Fodor: Liszt Ferenc arcai: fotáportré [The faces of Ferenc Liszt: photographic portraits] (Budapest, 1986)

C: LETTERS TO AND FROM LISZT

Briefwechsel zwischen Wagner und Liszt (Leipzig, 1887)
La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Franz Liszts Briefe, i–viii (Leipzig, 1893–1905; Eng. trans. of vols. i–ii, 1894/R); i: Von Paris bis Rom; ii: Von Rom bis an's Ende; iii: Briefe an eine Freundin[Agnes Street-Klindworth]; iv–vii: Briefe an die Fürstin Sayn-Wittgenstein; viii: Neue Folge zu Band I und II
La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Briefe hervorragender Zeitgenossen an Franz Liszt, iii (Leipzig, 1895–1904)
La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Briefwechsel zwischen Franz Liszt und Hans von Bülow (Leipzig, 1898)
La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Briefwechsel zwischen Franz Liszt und Carl Alexander, Grossherzog von Sachsen (Leipzig, 1909)
La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Franz Liszts Briefe an seine Mutter (Leipzig, 1918)
H. Raff: 'Franz Liszt und Joachim Raff im Spiegel ihrer Briefe', Die Musik, i (1901–2), 36–44, 113–23, 285–93, 387–404, 499–505; ii (1902–3), 688–95, 861–71, 977–86, 1161–72, 1272–86, 1423–41
A. Stern, ed.: Liszts Briefe an Carl Gille (Leipzig, 1903)
E. Istel, ed.: 'Elf ungedruckte Briefe Liszts an Schott', Die Musik, v/3 (1905–6), 43–52
V. Csapó, ed.: Liszt Ference levelei baró Augusz Antalhoz, 1846–78 [Liszt's letters to Baron Antal Augusz] (Budapest, 1911)
E. Reuss, ed.: Franz Liszt in seinen Briefen (Stuttgart, 1911)
J. Kapp: 'Aus Weimars musikalischer Glanzzeit: mit mehreren unveröffentlichen Briefen Franz Liszts', Die Musik, xi/4 (1911–12), 223–32
J. Kapp, ed.: 'Autobiographisches von Franz Liszt', Die Musik, xi/1 (1911–12), 10–21
N. de Gutmansthal: Souvenirs de François Liszt: lettres inédites (Leipzig, 1913)
R. Bory, ed.: 'Correspondance inédite de Liszt et de la Princesse Marie Sayn-Wittgenstein', ReM, ix/7–11 (1927–8), 47–59
R. Bory: 'Diverses lettres inédites de Liszt', Schweizerisches Jb für Musikwissenschaft, iii (1928), 5–25
F. Schnapp, ed.: Liszts Testament: aus dem Französischen ins Deutsche übertragen (Weimar, 1931)
D. Ollivier, ed.: Correspondance de Liszt et de la Comtesse d'Agoult, 1833–1840, ii (Paris, 1933–4)
F. Schnapp, ed.: 'Briefe Franz Liszts und seine Familie', Die Musik, xxviii (1935–6), 662–72
D. Ollivier, ed.: Correspondance de Liszt et de sa fille Mme Emile Ollivier (Paris, 1936)
D. Ollivier: Autour de Madame d'Agoult et de Liszt (Paris, 1941)
H.E. Hugo, ed.: The Letters of Franz Liszt to Marie zu Sayn-Wittgenstein (Cambridge, MA, 1953)
M. Prahács, ed.: Franz Liszt: Briefe aus ungarischen Sammlungen, 1835–1886 (Budapest and Kassel, 1966)
E.N. Waters and W.R.Tyler, eds.: The Letters of Franz Liszt to Olga von Meyendorff, 1871–86 (Washington DC, 1979)
L. Eösze: 119 Római Liszt-Dokumentum (Budapest, 1980) [containing letters to Liszt's pupil Giovanni Sgambati]
L. Vendel-Mohay: Liszt-emlékek Szekszárdon [Liszt memories in Szekszárd] (Szekszárd, 1986)
P-A. Huré and C. Knepper, eds.: Franz Liszt: correspondance (Paris, 1987)
H.R. Jung, ed.: Franz Liszt in seinen Briefen (Berlin, 1987)
H. Kesting, ed.: Franz Liszt-Richard Wagner Briefwechsel (Frankfurt, 1988)
M. Eckhardt, ed.: Liszt Ferenc válogatott levelei: ifjúság – virtuóz évek – Weimar (1824-1861) [Selected letters of Franz Liszt: youth – the virtuoso years – Weimar] (Budapest, 1989)
K. Hamburger, ed.: Franz Liszt: lettres à Cosima et à Daniela (Liège, 1996)
P. Pocknell, ed.: 'Franz Liszt: Fifteen Autograph Letters (1841-1883)', Journal of the American Liszt Society, no.39 (1996) [whole issue]

D: OTHER CORRESPONDENCE

La Mara, ed.: Briefe von Hector Berlioz an die Fürstin Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein (Leipzig, 1903)
R. Wagner: Briefe an Hans von Bülow (Jena, 1916)
S. Joubert, ed.: Une correspondance romantique: Madame d'Agoult, Liszt, Henri Lehmann (Paris, 1947)
A. Troisier de Diaz, ed.: Emile Ollivier et Carolyne de Sayn-Wittgenstein: correspondance, 1858–1887 (Paris, 1984)
C. Dupêchez, ed.: Marie d'Agoult-George Sand: correspondance (Paris, 1995)
A. Williams, ed. and trans.: Franz Liszt: Selected Letters (Oxford, 1999)

E: MEMOIRS, RECOLLECTIONS AND REMINISCENCES

G. Sand: Lettres d'un voyageur (Paris, 1837, many later edns)
G. Sand: Histoire de ma vie, xx (Paris, 1854–5, many later edns)

G. Eliot: 'Three Months in Weimar', Fraser's Magazine, li (1855), 699–706

G. Eliot: 'Liszt, Wagner, and Weimar', Fraser's Magazine, lii (1855), 48–62

W. von Lenz: Die grossen Pianoforte-virtuosen unserer Zeit (Berlin, 1872)

D. Stern [M. d'Agoult]: Mes souvenirs, 1806–33 (Paris, 1877); ed. C. Dupêchez (Paris, 1990)

D. Stern [M. d'Agoult]: Mémoires, 1833–1854, ed. D. Ollivier (Paris, 1927/R), ed. C. Dupêchez (Paris, 1990)

A. Fay: Music-Study in Germany, ed. M. Fay Peirce (Chicago, 1880/R, many later edns)

J. Wohl: François Liszt: souvenirs d'une compatriote (Paris, 1887; Eng. trans., 1887)

A. Marmontel: Les pianistes célèbres (Paris, 1887), 303–22

B. Walker: My Musical Experiences (London, 1890)

A. Habets, ed.: Borodine et Liszt (Paris, 1893; Eng. trans., 1895)

C.E and M. Hallé, eds.: Life and Letters of Sir Charles Hallé (London, 1896; abridged 1972 by M. Kennedy as The Autobiography of Charles Hallé)

J. Vianna da Motta: Einige Beobachtungen über Franz Liszt (Munich, 1898)

W. Weissheimer: Erlebnisse mit Richard Wagner, Franz Liszt und vielen anderen Zeitgenossen nebst deren Briefen (Stuttgart, 1898)

W. Mason: Memories of a Musical Life (New York, 1901)

C. Salaman: 'Pianists of the Past', Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, clxx (1901), 307–50

E. Sauer: Meine Welt (Stuttgart, 1901)

A. von Schorn, ed.: Zwei Menschenalter: Erinnerungen und Briefe (Berlin, 1901, 2/1913)

La Mara [M. Lipsius], ed.: Aus der Glanzzeit der Weimarer Altenburg: Bilder und Briefe aus dem Leben der Fürstin Carolyne von Sayn-Wittgenstein (Leipzig, 1906)

A.W. Gottschalg: Franz Liszt in Weimar und seine letzten Lebensjahre: Erinnerungen und Tagebuchnotizen (Berlin, 1910) [with 48 letters by Liszt]

C. Wagner: Franz Liszt: ein Gedenkblatt von seiner Tochter (Munich, 1911)

K. von Schlözer: Römische Briefe, 1864–1869 (Stuttgart, 1913)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Durch Musik und Leben im Dienste des Ideals, ii (Leipzig, 1917)

L. de Hegermann-Lindencrone: In the Courts of Memory (New York, 1925)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: An der Schwelle des Jenseits (Leipzig, 1925)

V. Boissier: Liszt pédagogue (Paris, 1927/R; Eng. trans., 1974)

M. Herwegh: Au printemps des dieux (Paris, 1930)

G. Végh, ed.: 'Liszt Ferenc kiadatlan naplója' [Ferenc Liszt's unpublished diary: memento journalier, 1861–1862], Muzsika (Budapest), ii/1–2 (1930), 22–33

M. Herwegh: Au banquet des dieux (Paris, 1931)

M. Herwegh: Au soir des dieux (Paris, 1931)

B. Kellermann: Erinnerungen: ein Künstlerleben, ed. S. Hausmann and H. Kellermann (Zürich, 1932)

A. Apponyi: Erlebnisse und Ergebnisse (Berlin, 1933; Eng. trans., 1935, as The Memoirs of Count Apponyi)

R. Bory: Liszt et ses enfants, Blandine, Cosima & Daniel (Paris, 1936)

T. Walter: Liszt Ferenc árvizi hangversenyei Bécsben, 1838–9 [Liszt's charity concerts in Vienna, 1838–9, after the flood in Hungary], ed. Béla Csuka (Budapest, 1941)

F. Lamond: Memoirs (Glasgow, 1949), 63–75

J. Vier: François Liszt, l'artiste – le clerc: documents inédits (Paris, 1950)

P. Benary: 'Liszt und Wagner in Briefen der Fürstin von Wittgenstein', Mf, xii (1959), 468–73

A. Friedheim: Life and Liszt: the Recollections of a Concert Pianist (New York, 1961)

H. Weilguny: Das Lisztbaus in Weimar (Weimar, 1963) [incl. Borodin's recollections of Liszt]

C. Czerny: Erinnerungen aus meinem Leben (Baden-Baden, 1968)

W. Jerger: Franz Liszts Klavierunterricht von 1884–1886 dargestellt an den Tagebuchaufzeichnungen von August Göllerich (Regensburg, 1975; Eng. trans., rev., 1996)

M. Eckhardt, ed.: 'Diary of a Wayfarer: the Wanderings of Franz Liszt and Marie d'Agoult in Switzerland, June–July 1835', Journal of the American Liszt Society, xi (1982), 10–17 [based on Liszt's personal diary of the time]

L. Ramann: Lisztiana: Erinnerungen an Franz Liszt in Tagebuchblättern, Briefen und Dokumenten aus den Jahren 1873–1886/87, ed. A. Seidl and F. Schnapp (Mainz, 1983)

D. Altenburg and R. Kleinertz, eds.: Franz Liszt: Tagebuch, 1827 (Bayreuth, 1986)

A. Williams, ed: Portrait of Liszt, by Himself and his Contemporaries (London, 1990)

A. Walker, ed.: Living with Liszt: from the Diary of Carl Lachmund, an American Pupil of Liszt, 1882–84 (Stuyvesant, NY, 1995, 2/1998)

F: LISZT AS AUTHOR

E. Haraszti: 'Franz Liszt: Author Despite Himself', MQ, xxxiii (1947), 490–516

M. Eckhardt: 'New Documents on Liszt as Author', New Hungarian Quarterly, no.95 (1984), 181–94

A. Walker: 'The Scribe of Weimar', Franz Liszt: the Weimar Years (New York, 1989), 368–96

C. Suttoni: 'Liszt the Writer', Liszt & the Arts: a Collection of Papers Presented at a Liszt Centennial Celebration ... Columbia University (New York, 1996), 64–73

G: FOLKLORISTIC STUDIES

S. Brassai: Magyar-vagy Czigány-Zene? Elmefuttatás Liszt Ferencz 'Czigányokról' in Könyve felett [Hungarian or gypsy music? Reflections on Franz Liszt's book 'On the Gypsies'] (Kolozsvár, 1860)

E. Haraszti: 'La question tzigane-hongroise', IMSCR I: Liège 1930, 140–45

Z. Gárdonyi: Die ungarischen Stileigentümlichkeiten in den musikalischen Werken Franz Liszts (diss., U. of Berlin, 1931)

Z. Gárdonyi: Liszt Ferenc magyar stilusa/Le style hongroise de François Liszt (Budapest, 1936)

B. Bartók: 'Gypsy Music or Hungarian Music?', MQ, xxxiii (1947), 240–57

B. Sárosi: Cigányzene [Gypsy music] (Budapest, 1971), 141–51

B. Bartók: 'Liszt Problems', Béla Bartók Essays, ed. B. Suchoff (London, 1976), 501–10

Liszt und die Nationalitäten: Eisenstadt 1994

H: BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES

J.W. Christern: Franz Liszt, nach seinem Leben und Werke, aus authentischen Berichten dargestellt (Hamburg, 1841)

L. Rellstab: Franz Liszt: Beurtheilungen–Berichte–Lebensskizze (Berlin, 1842; 2/1861)

G. Schilling: Franz Liszt: sein Leben und Wirken aus nächster Beschauung (Stuttgart, 1844)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Musikalische Studienköpfe, i (Leipzig, 1868, enlarged 2/1875–82) [many edns to 1913], 233–75

J. Schubert: Franz Liszts Biographie (Leipzig, 1871)

L. Ramann: Franz Liszt als Künstler und Mensch, i–iii (Leipzig, 1880–94; vol.i, Eng. trans. 1882)

O. Lessmann: Franz Liszt: eine Charakterstudie (Berlin, 1881)

L. Nohl: Liszt, i (Leipzig, 1882; Eng. trans., 1884/R, as Life of Liszt)

R. Pohl: Franz Liszt, Gesammelte Schriften über Musik und Musiker, ii (Leipzig, 1883/R)

O. Lessmann: Franz Liszt: eine Huldigung (New York, 1883)

R. Ledos de Beaufort: Franz Liszt: the Story of his Life (Boston, 1886, 2/1910) [incl. N. Helbig: 'Franz Liszt in Rome', 207–25]

A. Göllerich: Liszt, ii (Leipzig, 1887) [completion of Nohl, 1882]

B. Vogel: Franz Liszt: Abriss seines Lebens und Würdigung seiner Werke (Leipzig, 1888)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Classisches und Romantisches aus der Tonwelt (Leipzig, 1892)

O. Lüning: Franz Liszt: ein Apostel der Ideale (Zürich, 1896)

A. Hahn: Franz Liszt: sein Leben und seine Werke (Frankfurt, 1898)

E. Reuss: Franz Liszt (Leipzig, 1898)

R. Louis: Franz Liszt, Vorkämpfer des Jahrhunderts, ii (Berlin, 1900)

C. Bache: Brother Musicians: Reminiscences of Edward and Walter Bache (London, 1901)

M.D. Calvocoressi: Franz Liszt: biographie critique (Paris, 1905)

A. Göllerich: Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1908)

J. Kapp: Richard Wagner und Franz Liszt: eine Freundschaft (Berlin, 1908)

J. Kapp: Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1909, 20/1924)

J. Chantavoine: Liszt (Paris, 1910, 4/1920/R)

J. Kapp: Liszt-Brevier (Leipzig, 1910)

J.G. Huneker: Franz Liszt (New York, 1911/R)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Franz Liszt (Leipzig, 1911)

La Mara [M. Lipsius]: Liszt und die Frauen (Leipzig, 1911, 2/1919)
A. Sallès: Le centenaire de Liszt: Liszt à Lyon (Paris, 1911)
A. von Schorn: Das nachklassische Weimar (Weimar, 1911–12)
H. Thode: Franz Liszt (Heidelberg, 1911)
P. Bekker: Franz Liszt (Bielefeld, 1912)
J. Kapp: 'Hector Berlioz über Franz Liszt', Der Merker, iv (1912–13), 86–9
G. Hollitzer: Liszt Ferenc és a weimari irodalmi élet [Franz Liszt and the literary life of Weimar] (Budapest, 1913)
La Mara [M. Lipsius]: 'Beethovens Weihekuss', AMz, xl (1913), 544–6
J. Kapp: 'Franz Liszt und Robert Schumann', Die Musik, xiii/2 (1913–14), 67–85
P. Raabe: Grossherzog Carl Alexander und Liszt (Leipzig, 1918)
A. Mackenzie: Liszt (London, 1922)
R. Bory: Une retraite romantique en Suisse: Liszt et la Comtesse d'Agoult (Geneva, 1923, 2/1930)
K. Grunsky: Franz Liszt (Leipzig, 1924)
G. de Pourtalès: La vie de Franz Liszt (Paris, 1925, 2/1950; Eng. trans., 1926)
W. Wallace: Liszt, Wagner and the Princess (London and New York, 1927)
C. van Wessem: Franz Liszt (The Hague, 1927)
P. Raabe: Franz Liszt (Stuttgart, 1931; 2/1968)
E. Newman: The Life of Richard Wagner (London, 1933–47/R)
E. Newman: The Man Liszt: a Study of the Tragi-Comedy of a Soul Divided Against Itself (London, 1934/R)
S. Sitwell: Liszt (London, 1934, 2/1955/R)
H. Engel: Franz Liszt (Potsdam, 1936)
E. Haraszti: 'Liszt à Paris: quelques documents inédits', ReM, nos.162–5 (1936), 241–58
A. Hevesy: Liszt, ou Le roi Lear de la musique (Paris, 1936)
L. Nowak: Franz Liszt (Innsbruck, 1936)
B. Ollivier: Liszt: le musicien passionné (Paris, 1936)
E. Haraszti: 'Deux franciscains: Adam et Franz Liszt', ReM, nos.171–4 (1937), 269–71
P. Raabe: Deutsche Meister (Regensburg, 1937), 28–57
M. Tibaldi Chiesa: Vita romantica di Liszt (Milan, 1937, 2/1941)
P. Raabe: Wege zu Liszt (Regensburg, 1943)
C. Gray: Contingencies and Other Essays (London, 1947)
A.M. Pols: Franz Liszt (Bloemendaal, 1951)
I. Revesz: 'Liszt es Lamennais', ZT, i (1953), 115–23
T. Marix-Spire: Les romantiques et la musique: le cas George Sand (Paris, 1954)
B. Voelcker: Franz Liszt, der grosse Mensch (Weimar, 1955)
J. Vier: La comtesse d'Agoult et son temps (Paris, 1955–63)
I. Csekey: Liszt Ferenc Baranyában [Liszt in Baranya] (Pécs, 1956)
Y.I. Mil'shteyn: F. List (Moscow, 1956, 2/1971; Hung. trans., 1965)
W. Serauky: 'Robert Schumann in seinem Verhältnis zu Ludwig van Beethoven und Franz Liszt', Robert Schumann: aus Anlass seines 100. Todestages, ed. H.J. Moser and E. Rebling (Leipzig, 1956), 68–72
C. Haldane: The Galley Slaves of Love: the Story of Marie d'Agoult and Franz Liszt (London, 1957)
I. Csekey: 'Franz Liszt in Pécs (Fünfkirchen)', Mf, xi (1958), 69–75
J. Hecker: Die Altenburg: Geschichte eines Hauses (Weimar, 1961, 2/1983)
G. Kraft: Franz Liszt: Leben, Werk, und Vermächtnis (Weimar, 1961)
P. Rehberg and G. Nestler: Franz Liszt (Zürich, 1961)
Z. László: Az ifjú Liszt (1811–1839) [The young Liszt] (Budapest, 1962)
SM, iv (1963) [Liszt-Bartók issue]
T. Balan: Franz Liszt (Bucharest, 1963)
K. Hamburger: Liszt Ferenc (Budapest, 1966; Ger. trans., 1973, 2/1987; Eng. trans., 1987)
E. Haraszti: Franz Liszt (Paris, 1967)
E. Horvath: Frauen um Franz Liszt (Eisenstadt, 1971)
E. Perényi: Liszt: the Artist as Romantic Hero (Boston, 1974)
D. Legány: Liszt Ferenc Magyarországon [Liszt and his country], i: 1869–1873 (Budapest, 1976; Eng. trans., 1983); ii: 1874–1886 (Budapest, 1986; Eng. trans., 1992)
R. Stevenson: 'Liszt at Madrid and Lisbon: 1844–45', MQ, lxv (1979), 493–512
Z. Dömötör, M. Kovács and I. Mona: Liszt tanulmányok [Liszt studies] (Budapest, 1980)
B. Gavoty: Liszt: le virtuose, 1811–1848 (Paris, 1980)
A. Walker: Franz Liszt, i: The Virtuoso Years, 1811–1847 (New York and London, 1983, 2/1990); ii: The Weimar Years, 1848–1861 (New York and London, 1989); iii: The Final Years, 1861–1886 (New York, 1996; London, 1997)
C. Rueger: Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1986)
A. Rosenthal: 'Franz Liszt and his Publishers', Liszt saeculum, xxxviii (1986), 3–40
L. Chiappari: Franz Liszt: la vita, l'artista, l'uomo (Novara, 1987)
P.-A. Huré and C. Knepper, eds.: Liszt et son temps (Paris, 1987)
C. Dupêchez: Marie d'Agoult, 1805–1876: le grand amour de Liszt (Paris, 1989, 2/1994)
S. Gut: Franz Liszt (Paris, 1989)
R. Haschen: Franz Liszt (Berlin, 1989)
D. Watson: Liszt (London, 1989)
P. Scholcz and C. Lelie: Franz Liszt in Amsterdam (Vinkeveen, 1991) [programme book]
A. Walker and G. Erasmi: Liszt, Carolyne and the Vatican: the Story of a Thwarted Marriage (Stuyvesant, NY, 1991)
E. Baeck and H. Baeck-Schilders: Liszt in Antwerp (Vinkeveen, 1996) [programme book]

I: ANALYSIS AND CRITICISM

(i) piano music

F. Busoni: 'Die Ausgaben der Liszt'schen Klavierwerke', AMz, xxvii (1900), 457–8, 506, 584–6; repr. in F. Busoni: Von der Einheit der Musik (Berlin, 1922), 45–67; Eng. trans. in The Essence of Music and Other Papers (London, 1957/R), 1539–54
Liszt-Pädagogium: Klavier-Kompositionen Franz Liszts nebst unedritierten Veränderungen, Zusätzen und Kadenzen nach des Meisters Lehre pädagogisch glossiert (Leipzig, 1902/R1986, with foreword by A. Brendel)
H. Arminski: Die ungarischen Phantasien von Franz Liszt (diss., U. of Vienna, 1929)
H. Dobiey: Die Klaviertechnik des jungen Franz Liszts (diss., U. of Berlin, 1932)
W. Howard: Franz Liszt: Rhapsodie Nr.5, ein Kapitel Romantik (Berlin, 1932)
I. Philipp: La technique de Liszt (Paris, 1932)
R. Kókai: Franz Liszt in seinen frühen Klavierwerken (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1933)
H. Landau: Die Neuerungen der Klaviertechnik bei Franz Liszt (diss., U. of Vienna, 1933)
R. Klasinc: Die konzertante Klaviersatztechnik seit Liszt (diss., U. of Vienna, 1934)
W. Rüsch: Franz Liszts Années de pèlerinage: Beiträge zur Geschichte seiner Persönlichkeit und seines Stiles (diss., U. of Zürich, 1934)
H. Westerby: Liszt, Composer, and his Piano Works (London, 1936/R)
D. Presser: Studien zu den Opern- und Liedbearbeitungen von Franz Liszt (diss., U. of Cologne, 1953)
A. Walker, ed.: Franz Liszt: the Man and his Music (London, 1970, 2/1976) [incl. L. Kentner: 'Solo Piano Music (1827–61)', 79–133; 'The Interpretation of Liszt's Piano Music', 202–20; J. Ogdon: 'Solo Piano Music (1861–86)', 134–67; D. Wilde: 'Transcriptions for Piano']
C. Suttoni: Piano and Opera: a Study of the Piano Fantasies Written on Opera Themes in the Romantic Era (diss., U. of New York, 1973)
I. Kecskeméti: 'Two Liszt Discoveries – 1: an Unknown Piano Piece', MT, cxv (1974), 646–8
R.M. Longyear: 'The Text of Liszt's B minor Sonata', MQ, lx (1974), 435–50
A. Brendel: Musical Thoughts and Afterthoughts (London, 1976), 77–103
E. Hilmar: 'Kritische Betrachtungen zu Liszts Transcriptionen von Liedern von Franz Schubert: Allgemeines und Spezielles zur Niederschrift des "Schwanengesangs"', Liszt-Studien, i (1997), 115–23
S. Winklhofer: 'Liszt, Marie d'Agoult, and the "Dante" Sonata', 19CM, i (1977–8), 15–32
S. Winklhofer: Liszt's Sonata in B minor: a Study of Autograph Sources and Documents (Ann Arbor, 1978, 2/1980)
A. Main: 'Liszt's Lyon: Music and the Social Conscience', 19CM, iv (1980–81), 228–43
J. Drillon: Liszt Transcripteur, ou, La charité bien ordonnée (Arles, 1986)
G. Winkler: 'Noch einmal: Franz Liszts "XX. Ungarische Rhapsodie": Rekonstruktion einer Unterstellung', Burgenländische Heimathblätter, xl (1986), 176–84

A. Forte: 'Liszt's Experimental Idiom and the Music of the Early Twentieth Century', 19CM, x (1987), 209–28
R.L. Todd: 'The "Unwelcome Guest" Regaled: Franz Liszt and the Augmented Triad', 19CM, xii (1988), 93–115
A. Brendel: Music Sounded Out (London, 1990), 154–85
A. Kaczmarczyk: 'The Genesis of the Funérailles: the Connections Between Liszt's Symphonie révolutionnaire and the Cycle Harmonies poétiques et religieuses', SMH, xxxv (1993–4), 362–98
M. Saffle: Liszt in Germany, 1840–1845: a Study in Sources, Documents, and the History of Reception (Stuyvesant, NY, 1994)
Z. Domokos: '"Orchestrationen des Pianoforte": Beethovens Symphonien in Transkriptionen von Franz Liszt und seinen Vorgängern', SMH, xxxvii/2–4 (1996), 249–341
K. Hamilton: Liszt: Sonata in B minor (Cambridge, 1996)
D.B. Cannata: 'Perception and Apperception in Liszt's Late Piano Music', JM, xv/2 (1997), 178–207

(ii) orchestral music

R. Wagner: Ein Brief über Liszts symphonische Dichtungen (Leipzig, 1857)
F. Draeseke: Liszts symphonische Dichtungen, Anregungen für Kunst und Wissenschaft, ii (1857); iii (1858)
F. Brendel: Franz Liszt als Symphoniker (Leipzig, 1859)
F. Draeseke: 'Liszts Dante-Symphonie', NZM, liii (1860), 193–6, 201–4, 213–15, 221–3
A. Hahn: Franz Liszt: Symphonische Dichtungen, mit einer Einleitung von P. Pochhammer (Berlin, 1910)
A. Huess: 'Eine motivisch-thematische Studie über Liszts sinfonische Dichtung "Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne"', ZIMG, xiii (1911–12), 10–21
P. Raabe: Die Entstehungsgeschichte der ersten Orchesterwerke Franz Liszts (Leipzig, 1916)
E. Haraszti: 'Les origines de l'orchestration de Franz Liszt', RdM, xxxi (1952), 81–100
E. Haraszti: 'Genèse des Préludes de Liszt qui n'ont aucun rapport avec Lamartine', RdM, xxxii (1953), 111–40
G. Króo: 'Gemeinsame Formprobleme in den Klavierkonzerten von Schumann und Liszt', Robert Schumann: aus Anlass seines 100. Todestages, ed. H.J. Moser and E. Rebling (Leipzig, 1956), 136–43
B. Szabolcsi: Liszt Ferenc estéje [The twilight of Ferenc Liszt] (Budapest, 1956; Eng. trans., 1959/R)
L. Somfai: 'Die musikalischen Gestaltwandlungen der Faust-Symphonie von Liszt', SMH, ii (1962), 87–137
W. Felix: 'Liszts Schaffen um 1848: Versuch zur Deutung seiner Programmatik', Liszt-Bartók: Budapest 1961, 59–67
L. Somfai: 'Die Metamorphose der "Faust-Symphonie" von Liszt', Liszt-Bartók: Budapest 1961, 283–93
A. Walker, ed.: Franz Liszt: the Man and his Music (London, 1970, 2/1976) [incl. H. Searle: 'The Orchestral Works', 279–317; R. Collet: 'Works for Piano and Orchestra', 248–78]
A. Main: 'Liszt after Lamartine: "Les Préludes"', ML, lx (1979), 133–48
A. Bonner: 'Liszt's "Les Préludes" and "Les quatre éléments": a Reinvestigation', 19CM, x (1986), 95–107
R. Charnin Mueller: Liszt's 'Tasso' Sketchbook: Studies in Sources and Revisions (diss., U. of New York, 1986)
K. Johns: The Symphonic Poems of Franz Liszt (Stuyvesant, NY, 1997)
P. Pocknell: 'Liszts Klavierbearbeitung eines Themas aus den Idealen: zur Geschichte eines Autographs', Liszt und die Weimarer Klassik, ed. D. Altenburg (Laaber, 1997), 115–32

(iii) songs

E. Reuss: Liszts Lieder (Leipzig, 1907)
E. Hughes: 'Liszt as Lieder Composer', MQ, iii (1917), 390–409
J. Wenz: Franz Liszt als Liederkomponist (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1921)
M. Cooper: 'Liszt as a Song Writer', ML, xix (1938), 171–81
C. Headington: 'The Songs', Franz Liszt: the Man and his Music, ed. A. Walker (London, 1970, 2/1976), 221–47
I. Kecskeméti: 'Two Liszt Discoveries – 2: an Unknown Song', MT, cxv (1974), 743–4
W.J. Dart: 'Revisions and Reworkings in the Lieder of Franz Liszt', SMA, ix (1975), 41–53
S. Montu-Berthon: 'Un Liszt méconnu: mélodies et lieder', ReM, nos.342–4, 345–6 (1981) [Liszt issue in 2 vols.]
P. Friedheim: 'First Version, Second Version, Alternative Version: some Remarks on the Music of Liszt', MR, xliv (1983), 194–202
J. Douglas: 'Franz Liszt as a Song Composer', NATS Journal, xliii/4 (1986–7), 4–15
R. Charnin Mueller: 'Reevaluating the Liszt Chronology: the Case of Anfangs wollt ich fast verzagen', 19CM, xii (1987–8), 132–47
A. Walker: 'Liszt and the Lied', Hungarian Quarterly, no.144 (1996), 155–9

(iv) choral music

L. Ramann: Liszt als Psalmensänger (Leipzig, 1886)
La Mara [M. Lipsius]: 'Franz Liszt und sein unvollendetes Stanislaus-Oratorium', Österreichische Rundschau, xxix (1911), 150–57
E. Segnitz: Franz Liszts Kirchenmusik (Langensalza, 1911)
H. Sambeth: Die gregorianischen Melodien in den Werken Franz Liszts (diss., U. of Münster, 1923)
R. Collet: 'Choral and Organ Music', Franz Liszt: the Man and his Music, ed. A. Walker (London, 1970, 2/1976), 318–49
P. Merrick: Revolution and Religion in the Music of Liszt (Cambridge, 1987)
M. Eckhardt: 'Zur Werkgeschichte der Psalmen 23 und 137 Franz Liszts', Das Goethe- und Schiller-Archiv 1896–1996: Beiträge aus dem ältesten deutschen Literaturarchiv, ed. J. Golz (Weimar, 1996), 353–72
P. Munson: 'The Librettos for Liszt's Oratorio "St Stanislaus"', ML, lxxvii (1997), 532–50

J: OTHER STUDIES

F. von Schober: Briefe über F. Liszt's Aufenthalt in Ungarn (Berlin, 1843)
E. Segnitz: Franz Liszt und Rom (Leipzig, 1901)
G. Galston: Studienbuch (Berlin, 1910, 2/1926)
J. Kapp: Franz Liszt und die Frauen (Leipzig, 1911)
P. Roberts: Etudes sur Boieldieu, Chopin et Liszt (Rouen, 1913)
A. Schering: 'Über Liszts Persönlichkeit und Kunst', JbMP 1926, 31–44
ReM, ix/7 (1927–8) [Liszt issue]
W. Danckert: 'Liszt als Vorläufer des musikalischen Impressionismus', Die Musik, xxi (1928–9), 341–4
J. Heinrichs: Über den Sinn der Lisztschen Programmusik (diss., U. of Bonn, 1929)
W. Howard: Liszts Bearbeitung des 'Cujus Animam' aus dem Stabat Mater von Rossini (Berlin, 1935)
MQ, xxii/3 (1936) [Liszt issue]
B. Bartók, I. Hubay and others: Liszt a miénk! [Liszt is ours!] (Budapest, 1936)
B. Bartók: Liszt-problémák (Budapest, 1936)
Z. Gárdonyi: Liszt Ferenc magyar stilusa/Le style hongrois de François Liszt (Budapest, 1936)
A. Molnár: Liszt Ferenc alkotásai az esztétika tükrében [Liszt's compositions in the light of aesthetics] (Budapest, 1936)
K.T. Bayer: 'Franz Liszt in der Dichtung', Deutsche Musikkultur, i (1936–7), 226–32, 285 –96
E. Haraszti: 'Le problème Liszt', AcM, ix (1937), 123–36; x (1938), 14–31
B. de Miramon Fitz-James: 'Liszt et La divine comédie', RdM, xix (1938), 81–93
E. Major: Liszt Ferenc és a magyar zenetörtenet [Liszt and Hungarian music history] (Budapest, 1940)
A. Toth: Liszt Ferenc a magyar zene utjan [Liszt along the path of Hungarian music] (Budapest, 1940)
A. Einstein: 'Franz Liszt: écrivain et penseur', RdM, xxiii (1944), 12–24
P.B. Reis: Liszt na sua passagem por Lisboa em 1845 (Lisbon, 1945)
B. Bartók: 'Gypsy Music or Hungarian Music?', MQ, xxxiii (1947), 240–57
B. Paillard and E. Haraszti: 'Franz Liszt and Richard Wagner in the Franco-German War of 1870', MQ, xxxv (1949), 386–411
E. Haraszti: 'Un romantique déguisé en tzigane', RBM, vii (1953), 26–39, 69–94
F. Noske: La mélodie française de Berlioz à Duparc (Amsterdam and Paris, 1954; Eng. trans., rev. R. Benton and F. Noske, 1970/R)
ZT, iii (1955) [Liszt-Bartók issue]
D. Berthoud: Davila: fils de Liszt? (Neuchâtel, 1956)
W. Felix: 'Die Reformideen Franz Liszts', Festschrift Richard Münnich zum achtzigsten Gerburtstage (Leipzig, 1957), 104–15
G. Kraft: 'Franz Liszt und die nationalen Schulen in Europa', Festschrift Richard Münnich zum achtzigsten Gerburtstage (Leipzig, 1957), 85–103
New Hungarian Quarterly, no.7 (1962) [Liszt-Bartók issue]
I. Kecskeméti: 'Unbekannte Eigenschrift der XVIII. Rhapsodie von Franz Liszt', SMH, iii (1962), 173–9

Bericht über die zweite internationale musikwissenschaftliche Konferenz Liszt-Bartók (Budapest, 1963)
Z. Gárdonyi: 'Neue Tonleiter und Sequenztypen in Liszts Frühwerken', SMH, xi (1969), 169–99
S. Gut: Franz Liszt: les éléments du langage musical (Paris, 1975)
L. Bárdos: Liszt Ferenc a jövö zénesze [Liszt the innovator] (Budapest, 1976)
A. Holschneider: Was bedeutet uns Franz Liszt? (Göttingen, 1977)
D. Legány: 'Liszt in Rom – nach der Presse', SM, xix (1977), 85–107
V. Jankélévitch: Liszt et la rhapsodie: essai sur la virtuosité (Paris, 1979, 2/1989)
A. Walker: 'Schumann, Liszt and the C major Fantasie, op.17: a Declining Relationship', ML, lx (1979), 156–65
W. Handrick: Das Liszthaus in Weimar (Weimar, 1980)
J.R. Turner: 'Nineteenth-century Autograph Music Manuscripts in the Pierpont Morgan Library: a Check List', 19CM, iv (1981), 49–69, 157–83
W. Huschke: Musik im klassischen und nachklassischen Weimar, 1756–1861 (Weimar, 1982)
P. Autexier: Mozart & Liszt sub rosa (Poitiers, 1984)
D. Legány: Franz Liszt: Unbekannte Presse und Briefe aus Wien, 1822–1886 (Budapest, 1984)
D. Redepenning: Das Spätwerk Franz Liszts: Bearbeitungen eigener Kompositionen (Hamburg, 1984)
W. Marggraf: Franz Liszt in Weimar (Weimar, 1985)
Ferenc Liszt: Budapest and Veszprém 1986 [SM, xxviii (1986)]
Franz Liszt: Paris 1986 [ReM, nos.405–7 (1987)]
K. Hamburger: Liszt kalauz [Liszt guide] (Budapest, 1986)
H. Rain: Les enfants du génie: Blandine, Cosima et Daniel Liszt (Paris, 1986)
Silences, no.3 (Paris, 1986) [Liszt centenary issue]
J. Kárpáti: Ferenc Liszt Academy of Music (Budapest, 1989)
D.I. Allsobrook: Liszt: my Travelling Circus Life (London, 1991)
R. Charnin Mueller: 'Sketches, Drafts and Revisions: Liszt at Work', Wissenschaftliche Arbeiten aus dem Burgenland: Die Projekte der Liszt-Forschung (1991), 22–34
R. Stricker: Franz Liszt: les ténèbres de la gloire (Paris, 1993)
P. Pocknell: 'Liszt, the Klindworths, and Austro-Hungarian Affairs', Hungarian Quarterly, no.143 (1996), 132–49
M. Haine: Franz Servais et Franz Liszt: une amitié filiale, (Liége, 1996)
M. Saffle and J. Deauville, eds.: New Light on Liszt and his Music: Essays in Honour of Alan Walker's 65th Birthday (Stuyvesant, NY, 1997) [incl. essays by D. Legány, C. Suttoni, M. Eckhardt, D. Wilde and others]

K: SPECIALIST PUBLICATIONS

International Liszt Centre Quarterly (1972–8); continued as Liszt saeculum (1978–)
The Liszt Society Journal [London] (1975–)
Europäisches Liszt-Symposion: Eisenstadt 1975, 1978, 1983; Vienna 1991 [Liszt-Studien, i–iv (1977–93)]
Journal of the American Liszt Society (1977–)
Liszt-Bulletin (1979–87); continued as Bulletin van de Stichting Franz Liszt Kring (1987–91); continued as Journal of the Franz Liszt Kring (1991–)

ALAN WALKER (text, bibliography), MARIA ECKHARDT, RENA CHARNIN MUELLER (work-list)

Liszt societies. The first Liszt Society was formed in Budapest in 1893 and is still active today. For many years it stood alone in the promotion of Liszt's life and work. In 1950 a British Liszt Society was founded with E.J. Dent as president and Humphrey Searle as honorary secretary; other distinguished founding members included William Walton, Constant Lambert and Sacheverell Sitwell. In its early days the British Liszt Society published a number of Liszt's late compositions which at that time were unknown and unavailable. With the revival of interest in the Romantic movement generally, Liszt societies have sprung up in many different countries, including Germany, Italy, France, Sweden, Australia and the United States. There are now about 25 such organizations across the world. The American Liszt Society is particularly active. Formed in 1964, it mounts a major musical festival each year which often features lesser-known works from Liszt's vast output.

A number of Liszt societies publish journals and newsletters. Those of the American and British Liszt societies are important and usually contain articles at the leading edge of Liszt research. An especially valuable publication is the journal of the Franz Liszt Kring of the Netherlands. In 1974 the Budapest Liszt Society launched its Grand Prix du Disque, a prestigious international award conferred annually by a jury of experts on the best recording of works by Liszt.

ALAN WALKER

Li Taixiang [Li Tai-hsiung] (b Malan, Taidong, 20 Feb 1941). Taiwanese composer, violinist and conductor. Born among the indigenous Amei people, he grew up in Taibei, studying the violin at the National Institute of the Arts (1954–62). After graduation he led the Taibei SO. In 1964 he spent some time teaching among the Amei. He took an active part in the burgeoning of contemporary music in the late 1960s, when many of his early compositions were performed. In 1973 he received a Rockefeller Foundation scholarship to the Center for Experimental Music at the University of California at San Diego. During music festivals which he organized in cooperation with the composer Xu Boyun and the choreographer Lin Huaimin, he introduced the prepared piano, electronic music, the laser and other multi-media stage effects to Taiwanese audiences. At the annual festival of his works which he organized between 1978 and 1983, Chuantong yu zhanwang ('Tradition and Future'), he presented music ranging from Classical pastiche and experimental music to film and pop music. Li aims to compose 'new but Chinese' music. In his early piano trio Lianxing sanbian (1971–3) he uses rhythmic structures and vocal techniques (such as microtonal slides) from the Chinese operatic tradition. He also consciously employs elements from the Amei musical tradition. Many features typical of Amei music, such as a tendency towards minimalism and the use of free counterpoint in polyphonic and antiphonal singing, can be found in such works as Dashenji (1975) and Taixuyin (1979).

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Dashenji [Great Sacrifice to the Gods] (ballet), male v, orch, chorus, 1975; Huanyuan [Redeeming the Vow] (op), pipa, vv, ens, tape, 1978; Da feng qi xi [A Strong Wind Rises] (grand op), 1983; Minsheng bian (A Chaper from the Book of Songs) (ballet), Chin. insts, perc, 8 pf, 1983; Qiwang [King of Chess] (grand op), 1987; many film scores

Orch: Chunwang [Spring Hopes], nanhu, orch, 1986; Du Fu meng Li Bai [Du Fu dreams of Li Bai], nanhu, orch, 1986; Jiuge [Wine Song], huqin, orch, 1986

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, vn, 1962; Str Qt, 1965; Su [Revive], str qt, 1966; Lianxing sanbian [Three Times Connected Movement], pf trio, 1971, rev. 1973; Yu – Chan – Ximending [Rain – Zen – Shopping District], tape, 1975; Qingping yue [Clear and Steady Music], perc, Chin. insts; Taixuyin [Chant of the Great Void] (Lin Lu), ens + vv, 1979; Huanjing: sanzhang [Environment: 3 Pieces], 2 pfmrs, tape, 1981; San shi [3 Patterns], pf qnt, prep pf, elecs, visual effects, 1983; Pf Qt, 1986; Liu shui – Gucuo – Jiujia [Running Water – Remainders of Old – The Bar], 4 xyl

Vocal: Prelude and Fugue, chorus, 1965; Dadi zhi ge [Song of Mother Earth], 1v, perc, tape, 1977

MSS in C.C. Liu Collection, Institute of Chinese Studies, University of Heidelberg

Principal publisher: Council for Cultural Planning and Development, Taibei

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Diao Yuwen: 'Yu Li Taixiang qixiang, gong xiang "yinyue shengyan"' [Enjoy a great banquet of music with Li], Yinyue guantou, no.33 (1985), 34–41

B. Mittler: 'Mirrors and Double Mirrors: the Politics of Identity in New Music from Hong Kong and Taiwan', CHIME, no.9 (1996), 4–44, esp. 16–17
B. Mittler: Dangerous Tunes: the Politics of Chinese Music in Hong Kong, Taiwan and the People's Republic of China since 1949 (Wiesbaden, 1997), 205–13

BARBARA MITTLER

Litaize, Gaston (Gilbert) (b Ménil-sur-Belvitte, Vosges, 11 Aug 1909; d Bruyères, Vosges, 5 Aug 1991). French organist and composer. Blind from birth, he worked with Marty (organ, composition) at the Institut National des Jeunes Aveugles (1926–31), then at the Paris Conservatoire with Dupré (organ), Caussade (fugue), Büsser (composition) and Emmanuel (music history). He won the premiers prix for organ and improvisation (1931), fugue (1933) and composition (1937), then the Prix Rossini for his cantata Fra Angelico (1936) and the second Prix de Rome (1938). He was organist at Notre-Dame-de-la-Croix, Paris (1930), St Genès, Thiers (1932), St Léon-IX, Nancy (1933), Saint Cloud (1934), and finally at St François-Xavier, Paris (1946). He also made concert tours in France, western Europe, the USA and Canada, and made an award-winning disc of Couperin's Messe pour les paroisses. He taught harmony at the Institut National des Jeunes Aveugles (1939), and organ at the St Maur-des-Fossés Conservatoire (1975), where he gained numerous disciples. From 1944 to 1975 he was director of religious programmes for the radio, directing five weekly broadcasts, including a Sunday mass, celebrated each week in a different church where he was organist. This experience spawned numerous works based on liturgical plainchant.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Launay: 'Les oeuvres pour orgue de Gaston Litaize', L'Orgue: Cahiers et mémoires, xxxiv (1985), 9–21
F. Sabatier: 'Gaston Litaize', Guide de la musique d'orgue (Paris, 1991)

GILLES CANTAGREL

Litaniae Lauretanae (Lat.: 'the Litany of Loreto'). See LITANY, §5.

Litany (from Lat. litania, letania; Gk. litaneia, from litē: 'prayer'). A prayer form, usually characterized by the announcement of varying invocations (e.g. names of deities or saints) or supplications (Lat. deprecationes, preces etc.) by a leader, each of which is followed by a fixed congregational response. This genre may be distinguished from other responsorial forms by the relative brevity, sometimes parity, of the call and response elements, giving it something of an insistent quality. Often quite rhythmic, litanies frequently accompany processions. Thus the term can signify the procession itself or the day upon which the procession occurs.

1. Judaism and pagan antiquity. 2. Early and Eastern Christianity. 3. Litanies in non-Roman Western liturgies. 4. Monophonic litanies in the Roman liturgy. 5. Litaniae Lauretanae. 6. Polyphonic litanies before 1600. 7. Polyphonic litanies after 1600. 8. English litanies.

1. JUDAISM AND PAGAN ANTIQUITY. No generic term exists in biblical Hebrew for 'litany', and the two occurrences of the Greek 'litaneia' in the Septuagint (2 Maccabees iii.20, x.16) are not references to this prayer genre. It is nevertheless possible to identify litanic patterns in the Old Testament, for example in Psalm cxxxvi and Daniel iii.52–90. Notable extra-biblical litanies include the seliḥot – prayers often in litany form originally composed for Yom kippur and other fast days and based on the string of divine attributions in Exodus xxxiv.6–7; and the hosha'not – litanies (originally prayers for rain) for the Feast of Tabernacles, used to accompany a procession around the Temple altar. Both seliḥot and hosha'not were later employed in the Synagogue. (See JEWISH MUSIC, §III, 1.)

A few litanic texts have survived from ancient traditions independent of Judaism, notably Babylonian (see S. Langdon: Babylonian Liturgies, Paris, 1913) and Egyptian (see A. Scharff: Aegyptische Sonnenlieder, Berlin, 1922). Epictetus (*c*55–*c*135 CE) used the phrase 'Kyrie eleison' in his instruction on divination (Discourses, ii.7) and Lactantius (*c*250–*c*325) referred to a prayer recited by the soldiers of Licinius (d 325) that included refrains such as 'te rogamus' and 'tibi commendamus' (De mortibus persecutorum, xlvi.6). The distinction between a repeating ACCLAMATION, a form commonly found in ancient rituals such as the Roman imperial cult (see McCormick), and a litany pattern is, however, not always clear. There is, nevertheless, general agreement that as a specific type within the broader call–response genre, the litany, though fluid in form and often difficult to identify precisely, was probably common in many ancient rituals.

2. EARLY AND EASTERN CHRISTIANITY. The ambiguity surrounding the litany form in antiquity is also true of early Christianity. Neither the term nor the form appears in the New Testament. 1 Timothy ii.1–2 expresses the need for supplication (gk. deēsis), prayer (proseuchē) and intercession (enteuxis) for kings and those in authority, but these terms by no means imply the use of litany forms. In the First Epistle of Clement (*c*96 CE) the word 'ektenē' is used (lix.2) to introduce the prayer in the Eucharist that ends the Epistle, but like 'litaneia' in the Septuagint it does not indicate a litany form. Polycarp (*c*69–*c*155) provided a litany-like instruction about whom to remember in prayer (Epistles, xii.3), but it is not clear whether the prayer itself took the form of a litany. Justin Martyr (*c*100–*c*165) commented on the existence of intercessory prayer at the Eucharist (First Apology, 65), where in later centuries a litany would occur, but again it would be a mistake to conclude that he was referring to a litany. The Acts of Thomas (3rd century) contains two sets of invocations (27, 50) that are litanic in structure but without any set response. Clear evidence for a litany in Christian worship appears only at the end of the 4th century, in the region of Antioch. According to the Apostolic Constitutions (VIII, vi.4, 9) a litany with the response 'Kyrie eleison' was included in the Eucharist, and Egeria noted something similar at evening prayer (Itinerarium, xxiv.5). From this time on, evidence for litanies in Christian worship becomes widespread.

According to Taft there are three litanic types in the Byzantine tradition, all of which had appeared by at least the 4th century and, together with their variations, continue in use to the present day. The synaptē (Gk.: 'joined together') consists of short petitions initiated by the deacon (hence its alternative name diakonika) to which the people respond 'Kyrie eleison'. The synaptē meta tōn aitēseōn ('with requests') or simply aitēsis ('request') is also usually a diakonika, with 'Kyrie eleison' as the response to the first few petitions and the more common 'Grant it, O Lord' thereafter. The aitēsis includes a petition for an 'angel of peace', often at the end, suggesting that this was originally a litany of dismissal. The ektenē ('intense'), being originally sung in stational processions at the various stopping points ('stations') along the route, is also normally led by the deacon and is characterized by a direct address to God and by the triple 'Kyrie eleison' offered by the congregation in response to each petition.

3. LITANIES IN NON-ROMAN WESTERN LITURGIES.

(i) Ambrosian. In the Ambrosian liturgy of Milan, the Gloria immediately following the entrance chant at Mass is replaced on the first five Sundays of Lent by a litany led by the deacon: the Divinae pacis (ed. de Clerck, pp.156–8; music ed. Gajard) with the response 'Domine miserere', on the 1st, 3rd and 5th Sundays; and the Dicamus omnes (ed. de Clerck, pp.206–7) with the response 'Kyrie eleison', on the 2nd and 4th. Both litanies conclude with a congregational triple 'Kyrie eleison' reminiscent of the ektenē. It is noteworthy that in this liturgical tradition the Triduum litaniarum or Minor Litanies are celebrated on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday after – rather than before – the Ascension.

(ii) Celtic. The ancient liturgy of the British Isles, Galicia and Brittany is rich in litanic material. In the Stowe Missal (IRL-Da D.II.3) dating from 792 (with later additions) there is at the beginning of Mass a version of the litany of saints which opens with a triple 'Christe audi nos' and is preceded by a penitential antiphon 'Peccavimus, Domine, peccavimus' (the same material is also found in CH-SGs 1395). Rather than marking the start of public worship, however, it is probable that this litany was part of the priest's private preparation. Later in the same Mass, after the Psalm and before the Gospel, there is a litanic Deprecatio sancti Martini pro populo, whose Latin original de Clerck has dated to the end of the 4th century or beginning of the 5th. Litanies were also a popular form of private devotion, as the 9th-century Book of Cerne and a number of Irish litanies (ed. Plummer) illustrate. None of these Celtic litanies, whether public or private, is notated (see CELTIC CHANT).

(iii) Gallican. The best-known litanic tradition from Gaul is that attributed to St Mamertus (*d c*475), Bishop of Vienne, who, according to his nephew Sidonius Apollinaris (Epistles, v.14), instituted processional liturgies on the three days before the feast of the Ascension when the city was beset by calamity. Characteristically, these litanies include few invocations of saints but instead contain petitions (preces) for the various needs of the community. This popular devotion, later called the Minor Litanies or Rogations, was prescribed for the whole of Gaul by the Council of Orléans in 511 (see PROCESSIONAL, §1); it was adopted in England in 747 by the Council of Clovesho and was introduced at Rome under Leo III (d 816). Other evidence of litanic material in Gallican worship comes from the Council of Vaison in 529, which provides what could be the earliest testimony for the use of 'Kyrie eleison' in Western worship. The Kyrie became a common element in the Gallican Preces, as a few medieval manuscripts (e.g. F-Pn lat.776 and 903) illustrate. (For a list of surviving Preces of Gallican origin, see GALLICAN CHANT, §13.)

(iv) Mozarabic. One of the largest collection of Preces-type litanies is found in the Mozarabic rite (see MOZARABIC CHANT, §3(x); see also Meyer, whose edition contains over 130). On each of the first five Sundays in Lent a different litany, with responses such as 'Miserere et parce populo tuo', was sung between the psalmi (or threni on certain Lenten ferials) and the Epistle. Similar litanies, many of them metrical and some acrostic, appear in the Divine Office on penitential days. Melodies for a few Mozarabic litanies to be used at the burial service survive with decipherable notation in manuscripts from south-west France (see Huglo).

4. MONOPHONIC LITANIES IN THE ROMAN LITURGY. It is thought that Pope Gelasius I (pontificate 492–6) first introduced a litany into the Roman Mass when he apparently replaced the spoken non-litanic intercessory prayers after the Gospel (the orationes sollemnes, which still survive in the Roman Good Friday liturgy) with the Deprecatio Gelasii (ed. de Clerck, 170–72). Earlier evidence of this type of prayer can be found in the Deprecatio sancti Martini pro populo of the Stowe Missal (see §3(ii) above). In its structure and language the Gelasian Deprecatio is related to the aitēsis; 'Domine exaudi et miserere' is the response to the first 14 petitions, 'Praesta, Domine, praesta' to the next four, and there is a concluding petition for an 'angel of peace'.

The biddings of the introductory rite litany were later removed by Gregory the Great (pontificate 590–604), to be replaced by the 'Kyrie' and 'Christe eleison' repetitions that would evolve into the ninefold Kyrie of the Roman rite (Ordo romanus XV, n.16; M. Andrieu: Les Ordines romani du haut moyen âge, Leuven, 1931–61). However, the question of which litany – the Gelasian (as most have assumed) or another one – has not been entirely resolved. Baldovin has suggested that by the 5th century the Roman liturgy had taken over from the Eastern Church the practice of processional liturgy with its accompanying ektenē-style litanies (see §2 above) – certainly by 529 the Council of Vaison seems to have known of this practice – and that it was such an introductory processional litany that Gregory simplified by removing the biddings, the remaining repetitions of 'Kyrie' and 'Christe' (the latter a Western invention; see Gregory, Epistles, ix.26) being eventually regularized into the standard ninefold form, possibly as a reaction against Arianism (see Jungmann, p.187).

Another Roman Mass litany that developed from Eastern Church practice was the Agnus Dei, introduced by the Syrian pope Sergius I (pontificate 687–701). According to the Ordines romani (III, 2) this litany needed to be extended until the fraction was complete; as a result it was often troped, the people responding 'miserere nobis' to the various invocations. With the curtailment of the fraction rite this expandable litany was eventually shortened to three verses only, a process that had already occurred in some places by the 9th century.

Before accepting the Gallican tradition of 'Minor' Litanies or Rogations, Rome instituted its own Rogation feast on 25 April (later known as the 'Major' Litanies), possibly to replace the pagan festival of Robigalia, whose processions and sacrifice were intended to protect the crops from blight (robigo). While the origins of this tradition are obscure, evidence for it may be found in the correspondence of Gregory the Great (2nd Epistle). It is not certain, however, whether this annual processional Rogation litany is to be identified with the sevenfold (septiformis) penitential procession called by Gregory the Great in 590, which began at seven separate churches and ended at Mary Major, during which the people chanted 'Kyrie eleison' (Gregory of Tours, Decem libri historiarum ('History of the Franks'), x.1).

For the Divine Office, the Rule of St Benedict (*c*530) required a 'supplicatio litanie, id est Kyrie eleison' at the end of Matins (ix.10), and an unspecified litany after Lauds (xii.4, xiii.11) and Vespers (xvii.8); a simple repetition of 'Kyrie eleison' (xvii.5) appears to have concluded the other Hours. The repeated 'Kyrie' was to become a standard text at the close of various Western monastic Hours, especially Lauds, Prime and Compline. Three distinctive forms of litany emerged in the West that influenced the development of the Preces: (1) an Irish form, consisting of an invitation to prayer, a statement of the intention and a short prayer response; (2) a Gallican form, consisting of psalm verses arranged as versicle and response; (3) a mixed form employing both Irish and Gallican elements. Preces-type litanies flourished in the Divine Office during the Carolingian reform, especially under the monastic reforms of Benedict of Aniane (d 821). By the time of Cluny, the litany of the saints had also been added to the end of Prime.

While some processions at Rome were accompanied by Preces-type litanies, invocation litanies, especially of saints, were the more prevalent. The classic litany of saints includes a long list of saints' names followed by the petition 'ora pro nobis', after which follows a series of intercessions requesting deliverance from physical or moral calamity, to which the people respond 'libera nos, Domine' or 'te rogamus audi nos'; the triple repetition of the Kyrie at the beginning and end became common after about 800. The importance of this litany within the Roman liturgy is demonstrated by its inclusion in the Church's most significant consecratory rituals, for example, baptism at the Easter Vigil, ordinations, religious professions and dedications of churches.

Precedents for litanies of the saints can be found in various Greek litanic prayers, which by at least the 6th century and possibly earlier began to include petitions to saints (see Schermann). According to Lapidge, there was in use in Antioch by the 7th century a Greek litany of the saints whose progression of saints would later be reiterated in Western litanies. Such a litany (the earliest example being GB-Lbl Cotton Galba A.xviii) reached England by at least the 8th century, when it was translated into Latin (Lapidge, p.20). It appears that this type of invocational litany found particularly widespread usage in the British Isles, from where it spread to the Continent by the second half of the 8th century. Litanies of the saints were widely employed for public and private devotion in the Frankish territories by the 9th century, their listing of saints usually influenced by local custom.

An early classification of litanies of saints is found in the Institutio de diversitate officiorum of Angilbert of Saint-Riquier (d 814), who noted the existence of 'laetania generalis', 'gallica', 'italica' and 'romana'. Parallel sources allow a partial deciphering of this fourfold classification: for instance, the Gallican type often begins with a series of invocations to the various persons of the Trinity and ends with prayers for peace and good weather; the Italic form, on the other hand, usually begins with a series of 'Exaudi' petitions (e.g. 'Exaudi Deus voces nostras'). Scholars have not satisfactorily identified the characteristics of the 'laetania generalis' or 'romana'.

Notated versions of litanies of the saints survive from the 11th century (I-VCd 186, f.147) and, in the case of those employing the familiar tetrachordal structure, from the 12th (Nn VI.E.11, f.138). The list of saints and the musical setting of this litany was standardized for the Roman Church in the liturgical books of Pius V (1566–72). Until the reforms of the 1960s the litany was chanted as part of the Paschal Vigil (LU, 776ff) and the Greater and Lesser Litanies (LU, 835ff).

The many uses of the litany of the saints generated special forms, of which one of the most distinctive, appearing by the mid-8th century, was the Frankish LAUDES REGIAE. Influenced by the 'emperor-litany' of late antiquity and the acclamations sung for the Byzantine emperor, Laudes regiae praising the victorious Christ, the emperor, pope and other rulers (Kantorowicz, p.14) were often employed in royal or pontifical worship, sometimes joined to the Kyrie at Mass. They normally began with the words 'Christus vincit, Christus regnat, Christus imperat', but to each saint's name the response was 'tu illum [illam, illos] adiuva' rather than the more common 'ora pro nobis' of other saints' litanies.

Hrabanus Maurus (d 856) composed a metrical version of the litany of saints for private devotional usage. By the late 9th century monks of St Gallen had created poetic versions of the litany with refrains for use in public processions. In the following examples of processional songs the refrain is to be repeated after each stanza: Rex sanctorum angelorum totum mundum adiuva (text in AH, l, 1907, pp.242–3; music in MMMA, i, 1956, p.1020) and Ardua spes mundi (AH, 237–8; MMMA, 1019), both attributed to Ratpert (*d c*890); Humili prece (AH, 253–5; MMMA, 1021) by Hartmann (d 925); and Votis supplicibus (AH, 246–7) by Waldramm (d end of the 9th century). A metrical litany is also found in some editions (e.g. PL, clviii, 931–6) of the works of Anselm of Canterbury (d 1109).

By the end of the 12th century there was a further mutation of the litany of the saints, this time in the form of the Marian litanies, in which Mary is invoked under a variety of titles. The two most famous are the Litany of Loreto (see below, §5) and the Litany of Venice (thus called because it was popular at the basilica of S Marco). This saint-specific form of the litany signalled the development of innumerable other litanies to Christ and individual saints. Such litanies became so prolific (150 such formulae are found in J.E. Grubhofer's Katholisches Litaneienbuch, Passau, 1848) that in 1601 Clement VIII prohibited their future use in public without official approval. Approval was eventually granted to litanies of the Holy Name of Jesus (1886), the Sacred Heart of Jesus (1889), St Joseph (1909), and the Precious Blood of Jesus (1960).

5. LITANIAE LAURETANAE. The series of invocations known as the Litaniae Lauretanae (the Litany of Loreto; the Latin term is normally in the plural) is the most widespread of the litanies to the Blessed Virgin Mary. It has been associated with the Annunciation shrine of Loreto, near Ancona in Italy (the Santa Casa of Loreto) since at least its first attested use there in 1558. Though it only acquired this title in the 16th century, this form of the litany to the Virgin is found in a 12th-century manuscript from St Martial of Limoges (F-Pn lat.5267, f.80*r* ff). It belongs to a large group of medieval litanies, many of them consisting of Marian invocations, whose roots appear to reach back to the Akathistos Hymn of the Byzantine Church from the 5th and 6th centuries. Its texts are partly biblical, but also derive from 12th-century Cistercian writings (notably those of St Bernard). The version printed at Dilligen in 1558 was probably written by the Jesuit Peter Canisius (1521–97).

The pilgrimage to Loreto found full popularity in the 16th century, and it was then that the Litaniae Lauretanae spread throughout Europe, recommended for both private and public devotion. This was in part due to the fervour of the Jesuits, but further assisted by Pope Sixtus V whose Bull 'Redditurі', issued on 11 July 1587, gave official sanction to the litany in preference to a proposal to replace it with a set of entirely scriptural invocations. In 1601 it was established as the only approved Litany of Our Lady: all other Marian litanies were prohibited by Clement VIII's Constitution 'Sanctissimas', and a decree of the Sacred Congregation of Rites dated 2 August 1631 forbade any alteration of the Litaniae Lauretanae without permission of the Holy See. Permitted additions include the invocations 'Regina sacratissimi rosarii' (1675), 'Regina sine labe originali concepta' (1846), 'Regina pacis' (during World War I) and 'Regina in caelum assumpta' (1950). Though never incorporated into the Breviary, the Litaniae Lauretanae was included in a supplement containing the feast of the Immaculate Conception (approved 1615).

The litany consists of a succinct and well-ordered series of petitions. The melody is typical of such formulaic chants, and may be compared with the tones of the Litany of the Saints; it is built up of four different elements (ex.1). The process of melodic borrowing, adaptation and transformation can be observed in the principal version and an alternative (LU, 1857–60; Processionale monasticum, 281–4), and in four additional versions (Processionale monasticum, 284–7). These and other tones can be traced in some of the 16th- and 17th-century polyphonic settings.

Ex.1
The melody is built up of four different elements. One or more of these are frequently to be found in the earlier polyphonic settings.

The Santa Casa of Loreto was famous for its music, and many important maestri and organists served there between 1513 and 1801, among them Costanzo Porta, Annibale Zoilo and Antonio Cifra. The catalogue of music in the library lists many settings of the Litaniae Lauretanae for various combinations of voices and instruments, mainly by Italian composers connected with the shrine. The text of the litany was set by composers major and minor throughout Catholic Europe from the late 16th century to the 19th, especially by Italians in the 17th century (see §7 below).

6. Polyphonic litanies before 1600. The anthology of polyphonic litanies assembled by Victorinus in Thesaurus Litaniae and printed in Munich by Adam Berg (RISM 1596[2]) forms a substantial collection of settings by composers working in Italy and the southern part of the Holy Roman Empire in the preceding 25 years. The largest number are by Lassus and Palestrina, but among the others are settings by Aichinger, Christian Erbach, H.L. Hassler, Rinaldo del Mel, Philippe de Monte, Jacob Reiner, Annibale Stabile and Victoria (for full list see Roth, 1959). In 1583 Berg had published the double-choir Litaniae deiparae virginis Mariae by Costanzo Festa (d 1545), designated for use on Saturday (a day of commemoration of the BVM) and on vigils and feasts of the BVM. The attribution to Festa is now questioned, and 16th-century liturgical settings date from about 1570 onwards. However, there are two settings of the Litany of the Saints, both lacking the opening invocation to the Trinity and the closing Agnus Dei, among the works of Gaffurius, maestro di cappella at Milan Cathedral from 1481 to 1522. These motet-litanies, Virgo dei digna and Salva mater Salvatoris, show an incipient double-choir technique, dividing the invocations ('Sancta Maria', 'Sancte Ambrosi') and responses ('ora pro nobis') between the upper and lower voices to produce a simple antiphonal effect. The highest voice of each voice-pair incorporates the traditional plainchant melody as a cantus firmus.

Litanies set by composers during the 16th century include the Litany of Saints (Litaniae de omnibus sanctis; settings by Jacob Haym, Lassus and others), the Litany of Jesus (Litaniae de Domine or Nomine Jesu; settings by Palestrina and Lassus), the Litany of the Blessed Sacrament (Litaniae de venerabili sacramento, also known as the Litaniae corporis Christi or Litaniae sacrosanctae eucharistiae; settings by Palestrina) and, rarely, the Litany of the Dead (Litaniae pro defunctis; one anonymous setting in RISM 1596[2]). By far the most frequently composed litanies were those of the Virgin. The Litaniae deiparae virginis Mariae (settings by Mel and Monte) was eventually supplanted by the Litaniae Lauretanae. Composers who set this text in the 16th century include G.M. Nanino (1571), Costanzo Porta (1580), Victoria (1583), Lassus (1596) and Giulio Belli (1600). In addition, Marian litanies with free texts were frequently composed (settings by Asola, Valerio Bona, Palestrina and Bartolomeo Ratti; for a complete list see Roth, 1959). Palestrina's published litanies for four voices contain an additional setting of the antiphon Ave Maria inserted after the prima pars.

The invocation–response structure of the litany lent itself to alternatim or polychoral treatment. In the alternatim settings the invocations were intoned by a priest or cantor and the responses sung by the choir; many of these settings are in falsobordone style. Double-choir litanies for eight and more voices were composed by Lassus, G.M. Nanino, Porta, Palestrina and Victoria. There is doubt about the attribution to Macque of a litany for eight voices, found only in a 19th-century manuscript copy (in D-MÜs). The northward dissemination of the genre is evident in the number of litanies in the Thesaurus litaniarum (RISM 1596²) by south German composers and Italians working north of the Alps. In Antwerp a novel typographical layout was adopted by Phalèse for his one-volume collection of litanies by anonymous composers, the Litaniae septem deiparae virgini musici decantandae (1598), in which all the voice parts are arranged on facing pages in choirbook format suggesting processional usage.

7. POLYPHONIC LITANIES AFTER 1600. The 17th century was the most prolific period of litany composition in Italy, especially before 1650. Some 600 polyphonic litanies in over 300 publications have been identified (Blazey, 1990). About 300 are found in 46 publications devoted entirely to litanies; others appear in collections of music for Vespers (35), Compline (27) and the Mass (15), in 98 motet collections, and in 84 other publications. Archival evidence confirms the recitation of litanies in Roman churches especially on vigils and feasts of the Virgin, on Saturdays after Compline, during processions, and at meetings of confraternities. Similar practices are found elsewhere throughout Italy. Litanies were particularly important in Venice during the plague years (1629–31) and in Bologna and Loreto.

The text of Litaniae Lauretanae (see §5 above) is most often set. Some settings were published with Marian antiphons (Lorenzo Ratti, 1630, Cazzati, 1658, Francesco Foggia, 1672) or with antiphons and motets (P.A. Ferrario, 1607, G.F. Anerio, 1611, Giacobbi, 1618, Orazio Tarditi, 1644). Lodovico Viadana's Letanie che si cantano nella Santa Casa di Loreto, et nelle chiese di Roma ogni Sabbato et feste della Madonna (1605) consists of 12 settings scored for three to eight and 12 voices. Litanies for two or three choirs are more numerous in the first half of the century, including the five by Cifra (1613), who was maestro at Loreto from 1609 to 23, and Giovanni Gabrieli's (1615). Some settings are strictly liturgical (Viadana a 4, 1605, Cavaccio a 4, 1611, Stefano Bernardi a 4, 1613), some use falsobordone (Viadana a 8, 1605), and others truncate the text (Giulio Belli a 6, 1607, F. Anerio a 5, RISM 1622¹, Merula a 5, 1628, Isabella Leonarda a 4, 1674). Concertato settings include those by Grandi (a 5, 1614, and a 3, RISM 1626³), Monteverdi (a 6, 1620), Giovanni Rovetta (a 3, 1635) and Merula (a 5, 1640). Instruments are used in settings by Cazzati (1663), Olivo (1670), Passavini (1671), G.B. Bassani (1690) and Perti (undated). In France Du Mont's Cantica sacra (1652) contains a litany, and M.-A. Charpentier's nine litanies for three to eight voices, written in the 1680s and 90s, include three with instruments.

The Italian tradition continued in the 18th and early 19th centuries with Andrea Basili, G.B. Casali and G.B. Borghi in Loreto; Pitoni, Biordi and Fiovarini in Rome; and F.N. Fago, Leonardo Vinci, Zingarelli and Giuseppe Nicolini in Naples. North of the Alps the output includes works by Gletle (31 litanies, 1681) and J.C.F. Fischer (eight, with strings and optional trumpets, horns and trombones, 1711) in Augsburg; Heinichen and J.D. Zelenka (processional litanies, 1725) in Dresden; H.I.F. von Biber, K.H. Biber, J.E. Eberlin, Michael Haydn and Leopold Mozart in Salzburg; and by a large number of composers in Vienna, including Albrechtsberger, Caldara, J.J. Fux, J.A. Hasse, J.G. Reinhardt, Georg Reutter (ii), Tůma, G.C. Wagenseil, Salieri and Ignaz Umlaf. There are also examples from monastic composers: Königsperger, Ägidius Schenk, Wrastill and Aumann in Austria, and Berthold Hipp in Switzerland. W.A. Mozart's four litanies include two liturgical settings (K125, K243) and two Loreto litanies (K109/74*e*, K195/186*d*). These youthful works, dating from 1771–6, show influences from Italy and from Zelenka, but owe far more to the Salzburg tradition.

In the 19th century minor composers in the Italian and German-speaking states continued to write litanies, including some with orchestra, some as litanie pastorali (or lytaniae rurales), and some influenced by the church music reforms. In France Auber's Litanies de la Sainte Vierge (after 1852) are scored for choir and orchestra, those by Saint-Saëns (1917) for solo voice and organ, and those by Poulenc (1936, Litanies à la vierge noire) for three-part female chorus and organ.

Polyphonic settings of Luther's litany in German (1529) include those by Johannes Rhau (1598), Sigefrid (1602), Vulpius (1604), Michael Praetorius (1610), H.L. Hassler (1619), Schein (1627) and Heinrich Schütz (1657). An 18th-century text is used in C.P.E. Bach's two litanies (1786). The Orthodox Liturgy of St John Chrysostom includes several litanies, and there are settings in Church Slavic from the first half of the 20th century by Dobri Khristov, Aleksandr Nikolskii and Rachmaninoff, and more recently by Lozko Stoyanov. Arvo Pärt's Litany for soloists, choir and orchestra (1994) also draws on texts of St John Chrysostom, but in the translation used in the American Orthodox Church.

8. ENGLISH LITANIES. An English form of the litany (derived in part from Luther's litany of 1529) first appeared in the second edition of Marshall's Primer (1535). In 1544 Henry VIII ordered processions to be said and sung causa necessitas before his invasion of France. In the spirit of the reforming movement to ensure that the people understood what they were reciting, Thomas Cranmer wrote a new English litany for these processions, issued with simple chant to replace the usual Latin form. This abbreviated and conflated existing texts, drew on other parts of the Latin liturgy and inserted Lutheran texts. It reduced the petitions to the saints, dominant in the Latin litany, to three. This litany was subsequently printed in The King's Primer (1545). Cranmer's scheme for translating and adapting other processions 'to be used upon festival days' did not proceed; instead a Royal Injunction of October 1545 ordered that the 1544 litany be sung 'every Sunday and festival day, and none other' before High Mass, thus displacing the Latin repertory of processions. Royal Injunctions issued in 1547 after the accession of Edward VI further ordered that the litany be recited not in procession but kneeling in the middle of the church. In the first Book of Common Prayer (1549), Cranmer's litany was placed between the services of Holy Communion and Baptism, with all references to the saints excised. In the second Book of Common Prayer (1552 and all subsequent versions) it was relocated after Morning Prayer, with a rubric instructing that it be recited after that service 'upon Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and at other times when it shall be commanded by the Ordinary'.

The 1544 litany was issued with formulaic, syllabic chants adapted from the Latin Rite, and these remained in use, though by the 19th century there were significant regional variants in choral foundations. The two earliest surviving polyphonic versions of the litany responses, anonymous in the Wanley partbooks (GB-Ob Mus.Sch. E.420–22), set these chants in four parts in a simple syllabic style typical of contemporary English preces, responses and festal psalms. Each is followed in the source by a polyphonic setting of the Lord's Prayer. There are later 16th- and 17th-century settings by Batten (two), Butler, Byrd, William King, Henry Loosemore, Robert Lugge, Molle, Pickaver, Ramsey (two), Tallis (two), Thomas Tomkins (two) and Thomas Wanless, as well as three incomplete, anonymous litanies. Most do not refer to the chant, but they remain functional: none aspires to the more elaborate contemporary settings found in Italy. There are also settings of the Latin translation of Cranmer's litany by Henry Loosemore, Molle, Ramsay and Thomas Wilson. Peter Philips used Latin Roman Catholic texts for his Marian litanies (RISM 1630[2]). Most of the extant English settings were edited and published by Jebb, whose study of the choral litany remains a considerable work of scholarship. After the Restoration interest in setting the litany declined. In the late 20th-century revisions of Anglican liturgies new litany texts have been devised. Jonathan Harvey's Winchester Litany (1986) sets one of the new English texts in a contemporary idiom, but in a syllabic manner typical of the 16th century.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A Monophonic. B Litaniae lauretanae. C Polyphonic litanies. D English litanies.

A: MONOPHONIC

MGG1(B. Stäblein); MGG2(K. Schlager)

A.B. Keypers, ed.: The Prayer Book of Aedeluald the Bishop, Commonly Called the Book of Cerne (Cambridge, 1902)

T. Schermann: 'Griechische Litaneien', Römische Quartalschrift, xvii (1903), 334–8

G.M. Dreves and C. Blume, eds.: Analecta hymnica medii aevi, l (Leipzig, 1907/R)

W. Meyer, ed.: Die Preces der mozarabischen Liturgie (Berlin, 1914)

G.F. Warner, ed.: The Stowe Missal, ii (London, 1915)

E. Bishop: Liturgica historica (Oxford, 1918)

C. Plummer, ed.: Irish Litanies (London, 1925)

C. Rojo and G. Prado: El canto mozárabe (Barcelona, 1929)

F. Cabrol: 'Litanies', Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie, ix/2 (Paris, 1930), 1540–71

B. Capelle: 'Le kyrie de la messe et le Pape Gelase', Revue bénédictine, xlvi (1934), 126–44; repr. in Travaux liturgiques de doctrine et d'histoire, ii (Leuven, 1962), 135–45

E.H. Kantorowicz: Laudes regiae: a Study in Mediaeval Ruler Worship and Liturgical Acclamations (Berkeley, 1946/R)

J. Gajard: 'La prière litanique Divinae pacis', Revue grégorienne, xxvii (1948), 4–16

B. Fischer: 'Litania ad laudes et vesperas', Liturgisches Jb, i (1951), 55–74

M. Huglo: 'Les "preces hispaniques" des graduels aquitains empruntées à la liturgie hispanique', Hispania sacra, viii (1955), 361–83

B. Stäblein, ed.: Hymnen I: die mittelalterlichen Hymnenmelodien des Abendlandes, MMMA, i (1956)

J.A. Jungmann: 'Das Kyrie Eleison des Preces', Liturgisches Erbe und pastorale Gegenwart (Innsbruck, 1960); Eng. trans., 1962, as Pastoral Liturgy, 180–91

M. Coens: 'Anciennes litanies des saints', Recueil d'études bollandiennes (Brussels, 1963), 129–322

P. Borella: 'Kyrie eleison e prece litanica nel rito ambrosiano', Jucunda laudatio, ii (1964), 66–79

G.G. Willis: 'The Solemn Prayers of Good Friday', Essays in Early Roman Liturgy (London, 1964), 3–48

G. Knopp: '"Sanctorum Nomina Seriatim": die Anfänge der Allerheiligenlitanei und ihre Verbindung mit den Laudes Regiae', Römische Quartalschrift, lxv (1970), 185–231

P. Stotz: Ardua spes mundi (Berne, 1972)

B. Fischer: 'Litanies', Dictionnaire de spiritualité, ed. M. Viller and others, ix (Paris, 1976), 865–72

P. de Clerck: La 'prière universelle' dans les liturgies latines anciennes (Münster, 1977)

J. Heinemann: Prayer in the Talmud: Forms and Patterns (Berlin and New York, 1977)

R. Taft: The Great Entrance: a History of the Transfer of Gifts and other Preanaphoral Rites of the Liturgy of St John Chrysostom (Rome, 2/1978), 311–49

J. Baldovin: 'Kyrie eleison and the Entrance Rite of the Roman Eucharist', Worship, lx (1986), 334–47

M. McCormick: Eternal Victor: Triumphal Rulership in Late Antiquity, Byzantium and the Early Medieval West (Cambridge, 1986)

P. Jeffery: 'Litany', Dictionary of the Middle Ages, ed. J.R. Strayer, vii (New York, 1986), 588–94

M. Lapidge: Anglo-Saxon Litanies of the Saints (London, 1991)

B: LITANIAE LAURETANAE

Letania loretana (Dillingen, 1558)

G. Guidetti: Directorium chori (Rome, 1582)

Processionale usibus ac ritibus S. Romanae Ecclesiae accommodatum (Paris, 1723)

J. Schrems, ed.: Musica divina, annus I, iv (Regensburg, 1862/R); annus II, iii (1869/R)

Processionale monasticum ad usum congregationis gallicae ordinis Sancti Benedicti (Solesmes, 1893/R)

J. Sauren: Die lauretanische Litanei nach Ursprung: Geschichte und Inhalt dargestellt (Kempten, 1895)

A. de Santi: Le litanie lauretane (Rome, 1897)

G. Tebaldini: L'archivio musicale della Cappella lauretana (Loreto, 1921)

M. Huglo: 'L'ancienne version latine de l'hymne acathiste', Le museón, lxiv (1951), 27–61

R. Klaver: The Litany of Loreto (London, 1954)

E. Wellesz, ed.: The Akathistos Hymn, MMB, Transcripta, ix (1957)

C: POLYPHONIC LITANIES

MGG2 ('Litanei', §III; M. Marx-Weber)

G. Victorinus, ed.: Thesaurus litaniarum a praecipuis musicis . . . quatuor, quinque, sex, plurium vocum compositae (Munich, 1596)

K.G. Fellerer: 'Mozarts Litaneien', Musikwissenschaftliche Tagung der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum: Salzburg 1931, 136–41

K.A. Rosenthal: 'Mozart's Sacramental Litanies and their Forerunners', MQ, xxvii (1941), 433–55

T. Thelen: 'Litaneien', Handbuch der katholischen Kirchenmusik, ed. H. Lemacher and K.G. Fellerer (Essen, 1949), 240–46

H.P. Schanzlin: 'Zur Geschichte der Litanei im 17. Jahrhundert', IMSCR VII: Cologne 1958, 259–61

J.A.E. van Dodewaard: Die lauretanische Litanei (Mainz, 1959)

J. Roth: Die mehrstimmigen lateinischen Litaneikompositionen des 16. Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1959)

C. Kammer: Die lauretanische Litanei (Innsbruck, 1960)

J. Roth: 'Zum Litaneischaffen G.P. da Palestrina und O. di Lassos', Ljb, xliv (1960), 44–9

P.M. Martins: Ladainhas de Nossa Senhora em Portugal (Lisbon, 1961)

R. Federhofer-Königs: 'Mozarts "Lauretanische Litaneien" KV109 (74e) und 195 (186d)', MJb 1967, 111–20

H. and R. Federhofer: 'Eighteenth Century Litaniae lauretanae from the Repertory of the Viennese Province of the Franciscan Order, Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 198–212

J.G. Kurtzmann: 'Some Historical Perspectives on the Monteverdi Vespers', AnMc, no.15 (1975), 29–86

F.W. Riedel: Kirchenmusik am Hofe Karls VI (1711–1740) (Munich, 1977)

J.W. Hill: 'Oratory Music in Florence, II: at San Firenze in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries', AcM, li (1979), 246–67

L. Kantner: Aurea luce: Musik an St Peter in Rom 1790–1850 (Vienna, 1979)

G. Dixon: 'Lenten Devotion: some Memorias in Baroque Rome', MT, cxxiv (1983), 157–61

J. Roche: 'Musica diversa di Compietà: Compline and its Music in Seventeenth-Century Italy', PRMA, cix (1982–3), 60–79

L.M. Kantner: 'Hasses Litanei für den Kaiserhof', Johann Adolf Hasse und die Musik seiner zeit: Siena 1983 [AnMc, no.25 (1987)], 419–28
J.H. Moore: 'Venezia favorita da Maria: Music for the Madonna Nicopeia and Santa Maria della Salute', JAMS, xxxvii (1984), 299–355
D.A. Blazey: 'The Mid-Baroque Concertato Litany in Northern Italy: Inherited Problems and Borrowed Solutions', Tradizione e stile: Como 1987, 123–53
W. Horn: Die Dresdener Hofkirchenmusik 1720–1745: Studien zu ihren Voraussetzungen und zu ihrem Repertoire (Kassel, 1987)
D.A. Blazey: The Litany in Seventeenth-Century Italy (diss., U of Durham, 1990)
J.S. Krutmann: 'Mozarts Litaneien', Mozarts Kirchenmusik: Freiburg 1991, 52–72
N. O'Regan: 'Processions and their Music in Post-Tridentine Rome', Recercare, iv (1992), 45–80
J.I. Armstrong: Litaniae Lauretanae: Sacred Music at the Viennese Imperial Court c1700–1783 (diss., U of Wisconsin, Madison, 1993)
U. Ringhandt: 'Die "Litaneien" von Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach als "musikalische Lehrgedicht"', Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach: Beiträge zu Leben und Werk, ed. H. Poos (Mainz, 1993), 197–219
R. Federhofer-Königs: 'Lauretana-Vertonungen aus der Barockszeit', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 189–96
M. Marx-Weber: 'Bemerkungen zu Bonifazio Grazianis Litaneien', Festschrift für Winfreid Kirsch, ed. P. Ackermann, U. Kienzle and A. Nowak (Tutzing, 1996), 75–81

D: ENGLISH LITANIES

HarrisonMMB; Le HurayMR
E. Burton, ed.: Three Primers put forth in the Reign of Henry VIII (Oxford, 1834, 2/1848)
J. Jebb: The Choral Responses and Litanies of the United Church of England and Ireland (London, 1847–57)
W.H. Frere: 'Edwardine Vernacular Services before the First Prayer Book', Journal of Theological Studies, i (1900), 229–46; repr. in Walter Howard Frere: a Collection of his Papers in Liturgical and Historical Subjects, ed. J.H. Arnold and E.G.P. Wyatt (Oxford, 1940), 5–21
F.E. Brightman: The English Rite (London, 1915, 2/1921)
J.E. Hunt, ed.: Cranmer's First Litany, 1544, and Merbecke's Book of Common Prayer Noted, 1550 (London, 1939) [incl. facs. of both items]
G.J. Cuming: A History of Anglican Liturgy (London, 1969, 2/1982)

MICHEL HUGLO/EDWARD FOLEY (1–4), DAVID NUTTER/JOHN HARPER (6), JOHN HARPER (5, 7–8)

Literati (Lat.). A term for laymen in 16th century (and later) Bohemia, who formed 'literary brotherhoods' (Cz. literátské bratrství) and cultivated polyphony. See CANTIONAL, §1.

Literes (y Carrión), Antonio (de) (b Artá, Mallorca, ? 18 June 1673; d Madrid, 18 Jan 1747). Spanish composer. He began his formal musical training in 1686 in the choir school of the Spanish royal chapel and studied the violón with Manuel de Soba. In 1693 he was acknowledged by the patriarch of the chapel to be a skilled player of the viol, violin and violón, and competent as a composer. Upon examination he was awarded the position of violón in the chapel and interim instructor of the choirboys. Later he became principal violón in the royal chapel under the Bourbon King Philip V and esteemed as a composer for both his sacred and his secular works. In 1720 the patriarch of the royal chapel noted that Literes's talents as a composer and violón player were far superior to those of his colleagues.

Documents pertaining to the royal chapel make it clear that Literes was composing music for the chapel in the 1690s. Once Sebastián Durón had abandoned the position of maestro de capilla in 1796, Literes was called upon to compose 'villancicos for the feast of Corpus Christi, Lamentations for Holy Week and whatever might be necessary for the service of the Quarenta Horas'. In 1734, after a disastrous fire in the Alcázar palace destroyed the music archive of the royal chapel, Literes, José Nebra and the then maestro de capilla Joseph de Torres were charged with the enormous task of rebuilding the collection and composing new music to replace what had been lost. This in itself is proof of Literes's fecundity and ability to compose in every genre of his day, from sacred Latin pieces in the severe style to flamboyantly modern songs and arias and villancicos in both a traditional Spanish and a pan-European style. His reputation was such that he had been commissioned to compose an oratorio on the life of St Vicente for Lisbon Cathedral on 22 January 1720, along with a villancico cycle for the previous evening.

In addition to his duties with the royal chapel, from 1697 Literes was increasingly called upon to perform in the royal theatre orchestra, and probably participated in revivals of plays with music by Juan Hidalgo and productions of new works by Durón and Juan de Navas. This exposure evidently bore fruit, as Literes succeeded the exiled Durón as the leading theatre composer for a limited period, composing several zarzuelas (four with texts by José de Cañizares) and a fully sung serenata-like work, Los elementos, described as an 'ópera armónica al estilo italiano'. Four of the zarzuela scores and that of Los elementos survive.

Literes had several pieces published in the first years of the 18th century by the Imprenta de Música of Joseph de Torres. He was also one of the first Spanish composers (along with Juan de Serqueira and Torres) to write and publish cantatas; many of these were probably intended for aristocratic patrons, but a number of Literes's cantatas are taken from theatre works. Los elementos was dedicated to the Duchess of Medina de las Torres (for her birthday), and Literes probably composed for the Duchess of Osuna as well; his son José (Joseph) Literes Sánchez (d Madrid, 26 Sept 1746) played the violón and cello in her court orchestra. In July 1722 a 'don Antonio Literes' was paid for providing the score to 'la Palestra y Academia', either a court entertainment with this title or music to be performed during an intellectual, musical and literary competition. This was probably Antonio Literes himself, and not his son Antonio Literes Montalbo (d Madrid, 2 Dec 1768), an organist at the royal chapel and a colleague of Nebra (who also worked for the Duchess of Osuna).

Literes's importance as a theatre composer extended beyond the court and the aristocracy to the commercial public theatres of Madrid; he was perhaps the first court composer to benefit from the open policy of the newly installed Bourbon monarchy, which allowed court musicians to perform and compose for fiestas other than those at the royal court. According to the surviving accounts of the Cruz and Príncipe theatres, revivals of zarzuelas with music by Literes were heard with consistent success season after season as late as 1734, although they were originally composed before 1720. In 1711 he was paid for the music to Antes difunta que ajena, a zarzuela performed in the public Teatro del Príncipe in July. The most striking example is Accis y Galatea. Following its court première in 1708, it became the most acclaimed work of the first half of the century in the public theatres, enjoying popular support for two decades.

While he continued to compose for the royal chapel, Literes's ascendancy at court was eclipsed by the newly arrived Italian composers favoured by the queen, in spite of the fact that Literes clearly belonged to the small group of Spanish court composers who self-consciously adopted the foreign forms and techniques early in the century. Some of his pieces in Spanish forms preserve a traditionally Spanish approach to the text and to affective expression, with controlled treatment of dissonance. At the same time, his scores contain many set pieces written in an italianate or pan-European style: da capo arias with highly melismatic vocal lines, fragmentation of the poetic text, rapid figurations in the instrumental parts and italianate expressive devices. Literes was indeed a leader in an epoch of stylistic plurality. Contemporaries who condemned stylistic importations and innovations in the music of others judged his music as preserving truly Spanish qualities of 'sweetness' and 'elegance'.

In spite of his talent Literes died in debt, largely because much of his salary from his early years at court remained unpaid. Among the few items noted in the inventory of his possessions was a 'violón from Cremona, made by Stradivarius himself'.

WORKS

STAGE

Júpiter y Danae (zar, 3, ? T. Añorbe y Corregel), Madrid, Alcázar or Buen Retiro, 6 Jan 1700, E-Mn

Los elementos, Mn

Accis y Galatea (zar, 2, J. de Cañizares), Madrid, Alcázar or Buen Retiro, 19 Dec 1708, Mn, P-EVp, 1 tonada (Madrid, ?1708)

Con música y por amor [Act 1] (zar, 2), Madrid, Buen Retiro, 1709, 2 songs E-Mn [Act 2 by J. de Navas]

Antes difunta que ajena (zar), Madrid, Príncipe, 22 July 1711, music lost

Hasta lo insensible adora (zar, 2, Cañizares), Madrid, Cruz, 16 May 1713, EVp

El estrago en la fineza (zar, 2, Cañizares), Madrid, Cruz, 9 May 1718, EVp

CANTATAS

10 Cantadas humanas, E-Mn

5 Cantadas al Sacramento, GCA-Gc

Ah del rústico, 1v, obs, vns, bc, 1710, E-E; Aliento humano desvolo, S, bc, Scalo (Madrid, n.d.); Dexame ingrata llorar, S, bc, Mn, GB-CDp; Déjame tirano Dios, 1v, P-Ln; Estaba Fili hermosa, S, bc, E-VAc

OTHER WORKS

Liturgical: 3 missas de facistol, 4vv, E-Mp; 8 Mag, Mp; 14 Vespers pss, 4vv, Mp; 10 hymns, Mp; Miserere mei Deus, 8vv, vns, violón, hp, hpd/org, bc E; Sanctorum meritis, 4vv, VAcp

Tonos and villancicos: E-Bc, Mn, SE, GCA-Gc, Mexico City, Biblioteca Nacional

Instrumental: Obertura, obs, hns, vns, violón, bc E-NArv (doubtful)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Cotarelo y Mori: Historia de la zarzuela (Madrid, 1934), 76ff

N. Álvarez Solar-Quintes: 'Antonio Literes Carrión y sus hijos (nuevos documentos para su biografía)', AnM, v (1950), 169–89

A. Martín Moreno: 'El compositor mallorquín Antonio Literes (1673–1747)', TSM, xi/1 (1978), 24–6

A. Martín Moreno: Historia de la música española, iv: Siglo XVIII (Madrid, 1985), 45–7, 386–8

A.E. Lemmon: 'Antonio Literes y José de Nebra: el inicio de la presencia italiana en el Archivo musical de la Catedral de Guatemala', Domenico Zipoli: itinerari iberoamericani della musica italiana nel Settecento: Prato, Italy, 1988, 265–72

L.K. Stein: Songs of Mortals, Dialogues of the Gods: Music and Theatre in Seventeenth-Century Spain (Oxford, 1993)

J.J. Carreras: 'La cantata de cámara española de principios del siglo XVIII: el manuscrito M2618 de le Biblioteca nacional de Madrid y sus concordancias', Música y literatura en la peninsula ibérica 1600–1750: Valladolid 1995, 65–126

A. Bombi: 'Los elementos: estilo, género, y funciones', Scherzo, no.117 (1997), 122–5

J.J. Carreras: 'From Literes to Nebra: Spanish Dramatic Music Between Tradition and Modernity', Music in Spain during the Eighteenth Century, ed. M. Boyd and J.J. Carreras (Cambridge, 1998), 7–16

LOUISE STEIN

Lithander, Carl Ludvig (b Röicks, Dagö, Estonia, 26 Jan/6Feb 1773; d Greifswald, 17 Dec 1843). Swedish composer and pianist of Russian birth. In 1790 he moved to Stockholm, where he graduated as an officer in the engineering corps. From 1814 he lived in London for four years as a composer and piano teacher. He also gave piano recitals in Sweden, Germany, Holland and Denmark. Lithander, who used several Swedish folk tunes in his compositions, wrote in the style of Mozart and Haydn. His piano sonata in C major is dedicated to Muzio Clementi. He died as a music director and an organist in Greifswald. His brother, Fredrik Emanuel Lithander (1777–1823), was a composer and piano teacher in Finland and Russia.

WORKS

(selective list)

Stage: Säckpiparen,Spl, 1, unperf; Lantara,op, Stockholm, 16 Nov 1817

Inst: 2 divertimentos, fl, pf; La Réminiscence, fl, pf; 2 sonatas, pf, C (London, ?1818), f♯ (Hamburg, ?1822)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Lappalainen: 'Finnish Viennese Classical Composers and Europe' Balticum: a Coherent Musical Landscape in 16th and 18th Centuries, ed. I. Vierimaa (Helsinki, 1994), 91–102

E. Salmenhaara, ed.: Suomalaisia säveltäjiä Helsinki ([Finnish composers], 1994), 267–73

SEIJA LAPPALAINEN

Lithographisches Institut. Austrian firm of music publishers. It was established in Vienna and owned by Adolph Count von Pötting and Ferdinand Count Pálffy von Erdöd, though managed during its relatively brief existence by Schubert's friend Franz von Schober (b 17 May 1798; d 13 Aug 1882), often wrongly named as an owner. The firm's first advertisement for printed music appeared in the Wiener Zeitung of 26 February 1821; there were two further announcements in the same year and three more in 1822. In 1823 the publishing activity increased: on 18 November the first issue of the series Der Neue Amphion appeared, reaching 23 issues the following year. The editor was Friedrich August Kanne (1778–1833), who from 1821 also edited the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung mit besonderer Rücksicht auf den österreichischen Kaiserstaat (founded 1817), which he brought into the Lithographisches Institut in 1824.

The publishing programme, apart from single works by Hieronymus Payer, Sechter and Voříšek, reveals only Singspiele and works by insignificant composers, including several by Kanne himself. Schubert is represented by the Lied an den Tod (D518), which appeared as a supplement to the Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung on 26 June 1824 (separate edition on 2 July), and by four songs published in 1828 (D939, 909, 768, 881: later called op.96).

When the Chemische Druckerey and S.A. Steiner & Co. (see HASLINGER) changed to music engraving in 1821, the Lithographisches Institut took over part of their lithographic production. In 1826 the firm seems to have ceased music publishing, though a retail shop continued until at least 1833.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Weinmann WM

A. Mayer: Wiens Buchdrucker-Geschichte 1482–1882, ii (Vienna, 1887)

A. Weiss: Franz Schober (Vienna, 1907)

ALEXANDER WEINMANN

Lithophone (from Gk. lithos: 'stone'; Fr. lithophone; Ger. Lithophon, Steinspiel; It. litofono). A sounding stone or series of resonant stone slabs or plaques (for the Hornbostel-Sachs classification see IDIOPHONE). Lithophones occur in several forms: oblong bars suspended horizontally; vertically suspended plaques; or (as has been recently introduced) circular stone discs arranged chromatically. They may also occur in the form of rocks, boulders, stalagmites, stalactites etc., which are sonorous when struck and show evidence of having been used as idiophones; such lithophones may more appropriately be termed 'rock gongs'.

In Asia, ringing stones are found in Annam, China, Korea, Samoa, and in southern India (e.g. the 'musical columns' found in many medieval temples). Prehistoric lithophones found in Indo-China (Annam) include three stone slabs (discovered actually in use in 1958) in which the surfaces show the typical flaking technique of Stone Age man, the edges apparently fashioned for tuning purposes. A Vietnamese lithophone (goong lu) discovered in 1949 is now in the Musée de l'Homme, Paris (fig.1). This instrument has 11 slabs 65 to 100 cm in length, and yields two sonorous pentatonic octaves. Further examples of goong lu, with sets of 12, 15 and 32 stones, have been more recently discovered, and are now at the Phu Khanh Museum, the Institute of Musicology of Vietnam, and the Institute of Research in Musicology and Choreography, Hanoi. Lithophones dating back to Neolithic times, from Indo-China, are preserved in the Horniman Museum, London. Stone chimes are among the most ancient and valued instruments of the Chinese (see QING). The foremost of these is the bianquing said to have existed as far back as *c*2000 BCE. The bianquing comprises a set of calcareous L-shaped stone slabs (tequing) suspended vertically in a rectangular frame. From the 5th century BCE the standard number of stones was 16, arranged in two rows of eight. The stones are tuned to the 12 notes of the lü octave and its four additional notes. They are struck on the long side with wooden mallets or padded sticks. Related instruments include the Korean p'yŏn'gyŏng (also with 16 stone chimes) and t'ŭkkyŏng (a survival of one historical type of Chinese teqing, comprising a single L-shaped chime), the Vietnamese biên khánh, and the Japanese kei, a vertically suspended plaque which is more commonly made of metal.

Sonorous stones occur in many and widely scattered regions on other continents besides Asia. In Ethiopia, for instance, stone chimes are used as church bells in certain Christian places of worship. In Togo, the picancala, a lithophone consisting of four to five flat pieces of basalt arranged in a circle on straw, struck with two spherical stones, is played by young men to announce the millet harvest in mid-November. Resonant stones have been found in Venezuela and Ecuador, and in Europe on the islands of Chios and Sardinia. Ringing rocks used for the production of musical notes have been discovered in Nigeria. Hammered depressions provide evidence of their having been used as percussion instruments. Rock gongs are used currently, their purposes varying from use in religious services to providing accompaniment to singing and dancing.

1. Goong lu (lithophone) from Ndut Lieng Krak, southern Vietnam (Musée de l'Homme, Paris)

2. Rock harmonica by Messrs Richardson & Sons: engraving, mid-19th century

Some of the most remarkable lithophones in existence are to be found in the English Lake District. A set of 16 musical stones embracing two diatonic octaves and one note is in the Fitz Park Museum, Keswick. These stones were discovered in 1785: eight in the bed of the river Greta and eight on the nearby mountain of Skiddaw. There is also in the same museum the Richardson rock harmonica comprising five chromatic octaves of stone slabs measuring 15 to 93 cm in length. The slabs lie over a soundbox and are insulated at the nodal points on ropes of straw (fig.2). The instrument (which was completed in 1840) was 'invented and manufactured by Messrs Richardson and Sons after 13 years' incessant labour and application from rocks dug out of the mighty Skiddaw'. The Richardson family became expert performers on this unique construction which is reputed to have at times embraced a compass of seven octaves and various bell effects. They toured extensively, performing on two occasions at command performances before Queen Victoria. A rock harmonica of similar proportions is privately housed in Keswick. This instrument, also from Skiddaw, was completed in 1886. An instrument contemporary with the Richardson rock harmonica was the lithokymbalom, of alabaster slabs, built by Franz Weber and displayed in Vienna in 1837.

Modern western composers have (to date) made sparing use of the lithophone. It occurs as Steinspiel in Carl Orff's Die Kluge, Die Bernauerin, Astutuli, Trionfi, Antigonae and Oedipus. It is also used by George Crumb in Ancient Voices of Children (1970).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Tran Van Khê: Viet-Nam: les traditions musicales (Paris, 1967; Ger. trans., 1982 [with new appx, incl. lithophones])

M. del R. Alvarez Martinez and L. Siemens Hernandez: 'The Lithographic Use of Large Natural Rocks in the Prehistoric

Canary Islands', The Archaeology of Early Music Cultures [II]: Berlin 1988, 1–10
P. Yule and M.Bemmann: 'Klangsteine aus Orissa: die frühesten Musikinstrumente Indiens?', Archeologia musicalis (1988), no.1, pp.46–50 [in Ger., Eng., Fr.]
E. Hickmann: 'Lithophone aus Ekuador', Archeologia musicalis (1988), no.1, pp.52–5 [in Ger., Eng., Fr.]
Ngô Dông Hai: 'Das Lithophon, ein Originalinstrument aus der vietnamesischen Antike', Archeologia musicalis (1988), no.1, 50–52 [in Ger., Eng., Fr.]
M. Dauvois and X.Boutillon: 'Caractérisation acoustique des grottes ornées paléolithiques et de leurs lithophones naturales', La plundisciplinalité en archéologie musicale: St Germain-en-Laye 1990, 207–56
A.M. Till: 'The Till Family Rock Band', Experimental Musical Instruments, vii (1992), 12–13
M. Clark: 'The Qing Lithophones of China', Experimental Musical Instruments, x/1 (1994), 29–35
C. Fagg: 'What is a Lithophone, and What is a Rock?', GSJ, xlvii (1994), 154–5

JAMES BLADES/R

Lithuania. Country in eastern Europe. The Grand Duchy of Lithuania was created in the 13th century. Lithuania was the last European state to convert to Christianity (1387–1413). In 1386 Grand Duke Jogaila was crowned King of Poland, and for 350 years Lithuania and Poland were united. During this period Russia, Prussia and Austria made territorial claims, and the Lithuanian-Polish state was partitioned three times. After the third partition (1795) Lithuania was a province of the Russian empire for almost 125 years. Tsarist oppression, with press and stage censorship, the closing of Vilnius University and the imposition of the Russian language in schools, theatres and publishing, provoked a national liberation movement. Following the revolution in Russia, Lithuania was proclaimed a sovereign state in 1918. In 1919 Poland began an occupation of southeastern Lithuania, including Vilnius (the capital), that lasted almost 20 years; Kaunas served as the capital during this period. After Lithuania was annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940 there were mass deportations to Siberia, particularly of the intelligentsia. In 1941 Lithuania was occupied by Hitler's army; in 1944, when they were expelled, a second Soviet occupation began. Lithuania lost almost a third of its population through deportations, armed resistance and emigration. On 11 March 1990 the sovereign Lithuanian state was restored.

I. Art music. II. Traditional music.

I. Art music

By the 14th century there was professional music in the courts of the Grand Dukes, and missionary monks had probably introduced Gregorian chant. Traditional instruments such as the kanklės and medinės triūbos may have been used in court ceremonies; court inventories mention the organ, clavichord, cymbals, harp, lute, kobsa, pan pipes, recorder and trumpet. Lithuanian and Polish musicians active in the 16th and 17th centuries included Stephanus Vilnensis [de Vylna], Kazimieras Stanislovas Rudamina, Wacław z Szamotuł, Mikołaj Gomółka, Cyprian Bazylik, Jan Brant, Krzystof Klabon, Simonas Berentas (1585–1649) and Marcin Kreczmer (1631–96). Lithuanian composers wrote masses and motets modelled on Netherlandish polyphonic works of the 15th and 16th centuries. The first Lithuanian book of psalms with musical notation was the Catechismusa Prasty Szadei (Königsberg, 1547) by Martynas Mažvydas. The Reformation encouraged the spread of the Protestant chorale and of psalms in Lithuanian and Polish. The Jesuits founded Lithuania's first university (1579), at Vilnius, as well as 11 school theatres which played a major part in musical life from the 16th century to the 18th. In 1667 Žygimantas Liauksminas (*c*1596–1670), professor at Vilnius University, published a manual of musical notation and choral singing, Ars et praxis musica. During the 17th century musical ensembles were maintained at the courts of Vilnius, Nesvyžius, Grodno and Slonim; some Lithuanian aristocrats were themselves composers, including members of the Radvila and Ogiński families.

With the decline of the educated Lithuanian aristocracy in the late 18th century, culture became increasingly democratized. The Vilnius City Theatre (active with interruptions 1785–1866) included melodramas and vaudevilles by Lithuanian composers in its repertory. The German composer and conductor J.D. Holland, who taught music theory, counterpoint and composition at Vilnius University (1802–26), established its chair of musicology in 1803. Amateur composers, most of them organists, were the first to aim at creating a national Lithuanian musical style; their works (harmonized traditional songs, masses and piano pieces) were not of a very high standard. The founders of a professional national school of composition were Česlovas Sasnauskas (1867–1916), Juozas Naujalis (1869–1934), Mikas Petrauskas (1873–1937) and most notably M.K. Čiurlionis (1875–1911). Their works are in the late Romantic tradition, sometimes tending towards Expressionism and Constructivism (Čiurlionis used his own serial technique in his piano preludes of 1904–5). Birutė (1906) by Petrauskas, usually considered the first Lithuanian opera, is in fact a play with incidental music; Petrauskas's more mature opera Eglė, Queen of the Grass-Snakes was completed in 1920. Other notable operas of the early 20th century were the historical-heroic Gražina (1933) by Jurgis Karnavičius (1884–1941), with simple and appealing music related to traditional melodies, and Trys talismanai (1934) by Antanas Račiūnas (1905–84). Other composers who helped to establish a national style during the inter-war years, often drawing on traditional Lithuanian music, were Yuozas Gruodis (1884–1948), Stasys Šimkus (1887–1943), Juozas Tallat-Kelpša, Balys Dvarionas (1904–72), Stasys Vainiūnas (1909–82) and Juozas Pakalnis (1912–48). In the 1930s some composers tried to unite the national style with a more modern musical language, notably Gruodis, Karnavičius, Kazimieras Viktoras Banaitis (1896–1963), Vladas Jakubėnas (1904–76), Vytautas Bacevičius (1905–70), Jeronimas Kačinskas (b 1907) and Julius Gaidelis (1909–83). In 1904 the first Lithuanian music journal, Vargonininkas ('The Organist', edited by Naujalis), appeared. Lithuanian emigrants to Russia, Latvia, Poland, the USA and Germany performed Lithuanian works in those countries and distributed gramophone records of Lithuanian music. The Archive of Lithuanian Folklore was created in 1935, and Juozas Žilevičius set up the Lithuanian Music Archive in Chicago.

With the Soviet annexation of Lithuania (1940) came the cultural dictatorship of Soviet Realism, the breaking of contact with modern Western music, and strict ideological censorship. Many placatory works of programme music were written. In 1948, as in all other Soviet republics, a union of composers and musicologists was founded. Until the 1960s most composers wrote in neoromantic and neo-classical styles, striving for simplicity and 'closeness to the people'. More progressive tendencies were inhibited by the communist-inspired opposition to 'formalism'. But the conservative musical language gave rise to some notable works by composers including Dvarionas, Račiūnas, Vainiūnas, Julius Juzeliūnas (b 1916), Eduardas Balsys (1919–84) and Vytautas Klova (b 1926). Composers who had emigrated (mostly to the USA), among them Bacevičius, Kačinskas and Gaidelis, and later Darius Lapinskas (b 1934), used more modern compositional techniques. The 'thaw' of the 1960s enlarged the horizons of composers in Lithuania; Juzeliūnas created an original harmonic system based on elements of traditional music, and Blasys used 12-note techniques. Other exponents of modern trends were Benjaminas Gorbulskis (1925–86), Vytautas Montvila (b 1935), Vytautas Barkauskas (b 1931), Vytautas Laurušas (b 1930), Vytautas Jurgutis (b 1930), Antanas Rekašius (b 1928), Algimantas Bražinskas (b 1937), Teisutis Makačinas (b 1938), Jurgis Juozapaitis (b 1942) and Borisas Borisovas (b 1937). Among prominent representatives of modern Lithuanian music are Feliksas Bajoras (b 1934), Bronius Kutavičius (b 1932) and Osvaldas Balakauskas (b 1937). In the late 1970s and early 80s a nostalgic, contemplative and minimalist tendency emerged, expressed in images of time standing still, an intimate lyricism, meditative atmospheric effects and repetitive techniques. Such works were written by Kutavičius, Bajoras, Juozapaitis, Mindaugas Urbaitis (b 1952), Algirdas Martinaitis (b 1950), Jonas Tamulionis (b 1949), Vidmantas Bartulis (b 1954) and Onutė Narbutaitė (b 1956). Younger composers are Rytis Mažulis (b 1961), Nomeda Valančiūtė (b 1961), Šarūnas Nakas (b 1962), Eglė Sausanavičiūtė (b 1963), Remigijus Merkelys (b 1964) and Antanas Jasenka (b 1965).

The music education system includes the Lithuanian Music Academy (in Vilnius, with one department in Kaunas), five conservatories (Vilnius, Kaunas, Klaipėda, Šiauliai, Panevėzys), three secondary schools specializing in music, and about 80 state music colleges. The Lithuanian Composers' Union consisted of about 120 composers and musicologists in 1996. Musicologists engaged in research into Lithuanian art music are Algirdas Ambrazas (b 1934), Jonas Bruveris (b 1939), Juozas Gaudrimas (b 1911), Ona Narbutienė (b 1930) and Vytautas Landsbergis (b 1932), who held the political office of President of the Supreme Council from 1990 to 1992.

See also VILNIUS.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (A. Tauragis); MGG2 ('Litauen'; J. Antanavičius)
A. Miller: Teatr i muzyka na Litwie 1745–1865 (Vilnius, 1935)
S. Yla, ed.: Lietuvių nacionalinė opera (Vilnius, 1960)
A. Tauragis: Lithuanian Music: Past and Present (Vilnius, 1971)
J. Bagdanskis: The Lithuanian Musical Scene (Vilnius, 1974)
V. Venkus: 'Musïkal'nïy teatr: operï i operettï', Iz istorii litovskoy muzïki, iii (Leningrad, 1978), 19–44
L. Mel'nikas: 'Litovskaya fortepiannaya i organnaya muzïka' [Lithuanian piano and organ music], Mezhnatsional'nïye svyazi v sovetskoy muzïkal'noy kul'ture (Leningrad, 1987), 193–207
R. Mikenaite: XX a. polifonija ir jos apraskos siuolaikineje lietuviu muzikoje: Mokymo priemone [20th-Century polyphony in Lithuanian music: an instructional aid] (Vilnius, 1987)
L. Melnikas: 'Einflüsse der italianischen Musik auf die Entwicklung der Musikkultur Litauens im 17. und in der ersten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts', Muzikzentren: Persönlichkeiten und Ensembles (Michaelstein and Blankenburg, 1988), 13–15
J. Trilupaitiene: 'Muzikai feodalineje Lietuvoje' [Musicians in feudal Lithuania], Menotyra: Iskusstvovedenie, xvii (1990), 56–68
J. Trilupaitiene: 'M. Gomolka i muzïkal'naya kultura Litvï v XVI veke' [Gomółka and musical culture in Lithuania in the 16th century], Pribalticheskiy muzïkovedicheskiy sbornik, iv (1992), 93–101
J. Vyliute: 'Die litauische Oper in den Jahren 1940–1990', Opera kot socialni ali politicni angazma/Oper als soziles oder politisches Engagement (Ljubljana, 1992), 196–203
J. Trilupaitiene: 'Baroko muzikos bruozai Lietuvoje' [Characteristics of Baroque music in Lithuania], Gama, no.2 (1993), 20–23
V. Bakutite: 'Das Objekt und das Subjekt der Geschichte der litauischen Musik (am Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts und im 19. Jahrhundert)', Music History Writing and National Culture (Tallinn, 1995), 7–16
J. Trilupaitiene: Jezuitu muzikine veikla Lietuvoje [The musical activities of the Jesuits in Lithuania] (Vilnius, 1995)

based on MGG2 (v, 1376–81) by permission of Bärenreiter

II. Traditional music

Music played an important ritual role in the culture of the early Baltic tribes who settled the southeastern coast of the Baltic from the late 3rd century BCE. By the end of the first millennium, there was a corpus of mythic and heroic epics that were delivered at funerary rites (these were later also used at court). The principal genre of traditional Lithuanian music is song (daina), with a rich repertory of songs used for feast days, dancing, weddings and family occasions, work and military songs, children's songs, comic songs, ballads and laments. Some songs are of ancient origin; many reflect daily life, others historical events (the struggle for Lithuanian independence in the early 20th century was vividly depicted in song). The present article discusses traditional Lithuanian music with origins before industrialization and the Soviet era. Until the mid-20th century Lithuania was an agricultural country, as is reflected in the themes and imagery of songs that deal with village working life and the close link with nature. A non-Christian concept of the world is retained in early traditional poetry: nature is personified and appeals are made to vegetation, trees, the 'broad field', the wind, sun and earth. A detached attitude to events prevails, man's life being seen as part of the natural cycle. The songs are generally lyrical and light, with no dramatic extremes. Narrative songs are lyrical in character; the ideas are compressed and dialogue alternates abruptly with narrative and lyric-dramatic elements. The poetry is rich in fixed symbols and epithets. Certain concepts, especially those of time and space, are given hyperbolic expression, while family relationships, particularly those of mother and child, brother and sister, are tenderly portrayed.

1. SONG GENRES. Besides the features common to traditional features Lithuanian music and poetry in general, there are certain regional genres and musical dialects, elements of which may date from before the 10th century, when Baltic and Slavonic tribes, and to some extent the Finno-Ugrians, were in close contact. The Dzūkija region in south-east Lithuania (adjoining Belarus) has retained the greatest quantity of stereotyped musical forms linked with work and ritual. These include many melodies with a range of three to five notes: children's, shepherds' and dance songs with accented rhythm, as well as many raudos (funeral laments) and wedding laments sung by the new bride, making use of free recitative. Work songs are richly represented and include songs for harvesting rye, oats and flax, for ploughing, haymaking, threshing, grinding corn, spinning and weaving. The cycle of harvest songs, sung by reapers during harvesting and at the concluding ritual, is particularly interesting; the melodies have a narrow range and are based on a unifying model, varied by different rhythmic patterns and freely prolonged 'notes of repose' (the minor 3rd or 4th), which also occur in more developed modal melodies.

Some of the more important ancient ritual and festive songs are related to the calendar, including Kalėdos (Christmas), winter and New Year songs; Užgavėnės (Shrove Tuesday) carnival songs, which involve the wearing of masks, the burning of a dummy and a circuit of the 'broad fields' to invoke a good harvest by loud singing; spring songs, including invocations of spring (in eastern Dzūkija), Velykos (Easter) songs, which accompany the customary young men's walk through the village offering congratulations, and swinging-songs sung to produce a plentiful harvest of flax and rye; and Kupolinės (Midsummer Night) festivities celebrated with blazing bonfires and the weaving of garlands. Round-dances depict the events before a wedding, the matchmaking and choice of a bride or groom. All these rituals and song texts have roots in the pre-Christian period.

2. Modal structures, rhythm and metre. The songs of the Dzūkija area are all monodic. Their versatile modal structures are based on melodic patterns of small intervals, which occur in rudimentary form in the earliest surviving examples. The ancient heptatonic modal melodies probably developed from the narrow-range systems and later increased in number. The most widespread modes were the G, A and C modes; the D and E modes were less common. The F mode is not characteristic except in the sutartinė concords (see §4 below). The harmonic minor is not characteristic either; the raising of the seventh degree is usually artificial. Alterations of A-mode melodies into the harmonic minor and attempts to perform them in two parts were perhaps prompted by the button accordion, introduced into Lithuania late in the 19th century. The pentatonic mode used in the east was probably derived from the Finnish tribes.

Except in simple isometric structures, the rhythmic organization of melodies is varied. Certain types of melody are notable for their rhythmic freedom, embellishments and the prolongation of culminating notes, and even in early songs the poetic accentuation is sometimes subordinated to the rhythms of the melody. In general, both melodic and textual rhythms are asymmetrical. The verse has a striking variety of speech inflections and displaced stresses; diphthongs, accented consonants and other phonetic irregularities apparently facilitated the development of free versification.

The most widespread musical metres are duple, quadruple and triple; asymmetrical metres are less common. Mixed metres take the following forms: predominantly 3/4 with occasional bars of 4/4 or vice versa; insertions – expansions or emotional interjections of a single bar – within regular metres; and repeated heterometric formulae of 5 + 3 quavers (ex.1), 4 + 5 quavers and, rarely, 5 + 3 + 3 quavers.

Ex.1 Heterometric formula (Ciurlionytė, 1966)

3. Song forms. The textual form of stanzas of free verse developed with a miniature musical form of two or three melodic lines; for example, a three-line stanza with five syllables (two bars) in each of the first two lines, and seven syllables (three bars) in the third.

Although the versification has great variety, the eight-bar melody is usually strictly constructed with specific motifs between cadences, melodic movement from the fourth degree to the second, and characteristic use of the tritone. The length of melody is independent of the number of syllables in the line. The most common forms are AABA, ABAC and ABCA. Melodies of three three-bar phrases (as in ex.2) belong to a special group. Mixed forms consist of regularly alternating two- and three-bar phrases, such as 2 + 3 + 2 + 3 (ex.3) or 3 + 2 + 3 + 2 arranged as ABAC (10 bars) or AABCA (13 bars).

Ex.2 (Ciurlionytė, 1966)

Ex.3 (Ciurlionyte, 1966)

♩ = 76

Kad as tu - rė - ciau pas tė - vu - li va - le - le,

as pa - sta - ty - ciau vi - dur dva - ro klė - te - [le].

The repetition of one or two of the last lines of a stanza at the beginning of the next is characteristic of earlier melodies; the repetition of the last two lines of a stanza is a later phenomenon. The stress of text and melody at the end of a song do not necessarily coincide: if the text has a feminine ending and the melody finishes on a strong beat, the last syllable of the text is omitted.

Dzūkijan melody is notable for its structural clarity, aphoristic quality and developed lines. The singers vary almost every stanza of the song, adding barely audible embellishments. The tempo is usually moderate and relaxed.

4. Polyphony. The polyphonic genre sutartinė ('concord' or 'singing in concord') which has been retained in northern Aukštaitija (south-east Lithuania, around the upper River Nemunas) is apparently one of the earliest forms of the synthesis of traditional poetry, music and dance. Sutartinės may be vocal, instrumental or mixed, or may be sung by dancers (see §5 below). Until the mid-20th century instrumental sutartinės were played on wind instruments associated with shepherds and on the kanklės, a type of zither (see §6 below). The principal characteristic of the sutartinė is its construction on simultaneous 2nds which are not resolved (see ex.4). The melodies consist of two similar parts: the text is sung to the first and meaningless refrains to the second, sung a 2nd higher or lower than the first. Numerous modifications include passing 4ths and the unison.

There are three basic types of sutartinė: contrapuntal, sung by two singers; canonic, sung by three singers entering in turn (each with a break) forming an endless chain of two-part counterpoint; and those which are mainly for dancing and performed antiphonally by two pairs of singers. The rhythm of the sutartinė is duple with clearcut scansion and sharply accented syncopation. The texts are concerned with working and community life. The large number of meaningless euphonious refrains points to the age of the sutartinė, of which the earliest do not have a semantic text but consist entirely of interjections.

Ex.4 Sutartinė, played on ragai (Čiurlionytė, 1966)

The sutartinė is disappearing but about 2000 live performances were collected (some on gramophone records) in the first half of the 20th century. Sutartinės were sung and danced by women only. Primitive simple songs, in which the first voice sings a two-bar text and the second answers with a refrain, are related to the sutartinė. Like the sutartinės they were sung in spring by women going round the fields.

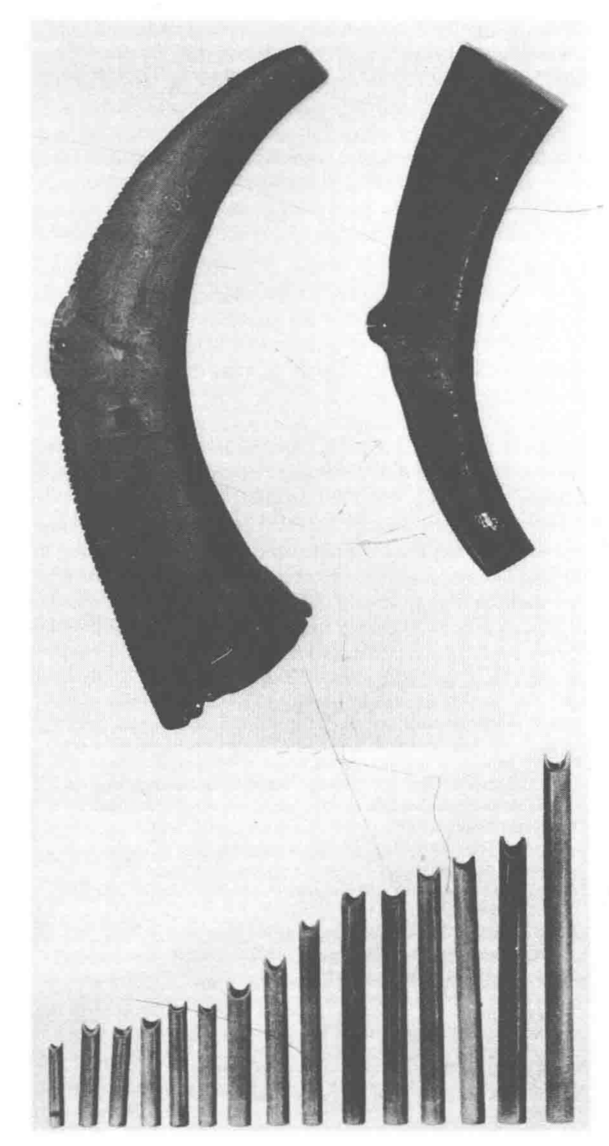
Two- and three-part diatonic homophonic singing, based on the three principal degrees (tonic, dominant and subdominant), is also widespread in Aukštaitija; it is increasingly important in collective singing, and threatening to supplant Dzūkijan monody. The origin of this genre has not been explained although it is known to have existed by the late 18th century. Žemaitija (western Lithuania) is also an area of homophonic part-singing, but the style of performance is different. Although the melodies have the same harmonic support as those of Aukštaitija, many of them are performed by solo singers in an improvisatory manner, and are marked by great rhythmic freedom and ornamentation. The principal support of the melody is the fifth of the scale which is accented rhythmically and dynamically, giving the melody a melancholy character.

5. DANCES. Dances are performed only collectively, the dancers themselves singing. One of the earliest dances, the sutartinė (see §4 above), is performed by women in groups of two pairs who sing a dialogue while crossing or changing places and forming circles and chains, sometimes in imitation of work movements. The steps are mainly small, without leaps, and the tempo is moderate. The texts, mostly humorous, are sung only by the dancers and without instrumental accompaniment.

Ritual round-dances form a separate group. Those for Christmas (Kalėdos) have restrained dance-figures, given meaning by the ritual context: the texts reflect a pre-Christian ideology. Among the dances usually accompanied by an instrumental ensemble are wedding round-dances. Many round-dances imitate work movements, for example Linelis ('Flax') or Dobilas ('Clover') representing the growth and use of these plants, Kalvis ('The Smith') and Kurpius ('The Shoemaker'). In figurative round-dances the dancers imitate the movements of birds and animals, for example the men's dance Oželis ('Little Billy-Goat') or Blezdingėlė ('The Swallow') in which girls dance waving their kerchiefs.

Rateliai (game-dances) have rich choreographic patterns, the dancers being symmetrically grouped, but the movements do not illustrate the content of the song; they are restrained, without any leaps, consisting of running and lateral, double, triple and polka steps. The speed is moderate, sometimes with several tempos in one dance. Later dances – the polka, waltz and quadrille – have been adopted from the West.

Traditional song and dance ensembles enjoy great popularity. Some attempt to reproduce authentic traditional art, and make a significant contribution to research; others use traditional material to create a new style which is accessible to contemporary audiences.



6. INSTRUMENTS. The most varied and interesting early instruments survive in north Lithuania in the sutartinė area (see §4 above). Wind music, based like the sutartinė on simultaneous 2nds, was played there as late as the first half of the 20th century.

Skudučiai (sing. skudutis) are a set of separate stopped wooden pipes with two sickle-shaped cuts in the rim (fig.1*a*). The pipes are 8 to 20 cm long; each produces only one note and the tuning of the sets varies. In a group of two to five players each uses one, two or three pipes thus producing three, four or five simultaneous 2nds played in rhythmic patterns.

The ragas is a wooden trumpet used in the same type of ensemble as the skudučiai. It is made by splitting a piece of ash wood lengthways and hollowing out a channel in the two halves; these are then fastened together with birch bark and a mouthpiece is cut out at the upper end. Each ragas produces one note, and the set consists of five, tuned in 2nds.

The trimitas or daudytė, a long cylindrical wooden trumpet with a small conical bell, is made from alder, ash or spruce in the same way as the ragas. It is 100 to 250 cm long and produces a natural scale. Used by the skerdžius (senior shepherd) or at weddings and celebrations, it is played singly or in pairs.

The ožragis (goat horn, fig.1*b*) has four or five finger-holes and produces the notes of a major pentachord; it is used by the skerdžius when herding livestock.

1. (a) Set of skudučiai (wooden pipes); (b) two ožragai (goat horns)

The birbynė, a wind instrument made of maple or ash, has a conical barrel with five or six finger-holes; a mouthpiece of the clarinet type is inserted at the upper end and a cow-horn bell is attached at the lower. The birbynė produces a gentle tone and is used as a solo instrument.

The lumzdelis, a duct flute made of the wood or bark of the bird-cherry (prunus padus), willow or aspen, is 15 to 40 cm long. The upper end is bevelled into a beak shape, and it has six to nine finger-holes producing a diatonic scale with a range of a 7th. The lumzdelis is a shepherd's instrument played while driving livestock to pasture, with characteristic use of trills and grace notes. Two are sometimes played together.

Of the string instruments, the kanklės (a type of plucked zither) is the best-known KANTELE. Its size varies, but the body is basically trapeziform and is hollowed out of one piece or made from boards of lime, oak, aspen or ash glued together; the soundboard is of spruce, the sound-holes are circular and usually ornamented, and it has between five and ten strings. It is played resting on the knees; the strings are plucked with the right hand and damped with the left. Its earliest use seems to have been for a kind of meditation; it is used for solo performances of sutartinės (see §4 above) and has also been played in other instrumental ensembles and to accompany song.

The most widespread percussion instruments are the tambourine, the kelmas (a drum, made from a hollowed-out tree stump covered with skin) and skrabalai (a set of small wooden bells).

The village instrumental ensemble consisted of a violin (adopted from the West in the late 16th century), a birbynė and a 'bass' (cello). From the mid-19th century onwards Lithuanian musicians began to include instruments of other peoples (accordion, concertina, clarinet, cymbals, guitar, mandolin) in ensembles alongside traditional Lithuanian instruments, especially as foreign dances such as the polka, waltz, mazurka and quadrille became popular. In the 20th century some traditional instruments, including the kanklės and birbynė, were modified for use in art music; professional orchestras with traditional instruments were formed and some composers wrote works for them in traditional styles. Traditional instruments are taught at conservatories and at the Academy of Music in Vilnius.

7. RESEARCH. Ludwig Rhesa included seven traditional tunes in a collection of traditional song texts published in Königsberg in 1825. This was followed by publications by Simonas Stanevičius (1829), Georg Nesselmann (1853), Friedrich Kurszatis (1876), Oskar Kolberg (1879), Adalbert Bezzenberger (1882), Christian Bartsch (1886–9) and Antanas Juška (1880–82; 1883; 1900). Major 20th-century collections are listed in the bibliography. The publication of a catalogue of traditional Lithuanian songs, Lietuvių liaudies dainų katalogas, began in 1972; a multi-volume collection of traditional songs, Lietuvių liaudies dainynas, began to appear in 1980. The most comprehensive archives of traditional music are the Institute of Lithuanian Literature and Folklore (*c*120,000 items) and the Archive of Ethnic Music at the Lithuanian Academy of Music (*c*85,000 items).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

COLLECTIONS

C. Bartsch: Dainų Balsai: Melodien litauischer Volkslieder (Heidelberg, 1886–9)
A. Juszkiewicz: Melodje ludowe litewskie [Lithuanian folk melodies], ed. O. Kolberg and I. Kopernicki (Kraków, 1900)
A. Sabaliauskas: Lietuvių dainų ir giesmių gaidos [Melodies of Lithuanian songs and choral rounds] (Helsinki, 1916)
T. Brazys: Lietuvių tautinių dainų melodijos [Lithuanian folksong melodies] (Kaunas, 1927)
U. Katzenelenbogen: The Daina (Chicago, 1935)
J. Čiurlionytė: Lietuvių liaudies melodijos [Lithuanian folk melodies] (Kaunas, 1938)
J. Čiurlionytė: Lietuvių liaudies dainos vaikams [Lithuanian folksongs for children] (Kaunas, 1948)
V.F. Beliajus: The Dance of Lietuva: 54 Circle and Folk Dances from Lithuania (Chicago, 1951)
A. Juška: Lietuviškos dainos [Lithuanian songs], ed. A. Mockus and J. Čiurlionytė (Vilnius, 1954)
J. Čiurlionytė: Lietuvių liaudies dainų rinktinė [A selection of Lithuanian folksongs] (Vilnius, 1955) [in Lith. and Russ.]
A. Juška: Lietuviškos svodbinės dainos [Lithuanian wedding songs], ed. V. Maknys, V. Paltanavičius and Z. Slaviūnas (Vilnius, 1955)
Z. Slaviūnas: Sutartinės: lietuvių liaudies daugiabalsės dainos [Sutartinės: polyphonic Lithuanian folksongs] (Vilnius, 1958–9; Russ. trans., 1972)

S. Paliulis: Lietuvių liaudies instrumentinė muzika: pūčiamieji instrumentai [Lithuanian folk instrumental music: wind instruments] (Vilnius, 1959)
A. Landsbergis and C. Mills: The Green Linden (New York, 1964)
L. Burkšaitienė and D. Krištopaitė, eds.: Aukštaičių melodijos [Melodies from the Aukštaitija region] (Vilnius, 1990)

STUDIES

T. Brazys: 'Die Singweisen der litauischen Dainos', Tauta ir žodis, iv (1926), 3–50
B. Sruoga: 'Lithuanian Folk Songs', Folk-Lore, xliii (1932), 301
J. Balys: 'Lithuanian Folk Dance', JEFDSS, ii (1935), 139–42
J. Žilevičius: 'Native Lithuanian Musical Instruments', MQ, xxi (1935), 99–106
Z. Slaviūnas: 'Lietuvių kanklės', Tautosakos darbai, iii (1937), 244–318 [with Eng. summary]
Z. Slaviūnas: 'Lietuvių etnografinės muzikos bibliografija', Tautosakos darbai, v (1938), 281–300
A. Paterson: Old Lithuanian Songs (Kaunas, 1939)
J. Čiurlionytė: 'Kaip užrašnėti liaudies melodijas' [How to write down folk melodies], Tautosakos rinkėjo vadovas, ed. J. Balys (Kaunas, 2/1940), 77–111
E. Geist: Antikes und Modernes im litauischen Volkslied (Kaunas, 1940)
V.F. Bieliajus: The Dance of Lietuva (Chicago, 1951)
J. Lingys, Z. Slaviūnas and V. Jakelaitis: Litovskiye narodnïye tantsï [Lithuanian folkdances] (Vilnius, 1953, enlarged 2/1955)
J. Balys: Lithuanian Narrative Folksongs (Washington, 1954)
P. Stepulis: Kanklės (Vilnius, 1955)
J. Balys: Lithuanian Folksongs in America (Boston, 1958)
J. Čiurlionytė: Litovskoye narodnoye pesennoye tvorchestvo [Lithuanian folksong culture] (Moscow, 1966)
J. Čiurlionytė: 'Die Sutartinė: eine besondere Art des litauischen mehrstimmigen Volksgesanges', DJbM, xii (1967), 116–23
Z. Slaviūnas: 'Zur litauischen Vokalpolyphonie', Deutsches Jb für Volkskunde, xiii (1967), 223–43
G. Četkauskaitė: 'Lietuvių muzikinio folklore klasifikacijos principai' [The classification principles of Lithuanian folk music], Liaudies kūryba, i, ed. A. Stravinskas and others (Vilnius, 1969), 144–61
J. Čiurlionytė: Lietuvių liaudies dainų melodikos [Outlines of Lithuanian folksongs] (Vilnius, 1969)
A. Venckus: 'Šešiagarsės lietuvių liaudies muzikos dermės' [The hexatonic modes of Lithuanian folk music], Liaudies kūryba, i, ed. A. Stravinskas and others (Vilnius, 1969), 68–78
G. Krivickienė-Gustaitytė: Vilnius Lietuvių liaudies dainose [Vilnius in Lithuanian folksongs] (Chicago, 1970) [with Eng. summary]
L. Sauka: 'Lietuvių laidotuviu raudu metras' [The metre of Lithuanian funeral laments], Lietuvos TSR Mokslu Akademijos darbai, ser. A, xxxix/2 (1972), 121–34
M. Baltrenene: Litovskiye narodnïye muzïkal'nyïe instrumentï [Lithuanian folk instruments] (diss. Leningrad Institute for Theatre, Music and Cinematography, 1974) [in Russ.]
B. Kazlauskiene: Vestuvins dainos: jaunojo puseje [Classification of Lithuanian wedding songs] (Vilnius, 1977) [with Ger. summary]
R. Apanavicius: 'Lietuvių liaudies muzikos instrumentu tobulinimas' [Improvements in Lithuanian folk musical instruments], Menotyra, xiii (1985), 20–32
R. Astrauskas: 'Kai kurie lietuvių liaudies dainų ritmikos bruožai' [Some rhythmic features of the Lithuanian folksong], ibid., 50–69
Z. Kelmickaite: 'Tradicinis muzikinis folkloras siandienineje lietuvių kulturoje' [Traditional musical folklore in the modern culture of Lithuania], ibid., 4–10
R. Sliuzinskas: 'Anhemetonikos bruožai lietuvių liaudies dainų melodikojc' [Anhemitonic features in Lithuanian folksong melodies], ibid., 34–49
L. Burkšajtenė: 'Funktsional'nïye osobennosti melodiki litovskikh svadebnïkh pesen' [Functional characteristics of Lithuanian wedding song melodies], Muzïka v svadebnom obryade finnougrov i sosednikh narodnov, ed. I. Rüütel and K. Pak (Tallinn, 1986), 56–65 [in Russ.]
H.D. Rinholm: 'Lithuanian Folksong Poetics: Remarks on Imagery in Text and Context', Linguistics and Poetics of Latvian Folk Songs: Essays in Honour of the Sesquicentennial of the birth of Kr. Barons, ed. V. Vikis-Freiburgs (Kingston, ON, 1989), 123–35
L. Madetoja: 'Liettualaisista kansansävelmistä' [Lithuanian folk melodies], Etnomusikologian vuosikirja, iii (1989–90), 212–32
N. Laurinkienė: Mito atšvaitai lietuvių kalendorinese dainose [Mythological reflections in Lithuanian calendar songs] (Vilnius, 1990)
M. Baltrėniėne and R. Apanavičius: Lietuvių liaudies muzikos instrumentai [Lithuanian folk music instruments] (Vilnius, 1991)
Ritual and Music: Vilnius 1997 [incl. R. Astrauskas: 'The Lithuanian Calendar Rites and Music: On the Issue of Cycle Unity', 55–67; G. Kirdiene: 'Die Litauische Geigen-Volksmusik in den Hachzeitsriten-und Zeremonien', 96–114]
R. Sliuzinskas: 'Dudy w tradycyjnej muzyce instrumentalnej litwy' [The bagpipe in the traditional music of Lithuania], Muzyka, xliii/3 (1998), 113–18

JUOZAS ANTANAVIČIUS (I), JADVYGA ČIURLIONYTĖ/R (II)

Li Tingsong (b Shanghai, 1906; d 11 Aug 1976). Chinese PIPA plucked lute player. Li Tingsong was one of the leading pipa performers of his generation, taking up the instrument aged 16 and studying principally with Wang Yuting (1872–1951). Active in the nationalist music reform movement of the 1920s–30s, Li's career was thereafter a combination of solo and ensemble performance, the editing of classical scores and teaching. In this latter role, he held posts at music conservatories in Beijing, Tianjin, Shenyang, Harbin and Jilin.

Li was also attached as a special performer to the China Music Research Institute (Zhongguo yinyue yanjiusuo) in Beijing, an appointment he received in 1952. As part of his research there, Li carried out extensive investigation of pipa scales and temperament, but he was best known for his mastery in performance.

See also CHINA, §IV, 4(ii).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

Zhongyang yinyue xueyuan minzu qiyue xi and yinyue lilun xi, eds.: Minzu yueqi chuantong duzouqu xuanji: pipa zhuanji [Selected collection of traditional solos for national instruments: pipa vol.] (Beijing, 1980), 17–37
Li Guangzu, ed.: Pipa guqu: Li Tingsong yanzou pu [Classic pieces for pipa: performing score of Li Tingsong] (Beijing, 1982)
Zhongguo yinyue cidian [Dictionary of Chinese music], YYS pubn (Beijing, 1985), 228
Zheng Ruzhong: 'Zhiwei minyue, hongyang minyue: ji pipa yanzoujia Li Tingsong' [Devoted to folk music, expander of folk music: a record of pipa musician Li Tingsong], Youmei de xuanlü piaoxiang de ge – Jiangsu lidai yinyuejia, ed. Yi Ren (Nanjing, 1992), 167–9

RECORDINGS

Chine: musique classique, Ocora V 559039 (1988)
Pipa daquan [Anthology of the pipa], China Record Co. XJH-15 (1990)
Special Collection of Contemporary Chinese Musicians, Wind Records CH-07 (1996)

JONATHAN P.J. STOCK

Litofono (It.). See LITHOPHONE.

Litolff. German firm of music publishers. Gottfried Martin Meyer founded the firm on 1 June 1828 at Brunswick as a combined music press and shop; it soon grew into a flourishing business. After Meyer's death in 1849, his widow carried on the business successfully and in 1851 she married Henry Litolff, who became active in the firm. Later the name was changed to Henry Litolff's Verlag. An added impetus to the publishing was given by Litolff's extensive international connections and friendships with Berlioz, Fétis, Moscheles, Liszt, Bülow, the Wieniawski brothers, Heller, Joachim, H.W. Ernst and others. Meyer's son Theodor Litolff (1839–1912), who had been adopted by Henry Litolff, took over the business when his stepfather returned to concert-giving.

It was Theodor's untiring work as a far-sighted administrator and ingenious inventor, improving the fast-running printing press, the printing from zinc engravings and the combined printing of music and words, that gained an international reputation for the firm. In 1862 he began to publish Beethoven's works in regular editions, and this led in 1864 to the series Litolffs Bibliothek Classischer Compositionen, a collection of carefully edited classical compositions which achieved worldwide distribution. Soon the format was successfully adopted by other German and by foreign publishers. Litolff also quickly became a leading publisher of teaching material, most of which was carefully prepared by his brother-in-law Adolph Bente (1840–1913), who worked with him for nearly 50 years; this included new piano and violin tutors, the Instruktives Liederalbum and Buch der Lieder. Litolff also attracted leading writers such as Louis Köhler (whose Praktischer Lehrgang des Klavierspiels had sold over a million copies by 1914), Gurlitt, Riemann, Heinrich Germer, Johann Wohlfahrt and Heinrich Götze. The series of monthly issues entitled Die musikalische Welt: Monatshefte ausgewählter Compositionen unserer Zeit, edited by Franz Abt and Clemens Schultze (19 vols., 1872–90), was aimed at the domestic music market, and Litolff's light music publications were immensely popular.

In 1912 the firm passed to Theodor's son Richard Litolff (1876–1937), who from 1899 had received energetic support from his brother-in-law Clemens Schultze-Biesantz, a notable editor and publisher. In 1937 the management was taken over by Richard's widow (d 1957). Under her careful management, in which she was advised by Franz Rühlmann, particular attention was paid to educational and domestic music (with the series Scholasticum and Hausmusik der Zeit) and to music of contemporary composers including Trapp, Graener, Heinrich Kaminski, Knab, Karl Hasse and Höffer. Musicological works were published for the first time, including Sandberger's Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch (from 1935), writings of Max Seiffert, H.J. Moser, Friedrich Blume and Franz Rühlmann, several volumes of the series Das Erbe Deutscher Musik, a collected edition of the works of Weber and the series Das Weltliche Konzert im 18. Jahrhundert (from 1932).

On 9 August 1940 the Litolff firm was taken over by the music publishers Peters of Leipzig. It continues to publish under its own name from the Peters firm at Frankfurt; its catalogue specializes in works by contemporary composers.

For bibliography see LITOLFF, HENRY.

FRITZ STEIN

Litolff, Henry (Charles) (b London, 7 Aug 1818; d Bois-Colombes, 5 Aug 1891). French composer and pianist. He was the son of the Alsatian dance violinist Martin Louis Litolff, who was taken prisoner by the English during the Peninsular War in Spain and settled in London, where he married a Scotswoman, Sophie Hayes. Until he was 12 Henry was taught by his father, and from 1830 to 1835 he studied with Ignaz Moscheles. At the age of 17, he eloped to Gretna Green with 16-year-old Elisabeth Etherington; he moved to Melun and in the same year to Paris, where he became acquainted with Fétis, Henri Pape and Pierre-Joseph-Guillaume Zimmermann, who encouraged him in his concert career (Zimmermann was probably his teacher). At Fétis's request he went to Brussels (1839–41), also at that time separating from his wife. He gave concerts in Brussels and then moved to Warsaw; although there is no trace of him for the next three years he was, according to Fétis, conductor of the National Theatre orchestra.

In 1844 Litolff returned to Germany; he had been periodically troubled by a nervous disorder. He gave concerts in Leipzig and in Dresden, where he was befriended and helped with his malady by the Bülow family; he taught Hans von Bülow for at least a year. After a successful concert tour to Berlin (1845), he returned to England hoping to divorce his first wife; the attempt was abortive and he incurred a severe fine and prison sentence. He escaped (helped by the gaoler's daughter) to the Netherlands, where he became popular with Dutch audiences. About 1846 he made friends with the music publisher Gottfried Meyer and his wife Julie in Brunswick. After Meyer's death in 1849 Litolff became a citizen of Brunswick; he succeeded in divorcing his first wife, and married Julie Meyer on 30 March 1851, also assuming control of the publishing firm and changing its name to Henry Litolff's Verlag. During his residence in Brunswick he organized festivals, creating for Brunswick a musical life that was enhanced by such musicians as Berlioz, Liszt, Bülow and Anton Rubinstein. Although he had continued to perform throughout Europe during this period, he gave his full attention to concert-giving about 1854, and in 1855 was appointed Kapellmeister at the court of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. In 1858 he divorced his second wife and settled in Paris, which remained his home for the rest of his life.

While Litolff's previous interests had been performing and composing (mainly for the piano) he now concentrated on composing and conducting. During the 1860s he was well known in Paris as a conductor and piano teacher. He remained there during the Commune, and was involved in organizing official musical celebrations during the siege of Paris in 1871. In 1860 he married Louise, the daughter of Count Wilfrid de Larochefoucauld. After her death in 1873 he married a 17-year-old girl who evidently had nursed him back to health in the preceding year. According to his personal letters he was enfeebled in his last years.

Litolff's finest compositions are the four surviving piano concertos that he entitled concertos symphoniques; this term represented a new attitude towards the broadening of the Classical keyboard concerto form. Liszt, who admired Litolff, thought so highly of the concerto symphonique conception that he dedicated his own Concerto no.1 to Litolff and drew on his techniques. These concertos are really symphonies with piano obbligato, the thematic material usually being reserved for the orchestra; the scherzo movements contain some of his most brilliant writing. Litolff was probably also the first to use the triangle and the piccolo in the keyboard concerto.

Litolff's solo piano music was intended mainly for the salon, ostentatiously brilliant, improvisatory, seeking unity of mood and descriptively titled; most of it is in ABA form, with a simple melody either preceded or followed by a bravura section. Like much 19th-century lyrical piano music his pieces are unicellular – a whole movement is based on a single motif that is fully exploited but never divided, determining the development rather than being only a part of it. As a structural device it has parallels in other 19th-century techniques and is naturally apt to the presentation of a single mood. His greatest failing in this regard (recognized by his contemporaries) was excessive literal repetition.

His other works – French and German operas, lieder, chansons and chamber music – are similarly representative of the prevalent stylistic forms of his time. Although remembered chiefly for only one piece (the Scherzo of the Concerto symphonique no.4), Litolff remains important to the study of Romantic piano writing, particularly for his association with and influence on Liszt.

WORKS
printed works published in Brunswick unless otherwise stated

STAGE

Catherine Howard, Brussels, Conservatory, April 1847
Die Braut von Kynast (grosse romantische Oper, 3, F. Fischer), Brunswick, 3 Oct 1847, vs (*c*1847)
Rodrigo von Toledo, *c*1848
Le chevalier Nahal, ou La gageure du diable (oc, 3, E. Plouvier), Baden-Baden, 10 Aug 1866
La boîte de Pandore (3, T. Barrière), Paris, Folies-Dramatiques, Oct 1871, vs (Paris, 1871)
Héloïse et Abélard (3, Clairville and W. Busnach), Paris, Folies-Dramatiques, 17 Oct 1872, F-Po, vs (Paris, *c*1872)
La belle au bois dormant (opéra féerie, 3, Busnach and Clairville), Paris, Châtelet, 4 April 1874
La fiancée du roi de Garbe (4, A. Dennery and Chabrillat), Paris, Folies-Dramatiques, 29 Oct 1874, vs (Paris, 1874)
La mandragore (oc, 3, J. Brésil, after A. Dumas père: Mémoires d'un médecin), Brussels, Fantaisies-Parisiennes, 29 Jan 1876
Les templiers (5, J. Adenis, A. Silvestre and L. Bonnemère), Brussels, Monnaie, 25 Jan 1886, vs and full ballet score (Paris, 1886)
L'escadron volant de la reine (3, Dennery and Brésil), Paris, 14 Dec 1888, vs (Paris, 1888)
Le roi Lear [König Lear] (3, J. and E. Adenis, after W. Shakespeare and R. Holinshed), Po, ov. (1890)

OTHER VOCAL

Ruth et Boaz (orat, H. Lefebvre), vs (Paris, 1869)
Scenen aus Goethes Faust, solo vv, chorus, orch, F-Pn, vs pubd as op.103 (*c*1875)
2 other vocal-orch works; 19 songs, 1v, pf, incl. 9 in opp.49, 58, 67 and 76, 6 in Pn

ORCHESTRAL

4 ovs.: Maximilian Robespierre, op.55 (1856), Das Welflied von Gustav von Meyern, op.99 (1856), Chant des Belges, op.101 (?1858), Die Girondisten, op.80 (*c*1870); A la mémoire de Meyerbeer, marche funèbre, Po; 3 other works
For pf, orch: 5 concertos symphoniques: no.1 lost, no.2, op.22 (Berlin, 1844), no.3, op.45 (*c*1846), no.4, op.102 (*c*1852), no.5, op.123 (*c*1867)
For vn, orch: Rêve d'un captif, op.41 (n.d.); Eroica concerto symphonique, op.42 (n.d.); Rêve d'amour, op.53 (n.d.); Sérénade, op.61 (n.d.), also arr. vc, pf; 3 other works

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Chbr: Str Qt, op.60; 3 pf trios, opp.47, 56, 100
For pf: 117 characteristic pieces, incl. Spinnlied, op.81 (*c*1850), Zweites Spinnlied, op.104 (*c*1860), Les octaves, op.106 (*c*1860), 9 Lieder ohne Worte, opp.31 and 83; numerous dances

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1 (F. Stein)
W.R. Griepenkerl: 'Henry Litolff und die moderne Instrumentalmusik', NZM, xxvii (1847), 261–3
C. Moscheles: Aus Moscheles' Leben (Leipzig, 1873)
C. Moscheles: Recent Music and Musicians as Described in the Diaries and Correspondence of Ignatz Moscheles (New York, 1873)
S. Daniel: La musique arabe (Algiers, 1879; Eng. trans., ed. H.G. Farmer, 1914/R)
R. Procházka: 'Henry Litolff', NZM, lxxxvii (1891), 149–50
La Mara, ed.: Franz Liszt's Briefe (Leipzig, 1893–1902)
M. von Bülow: Hans von Bülows Briefe (Leipzig, 1899)
H. Berlioz: Les musiciens et la musique, ed. A. Hallays (Paris, 1903), 303–15
Collection Litolff (50 Jahre): Haus-Chronik von Henry Litolff's Verlag (Brunswick, 1914)
P. Magnette: 'Henry Litolff: seine Laufbahn in Deutschland', Die Musik, xiii/3 (1913–14), 16–23
A.H. King: 'A Subscription List to Mozart's Così fan tutte', The Library, 5th ser., vii (1952), 132–3
T.M. Blair: Henry Charles Litolff (1818–1891): his Life and Piano Music (diss., U. of Iowa, 1968) [with list of works]
R. Myers: Emmanuel Chabrier and his Circle (London, 1969), 81
L. Muns: 'Spinnen in de muziek van de 19e eeuw', Mens en melodie, xxxix (1984), 242–9
A. Walker: Franz Liszt: the Weimar Years 1848–1861 (London, 1989), 214, 216, 265
D.I. Allsobrook: Liszt: My Travelling Circus Life (London, 1991), 33
K. Ellis: Music Criticism in Nineteenth-Century France (Cambridge, 1995), 164, 166–7, 217

TED M. BLAIR/THOMAS COOPER

Littkeman, Paul. See LUETKEMAN, PAUL.

Little, Tasmin (b London, 13 May 1965). English violinist. She studied at the Yehudi Menuhin School and the GSM, and with Lorand Fenyves in Canada. She made her major recital début with Piers Lane at the Purcell Room (1988) and her Proms début in 1990, giving the London première of the Janáček Violin Concerto with Mackerras. She has subsequently achieved an international reputation, making her débuts in Australia and New Zealand in 1996 and in the USA in 1997, when she played with both the Cleveland Orchestra and the New York PO. Her paper on the Delius Violin Concerto was published by the Delius Society in 1986, and she gave the first Leipzig performance of the concerto the same year. In 1997 she made a television documentary programme about Delius for the BBC. Little has made many recordings, including the concertos of Brahms, Sibelius, Dvořák, Delius and Rubbra, and has given world premières of concertos by Robert Saxton and David Earl. Her playing, on a Guadagnini dated 1757, is poised and sweet-toned, with a wide dynamic range. (J. Duchen: 'Little at Large', The Strad, ci, 1990, 615–17)

MARGARET CAMPBELL

Little, William (fl Philadelphia, 1798–1805). American music printer and tune book compiler. In 1801, in collaboration with William Smith, he published in Philadelphia The Easy Instructor, or A New Method of Teaching Sacred Harmony. This volume employed a notation based on fasola solmization – the first shape-note system to gain acceptance. The music in the first edition of The Easy Instructor is almost entirely American (100 of 105 pieces); Little himself contributed four works to the volume, while Smith is represented by one. Smith (who is assumed by Kaufman to be the man of that name b Hopewell, NJ, 1761; d 1808) brought out a second volume of the book on his own (Hopewell, NJ, 1803, 2/1806), but neither compiler was associated with any of the subsequent issues of The Easy Instructor. By 1831 it had reached 35 editions and had become influential throughout the country.

See also SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Lowens and A.P.Britton: 'The Easy Instructor (1798–1831): a History and Bibliography of the First Shape-Note Tune-Book', Music and Musicians in Early America (New York, 1964), 115, 292
C.H. Kaufman: Music in New Jersey, 1655–1860: a Study of Musical Activity and Musicians in New Jersey from its First Settlement to the Civil War (diss., New York U., 1974)

HARRY ESKEW

Little Feat. American rock group. It was formed in 1969 by the singer and guitarist Lowell George (b Texas, 13 April 1945; d Arlington, VA, 29 June 1979) and the keyboard player Bill (William) Payne (b Waco, TX, 12 March 1949); the other founding members were the bass guitarist Roy Estrada and drummer Richie Hayward. George was the group's leader and principal songwriter; his ornate, blues-influenced singing and precise slide-guitar playing, in combination with Payne's penchant for chromatic harmonies and complex rhythms, were a feature of Little Feat's style; for example the song Strawberry Flats from their eponymous first album. On their first two albums they encompassed blues, country music and basic rock, but George's lyrics were distinctive for their absurd humour. After the commercial failure of Little Feat's second album, Sailin' Shoes (WB, 1972), Estrada was replaced by Kenny Gradney (b New Orleans), and the group was augmented by the guitarist Paul Barrere (b Burbank, CA, 3 July 1948) and the percussionist and drummer Sam Clayton. Dixie Chicken (WB, 1973), probably their finest album, blended New Orleans funk (recalling the Meters), twin lead-guitar lines (reminiscent of the Allman Brothers), and hints of mariachi style and gospel music; one song, The Fan, in a driving 7/4, is an early example of the group's experiments with jazz-rock.

Little Feat made successful tours and developed a cult following, especially in the East and South. Gradually Payne and Barrere began writing and singing the greater part of Little Feat's material. The Last Record Album (WB, 1975) and Time Loves a Hero (WB, 1977) moved closer to jazz-rock and show less of George's direct influence. However, the live album Waiting for Columbus (WB, 1978), which was recorded with the Tower of Power horns and became Little Feat's only gold record, was a showcase for George's songs and performances. In 1979 George completed a solo album, Thanks, I'll Eat it Here (WB) and announced that Little Feat had broken up. In 1988 the group released a new album, Let it Roll (WB), with Craig Fuller taking George's place. They continued to record and tour into the 1990s, but their music suffered from over-production and the absence of George.

Throughout a turbulent career Little Feat was more influential than popular; its style mixed funk, blues, rock, jazz and tinges of classical music, and showed a flair for verbal and musical surrealism. The group claimed many of the popular-music styles of the American South (New Orleans funk, Texas blues, Georgia boogie and Memphis soul) and added its own clever, self-conscious twists.

JON PARELES

Little Hours. Services in the DIVINE OFFICE held at regular intervals during the day. Various early Christian writers advocated prayer or other devotions at the third, sixth and ninth hours of the day according to the Roman reckoning (i.e. at approximately 9 a.m., 12 noon and 3 p.m.). These same hours were important in the secular affairs of Ancient Roman cities and were often marked by the sounding of a bell; they also played a role in Jewish observances and quickly acquired religious significance (usually allegorical symbolism) in early Christian writings. The Spanish nun Egeria described services held in Jerusalem at the third, sixth and ninth hours. Later Western usage named these hours Terce, Sext and None. Prime, the fourth of the Little Hours in the Western tradition, is held at daybreak after Lauds; its origins are disputed but may be Eastern, if the service mentioned in a controversial passage in the Institutiones of John Cassian really is that of Prime. The earliest unambiguous allusions to Prime, and thus to the complete cycle of Little Hours, appear in Gallican monastic rules of the 6th century. With the detailed descriptions in the Rule of St Benedict (*c*530), the Little Hours may be said to have reached their final form, at least as regards Western monastic usage. Early sources for the Byzantine Office have not survived, but by the Middle Ages, if not before, the monastic tradition required celebration of the Little Hours eight times a day (12 times in Lent).

Each of the Little Hours in the Western tradition begins with the versicle and response Deus in adjutorium followed by a hymn. Hymns for the Little Hours are mentioned in the Rule of St Benedict, although the hymns most often sung in these Hours seem to have been composed somewhat later: for Prime, Jam lucis orto sidere, for Terce, Nunc Sancte nobis Spiritus, for Sext, Rector potens verax Deus, and for None, Rerum Deus tenax vigor. On some feasts these are replaced by Proper hymns. Despite their early use in the monastic cursus, hymns were not introduced into the Roman cursus until a rather late date: they are lacking from some manuscripts as late as the 12th century.

A single antiphon introduces the psalms of each of the Little Hours. Usually the four antiphons needed for this are borrowed in order from Lauds, with the fourth of the five Lauds antiphons (that for the Old Testament canticle) omitted. In their psalms, the monastic and Roman cursus are quite different. In the monastic cursus, Prime has four psalms on Sunday and three for each weekday; Terce, Sext and None always have three. Psalm cxviii (Vulgate numbering – Beati immaculati) is divided into 22 sections of eight verses each. The first four sections serve as the four psalms for Sunday Prime. The remaining sections are said in groups of three in Terce, Sext and None of Sunday and Monday; in these Hours on Tuesday Psalms cxix–cxxvii are said, and they are repeated during the rest of the week. Prime has different psalms on each weekday; they are Psalms i–xix, with some omissions for psalms with regular places in other Offices (iii–v), and some long psalms (ix and xvii) divided into two sections.

In the Roman cursus the same psalms are said every day, except at the beginning of Prime. Psalm cxviii is divided into 11 sections of 16 verses each; sections 1 and 2 count as the last two psalms of Prime, and the remaining nine sections are divided among the other Hours. The incipit of the first 'psalm' for Terce is thus Legem pone (Psalm cxviii.33), for Sext, Defecit in salutare (Psalm cxviii.81), and for None, Mirabilia testimonia (Psalm cxviii.129). The original scheme for Prime at Rome (at the end of the 5th century) had Psalm cxvii (Confitemini Domino) as the first psalm on Sundays, and Psalm liii (Deus in nomine) on weekdays. In the revision of the liturgy made under Pope Gregory I (d 604), however, five psalms (xxi–xxv) from Sunday Matins were placed at the beginning of Sunday Prime. The version of Prime that begins with Psalm xxi (Deus, Deus meus) is sometimes spoken of in medieval ordinals as 'prima longa'; the expression has evident justification.

The psalms of Prime may be followed, in circumstances which vary according to time and place, by the Athanasian Creed Quicumque vult. This is often given the rubric 'Ps.' and directly follows the last psalm; it is also on occasion said separately, with its own antiphon. After the psalms in all the Little Hours there comes a chapter (mentioned in the Rule of St Benedict but perhaps not added to the Roman cursus until after the beginning of the 9th century), a short responsory (not in the monastic cursus), and a versicle with response. There follow Preces, including the Kyrie and Pater noster (followed in Prime by the Apostles' Creed and the general confession Confiteor), and then the versicles and responses that introduce the Collect. Benedicamus Domino – Deo gratias ends the service, which is followed by the monastic Officium capituli, or prayers for the blessing of God on the day's work, during which the martyrology is read.

In the 12th- and 13th-century manuscripts of Sens, Beauvais and Laon, which give special treatment to the Office of COMPLINE, there are also some embellishments for the Little Hours. Generally, the most elaborate treatment is given to what might seem the least important element of the Office, the versicle with response that follows the short responsory. It is replaced by a paraphrase, sometimes in verse, which is set to music in the style either of a prosula (one note per syllable, as in Ad te de valle meroris, in None at Beauvais) or of a hymn (syllabic and neumatic styles mixed, as in Exsurge Domino nostra redemptio, for Prime at Sens). At Sens, verse paraphrases replace the Benedicamus Domino at the end of the Little Hours. The only change in the more important musical portions of these Offices (antiphons, short responsories and hymns) is the reworking at Sens of the hymn Jam lucis orto sidere into a strophic song with the refrain Fulget dies – Fulget dies ista.

See also LITURGY OF THE HOURS.

For bibliography see DIVINE OFFICE.

RUTH STEINER/KEITH FALCONER

Little Jazz. See ELDRIDGE, ROY.

Little Richard [Penniman, Richard Wayne] (b Macon, GA, 5 Dec 1932). American rhythm and blues singer, songwriter and pianist. His early influences were gospel music, Louis Jordan and other jump blues and urban blues artists of the late 1940s. After making several unsuccessful recordings in the early 1950s, he recorded Tutti Frutti in September 1955, which was a success in both the rhythm and blues and the pop charts. Although part of the first wave of rock and roll hits, it was far more aggressive and retained more aspects of African-American vernacular music-making than other early recordings in this style.

Tutti Frutti set the tone for the Little Richard's hits that followed between 1956 and 1958: over a fast boogie-shuffle rhythm with many stop-time breaks, he sings playful double-entendres near the top of his range in a searing timbre interspersed with trademark falsetto whoops. His piano playing derives from the boogie-woogie style, emphasizes the upbeat and features a great many glissandos. In performance, Little Richard would frequently leave the piano to dance exuberantly, occasionally on top of the instrument itself. In addition to his manic presence as singer, pianist and dancer, his visual appearance added to the sense of his outrageousness: with his large pompadour, liberal use of makeup and gaudy clothing, he raised the spectre of cross-dressing and ambiguous sexuality at a time when such issues were strictly taboo. However, it is possible that he was accepted by the white public at the time because his performance style was perceived as an updated form of minstrelsy.

After several more hits and appearances in three films, Don't Knock the Rock and The Girl Can't Help It (both 1956), and Mister Rock 'n' Roll (1957), Richard decided abruptly to quit his career for the ministry. During this period he received a BA from Oakwood College (a bible school) in Huntsville, Alabama, was ordained a minister in the Seventh Day Adventist Church and recorded a gospel album that was produced by Quincy Jones. From 1963 Little Richard attempted to revive his career. Despite accolades from the Beatles and the Rolling Stones (with whom he also toured Europe), and several good recordings, he did not achieve his former success. Three recordings made in the early 1970s earned critical praise and minor commercial response. Since then he has recorded intermittently, returned to preaching and appeared in films, television shows, commercials and children's videos.

Little Richard's extrovert and energetic style made him one of the most successful performers of the rock and roll era and his fervent, high-tessitura singing influenced many subsequent musicians including James Brown, Otis Redding, Paul McCartney and John Fogerty (of Creedence Clearwater Revival). Always flamboyant and outspoken, his appearances continue to capture the spotlight after 40 years of performing.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Winner: 'Little Richard', The Rolling Stone Illustrated History of Rock & Roll, ed. A. DeCurtis and others (New York, 1976, 3/1992), 52–9

C. White: The Life and Times of Little Richard (New York, 1984)

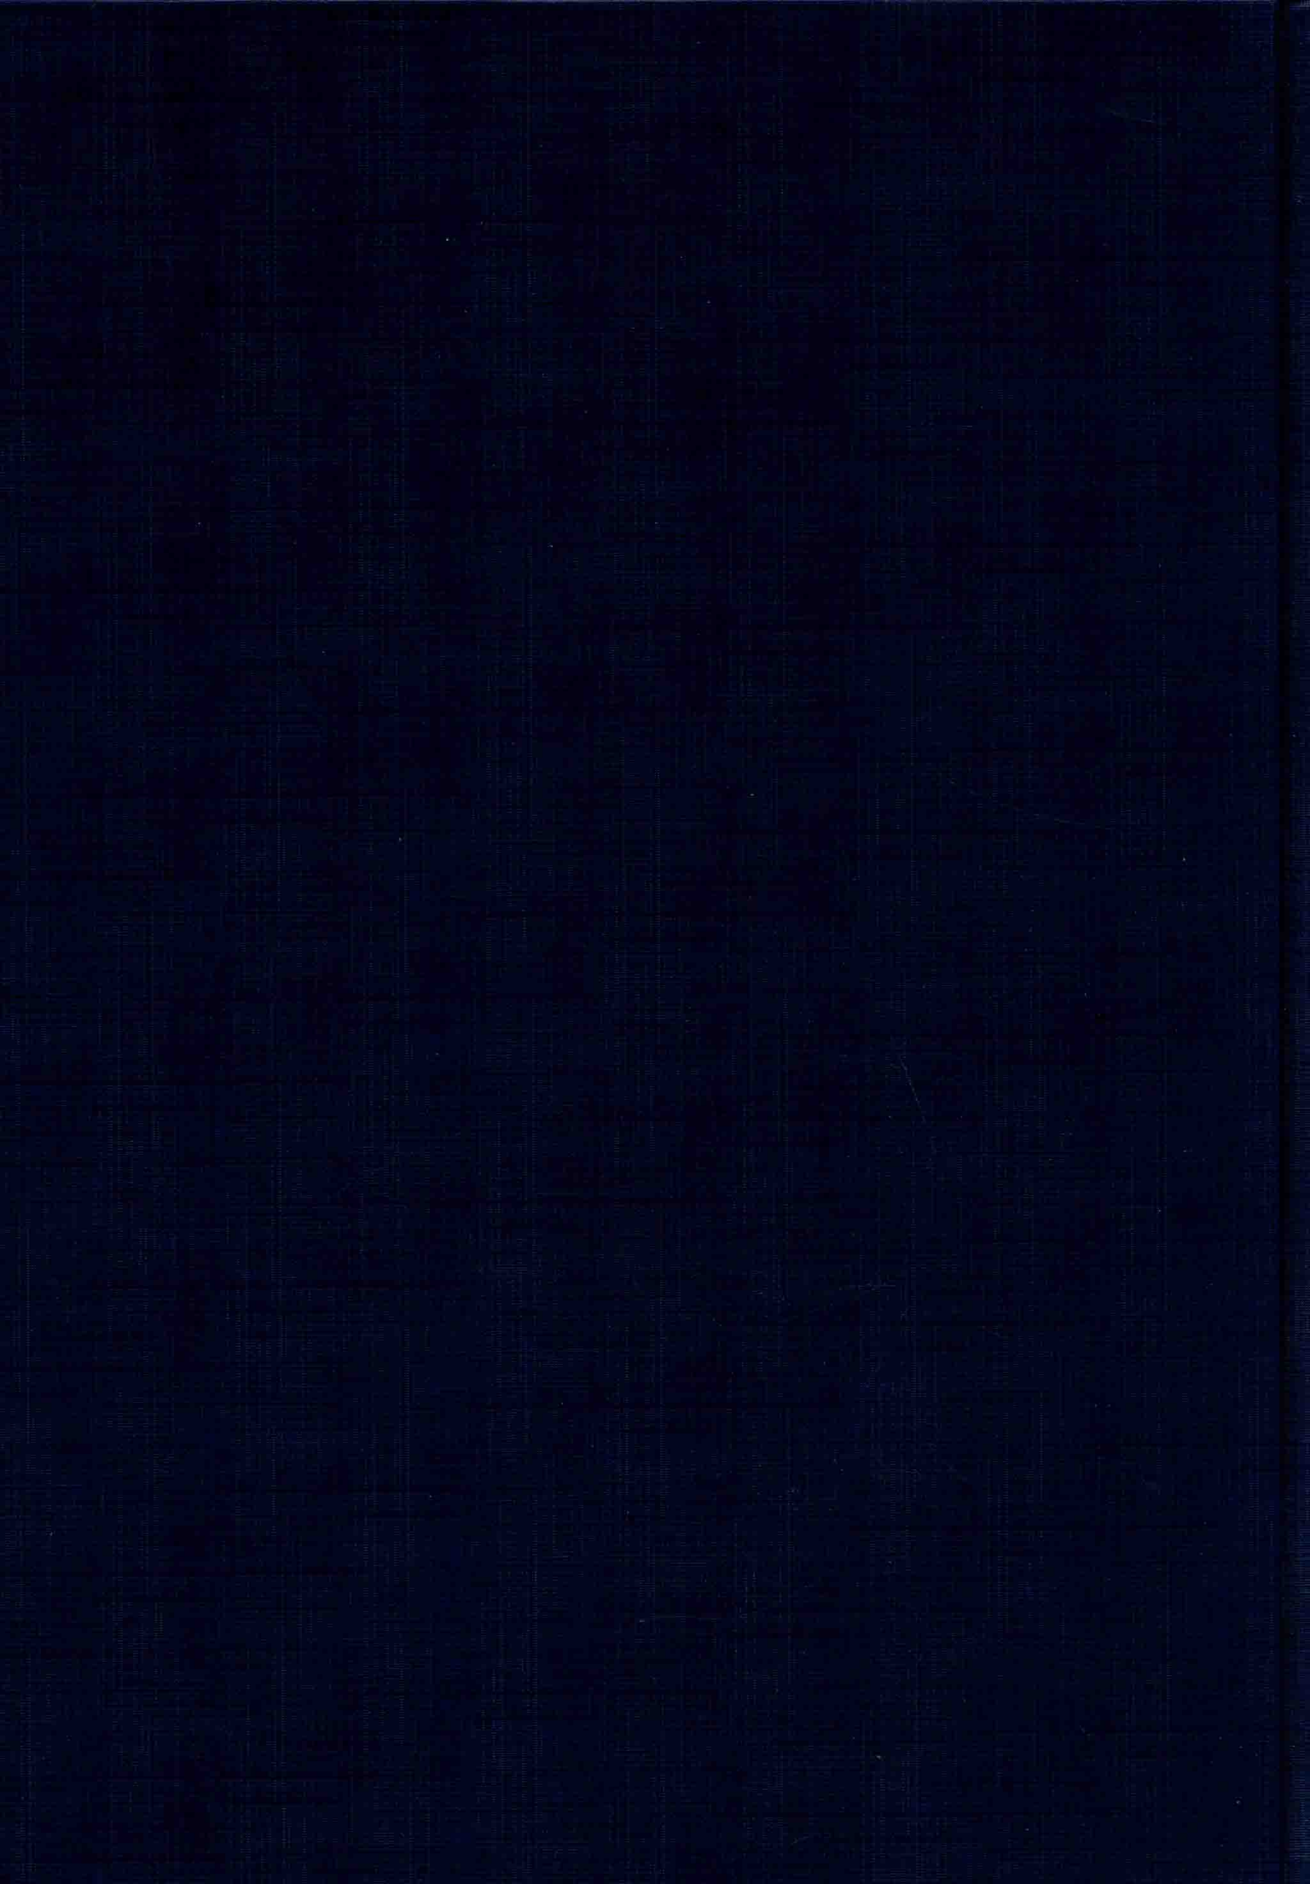
DAVID BRACKETT

Little Theatre in the Haymarket. London theatre built in 1720. See LONDON (i), §V, 1.

Littleton. English family of music publishers who succeeded to the ownership of NOVELLO & CO.

Little Walter [Jacobs, Marion Walter] (b Alexandria, LA, 1 May 1930; d Chicago, 15 Feb 1968). American blues harmonica player and singer. Born into extreme poverty in the rural black South, he began to earn a living playing the harmonica when he was only eight. A decade later he was a street musician in Chicago, where he recorded Ora Nelle Blues (1947, Ora Nelle) in the style of Sonny Boy Williamson. He performed in Chicago clubs and on tour with Muddy Waters (1948–50, 1952) and during the 1950s travelled extensively in the USA. He soon developed his own technique of amplified harmonica playing, making use of pronounced vibrato or 'warble', as on Mean Old World (1952, Checker). He had an undistinguished singing voice and expressed himself most effectively through the harmonica, especially in slow numbers such as Blue Lights, with Robert jr Lockwood on guitar (1954, Checker), which made use of heavy amplification and overblowing. Little Walter's best performances often were in support of other blues artists, as in his 'country' inflected accompaniment to Leroy Foster on Rollin' and Tumblin' (1950, Parkway), and above all the sessions with Muddy Waters that produced Long Distance Call (1951, Chess) and All Night Long (1952, Chess). Many younger urban blues musicians were influenced by his playing, and he had acquired a strong following in Europe long before he toured there in the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY



W. Lindemann and B. Iglauer: 'Little Walter and Louis Myers', Living Blues, no.7 (1971–2), 16–25

M. Rowe: Chicago Breakdown (London, 1973)

PAUL OLIVER

Litton, Andrew (b New York, 16 May 1959). American conductor and pianist. He studied with Sixten Ehrling (conducting) and Nadia Reisenberg (piano) at the Juilliard School, where he won the Bruno Walter Scholarship, with Walter Weller in Salzburg, and with Neeme Järvi and Edoardo Müller. In 1982 he won the Rupert Foundation International Competition in Britain, which brought his début with the BBC SO that year. He was assistant (then associate) conductor of the National SO, Washington, DC, 1982–6, and also appeared widely throughout the USA and Europe. He was principal conductor and artistic adviser of the Bournemouth SO from 1988 to 1994, when he became Conductor Laureate. In 1994 he was appointed music director of the Dallas SO. His Metropolitan début was in 1989 in Yevgeny Onegin; he conducted the revival of the Glyndebourne Porgy and Bess at Covent Garden in 1992, and Falstaff and Salome at the ENO. He has also toured East Asia with the English Chamber Orchestra. Litton's recordings include Elgar's 'Enigma' Variations, which exemplifies his affinity with English music, symphonies by Brahms, Tchaikovsky, Mahler, Rachmaninoff and Shostakovich, as well as works for piano and orchestra by Ravel and Gershwin in which he is both soloist and conductor.

NOËL GOODWIN

[General Information]
书名=新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典　第2版　14
作者=斯坦利·萨迪（STANLEY SADIE）主编
页数=897
SS号=13762890
DX号=
出版日期=2012.10
出版社=长沙湖南文艺出版社